

The Terrorist List

---

Volume 1

Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

 Greenwood
PUBLISHING GROUP

How to go to your page

This eBook contains five volumes. Each volume has its own page numbering scheme, consisting of a volume number and a page number, separated by a hyphen.

For example, to go to page 5 of Volume 1, type 1-5 in the "page #" box at the top of the screen and click "Go." To go to page 5 of Volume 2, type 2-5... and so forth.

THE TERRORIST LIST

THE TERRORIST LIST

---

Volume 1

Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

PRAEGER SECURITY INTERNATIONAL

AN IMPRINT OF ABC-CLIO, LLC
Santa Barbara, California • Denver, Colorado • Oxford, England

Copyright 2011 by Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, except for the inclusion of brief quotations in a review, without prior permission in writing from the publisher.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Mickolus, Edward F.

The terrorist list / Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons.

v. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Contents: v. 1. Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa — v. 2. Western Europe — v. 3. Eastern Europe — v. 4. North America — v. 5. South America.

ISBN 978-0-313-37471-5 (alk. paper) — ISBN 978-0-313-37472-2 (ebook)

1. Terrorists—Biography. 2. Terrorism. I. Simmons, Susan L. II. Title.

HV6430.A1M53 2011

363.325092'2—dc22 2010033700

ISBN: 978-0-313-37471-5

EISBN: 978-0-313-37472-2

15 14 13 12 11 1 2 3 4 5

This book is also available on the World Wide Web as an eBook.

Visit www.abc-clio.com for details.

Praeger

An Imprint of ABC-CLIO, LLC

ABC-CLIO, LLC

130 Cremona Drive, P.O. Box 1911

Santa Barbara, California 93116-1911

This book is printed on acid-free paper

Manufactured in the United States of America

Our endless gratitude to Susan, Ciana, and P.B.

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	ix
THE TERRORIST LIST	1
SELECTED READINGS	263
INDEX	267

INTRODUCTION

---

The following list includes the names of individuals who have appeared in my previous chronologies of international terrorism and individuals who have been named in open sources as somehow involved in terrorist attacks or organizations. The list is designed to serve as a directory of leaders, perpetrators, financiers, defendants, detainees, persons of interest, conspirators, and aliases in the regions of Asia, the Pacific nations, and Sub-Saharan Africa from 1950 to 2008. The area includes the Horn of Africa and South Asia but does not include the countries of the former Soviet Union, which appear in the Eastern Europe volume. It includes individuals with a nationality of a country in the regions, whose operations were generally considered to have been conducted in the regions, who were detained in the regions, who were wanted for trial in the regions, against whom an arrest warrant had been issued in the regions, and/or whose cases were tried on the soil of the regions. Aliases, nicknames, and kunya, when known, are included.

This list does not purport to be globally comprehensive—it is limited solely to international incidents or other incidents of sufficient import to be included in previous chronologies. Then again, inclusion does not mean the individual is a terrorist. Many of the individuals listed were later determined by a court to be innocent of any involvement in the incidents or organizations or there was not sufficient evidence to proceed to trial. Others were prisoners who had their release demanded in hostage negotiations. Still others were involved in nonterrorist hijackings or nonpolitical criminal activities similar to attacks conducted for political motives and are included to give the flavor of the security environment that existed during this period. Some of those included acted in the prehistory of modern terrorism but served as models for those whose motivations in later years were more in line with terrorism as we now know it.

I have attempted to include major cases of domestic terrorism or cases that have been tried under national antiterrorism statutes. This should not be interpreted as indicating that I consider the individuals to be terrorists, nor does it indicate any position on the underlying motivations of the individuals named or the merits of their causes. In some cases, individuals so accused have gone on to become government leaders.

The list uses the same definitions as my earlier books. International terrorism is the use or threat of use of anxiety-inducing extranormal violence for political purposes by any individual or group, whether acting for or in opposition to established governmental authority, when such action is intended to influence the attitudes and behavior of a target group wider than the immediate victims and when—through the nationality or foreign ties of its perpetrators, its location, the nature of its institutional or human victims, or the mechanics of its resolution—its ramifications transcend national boundaries. I also included incidents that were initially treated by security authorities as terrorist or quasi-terrorist, such as hijackings later determined to be the work of mentally unstable individuals or individuals seeking non-traditional modes of transportation but who did not have terrorist motives.

Due to the criminal nature of terrorism, its perpetrators often use aliases and “also known as” names to mask their identities and increase the propaganda value of their actions. I have attempted to link aliases to the perpetrators’ principal names.

Names are listed alphabetically by surname but are shown with first name first to prevent confusion in reading Arabic names. Several transliteration systems are in use for Arabic names. I have tried to include the major variants, again keyed to the principal name. Arabic names are alphabetized without regard to name fragments such as al-, bin, and Abd-al. The last main element is used for alphabetization. For further thoughts on the difficulty of establishing consistency in transliterations, see my article on the topic.<sup>1</sup> Hispanic names are alphabetized according to the individual’s patronymic.

Date and place of birth are included when reported, except for nonpolitical, nonterrorist hijackers. Such information is often available in the chronologies.

This list, although including tens of thousands of names, is not intended to be used as a terrorist watch list or supplant those used by law enforcement, homeland security, and other authorities around the world. The Justice Department’s FBI Terrorist Screening Center’s database, for example, had 754,960 records per the Government Accountability Office’s May 2007 report and was adding 20,000 records each month. This list is not aimed at such exhaustive coverage. The intention behind this list is to give students of the discipline a starting point for understanding the phenomenon of terrorism, as well as to give the blognoscenti and members of the commentariat—who believe that merely “connecting the dots” is child’s play—some appreciation for the amount of dots that exist and the difficulty experienced daily by those attempting to protect us from the depredations of terrorists.

A popular sound bite for books such as this is a top 10 list of the worst terrorists of all time. Criteria for devising such a list could include the most events masterminded over a career, the most deaths perpetrated, or involvement in a single dramatic event. In no particular order, individuals who should be considered in the hall-of-shame conversation are the following:

- Osama bin Laden, leader of al Qaeda
- Wadi Haddad, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos the Jackal
- Fusako Shigenobu, leader of the Japanese Red Army
- Abimael Guzman, leader of the Peruvian Shining Path
- Khalid Sheikh Mohammad, architect of numerous al Qaeda attacks, including 9/11
- Velupillai Prabhakaran, leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka
- Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf, mastermind of numerous attacks around the world
- Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber
- Theodore Kaczynski, alias the Unabomber
- Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo
- Sabri al-Banna, alias Abu Nidal, leader of the Abu Nidal Group

- Muhammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 hijackers
- Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, leader of al Qaeda in Iraq
- FNU LNU (name unknown), mailer of anthrax envelopes

For more detailed information on the terrorist incidents themselves, please consult my chronologies of events and annotated bibliographies covering 1968 to the present and published by Greenwood Press and Iowa State University Press. Also helpful are the National Counterterrorism Center's annual Counterterrorism: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics, published since the mid-1990s, with an interactive online version since 2007. The Terrorist List: Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa is available as the Data on Terrorists (DOTS) database from Vinyard Software, Inc., 2305 Sandburg Street, Dunn Loring, VA 22027-1124 USA or vinyardsoftware@hotmail.com.

The fates of many terrorists go unreported by the media, but numerous perpetrators have been subject to the rule of law years, even decades, after their attacks. This list demonstrates that no matter how long it may take, terrorists can be tracked down and brought to justice by like-minded governments.

Edward Mickolus
President of Vinyard Software, Inc.

NOTE

1. Edward F. Mickolus, "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography," Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

A

---

Mohammed Aatique: one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a 42-count federal indictment on June 25, 2003, for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. The U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, was told the men belonged to Lashkar-i-Taiba, a group trying to get India out of Kashmir and designated a terrorist group by the U.S. government. On June 27, federal agents arrested six men in the Washington, D.C., suburbs and Pennsylvania. Two had been in custody since the investigation began in 2000. Three others were in Saudi Arabia. The nine U.S. citizens and two foreigners faced weapons counts and violating the Neutrality Act. There was no evidence they intended U.S. attacks. Authorities found pistols and rifles in some defendants’ homes. The indictment said they had trained at private and military firearms ranges in northern Virginia to ready themselves for attacks in Chechnya, the Philippines, Kashmir, and other locations. They practiced small-unit tactics on private property in Spotsylvania County, using paintball games as a cover. Two defendants were alleged to have fired at Indian positions in Kashmir after training at a Lashkar camp in Pakistan.

On September 22, 2003, represented by attorney Alan Dexter Bowman, Aatique pleaded guilty to preparing to fight for Muslim causes abroad and indicated they might have attacked the United States if not arrested. Prosecutors praised his cooperation in the case. Judge Brinkema said she was hamstrung by sentencing guidelines. On December 17, Aatique was sentenced to 10-plus years on a gun charge and 6 months for aiding and abetting.

On April 26, 2005, he was sentenced to 20 years and 2 months.

Hashim bin Abas: one of 15 Jemaah Islamiyah members arrested in December 2001 and January 2002 by Singaporean and Malaysian authorities. A video in which bin Abas, age 40, discussed how to carry explosives on a bicycle was discovered in an Afghanistan al Qaeda house and led to their capture.

Mohamad bin Abas: alias Nasir Abbas. On April 23, 2003, the national police announced the arrest of 18 Jemaah Islamiyah members, including Abas, the Malaysian leader of the Mantiqi 3 cell that operates in the Philippines and Indonesia. Three were linked to the October 12, 2002, bombings of two Bali nightclubs that killed 202 people.

Nasir Abas: following his 2003 arrest, this senior Jemaah Islamiyah member agreed to try to persuade his erstwhile colleagues to quit.

Mat Herabi’Abbas: Thai citizen sought by police for involvement in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok. One brother, Suchat Herabi, was imprisoned for the killing, and another brother, Suvit Kulik Herabi, was also wanted. Their father was an Arab married to a Thai woman.

‘Abdallah Ahmad ‘Abdallah: variant Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah; aliases Ashraf Refaat Nabith Henin, Khalid Abdul Wadood, Salem Ali, Fahd bin Abdallah bin Khalid, Abu Mohamed al-Masri, Saleh, Abu Mariam, Abu Maryam, Abu Muhammad al-Masri. An Egyptian who fled Nairobi, Kenya, on August 6, 1998, for Karachi, Pakistan. He was indicted for his involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He is wanted for conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, an attack on a federal facility resulting in death, conspiracy to destroy U.S. buildings and property, and planning to destroy U.S. national defense facilities. He claims to have been born in 1963 in Egypt. He is five feet eight inches tall. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He might be in Afghanistan.

Abu Abdallah: alias of Osama bin Laden.

Abu Abdallah: alias of Ayman al-Zawahiri.

Abdi Dama Abdi: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities. His release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Nuradin M. Abdi: Somali and al Qaeda terrorist, age 32, detained for planning an attack on a Columbus, Ohio, shopping mall. He was arrested November 28, 2003. An immigration judge revoked his asylum status on January 28, 2004. On June 14, 2004, federal prosecutors unsealed the four-count Columbus grand jury indictment. Abdi was linked to Ayman Faris, a former cab driver convicted in June 2003 of an al Qaeda plot in the United States and sentenced to 20 years on October 29, 2003. The indictment said the duo was conspiring to engage in terrorist attacks after traveling to Ethiopia to study "radio usage, guns, guerrilla warfare, bombs, and 'anything to damage the enemy.'" Abdi was also charged with fraud and misuse of documents for saying he had been granted U.S. asylum status in January 1999; prosecutors said he lied on his asylum application. Abdi had applied for travel documents on April 27, 1999, saying he planned to go to Germany and Saudi Arabia for religious study, when he actually planned to travel to Ogaden, Ethiopia, for jihad training. He returned to the United States in March 2000 using the fraudulent documents. Faris picked him up from the airport. Abdi worked at Cell-U-Com, a cell phone business in Columbus, where he provided cell phones to Faris. Faris used a Columbus address belonging to Abdi's relatives, including his mother. Abdi was represented by attorney Douglas S. Weigle and faced 55 years in prison.

On June 16, Magistrate Mark Abel ordered Abdi to undergo psychiatric tests to determine if he was competent to stand trial after Abdi slammed his face on a table and smiled vacantly during court hearings.

On November 27, 2007, a judge in Columbus, Ohio, sentenced Abdi to 10 years for plotting to bomb an Ohio shopping mall in collusion with a man later convicted of membership in al Qaeda. Abdi is to be deported to his native Somalia after serving his sentence.

Gholam Ali Abdolnuri: one of three suspected members of an Iranian hit squad released April 6, 1984, by the Philippine Commission on Immigration and Deportation in spite of protests over security concerns and accusations of a payoff. Some suspected the released men of involvement in the disappearance of nine pro-Shah Iranian students on August 16, 1983.

A. Abdulla: one of three Eritreans, age early twenties, who threw hand grenades and fired submachine guns at an Ethiopian Airlines B707 parked at Karachi Airport on June 18, 1969. On June 16, the trio arrived from Beirut and claimed they were dramatizing their opposition to Ethiopian rule in Eritrea. The trio was sentenced to one year of hard labor.

Abdullah: arrested by Pakistani authorities on August 7, 1998, in connection with the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania that same day.

Abdullah: seen fleeing in a silver Suzuki minivan from the October 1, 2005, scene of Jemaah Islamiyah's triple suicide bombing of Bali restaurants that killed 25 and injured 100.

Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah: fugitive indicted December 19, 2000, by a New York federal grand jury on capital charges of playing a direct role in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya; he had sat next to bin Laden and others on the al Qaeda consultation council, which "discussed and approved major undertakings, including terrorist operations." He was identified as circa age 38, five feet eight inches tall, Egyptian, and the co-leader of bin Laden's cells in East Africa at the time of the Africa bombings. He helped plan several al Qaeda strikes and arranged propaganda tapings.

Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah: possibly the same as the previous entry, Abdullah was questioned regarding a November 28, 2002, incident in which three suicide terrorists drove a green four-wheel-drive Mitsubishi Pajero bomb into the Israeli-owned Paradise Hotel resort in Mombasa, Kenya, killing themselves, 3 Israelis, and 10 Kenyans and injuring 80 others.

Abu Abdullah: accomplice of Ahmad Saeed, director of Human Concern International Peshawar, arrested by Pakistani authorities on the Afghanistan frontier on December 3, 1995, on suspicion of financing the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. He reportedly was found in Khost, Afghanistan.

Ahmed Abdullah: Yemeni, age 32, suspected of ties to Osama bin Laden. Abdullah was arrested April 2, 2000, in Torkham, a Pakistani border crossing at the foot of the Khyber Pass, as he and two Pakistanis tried to enter Afghanistan. The Pakistanis were suspected of affiliation with the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, which sends fighters to Indian Kashmir. Abdullah carried a "considerable amount" of money and no visa. He had arrived from Bangladesh two days earlier.

Feroze Abdullah: on November 1, 1970, drove a catering van into a reception line at Karachi Airport that had been set up to greet the Polish president and his entourage. Four persons were killed and 10 wounded. He surrendered, said he had completed his mission, and requested clemency. He claimed he bore no ill will against the Poles, just the United States. The Pakistan special military court found him guilty of murder and sentenced him to death by hanging on March 24, 1971. It found no conspiracy.

Sa'id Abdullmahssan: alias of one of three terrorists allegedly working for Iraqi intelligence who made threats against senior diplomats in September 1991, according to the Saudi Arabia Embassy in Thailand.

Mohamad Iqbal Abdurrahman: alias Abu Jibril. A Jemaah Islamiyah member designated a terrorist by the United States on January 24, 2003. He was also listed by the UNSCR (United Nations Security Council Resolution) 1267 Sanctions Committee.

Kimihiko Abe: on June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the Japanese Red Army (JRA) member was at large.

Freddie Abella: social work and community development student and activist at the University of the Philippines, Diliman. Abella went into hiding after the June 16, 1989, arrest of Donato Contente in connection with the New People's Army (NPA) April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Abella and five other students were linked to the slaying. The military filed charges of murder and frustrated murder against seven students before the office of Quezon City prosecutor Juarlito Galisanao. Abella is believed to be a member of NPA's National Partisan Unit. A warrant was issued on July 9, 1989.

Ibrahim Abid: one of six Iraqis among nine suspected terrorists, including the brother of Ramzi Yusuf, who were arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and Metro Manila maps.

Mohammed Hussein Zein al-Abideen: variant Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn; alias of Abu Zubaydah.

Rolando Abiog: arrested July 29, 1991, by Philippine military authorities in suburban Manila for the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila. Authorities set a one-million-peso ($36,250) reward for his arrest. He was also held for involvement in the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Archie Abrahams: on October 20, 1987, Swazi officials charged Abrahams with illegal entry into the country and sentenced him to 60 days in prison or a 60 Rand fine in connection with the arrest three days earlier of two members of the African National Congress of South Africa and the seizure of large trunks of arms, ammunition, and explosives.

S. Abraham: one of three Eritreans, age early twenties, who threw hand grenades and fired submachine guns at an Ethiopian Airlines B707 parked at Karachi Airport on June 18, 1969. On June 16, the trio arrived from Beirut and claimed they were dramatizing their opposition to Ethiopian rule in Eritrea. The trio was sentenced to one year of hard labor.

Abubakar: alias of Isnilon Totoni Hapilon.

Lutfiya Abubakar: wife of Mahfudh Ashur Hemed, the Kenyan accused of assisting Fazul

Abdullah Mohammed, who was believed to have organized the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Their attorney said they were held without sufficient evidence.

Major Suleimana Abubakar: on January 31, 1985, the Ghanaian government said it thwarted an assassination attempt by Abubakar against head of state Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings in a sports stadium in Kumasi during an Ashanti cultural ceremony. The would-be assassins aborted the attempt because of the large crowd.

Rashid Abubakar: Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) gunman who, on April 9, 1987, confessed to the April 6, 1987, kidnapping and murder of Richard Angelis, a Frenchman. Abubakar also shot Angelis's companion, Waite Fairly, a New Zealander from New South Wales, Australia, in an attack on a picnic in Sicabong Island, Philippines. Abubakar surrendered to military authorities along with Anas Asjad, a guerrilla commander of the MNLF.

Tadeo Abulencia: New People's Army of the Philippines member cited in a July 9, 1989, warrant regarding the April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Thadeus Abulencia: student activist at the University of the Philippines, Diliman, who lived in Caloocan City and went into hiding after the June 16, 1989, arrest of Donato Contente in connection with the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Abulencia and five other students were linked to the slaying. The military filed charges of murder and frustrated murder against seven students before the Office of Quezon City prosecutor Juarlito Galisanao.

Abdul Mannan Achakzai: Baluchistan Province, Pakistan, man who, on March 12, 1988, brandished a .25 caliber revolver and demanded that a Pakistan International Airlines A300 flying from Karachi to Quetta instead go to Afghanistan or India. Achakzai shot a security guard three times and suffered a gunshot wound when the passengers overwhelmed him. He claimed he wanted the release of two friends jailed for smuggling. Pakistani authorities said he worked for KHAD, the Afghan intelligence service, and wanted Pakistan to sign an accord at the UN-sponsored Geneva peace talks on the Afghan conflict. He was wanted on other counts of murder and smuggling. He had intended to make an earlier hijacking attempt at an undisclosed date but had noticed Pakistani commandos in the economy section. On October 29, 1989, Achakzai was sentenced to death, and all his property was confiscated under Pakistan Penal Code Section 307. He was also sentenced to life in prison and fined 10 lakh rupees for injuring the air guard. He was to undergo rigorous imprisonment for seven years and pay a 5,000 rupees fine per Arms Ordinance of 1965 Section 13-E. The sentences were to run consecutively.

Ismael Acmad: alias Toto. Alleged Filipino planner of the April 2, 2003, bombing of a row of food stands at a ferry terminal in Davao, Philippines, that killed 16 and wounded 55. Arrested April 8, authorities said he was also involved in the March bombing of Davao Airport that killed 22 people. He belonged to the Special Operations Group of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front. The ammonium nitrate explosive used in the attack is similar to that purchased by a Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) Indonesian operative, Fathur Rohman Ghozi, and seized by police in January 2002 following Ghozi's arrest. The Philippine president said several JI Indonesian members had been sighted in "terrorist training camps" in Mindanao.

Masao Adachi: alias The Editor, because of his work on pornographic films. Japanese Red Army (JRA) member sought by the Philippine Department of National Defense beginning June 13, 1988, and arrested February 15, 1997, by Lebanese authorities in Bekaa Valley and West Beirut, along with five other JRA members. On April 3, 1997, a Beirut investigative judge indicted five of the six for passport forgery, illegal entry into Lebanon, and official stamps forgery. The trial opened June 9, 1997, with 136 lawyers offering to take the cases pro bono. On July 31, 1997, a Lebanese court sentenced the five terrorists to 3 years in jail out of the 10 years possible. The sentences came a day after the United States ended a decade-long ban on Americans visiting Lebanon after Beirut pledged to do more to combat terrorism. On March 1, 2000, Lebanon refused Japan's request for extradition. Adachi and three other JRA members, who had been involved in a bloody mountaintop standoff with Japanese police, were freed on March 7, 2000. Three of them had converted to Islam. A fourth married a Lebanese woman and joined her Greek Orthodox church. The four were deported. In Amman, Jordan, on March 17, 2000, they were turned over to Japanese diplomats, who put them on a plane to Japan. Tokyo Metropolitan Police arrested three, and a warrant of imprisonment was issued on the fourth. By then, he was 60 years old.

Amina Adan: acquaintance of the family of Ibrahim Mahfudh Ashur, who was arrested on suspicion of being in contact with al Qaeda bombing planner Fazul Abdullah Mohammed. Adan's Kenyan house was raided in August 2008 in connection with the investigations of the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Police confiscated cell phones and passports.

Saif al-Adel: variant Sayf al-'Adl, Seif al-Adel; aliases Muhamad Ibrahim Makkawi, Ibrahim al-Madani. Member of the Egyptian Islamic Jihad and senior member of al Qaeda wanted in connection with the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. The Egyptian was head of Osama bin Laden's personal security. He faces life in prison without parole for conspiracy to kill Americans, murder, and destruction of U.S. buildings and property in the bombings. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He claims a birth date of April 11, 1963, in Egypt. He was believed to have fled to Iran after 9/11, where he was placed under house arrest, and to have ordered the May 12, 2003, triple truck bombing of the Riyadh residential complex, which killed 34 and injured 190. President Bush ordered his U.S. assets frozen on September 24, 2001.

Ahmed Hadj Mohammed Aden: Somali Army member who was one of three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. They demanded the release of 21 political prisoners, including 7 Somali youths sentenced to death. The hijackers surrendered November 27 after being granted a news conference. They received political asylum in Ethiopia. On December 4, the Somali government demanded the return of the hijackers.

Sheik Adil: at-large veteran Pakistani policeman charged by a Pakistani court on March 22, 2002, with capital murder and kidnapping for ransom and terrorism for the kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl on January 23, 2002. On July 15, 2002, Adil was convicted and sentenced to 25 years.

Adnan Gassen Adnan: one of 16 Middle Eastern terrorists who were planning to attack Saudi diplomats and officials overseas, the Saudi Embassy told Thai officials on March 20, 1990. He carried a Syrian passport.

Sajjad Afghani: imprisoned military commander of Harkat ul-Ansar (Movement of Friends) of Rawala Kot, an Islamic group, whose release was demanded by the Kashmiri rebels of the Al-Faran (Jungle Warriors) Muslim group that kidnapped five foreign tourists in the Indian Himalayas on July 4, 1995.

Ihab al-Afifi: one of seven Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) terrorists Philippine Angeles City Metropolitan District Command and Clark Air Base were searching for on April 30, 1988; the terrorists had arrived from Manila earlier in the week to conduct sabotage and bombing missions and attack nightclubs frequented by U.S. servicemen. The terrorists reportedly arrived on a bus and carried black bags containing explosives to be set off at the Sweet Apple Club and the Capcom information booth. PLO denied involvement.

Muhammed Abid Afridi: one of three people arrested by Hong Kong authorities while attempting to buy four Stinger missiles from undercover FBI agents during a September 20, 2002, meeting in a Hong Kong hotel. On November 6, the U.S. Justice Department announced that a naturalized U.S. citizen living in Minneapolis and two Pakistanis were indicted October 30 for offering to trade five metric tons of hashish and 600 kilograms of heroin for four Stingers they would then sell to the Taliban and al Qaeda. Syed Mustajab Shah, age 54, and Muhammed Abid Afridi, age 29, were from Peshawar, Pakistan; Ilyas Ali, age 55, of Minneapolis, was a naturalized U.S. citizen from India. They fought extradition from Hong Kong to the United States but gave up and arrived in the United States on March 6. The drug charges each carry life sentences and fines of four million dollars; supporting terrorism carries a 15-year sentence and a $250,000 fine. On March 8, 2003, the trio pleaded guilty in a San Diego court.

Mohammad Afroz: variant of Mohammad Afzal.

Mohammad Afzal: variants Afraz, Afroz. Indian Muslim and surgical equipment salesman, age 26–30, who was arrested in October 2001; he told Bombay police that the 9/11 attacks were to include simultaneous hijackings and attacks on the Indian and U.K. parliaments and attacks on the Rialto Towers in Melbourne, Australia. He was held on charges of criminal conspiracy to cause and abet terrorist attacks. Afzal was linked to the December 13, 2001, attack on the Indian Parliament in which eight people were killed. The Lashkar-i-Taiba was suspected. He claimed to have been recruited by a Pakistani—Ghazi Baba, Jaish-i-Muhammad's supreme commander in Kashmir. He said he was a New Delhi operative for Jaish and had assisted the gunmen in the Parliament attack. He and accomplices were charged under the new Prevention of Terrorism Act with conspiracy to "threaten the unit, integrity, and sovereignty of India, to strike terror in the people." He was convicted on December 16, 2002, of waging war against India and sentenced to death the next day.

Mehmut Ali Agca: alias Joginder Singh. Kurdish Grey Wolves associate who shot and wounded Pope John Paul II on May 13, 1981. Agca used the Singh alias on an Indian passport. He served almost 20 years in an Italian prison and another 10 in a Turkish prison for the assassination attempt. He was released in January 2010.

Fidel Agcaoli: Agcaoli's release was demanded by the New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of Tomas Manotoc, a professional basketball coach, top amateur golfer, and purported son-in-law of Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, on December 29, 1981. NPA denied involvement, saying it was a put-up job by Marcos.

Haji Abdul Manan Agha: money broker who runs Al-Qadir Traders in Pakistan. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen by the United States on October 12, 2001.

Jaime Agrava: aliases Rene, Boboy, Rudy. Finance and logistics officer of the Red Scorpion Group of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) arrested April 10, 1992. He had escaped arrest during the March 18, 1992, rescue of U.S. citizen Michael Barnes, who had been kidnapped by NPA on January 17, 1992.

Ahamad: one of three Bangladeshis arrested in the Rajbarana District on June 26, 1990, by Thai police, who seized 9 M-16 and 36 AK-47 assault rifles, 10 rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs), 5 RPG launchers, 10 hand grenades, 10 sticks of TNT, 33 AK-47 magazines, 8 M-16 magazines, a .38 caliber revolver, and a sack of M-16 ammunition from a house in Soi Pracha-uthit 61 in Bang Mod following a brief gun battle with arms smugglers. The three were wanted for questioning in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok.

Jaswinder Singh Ahluwalia: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four of the five were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian; bomb a nuclear plant in India; and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges. The judge refused bail.

Ab Wahab bin Ahmad: one of a group of suspects—17 Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) and 1 Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF)—arrested in August 2002 by Singaporean authorities. According to the U.S. State Department's Patterns of Global Terrorism 2002, the group was "accused of activities in support of the planned attacks on the Ministry of Defense, a US ship, water pipelines, a bar frequented by US service personnel, and other targets" and also organized reconnaissance of other possible targets, such as the Changi Airport, an air-traffic-control radar site, petrochemical facilities, and various Western interests in Singapore. Most of the suspects were employed in everyday jobs, including a deliveryman, a butcher, and a used car salesman; half were on National Service reserve duty when arrested. Some members had attended al Qaeda and MILF training camps. Acting on orders from JI leaders arrested in December 2001, members went to great lengths to surveil Singapore targets. Ahmad allowed senior JI member Mohd Aslam bin Yar Ali Khan to take over his magazine delivery route in order to videotape the Singapore Ministry of Defense, which was on his route.

According to the Singapore Government, most of the JI members in custody saw no contradiction between living in a peaceful multiracial society and pledging their allegiance to militant groups that could potentially harm other Singaporeans, including fellow Muslims whom they claimed to represent. During interviews by the ISD, the members revealed that they were so committed to pursuing jihad that they were willing to put fellow Muslims at risk to accomplish their goals. (U.S. State Department, Patterns of Global Terrorism 2002, 25)

'Abd-al-Karim al-Naji 'Abd-al-Radi Ahmad: alias Yasin. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution charged the nine of forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate state figures, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Abdullah Ahmad: South Yemeni terrorist seriously injured and arrested by Pakistani police after he opened fire on Iraqi officials entering the Consulate General of Iraq in Karachi on August 2, 1978.

Abu Ahmad: spokesperson on March 20, 2000, for the Abu Sayyaf rebels who took 70 hostages, many of them children from two Philippine schools.

Agus Amad: Amad, age 31, helped Azahari bin Husin prepare the suicide car bombing of the Australian Embassy on September 9, 2004, in which 10 Indonesians died. He was sentenced by an Indonesian court on July 26, 2005, to four years in jail.

Babar Ahmad: computer expert, age 30, accused of running U.S.-based Web sites calling for support for terrorism and trying to set up a terrorist training camp in Arizona. The Briton of Pakistani descent was arrested by Scotland Yard on August 5, 2004, on a U.S. extradition request. He was accused of soliciting funds and property via the Internet for "acts of terrorism in Chechnya and Afghanistan," including political murder, from 1998 to 2003. He had been under surveillance for several years. Police announced the next day that he was in possession of the classified routes of the USS Constellation Navy battle group. The information, although three years old, discussed the battle group's operations in the Straits of Hormuz. Authorities also said he was part of an al Qaeda branch linked to Khalid Sheik Mohammed. Police said 500 gigabytes of information was seized, thanks to 9 search warrants and 100 subpoenas.

Ahmad is the cousin of Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan, who was arrested in July 2004 in Pakistan. Court documents said he operated two U.S.-based Web sites to recruit and raise money for Taliban fighters and had been under investigation for three years. The United States said that his "pro-jihad" Web sites called on Muslims to undertake military and physical training for holy war. The sites requested financial support and offered instructions on how to infiltrate war zones in Chechnya and Afghanistan. He faced four charges of involvement with terrorism, each carrying a penalty of 10 years to life in prison, according to a criminal complaint unsealed in the U.S. Attorney's Office in New Haven, Connecticut, where Ahmad's Web servers were based. He allegedly worked with a man in New Brunswick, New Jersey, who made backup copies of the sites—www.azzam.com and www.qoqaz.net—which the Justice Department said were "more operational" than scholarly. Mazen Mokhtar, an Egyptian-born political activist and imam serving the Masjid Al-Huda mosque in New Brunswick, operated the Web sites based in Nevada and Connecticut. Mokhtar's lawyer denied that his client was a terrorist.

One of the men arrested in the United Kingdom on August 3 had electronic information connected to Ahmad.

In Ahmad's August 6 court appearance, U.S. government attorney Rosemary Fernandes said he had documents outlining the specific assignments of each ship, a sketch of the battle group's formations, and details of its movements on April 29, 2001. Other classified documents noted that the ships could be vulnerable to a small craft firing rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs). She said Ahmad was in contact with an al Qaeda agent who worked within the battle group. He was identified as a reservist who is no longer in the armed forces.

Ahmad lived in south London, worked at the Imperial College, and ran the militant organization Abu Khubayb. He was arrested by British police in December 2003 and was held for six days on suspicion of terrorism.

Ahmad was indicted October 6 by the U.S. attorney in Connecticut for purchasing bomb-making material and camouflage suits. The charges included conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, laundering money for their cause, and conspiracy to kill or injure people in a foreign country. The affidavit sought extradition. Court documents indicated that his apartment contained papers showing that in 1997 and 1998 he sought to purchase 5,000 pounds of fertilizer and large quantities of chemicals for someone possibly in Pakistan. He also purchased 100 camouflage suits from a Long Island firm and had them delivered to the United Kingdom. He visited the United States and returned to the United Kingdom with a Global Positioning System (GPS) device and a bulletproof vest.

On March 2, 2005, the U.K. court gave U.S. lawyers a continuance to investigate whether Ahmad could be handed over to a U.S. military tribunal if extradited. John Hardy, a U.K. attorney representing the U.S. government, argued that in Phoenix in 1998, Ahmad met with Yasser al-Jhoni, a member of the Islamic mujaheddin militia, and other Islamic radicals with ties to bin Laden. A U.K. judge ruled in May 2005 that he could be extradited to the United States. His family said it would appeal to the U.K. High Court.

On November 16, 2005, Charles Clarke, U.K. senior law enforcement official, ordered Ahmad's extradition to the United States, where Ahmad faced U.S. charges of using the Internet to support al Qaeda, the Taliban, Chechen terrorists, and other Islamic extremists. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws ruled that Ahmad and Haroon Rashid Aswat (see Haroon Rashid Aswat entry) could be extradited.

Ishtiq Ahmad: Pakistani who surrendered to police in Manila on December 17, 1995, in connection with the December 16, 1995, arrest of five Pakistanis from Karachi by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement. Ahmad is a cousin of Mohammad Nubin Khan, also arrested.

Jaded Ahmad: one of nine family members arrested December 19, 2002, by Lahore police on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen and former Florida resident was held with his two sons, two brothers, three nephews, and an uncle. The physician had lived in the United States from 1972 to 1983.

Jamal Muhammad Abu Ahmad: member of a group opposed to Yasir Arafat, Ahmad was arrested August 15, 1978, from a Lahore house for suspected involvement in the August 5, 1978, Islamabad Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) offices attack that killed four people during an attempted assassination of PLO representative Yusuf Abu Hantash. A Rawalpindi magistrate remanded Ahmad to police custody for 13 days.

Mohammad Ahmad: identified on April 1, 1996, by Pakistani interior minister Maj. Gen. Naseerullah Khan Babar in an address to the National Assembly; Ahmad was identified as having purchased the vehicle used in the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. Ahmad died in the attack.

Muhammad 'Ali Sayyid Ahmad: one of two Sudanese identified by Pakistan's interior minister Maj. Gen. Naseerullah Khan Babar on Cairo's al-Musawwar on February 9, 1996, as not involved in the November 19, 1995, bombing of the Egyptian Embassy. Ahmad was arrested February 1, 1996.

Mushtaq Ahmad: convicted of the December 2003 assassination attempts against Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. Authorities announced on January 11, 2005, that he had escaped two months earlier. He was arrested in Pakistan in May 2005.

Nazir Ahmad: arrested January 6, 1989, by Indian airport security authorities at Srinagar Airport 30 minutes before he was to board a New Delhi-bound plane. Police seized arms and ammunition from the bag of his traveling companion, Mrs. Rafiq. The duo confessed to planning to hijack the aircraft and forcing it to fly out of India to an unidentified location. They entered India from the Pakistan-held part of Jammu and Kashmir after receiving training in hijacking and sabotage from the Pakistan Army.

Rauf Ahmad: identified by former director of central intelligence George Tenet as a Pakistani scientist recruited by Ayman al-Zawahiri in 1999 to set up a small lab in Kandahar, Afghanistan, to house an al Qaeda biological weapons program principally focused on anthrax. Ahmad was detained in Pakistan in December 2001.

Sharif Ahmad: Pakistan's most-wanted Islamic militant, age 30, was arrested September 17, 2002, with five other men in a house in the middle-class residential district of Dhoraji, a suburb of Karachi. He was named the leader of the June 14, 2002, attack on the U.S. Consulate, which was carried out with three other suspects. They were captured less than a mile from the site of a military equipment exhibition that had been attended the previous day by president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. Police seized a large cache of weapons, ammunition, and explosives, including an antitank rifle. A police official said, "In their sole aim to kill President Musharraf, these militants had collected 70 hand grenades, 40 rocket-propelled grenades and rockets, and about [2,000 pounds] of bomb-making chemicals at their hideout in Karachi. This is the largest seizure of arms and ammunition from any terrorist group in Pakistan since 9/11." All six were affiliated with Harkat ul-Mujaheddin al-Almi, which was also involved in an attempt to assassinate Musharraf in April by setting off a car bomb that failed to detonate. Police said the arms cache had been moved from Afghanistan in the previous months and that each of the militants "had received guerilla training in camps inside Afghanistan before the U.S. attacks began in October."

Ahmed: on June 27, 2005, Nairobi chief magistrate Aggrey Muchelule said evidence was not strong enough to connect Kubwa Mohammed Seif, Said Saggar, Ahmed, and Salmin Mohammed Khamis to the November 2002 Kenya hotel bombing or the following attempt to shoot down a chartered Israeli plane. In summer 2003, the trio was charged with murder in the hotel bombing, but, in November, the charges were reduced to conspiracy. By May 10, 2005, the prosecution had dropped two other counts linking the suspects to the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy and the 2003 plot to destroy the new U.S. Embassy.

A.M.S. Ahmed: name given by one of three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)

hijackers of BOAC 775, a VC10 flying from Bombay to London and diverted to Beirut on September 9, 1970, and then on to Dawson's Field in Zerka near Amman, Jordan. The hijackers joined in the demands of the other hijackers of planes on September 6, 1970, who called for the release of hijacker Leila Khaled and others. The trio named their plane Leila. They were joined by three other PFLP members. The planes were destroyed by PFLP demolition experts after being evacuated, causing a loss of $20 million in the case of the VC10.

Ahmed Sidiq Ahmed: South African of Indian descent who was a personal friend of Osama bin Laden. He was detained on January 19, 1999, after three members of the previously unknown Harkat-ul-Jihad of Bangladesh attempted to kill Shamsur Rahman, age 70, one of the country's leading poets, with an ax. Rahman's wife, daughter-in-law, and maid ward off the trio, two of whom were teens. Besides the ax, the attackers also carried a single-shot, homemade rifle. Two attackers were arrested at the victim's home. They said they planned to kill Rahman and three other intellectuals because of their liberal beliefs. Police detained 16 more suspects in Dhaka and Chittagong.

Bashir Ahmed: confessed bomber Asif Zaheer identified Ahmed as the man to whom he gave the car bomb that exploded on May 8, 2002, next to a pink and white 46-seat Pakistani Navy Mercedes Marco Polo bus outside the upscale Karachi Sheraton Hotel and Towers on Club Road, killing 16 people—including 11 French citizens working for a technical company on a submarine project, 2 Pakistani beggars, and the driver of unidentified nationality—and wounding 22 others, including 12 French citizens and 8 Pakistanis. Police arrested but did not immediately charge two others on January 7, 2003, as a result of Zaheer's information. On June 30, 2003, the Pakistani antiterrorism court sentenced three Islamic militants to death for the bombing.

Farida Goolam Mohamed Ahmed: South African woman, age 48, detained on July 19, 2004, by police at McAllen Airport in Texas after she allegedly entered the country by walking or swimming across the Mexican border. Some of her associates and relatives were suspected of having ties to Pakistani terrorists. She was carrying an altered South African passport that had no exit or entry stamps or other visa endorsements; six pages had been torn out. She also had thousands of dollars in cash. She had taken plane trips around the world before walking into Texas. She was about to board a flight to JFK Airport in New York via Houston but appeared on a terrorist watch list. She told two border patrol agents that she had left her U.S. entry visa in New York. She was taken into custody for illegal entry and possible deportation proceedings. Her plane tickets included an Emirates Airlines flight on July 8 from Johannesburg, South Africa, to London's Gatwick Airport via Dubai, United Arab Emirates. She had also taken a British Airways flight on July 14 from London's Heathrow Airport to Mexico City.

At a July 27 hearing, FBI agent Gary Simmons said she was carrying $7,300 in currency, including $6,000 in U.S. dollars, a South African Kruggerand gold coin worth $400, and some British pounds and Mexican pesos. She held a valid visa in 1996 and had previously visited a friend in McAllen. The government had 30 days to present the case to a grand jury.

On August 19, 2004, a federal grand jury indicted her for illegal entry into the United States, altering a passport, and lying to a federal officer. She was arraigned on August 20 when she pleaded not guilty to charges that carried a sentence of 15 years in prison. On September 27, she pleaded guilty to illegally entering the United States, using an altered passport, and making a false statement to a federal agent. She faced a 10-year sentence.

Guleed Hassan Ahmed: alias Gouled Hassan Dourad. Somali, age early thirties, who in his April 28, 2007, hearing before a Combatant Status Review Tribunal at Guantánamo Bay denied al Qaeda ties and said he fought only Ethiopian soldiers in Somalia. The U.S. military said he belonged to al-Ittihad al-Islami, was an al Qaeda cell leader in Djibouti, and was part of a group that killed Ethiopians in Mogadishu in 2002. He said he had been arrested in 2004. He admitted to receiving paramilitary training in Afghanistan. On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Abli Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

Hafeez Ahmed: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Hilal Ahmed: chief commander of the Jihad Force in Kashmir who was shot dead on December 19, 1995, by Indian police in Srinagar, Kashmir, during a gun battle.

Javed Ahmed: one of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore. Ahmed remained at large.

Khalid Ahmed: variant Kafeel Ahmed. Ahmed doused himself with gasoline after crashing his flaming SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow Airport in Scotland on June 30, 2007. He was hospitalized at the Royal Alexandra Hospital in critical condition, with burns over 90 percent of his body. He was born in Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, where his father worked as a doctor. The family soon moved back to Iraq. He obtained his medical degree at Baghdad University Medical School in 2004 (other reports said Mosul, Iraq, in 1993). He registered to practice in the United Kingdom in 2004. He worked as an aeronautical engineer in Bangalore from December 2005 to August 2006 for Infotech Enterprises, which has contracts with Boeing, Airbus, and other aviation firms. He died from his burns on August 2, 2007.

Mustafa Mahmud Said Ahmed: aliases Said Ahmed, Saleh Aben Alahales. In 1994, al Qaeda sent Ahmed to open a Nairobi branch of Osama bin Laden's Taba Investment Company. He later participated in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Tanzania on August 7, 1998. On September 21, 1998, the Egyptian was charged in a Dar es Salaam courtroom with 11 counts of murder. Resident Magistrate Amiri Maneto disallowed bail. October 5 was set as the trial date. Ahmed, heavyset and bearded, said he was in Arusha, in northern Tanzania, on the day of the bombing. He carried passports from Yemen, Congo, and Iraq. On March 16, 2000, Tanzania dropped the charges and deported him.

Sabeel Ahmed: a doctor, age 26, at Halton and Warrington hospitals in northwest England. Ahmed was arrested in Liverpool in connection with the June 29, 2007, bombing of a London disco and the June 30, 2007, ramming of a flaming SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow Airport in Scotland. Ahmed, an Indian citizen, is from Bangalore. He earned his medical credentials from Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences in Bangalore. He is the brother of Kafeel Ahmed, the SUV driver, and a cousin of Mohammed Haneef. On July 14, U.K. authorities charged him with having information that could have prevented an act of terrorism.

Said Ahmed: variant Saeed Ahmed; alias of Abdul Hakim Murad. Pakistani associate of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf seen running from a burning apartment in Manila on January 6, 1995. Police found explosives, wires, Bibles, pictures of the pope, and maps of the papal route. A laptop computer had details of terrorist plots and Yusuf's aliases. He was arrested January 9, 1995, while making bombs in a rented apartment at Quirino Avenue in Malate. On April 13, 1995, federal officials in New York charged him with conspiring to plant bombs on commercial U.S. aircraft.

Said Saggar Ahmed: teacher in Kenya charged by the Kenyan government on June 23, 2003, in the November 28, 2002, suicide bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured. A court appearance was scheduled for July 8.

Shabbir Ahmed: Pakistani Muslim cleric, age 39, who faced deportation for overstaying his visa while leading a mosque in Lodi, California, and setting up a camp to train terrorists to kill Americans. On August 9, 2005, a San Francisco judge denied bail. Ahmed agreed on August 15 to be deported. Pakistani imam Mohammad Adil Khan, age 47, who served as the imam at the Lodi mosque, and his son, Mohammad Hasan Adil, age 19, had agreed to deportation the previous month and were returned to Pakistan on August 16.

Shirwa Ahmed: Somali American college student, age 27, who blew himself up in a suicide bombing in northern Somalia on October 29, 2008. His attack was one of five simultaneous bombings that day attributed to al-Shabaab, which has al Qaeda links. He was believed to be the first U.S. citizen suicide bomber. The FBI returned his remains to his family in Minneapolis. More than a dozen young Somalis had disappeared from the Minneapolis area around that time.

Syed Haris Ahmed: Pakistani-born naturalized American, age 21, based in Atlanta, who joined Ehsanul Islam Sadequee, a Bangladeshi American, in a March 2005 meeting with Canadian Islamic extremists in Toronto to explore attacks on military bases and oil refineries. A U.S. indictment said that in April 2005, the duo drove Ahmed's pickup to Washington, D.C., where they videotaped the U.S. Capitol, the World Bank headquarters, the George Washington National Masonic Memorial, a Metro station, a hazardous materials vehicle, and fuel storage tanks. They were also in contact with al Qaeda Internet leader Younis Tsouli, believed to be a recruiter for al Qaeda in Iraq, and Aabid Hussein Khan, who has ties to Pakistani Islamists, including Lashkar-i-Taiba. Ahmed was arrested by the FBI in July 2006 after returning to the United States following an attempt to find terrorist training in Pakistan. He was charged in Atlanta with conspiracy and providing material support to a terrorist group and was held without bond after pleading not guilty. He faced 15–60 years in prison. Ahmed was an engineering student at Georgia Tech. He was represented by attorney Jack Martin. Ahmed was convicted on June 11, 2009, by a federal judge in Atlanta, Georgia, of conspiracy to support terrorists.

Iashar M. Aidan: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Ankara to Istanbul on May 3, 1972, and diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. The three students and one electrician demanded the release of the three TPLA members who had been sentenced to death for kidnapping three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. They threatened to blow up the plane and its passengers. The Turks refused to negotiate. The group extended their deadline several times and agreed on May 4 to the Turkish government's suggestion that they accept Bulgarian asylum. One passenger suffered a heart attack during the siege. The foursome was sentenced to three years on November 3, 1972.

Mohammad Aijaz: on January 19, 2008, Karachi authorities arrested five militants and confiscated explosives that were to be used in suicide bombings against religious commemorations. In their rented house, police found 13 pounds of explosives used in suicide vests, 4 pounds of steel ball bearings, 2 pounds of nails, several hand grenades, handguns, a detonator, and cyanide to be used to poison drinks at refreshment sites along the Shi'ite mourners' procession route. Aijaz, the group's leader, had been conducting training courses and taught at a camp in South Waziristan. His four accomplices trained at a camp in the tribal area in 2007.

Mohammad Ahmad Ajaj: Palestinian refugee who sought U.S. asylum and, on May 5, 1993, was placed in a cell attached to the U.S. Attorney's Office in Manhattan. Ajaj was in jail at the time of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 6 people were killed and over 1,000 wounded. He was serving six months for entering the United States from Pakistan with a false Swedish passport identifying him as Khurram Khan. He entered the United States illegally at JFK Airport on September 1, 1992, carrying 12 bomb-making and chemical manuals. Two manuals bore the fingerprints of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf. Ajaj was released on March 1 but was rearrested March 9, 1993, and held at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in lower Manhattan. He was represented by attorney Lynne Stewart, who said he had applied for asylum in 1991. Israel said he had been a member of Fatah and later joined the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, training at a jihad camp in Pakistan. On May 7, 1993, he was named at a detention hearing in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan as the sixth suspect in the WTC conspiracy. He was ordered held without bail. He was indicted May 19, 1993. On May 26, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993. The trial began in September 1993. On March 4, 1994, after five days of deliberation, the jury found him guilty on all counts of conspiracy, explosives charges, and assault. On May 24, 1994, U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy sentenced him to 240 years in prison, a life term calculated by adding the life expectancy of each of the people killed in the blast plus 30 years for two other counts.

Osman 'Ajib: self-proclaimed leader of the Eritrean Liberation Front/Popular Liberation Forces.

He was shot to death by an unidentified gunman in front of his Khartoum hotel on November 15, 1980.

Shiro Akagi: on June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said that the Japanese Red Army (JRA) member was at large.

Jawad Akbar: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, which is often used in homemade bombs. On March 21, 2006, the group pleaded not guilty. They were identified as Omar Khyam, Anthony Garcia, Nabeel Hussain, Jawad Akbar, Waheed Mahmood, Shujah Mahmood, and Salahuddin Amin. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp, according to prosecutor David Waters. The prosecutor claimed they were assisted in the camp by Mohammed Junaid Babar, a U.S. citizen of Pakistani descent, who had pleaded guilty to terrorism charges in a federal court in New York in 2004. Babar was the government's key witness. On April 30, 2007, after 27 days of deliberation, the jury convicted five defendants. Judge Michael Astill issued life sentences to Jawad Akbar, age 23; Anthony Garcia, age 24; ringleader Omar Khyam, age 26; Waheed Mahmood, age 34; and Salahuddin Amin, 31, for conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. It acquitted Nabeel Hussain and Khyam's brother, Shujah Mahmood. Prosecutors said after the trial that the group met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four July 7, 2005, London transit system bombers. The group trained in Pakistan with Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, age 46, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

'Abd-al-Karim al-Nadi 'Abd-al-Akhir: identified by the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution on August 7, 1995, as having trained in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Javed Akhtar: Pakistani involved in the hijacking of a Pakistan International Airlines plane to Kabul in 1981.

Kamran Akhtar: alias Kamran Shaikh. A Pakistani, age 36, of Elmhurst, Queens, New York, arrested July 20, 2004, when spotted videotaping skyscrapers (including the Bank of America and Wachovia buildings) in downtown Charlotte, North Carolina. On August 10, he was ordered held on federal charges that he lied on his immigration status. He had been ordered to leave the United States in 1998 by a New York immigration court but apparently stayed. His camera included video of buildings in Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, and New Orleans, along with footage of an Austin dam and trolley and transportation systems in several cities.

By August 11, Akhtar's videotapes of 34 tourist attractions in Las Vegas had become the subject of dispute between Las Vegas officials and Detroit prosecutors. A Detroit FBI agent said he had attempted to show the Las Vegas officials earlier al Qaeda surveillance videotapes seized in Detroit and Madrid. The tapes showed the MGM Grand, Excalibur, and New York-New York casino hotels on the Strip. Khalid Sheik Muhammad was mentioned in one tape. The tapes also showed Disneyland and the Golden Gate Bridge. FBI officials said this did not constitute a specific threat. Seven videotapes had commentary in Urdu.

On August 13, Akhtar's attorney declined to request bond, and his client was kept in custody. U.S. Magistrate Judge Carl Horn convened a grand jury on August 23 in Charlotte, and Akhtar was indicted on six charges. He faced 55 years. Akhtar pleaded not guilty on September 7 to two immigration counts of refusing to leave the country after being ordered to do so and using a false document and four counts of lying to investigators. On October 8, Akhtar agreed to plead guilty to immigration charges and spend six months in prison before deportation to Pakistan. He was sentenced on January 24, 2005.

Mohammed Akhtar: one of five Pakistanis who arrived in Sharm el-Sheikh on the Red Sea from Cairo on July 5, 2005. Akhtar, age 30, and the others were wanted for questioning in the July 23, 2005, bombing of the resort area that killed 88 people and injured 119.

Qari Saifullah Akhtar: Pakistani member of al Qaeda arrested in Dubai on August 5, 2004. United Arab Emirates police sent him to Pakistan for questioning for his role in the two attempted assassinations against Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. Akhtar is believed to be close to Osama bin Laden and the Taliban.

On February 25, 2008, Pakistani authorities arrested him in Lahore for involvement in the October suicide bombing in Karachi of the homecoming parade of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. The attack killed 140.

Sheikh Saeed Akhtar: shop worker, age 52, and one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. He was soon released.

Bisrat Akililu: one of four Ethiopians who hijacked an Ethiopian Airlines plane flying from Addis Ababa to Bahr Dar on April 12, 1992, and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya, where they surrendered. Ethiopia requested their extradition the next day, saying they were former security members of the deposed regime. They were brought before a Nairobi chief magistrate on April 14. The magistrate declined to release them on bond. The case was due for review on April 28, 1992.

Nihei Akira: Japanese Red Army member released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977.

Mohammad Alam: one of six Pakistani passport holders among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati. Alam is the brother of Mohammad Anis, also arrested. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She ordered Alam's release.

Diepreye Alamieyeseigha: former Nigerian state governor arrested in 2005 in the United Kingdom on money-laundering charges; he fled to Nigeria but was rearrested. His release was demanded by the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta gunmen who took nine hostages on February 18, 2006—including three Americans, two Egyptians, two Thais, a Briton, and a Filipino—from a barge belonging to Willbros, a Houston-based oil services firm laying pipeline for Shell.

Abdurahman Alamoudi: naturalized U.S. citizen, age 51, born in Eritrea and founder of the American Muslim Foundation and the American Muslim Council arrested by London police on August 16, 2003, when they found $340,000 in undeclared cash in his luggage as he was preparing to travel to Damascus, Syria. He was freed after forfeiting the cash. He said an unidentified Libyan official gave him the money in a London hotel room.

U.S. authorities arrested Alamoudi on September 28, 2003, as he attempted to enter the United States. He was charged September 30, 2003, with illegally accepting money from Libya to influence U.S. policy and funding terrorists in the United States and abroad. Federal prosecutors said the $340,000 he was carrying when arrested in August in London "was intended for delivery in Damascus to one or more of the terrorists or terrorist organizations active in Syria," such as al Qaeda, Hizbullah, Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas), and Palestinian Islamic Jihad. The U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, was told that he had also given four checks for several hundred dollars each to pay a salary to Patrice Lumumba Ford. Two other checks paid the utilities of Ahmed Bilal. Alamoudi obtained his U.S. citizenship in 1996; prosecutors said it was fraudulently obtained as he had lied on his immigration application.

On October 23, 2003, he was indicted on charges of money laundering and fraud. The 18-count indictment said he assisted al Qaeda, Hamas, and other terrorists and that he took hundreds of thousands of dollars from Libya and attempted to hide the money's origin and purpose. He had sent $160,000 to a charity implicated in the foiled December 2000 Millennium Plot by al Qaeda to bomb Los Angeles International Airport and the Seattle Space Needle. He was held without bond. The government said he had been in contact with eight known terrorists. A bail hearing was set for October 29. His trial was later set for August 2004. Charges included taking money from a nation designated as a terrorist patron, attempting to launder money, and lying to officials when he denied his Hamas ties.

In mid-June 2004, the Washington Post and the New York Times reported that Alamoudi, who was being held in an Alexandria jail on 34 counts of money smuggling, claimed that Libyan leader Moammar Qadhafi intended to use the money to finance the assassination of Saudi government leader Crown Prince Abdullah. The Post said his story was corroborated by Libyan intelligence officer Col. Mohamed Ismael, who was in Saudi custody. Alamoudi said he met twice with Qadhafi in May and June 2003 regarding the plot, which was to involve the use of small arms or rocket-propelled grenades. Ismael was arrested in Egypt. On November 27, 2003, Saudi authorities arrested Ismael's confederates at a Mecca hotel as they awaited cash payments from their Libyan handlers.

U.S. officials were quoted as believing that Saad Faqih, a radical Saudi dissident in London, was involved. Faqih admitted he had known Alamoudi for years.

On July 30, 2004, Alamoudi pleaded guilty to illegally moving cash from Libya and admitted involvement in the assassination plot along with Mohammad Massari and Saad Faqih, two Saudi dissidents. He said he obtained nearly one million dollar from Libya. Two other guilty pleas covered charges of tax violations and lying on his immigration form. He faced 23 years in prison and life without plea bargain. Alamoudi lost his U.S. citizenship with the plea and signed a deportation order. On October 15, U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton sentenced Alamoudi to the maximum 23-year prison term.

On July 15, 2005, the Department of the Treasury said Alamoudi raised money for al Qaeda in the United States. Treasury's memo also added to its list of terror supporters the Movement for Islamic Reform in Arabia, a London-based group headed by Saad Faqih, whom Alamoudi had contacted in the assassination plot.

Efie Alari: spokesperson for the Nigerian Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta who, on February 19, 2006, threatened to fire rockets at international oil tankers.

Em Alba: one of five New People's Army members arrested in connection with the explosion of three grenades during the April 19, 1981, Easter Sunday mass at the San Pedro Cathedral in Davao City that killed 13 and wounded 177. On April 30, 1981, police said the grenades were supplied by the Moro National Liberation Front.

Mariven Alforque: believed by the Philippine military to be one of the four members of a New People's Army sparrow hit team in the April 21, 1989, assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. She denied the charges, claiming to be an official of a group that counsels and gives financial support to former political prisoners.

Hadi Yousef Alghoul: variant Hadi Yusef Agul. Jordanian and leader of six Arabs arrested April 1, 1995, by Philippine authorities in Caloocan for being members of the little-known Islamic Saturday Meeting, with ties to Ramzi Yusuf. The detainees' documents indicated they planned to attack U.S. and Saudi citizens in the Philippines. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms and explosives. Police seized several M-16 Armalite rifles, dynamite, and detonators. Police said the detainees were preparing a series of bombings to disrupt the May 8 elections. In December 1995, they were tried before the Caloocan City Regional Trial Court for illegal possession of firearms and explosives.

Ali: name used by one of the four hijackers belonging to the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, the Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986.

Abbas Abdi Ali: resident of Mogadishu, Somalia, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a financier of terrorism.

Ahmed Ali: Fiji Indian who, on May 19, 1987, hijacked an Air New Zealand B747 on the Nadi International Airport tarmac in Suva, Fiji, while en route from Narita, Japan, to Auckland. Claiming to have dynamite strapped to his body, he demanded a flight to Libya and the release of the 27 Parliament members of the Indian-dominated government of former prime minister Timoci Bavadra, who were put under house arrest in a May 14 coup. The flight engineer hit Ali over the head with a whisky bottle, and Ali was taken into custody. The hijacker had been a refueler for the Air New Zealand ground staff at the airport for 17 years.

Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali: alias Ammar al-Baluchi. Born in Pakistan and raised in Kuwait, Ali was one of the last 14 detainees who President Bush announced on September 6, 2006, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On March 30, 2007, Ali told a U.S. military commission hearing that he had no ties to the Taliban or al Qaeda. He was accused of preparing an attack against the U.S. Consulate in Karachi when he was arrested in 2003. He admitted wiring $100,000 to 9/11 hijacker Marwan al-Shehhi as a favor, however.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali (alias Ammar al-Baluchi), Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash (alias Khallad). The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. Ali was described as Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's nephew and was said to have provided $127,000 for the 9/11 attackers and facilitated their travel to the United States.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment on capital charges before the militant commission at Guantánamo, he was represented by Navy Lt. Cdr. Brian Mizer but said he wanted to represent himself. He spoke English fluently. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Arifin bin Ali: alias John Wong Ah Hung. Singaporean member of Jemaah Islamiyah (JI), age 42, arrested May 16, 2003, in Thailand. His arrest was announced on June 10, when Thai authorities arrested three of his Thai colleagues who were planning attacks on five Western embassies, including the U.S. Embassy, and tourist locales. He was transferred to Singapore a day later. Ali was a senior JI member responsible for providing arms training to Muslim radicals. He worked closely with Hambali, an at-large Indonesian who was JI's operations chief. Ali left Singapore in December 2001 during a government crackdown on Islamic militants. He initially went to Malaysia, where the Singapore head of JI asked him to help other fugitives. He then went to ground in Thailand in January 2002. He told police he was planning to bomb embassies in Bangkok during the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit that President Bush, the Chinese president, the Japanese prime minister, and other regional leaders were scheduled to attend in October.

Arshad Ali: one of three hijackers of a Pakistan International Airlines B720 flying from Karachi to Peshawar on March 2, 1981, and diverted to Kabul, Afghanistan. On March 14, the terrorists surrendered peacefully to Syrian authorities. On March 23, Syria turned down Pakistan's extradition request, stating that there was no bilateral extradition treaty. On April 30, Pakistan offered a $10,000 reward for his arrest. On March 18, Pakistan requested extradition from Kabul.

Cossor Ali: variant Cossar Ali. U.K. citizen, age 23, of Pakistani descent and mother of an 8-year-old, Ali was charged on August 21, 2006, with withholding knowledge of her husband Ahmed Abdullah Ali's involvement in a plot to blow up 10 U.S. airliners in August 2006.

Deedar Ali: Pakistan People's Party activist arrested August 5, 1991, by Pakistani authorities for involvement in several bus firing incidents in Pucca Qila, old Sukkur area, and Qayyum-abad, in which several persons were killed or injured.

Husayn Ahmad Shahid Ali: aliases Siraj, Fathi. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of the nine gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution charged the nine of forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate state figures, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Ilyas Ali: naturalized U.S. citizen from India living in Minneapolis, Ali, age 55, was one of three people arrested by Hong Kong authorities while attempting to buy four Stinger missiles from undercover FBI agents during a September 20, 2002, meeting in a Hong Kong hotel. (See also Muhammed Abid Afridi.)

Javit Ali: member of the Hizb al-Dawa al-Islamiah group for 21 years interviewed on January 12, 1996, by Philippine Radio-Television GMA-7 Network; during the interview he claimed to be planning to assassinate president Fidel Ramos.

Khyzar Ali: variant of Khyzer Ali.

Khyzer Ali: variant Khyzar Ali. One of nine family members arrested by Lahore police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen was a former Florida resident. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Mahmud Ali: Alias Mohammad Ali. One of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates at the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement.

Mohammed Bashe Ali: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Muhammad Ali: one of two Iraqi terrorists arrested but not charged January 21, 1991, in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of an international terrorist network financed and armed via Iraqi diplomatic pouches. They were deported on January 28, 1991, but ultimately flew to Nepal on January 31, where they were arrested by Nepalese police. Nepal deported them back to Bangkok on February 3, 1991. On February 7, they were deported to Athens.

Rafqat Ali: a construction worker, age 27, who was one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. Ali was released soon after.

Rashid Ali: one of five Pakistanis who arrived in Sharm el-Sheikh on the Red Sea from Cairo on July 5, 2005. Ali, age 26, and the others were wanted for questioning in the July 23, 2005, bombing of the resort area that killed 88 people and injured 119.

Rayed Mohamed Abdullah Ali: Yemeni deported May 30, 2006, from New Zealand to Saudi Arabia because his presence posed a security threat to the country. In Phoenix, he had roomed with Hani Hanjour, an American Airlines Flight 77 hijacker. He was never charged in the attacks. He entered New Zealand in February 2006, saying he wanted to study English in Auckland. He was arrested in Palmerston North, 335 miles south of Auckland, on May 29, where he was taking pilot training at the Manawatu Districts Aero Club. He had earned a U.S. pilot's license and had 79 hours of flying time.

Zaim Ali: spokesperson on February 28, 1993, for the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in the Philippines. He denied MNLF responsibility for the two bombs that exploded at Zamboanga International Airport and injured 30 people.

Zulfigar Ali: Islamic gunman, age 30, who, on February 28, 2003, attacked a police post outside the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, killing two police officers and wounding five policemen and a civilian. He was arrested after a chase in a nearby park. He screamed at the police to kill him. Police found a note in his pocket saying, "I am going to kill the police officers who are protecting the infidels. This is my religious obligation." Ali said he acted alone, firing from a motorbike. He was carrying two pistols and several rounds of ammunition. Police said Ali was involved with a local Islamic jihadi group. Police believed other gunmen were involved, as witnesses observed two gunmen firing a submachine gun and a pistol on police officers who were having lunch inside the police post. Karachi Police Chief Asad Ashraf Malik said that "the automatic weapon used in the incident was snatched from a policeman who was returning to the post from the men's room in the nearby park." However, Ali claimed he had been given two loaded pistols just before the shooting, along with the promise of a getaway car. Pakistani authorities said the Karachi factory worker was hired to conduct the attack by two radicals—an Arab and a Pakistani religious militant—at a local mosque.

Akhat Alim: one of three Pakistani sailors arrested May 2, 1995, in Rosario, Argentina, while taking photos of the Argentine Zionist Union building at 2555 Salta Street in the old Pichincha District. They were placed at the disposal of Federal Judge Galeano. The trio worked on the Cypriot ship Mastrogorgis B, moored in Rosario. Police were investigating whether they were involved with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israel Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 96 and wounded 231.

Commander Allan: alias of Jalandoni Moohomb-sar. Muslim rebel charged on April 2, 1979, by the Philippine military in the city court in Marawi with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although MNLF denied responsibility.

Nathaniel Alpolita: one of five New People's Army members arrested in connection with the explosion of three grenades during the April 19, 1981, Easter Sunday mass at the San Pedro Cathedral in Davao City that killed 13 and wounded 177. On April 30, 1981, police said the grenades were supplied by the Moro National Liberation Front.

Evid Alredo: one of five Mozambicans sentenced to death by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

Christian Altbaum: one of two French citizens arrested in March 1990 by an immigration intelligence unit in Cebu, Philippines, on suspicion of membership in the Carlos Group. He agreed to be voluntarily deported on June 2, 1990.

Hassan Hussein bin Alwan: Saudi arrested on June 12, 2009, by Yemeni authorities and described as “the biggest and the most influential” financier for al Qaeda in Yemen and Saudi Arabia. He is believed to have financed attacks in two neighboring countries. Yemen charged him with forming a terrorist group in Yemen and financing its activities.

Zaid Amer: one of two Saudis among nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila.

Amid: one of a group of 38 undocumented Pakistanis who arrived in Zamboanga, Philippines, on Philippine Airlines flights on June 28, 1994. They were suspected of assisting Abu Sayyaf Muslim extremists in Mindanao who were holding a Roman Catholic priest hostage in the forested interior of Basilan. Their arrest was ordered on July 5.

Jalilul Amin: suspected member of the Philippine Abu Sayyaf Group arrested March 25, 1994, by the Special Action Group of the Philippine National Police along Governor Lim Avenue in Zamboanga City. He was carrying a .357 Magnum revolver and a handheld radio.

Nabl Mohammad Amin: Ethiopian who, on December 26, 1995, tried to hijack a Saudi airliner flying from Asmara, Eritrea, to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. He was overpowered by the crew. The plane returned to Asmara, where he was handed over to authorities.

Salahuddin Amin: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country’s power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Judge Michael Astill issued a life sentence to Salahuddin Amin, age 31, for conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. As of April 29, 2008, he was appealing his conviction. (See also Jawad Akbar.)

Sheikh Abduwel Abdullah Amin: imam of Kampala’s Tawheed Mosque and among 20 suspects arrested September 15, 1998, while attempting to enter Uganda from Kenya. The Washington Post claimed the police were tipped off that the Islamic extremists planned to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Kampala. Two men were believed to be associates of Osama bin Laden. All but four of the suspects were released on October 5. The foursome had not been charged as of October 5, although Ugandan law requires that charges be made within 48 hours of arrest.

Shakil Ammad: Pakistani arrested June 19, 1994, by Thai police on suspicion of plotting to harm Nepalese crown prince Dipendra Bir Bikram Shah at the Asian Institute of Technology in Pathum Thani. Ammad claimed to be an engineer with a well-known construction company that had never heard of him. He had arrived in Bangkok the previous day.

Karuna Amman: alias Colonel Karuna. Former deputy chief and 20-year military commander of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) who defected to the government in 2004. The former teen bodyguard of LTTE leader Velupillai Prabhakaran went on to become a member of the Sri Lankan Parliament.

Pottu Amman: intelligence chief of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam suspected of planning the April 23, 1993, assassination of Sri Lanka opposition leader Lalith Athulathmudali at an election rally in Kirulapone, near Colombo. He also was believed to have planned the killings of former deputy minister of defense Gen. Ranjan Wijeratne, Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, Sri Lanka’s northern commander Gen. Denzil Kobbekaduwa, Sri Lankan Navy chief Admiral Clancy Fernando, and nine other senior military officers.

At the time of the group’s dissolution on May 18, 2009, Amman was killed in a gun battle with government troops.

Basirud Ampol: Abu Sayyaf member killed on January 13, 1995, in a clash with government troops in District Lantawan, Isabela, Basilan, Philippines.

Amrozi: variant of Amrozi bin Nurhasyim. East Javanese car repairman who was part of the group that bombed two Bali nightclubs on October 12, 2002, killing 202, many of them Australian tourists. Amrozi owned the Mitsubishi L-300 minivan that exploded. He was arrested at an Islamic boarding school, Al Islam, in Lamongan, where he had attended a lecture by Abubakar Baasyir, the head of Jemaah Islamiyah. Amrozi said he was involved in the August 2000 remote-controlled bombing of Philippine ambassador Leonides Caday's house in Jakarta. He said the Bali bombings were "revenge for what Americans have done to Muslims." He said he was trying to kill as many Americans as possible and that the terrorists were unhappy large numbers of Australians had died instead. Amrozi said he had met with Riduan Isamuddin, alias Hambali, the leader of Jemaah Islamiyah and al Qaeda's leader in the region. Amrozi also claimed to be involved in the bombing of the Jakarta stock exchange in 2000, which killed 15 people, and the October 12, 2002, bombing of the Philippine Consulate in North Sulawesi. He also claimed to know Fathur Rohman Ghozi, an Indonesian bombing expert arrested in January by Philippine authorities.

Amrozi claimed to have purchased a ton of ammonium chlorate in Surabaya, East Java; police obtained the sales receipt and detained the seller. Amrozi led police to a home in Denpasar, Bali, where explosives residue was found. Amrozi used Malaysian ringgit, Singapore dollars, and perhaps U.S. dollars to buy the minivan.

Amrozi's older brother, Mukhlas, is a Jemaah Islamiyah operative wanted for the bombing. Police were seeking three other relatives, including two other brothers belonging to JI. Police believed Mukhlas was the Malaysia chief of JI and was involved in a failed plot to blow up pipelines that supply Malaysian water to Singapore. Younger brother Ali Imron was believed to have helped detonate the car bomb. Brother Ghuftron, age 48, attended an Islamic boarding school founded by Baasyir. Brother Ali Fauzi was also wanted in connection with the bombing. Brother Khozin founded Al Islam, the Islamic boarding school. Amrozi has 12 brothers and sisters.

Australians were outraged on November 13 when a smirking Amrozi appeared on television laughing and joking with Indonesian police. Amrozi told police that Imam Samudra, alias Hudama, asked him to buy the chemicals to make the bomb.

Police said one group of militants from Lamongan in eastern Java, including Amrozi, set off the remote-detonation bombing of the Sari Club.

On March 11, 2003, the government announced that the August 1, 2000, car bombing of Ambassador Caday's home in Jakarta was carried out by the same JI terrorists accused in the Bali blasts. The government said the attack was ordered in July 2000 by Riduan Isamuddin, alias Hambali, during a meeting in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

On April 30, 2003, prosecutors charged Amrozi with buying the explosives and driving the van that exploded. The charges carry the death penalty. The trial began on May 12. Prosecutors recommended the death sentence for Amrozi, alias "the smiling bomber."

On August 7, Chief Judge I Made Karna Parna declared Amrozi guilty and sentenced him to death. Families of victims cheered in the courtroom. A smiling Amrozi (reported by different sources as being either 30 or 41 years old) turned to them and gave them a thumbs-up sign. Attorney Wirawan Adnan said "the death penalty is speaking about revenge and that's not what justice is all about. We appeal not because we believe our client is innocent. We appeal because we believe we need to correct the applications of the law. We believe that our client . . . is not getting a fair trial." On September 17, 2003, a court upheld Amrozi's death sentence; he said he would appeal to the Supreme Court.

On November 8, 2008, the Indonesian government executed Islamic militants Imam Samudra, Amrozi bin Nurhasyim, and Ali Ghufron (the last two were brothers) for helping plan and conduct the October 12, 2002, Bali bombings. None expressed remorse, taunting relatives of the victims during their trials. The terrorists told the media they hoped their executions would spawn revenge attacks in the country.

An Chien-wei: Chinese security official at the Shenyang Institute of Physical Cultural and one of six hijackers of Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, a British-built Trident jetliner, on May 5, 1983; the plane was flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai. The hijackers demanded to go to South Korea, where they surrendered and requested political asylum in Taiwan. It was the first successful hijacking of a mainland Chinese plane, and it forced South Korean and Chinese authorities to make their first official contact in over 30 years. South Korea denied China's extradition request. Charges of violating Korean aviation safety law, illegal possession of firearms, and violating immigration law were filed on June 2, 1983. On July 18, the trial began in Seoul Criminal District Court and ended in a guilty verdict for the six defendants. An Chien-wei was sentenced to four years. The sentences were upheld by higher courts twice and then commuted to time served on August 13, 1984. The hijackers were banished from South Korea. They were given political asylum in Taiwan, where they arrived on August 14, 1984, to a hero's welcome.

An Nae-sang: senior at Yonsei University charged by Seoul police with conspiracy to invade the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul; the plot entailed 15 students smashing three large glass windows with 30 Molotov cocktails on February 24, 1988. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths and were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day. An was also suspected of planting a time bomb in the Kwangju USIS building on February 26, 1988.

Moninder Singh Anand: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. Each suspect was initially charged with conspiracy to possess explosives with intent to injure. Charges against Anand were dropped.

Ghalib Andang: alias Commander Robot. Leader of the Abu Sayyaf rebels who, on March 20, 2000, took more than 70 hostages, many of them children from two Philippine schools. He was believed to have led the Abu Sayyaf rebels who, on April 23, 2000, kidnapped 21 people from a restaurant on Sipadan Island off Malaysia's Borneo coast. He was captured on December 7, 2003, after being wounded in a gun battle with soldiers in Indanan on Jolo Island.

Auguto Andicen: one of five Mozambicans sentenced to death by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

Ka Andres: alias of Medel Manalo.

Ang Tiu-cho: Chinese, age 23, who shot a 16-year-old girl in front of her teacher and classmates in the Philippines on December 30, 1952, because she did not return his love. He then attempted to fly home to Amoy, a Chinese port, by skyjacking the Laoag to Aparri DC3 flight of Philippine Air Lines after escaping police. He had boarded under the assumed name of Hung Chu-chun, then shot the pilot and purser and wounded the copilot. A Nationalist Chinese Air Force pilot intercepted the plane and forced the copilot to land in Quemoy, four miles from Amoy. Ang mistook the location for Amoy and threw down his guns and grenades, whereupon he was arrested.

Edwin Angeles: Abu Sayyaf member who turned state's evidence and claimed that he assisted Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf in the plot to kill the pope during the pope's January 1995 visit to the Philippines.

Nestor Angelo: alias Ka (Comrade) Fred. Angelo's release was demanded on October 22, 1986, by the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Herusum Angliong: New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines member wanted on a July 9, 1989, warrant in connection with the NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Muwakfak al-'Ani: Iraqi consul general also serving as Iraqi Embassy first secretary in Manila; he was declared persona non grata on January 21, 1991, for his involvement with two terrorists trying to plant a 200-pound bomb at the U.S. Information Service (USIS) Thomas Jefferson Library. The bomb exploded prematurely in Manila on January 19, 1991. He had obtained tickets for the bombers and drove them to the bomb site. He left on January 24. He had earlier served tours in Kuwait, Washington, and Libya.

Mohammad Anis: variant Anees. One of six Pakistani passport holders among nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. His brother, Mohamad Alam, was also arrested. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati. Anis allegedly was a close associate of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf and was linked to the bombing of the Philippine Airlines plane and assassination plots against Pope John Paul II, president Fidel Ramos, Armed Forces chief of staff Gen. Arturo T. Enrile, and Philippine National Police chief director Gen. Recaredo Sarmiento. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She ordered Anis's release.

Commander Annie: one of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988. Her uncle, Jamil Lucman, was a former Moro National Liberation Front commander who had surrendered to the authorities and was serving as intermediary with the kidnappers.

Adel Anonn: alias Adel Bani. One of six Iraqis who were among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. He denied being the brother of Ramzi Yusuf. Police said he owned the Mindanao Meat Shop, in the back of a building in Manila's rundown former prostitution district.

Aftab Ansari: phoned Indian police from the United Arab Emirates to take credit for the January 22, 2002, 6:30 A.M. incident in which four gunmen on two motorcycles fired AK-47 automatic weapons at the guard post of the American Center, a U.S. cultural center on Jawaharlal Nehru Road in downtown Calcutta, killing 5 policemen and wounding 20 people, including police officers, pedestrians, and a private security guard hired by the U.S. government. He was extradited on February 9, 2002, after he was arrested attempting to travel out of the United Arab Emirates with Pakistani travel documents. The United Arab Emirates also deported his accomplice, Raju Sharma, wanted in India on weapons charges. The Indian Foreign Ministry said Ansari was in contact with Omar Saeed, chief suspect in the January 23 kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl. Ansari and Saeed had first met in an Indian prison in the 1990s, when Ansari was serving time for criminal operations.

On April 27, 2005, a Calcutta court sentenced seven people to death for the shooting. The judge pronounced the defendants guilty of murder, waging war against the country, and possessing arms. Six other defendants remained at large. Prosecutors said main defendant Ansari was a Dubai-based underworld figure with links to militant groups in Pakistan.

Faheem Ahmed Ansari: variant Fahim Ansari. Mumbai native, age 34, arrested in February 2008 for a New Year's Eve grenade attack on a police training camp in Rampur, Uttar Pradesh. He claimed to have surveilled targets for another Lashkar-i-Taiba plan. Police wanted to question him for the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Indian police claimed he met with Lashkar operatives when he lived in Dubai. Indian police claimed he traveled to Karachi in 2007 and trained for nine months in explosives, surveillance techniques, intelligence gathering, and agent handling. Police claimed he sent video clips and maps of Mumbai locations to Lashkar commanders via a cutout in Nepal. He was charged by Indian prosecutors on February 25, 2009, with providing maps used in the Mumbai attacks.

Kamal Ahmed Ansari: arrested in Bihar State on July 20, 2006, as a suspect in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800. He had links with terrorists in Nepal and Bangladesh and unspecified links to Pakistan.

Tanvir Ahmed Ansari: practitioner of traditional Muslim medicine, age 32, arrested as a suspect on July 24, 2006, in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800. He allegedly contacted Muslim militants during a 2001 visit to Bahrain and learned to make bombs during a 2004 visit to Pakistan.

Charles Anthony: son of Velupillai Prabhakaran, head of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka. Anthony ran the terrorist group's tiny air force and died on May 18, 2009, along with his father.

Mohammed Anwar: one of five Pakistanis who arrived in Sharm el-Sheikh on the Red Sea from Cairo on July 5, 2005. Anwar, age 30, and the others were wanted for questioning in the July 23, 2005, bombing of the resort area that killed 88 people and injured 119.

Yoshinobu Aoyama: Aum Shin Rikyo minister of justice arrested on May 3, 1995, by Japanese police on charges of slandering a fertilizer company by claiming it had sprayed an Aum commune with sarin nerve agent.

Assmet Apaase: one of 16 Middle Eastern terrorists who were planning to attack Saudi diplomats and officials overseas, the Saudi Embassy told Thai officials on March 20, 1990. He carried a Lebanese passport.

Freddy Aponno: leader of seven members of the Free South Moluccan Youth Organization who seized a train in Beilen, Netherlands, killing the engineer and a passenger later in the December 2, 1975, takeover. They demanded that the Dutch government recognize the nonexistent Republic of South Molucca, release 25 terrorists held in Dutch jails (including several sentenced for the July 1975 plot to kidnap Queen Juliana and members of her royal family), initiate UN mediation on Moluccan independence, and provide a plane to fly them to an undisclosed destination. The terrorists surrendered

December 14. On March 26, 1976, the seven terrorists were sentenced to 14 years in prison. Their release was demanded in attacks on a train and a school by South Moluccans on May 23, 1977.

Abdullahi Sudi Arale: leader of the Somali Council of Islamic Courts, an Islamic militant political organization that ruled large tracts of Somalia in 2006. He had served as the link between al Qaeda in the Horn of Africa and senior al Qaeda leaders in Pakistan, providing weapons and explosives to the African cells. The al Qaeda courier was arrested in Africa sometime before June 7, 2007. He was scheduled to undergo a Combatant Status Review Tribunal at Guantánamo Bay.

Alejandro Arceo: chief of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines Mariano Garcia Brigade, named by police on May 20, 1990, as a planner of the May 13, 1990, NPA murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. He was charged with double murder and illegal possession of firearms.

Mohammed Aref: one of five Pakistanis who arrived in Sharm el-Sheikh on the Red Sea from Cairo on July 5, 2005. Aref, age 26, and the others were wanted for questioning in the July 23, 2005, bombing of the resort area that killed 88 people and injured 119.

Arif: Singaporean who trained with Lashkar-i-Taiba, a Pakistan-based group, in 2000 to 2001. His father is a member of the Philippine Moro Islamic Liberation Front. Arif was one of 11 Islamic militants arrested in Southeast Asia in late 2003 who were being groomed as the next leaders of Jamaah Islamiyah.

Mohammad Arif: one of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Masrab Arochi: variants Abu Musab al Baluchi, Mussad Aruchi, Mussab Aruchi. Nephew of 9/11 organizer Khalid Sheik Mohammed, Arochi was arrested in Karachi on June 12, 2004. There was a one-million-dollar reward for his capture. Arochi led police to Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan, who was arrested in Lahore on July 13. His e-mails led police to other al Qaeda terrorists. Information from the interrogations of Arochi and Khan led to the arrest of al Qaeda terrorist Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani on July 25, who was wanted for the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Hafiz Arshad: one of nine terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Arshad, in his twenties, was from Multan, Pakistan.

Mark Alphonzo Artis: American from Illinois arrested October 18, 1988, in Quetta, Pakistan, as he was boarding a domestic flight. Police found 10 grams of hashish in his luggage, as well as an aviation book, maps, electronic equipment, pro-Iranian radical literature, and validated visas to Iran in his passport. Police believed he was involved in the August 17, 1988, explosion on the C-130 plane of Pakistani president Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, which killed all 32 on board. He had told some associates that he was a Shi'ite Muslim involved in a jihad but denied involvement in the Zia killing. He was held incommunicado for months. After he was released in May 1989, U.S. officials were notified by Pakistan that he had been held on a drug charge.

Musaab Aruchi: variant of Masrab Arochi.

Shoko Asahara: born Chizuo Matsumoto, self-described "Venerated Master" of the Aum Shin Rikyo cult, which released sarin nerve agent (isopropyl methylphosphorofluoridate) on March 20, 1995, into the Tokyo subway system, killing 12 and hospitalizing 5,510. The group also was suspected in the June 27, 1994, sarin release in Matsumoto, 125 miles northwest of Tokyo, in which 265 people were hospitalized and 7 died in agony. A week later, residents of the small village of Kamikuishiki, near Mount Fuji south of Matsumoto, had the same symptoms, although all recovered. Asahara had been jailed in 1982 for selling counterfeit medicines. He also had founded three cults. In 1982, he and his wife created the Heavenly Blessing Association. He next tried the Aum Divine Wizard Association, claiming that Buddhist principles would permit him to fly. In 1987, he created Aum Supreme Truth, which venerates Shiva, the Hindu god of destruction and renewal; Buddhist saints; and Adolf Hitler. At its height, it had 40,000 adherents in Japan, the United States, Germany, Russia, and Sri Lanka. Police arrested him on May 16, 1995; he was hiding with his wife and six children at the Aum Mount Fuji complex. Police searched for three hours in the underground tunnels and secret passages before finding him in his meditation chamber. He and six followers were indicted June 6, 1995, on murder charges. He faced the death penalty. On June 14, 1995, he was charged with ordering the January 1994 strangulation of Kotaro Ochida, a pharmacist in a cult hospital, by Hideaki Yasudi, a former Aum member. On July 5, 1995, he was indicted on a murder charge related to the strangling. He was also charged with ordering the production of LSD, truth serums, amphetamines, and other illegal drugs. The trial of Asahara and 162 of his followers was to begin on October 26, 1995, in Courtroom 104 of the Tokyo District Court. On October 4, 1995, NHK Television reported that he had confessed to all charges, including those of masterminding two dozen killings.

On October 13, 1995, Kyodo reported Asahara had told police he had ordered the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto, age 33; his wife Satoko, age 29; and their son Tatsuhiko, age 1, after senior Aum members Kiyohide Hayakawa, head of the construction section, and Kazuaki Okazaki said they could not kill only the lawyer.

On December 4, 1995, he was served a warrant for involvement in the VX gas murder of Osaka businessman Tadahito Hamaguchi on December 12, 1994.

On July 24, 2001, a Tokyo court ordered him to pay $3.7 million to families of the four victims killed in a sarin attack in June 1994.

At the end of their seven-year case before the Tokyo District Court on April 24, 2003, prosecutors called for the death penalty, which was issued on February 26, 2004.

Abdulrassad Asani: information minister of the Philippine Moro National Liberation Front who visited Libya in April 1987.

Shinya Asano: former member of Aum Shin Rikyo and the Elite Paratroops Unit of the Ground Self-Defense Force (SDF) sentenced on October 16, 1995, by the Tokyo District Court to a two-year suspended sentence for attempting to wiretap the home of an SDF commander's daughter on March 7, 1995. He had also broken into a drivers' license exam center in Koganei, Tokyo, in December 1994.

Mujahid Dokubo-Asari: leader in 2007 of a Nigerian militant group that conducted attacks on Nigeria's oil industry in the Niger Delta. He was freed from prison on June 14, 2007.

Mohammed Asha: acquitted by a London court on December 16, 2008, of involvement in the failed June 2007 car bomb attacks in London and Glasgow. Asha, age 28, had been in contact with Bilal Abdulla, one of the bombers. Asha was a doctor for the British National Health Service. His visa had expired while he was in custody, and he faced deportation.

Muhamad Asharaq: one of two Bangladeshis prevented by Philippine immigration authorities from entering the country on April 8, 1995, via an Ethiopian flight from Bangkok. They were suspected of being terrorists.

Mike Asher: London-based, South African-backed Seychelles exile who worked for Italy and was blown up, along with Simon Denouse, by their own bomb on October 20, 1982, before they could launch a coup against the government of Seychelles president Albert France Rene. The Seychelles Resistance Movement claimed credit.

Ahmad M.A. Ashnabisi: one of two Iraqi terrorists arrested but not charged January 21, 1991, in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of an international terrorist network financed and armed via Iraqi diplomatic pouches. They were deported on January 28, 1991, but ultimately flew to Nepal on January 31, where they were arrested by Nepalese police. Nepal deported them back to Bangkok on February 3, 1991. On February 7, they were deported to Athens.

Abdul Razzaq son of Ashor: one of five Libyans arrested March 27, 1993, by police in Peshawar, Pakistan, at a checkpoint near the Gulbahar crossing. Police found in their vehicle two .30 pistols and 30 cartridges, fake passport stamps, U.S. dollars, and Pakistani currency.

Haji Muhammad Ashraf: chief of finance of the Pakistan-based Lashkar-i-Taiba. On May 27, 2008, the United States imposed financial sanctions against him.

Mohammed Ashraf: one of two Kashmiri Liberation Front hijackers of an Indian Airlines Fokker Friendship F27 flying from Srinagar to Jammu on January 30, 1971, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. The duo demanded asylum and freedom from prosecution from the Pakistani government, plus the release of 36 prisoners in Kashmir jails by the Indian government. The Pakistanis granted asylum. India refused to give in to their demands, and, on February 3, the hijackers blew up the plane with hand grenades, remaining on board to ensure the fire consumed the plane and preventing Pakistani firefighters from stopping the blaze. They were injured when they jumped from the plane and were subsequently charged with conspiracy and subversive activities. On May 17, 1973, a special tribunal found hijacker Hashim Quershi guilty of being an Indian agent who had received his orders from Delhi intelligence officers. The court found that he had acted as an intelligence agent rather than as a member of the Liberation Front and sentenced him to stiff jail terms under the Pakistani Penal Code and the Official Secrets Act. The court held that Ashraf was unaware of Hashim's conspiracy; he thus was charged, along with the other officers of the Liberation Front, with sending arms and ammunition to Indian-occupied Kashmir. They received minor sentences.

Mohammed Ashraf: one of three members of the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin al-Almi arrested July 8, 2002, by Pakistani authorities in connection with the June 14, 2002, car bombing of the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 and injured 51. Authorities also seized a large quantity of explosives and weapons. Two men publicly admitted their guilt and said the bomb was built to kill Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. The duo, identified as Mohammed Imran, the group's leader, and Mohammed Hanif, his deputy, said they tried to set off the bomb near the president's motorcade in Karachi in April, but the remote control failed. The trio—Imran, Hanif, and Ashraf—were arraigned August 3 in the Anti-Terrorism Court on charges of conspiracy, terrorism, attempted murder, and use of a lethal explosive. The terrorism charge carries the death penalty. The trio and Waseem Akhtar, a Pakistan Rangers paramilitary police member, were also arraigned on charges of plotting to kill Musharraf.

Ibrahim Mahfudh Ashur: Kenyan arrested in August 2008 as part of the investigation of the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He allegedly was in contact with al Qaeda bombing planner Fazul Abdullah Mohammed. Police also arrested his parents and confiscated two passports and a computer.

Manfo Kwaku Asiedu: Ghanaian charged in a London court on August 8, 2005, with conspiracy to commit murder and explosives offenses. Police believe he was the fifth bomber who left a backpack with an unexploded bomb in a West London park during the abortive copycat bombings of the London subway system on July 21, 2005. His trial began on January 15, 2007. Stephen Kamlish, attorney for Asiedu, noted that his client had “broken ranks” with the other defendants and was sitting apart from them in court. On July 10, 2007, the jury was unable to reach a verdict on two of the defendants—Asiedu and Adel Yahya—and was dismissed. On November 20, 2007, a British court sentenced Asiedu to 33 years in prison. He had admitted to a charge of conspiracy to cause explosions.

Haris bin Asim: Egyptian member of al Qaeda arrested in a June 25, 2003, raid on a Peshawar house, where police found a videocassette of Osama bin Laden warning of attacks against U.S. interests in Saudi Arabia.

Anas Asjad: commander of the Moro National Liberation Front in the Philippines in 1987.

Aslam Muhammad Aslam: one of two Pakistani brothers arrested by passport control officers at Ruzyně Airport in Czechoslovakia on January 28, 1991. He was on a list of international terrorists. The brothers were searched but no suspicious objects were found. They were flown back to Belgrade on January 28.

Mohammad Aslam: hijacker of a Swissair DC8 flying from Bombay to Karachi on December 1, 1974. He demanded to be flown to Libya or Lebanon. During a refueling stop in Karachi, he was overpowered by the crew. He was sentenced on March 10, 1975, to three years and was fined $200 for attempted hijacking.

Mohammad Aslam: one of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement.

Wasim Aslam: one of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore

Raja Aslan: taxi driver from Pakistan whose cell phone was used to make 23 calls to Abdel Ghani’s alias. Abdel Ghani was linked to Lucia Garofalo and Ahmed Ressam.

Haroon Radhi Aswat: variant of Haroon Rashid Aswat.

Haroon Rashid Aswat: variant Haroon Radhi Aswat. Pakistani (or Indian), age 31, raised in Batley, United Kingdom, who was an aide to Abu Hamza Masri, the radical Muslim preacher in London. Aswat traveled to Pakistan, India, the United States, and other countries. He was involved in a plot to set up a terrorist training camp in Bly, Oregon. His cell phone had received 20 calls from several of the London bombers who attacked the London subway system on July 7, 2005. The last call was made the night of July 6 from London. He comes from the same general area of West Yorkshire as three of the bombers; Mohammed Sidique Khan lived closest to him. Aswat attended schools in Batley and Dewsbury and went to a technical college in Bradford. Zambian police arrested Aswat on July 20, 2005, as he was crossing into the country from Zimbabwe. He was deported to the United Kingdom on August 7, 2005. The United States requested extradition on charges related to his plans for the terrorist training camp. On January 5, 2006, a British court ruled that the suspected al Qaeda member and United Kingdom citizen could be extradited to the United States to stand trial in a U.S. federal court—but not a military tribunal—for allegedly plotting to set up the Bly camp. He could not be designated an enemy combatant. The U.K. home secretary had two months to approve the extradition. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws ruled that Aswat and Babar Ahmad could be extradited.

Tawfiq bin Atah: Malaysian security reported a January 2000 meeting between bin Atah, hijacker Khalid Almihdhar, and other Osama bin Laden supporters.

Mohammed Atef: aliases Subhi Abu Sita (variant Sitta), Shaykh Taseer Abdallah, Abu Hafs al-Masri, Abu Hafez. Agricultural engineer who served in Egypt's air defense forces before joining the Egyptian Islamic Jihad and later becoming chief of security for Osama bin Laden in Sudan. Atef was top aide to Ayman al-Zawahiri for years in Islamic Jihad. Operating from Sudan in 1983, he planned the al Qaeda assault on U.S. Army Rangers in Somalia. He later became bin Laden's senior military commander, training thousands in Afghan camps. He was in cell phone contact with the bin Laden team that bombed the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in August 1998. He also served as bin Laden's media adviser, setting up interviews with Western reporters. In January 2001, his daughter married one of bin Laden's sons in Afghanistan. He was initially believed killed in the U.S. bombing of Kabul in November 2001, but his name was passed after Christmas 2001 to Afghans working with the Coalition. The former Egyptian police officer, born in 1944, had a five-million-dollar bounty on his head after being indicted on murder and conspiracy charges for the August 7, 1998, Africa bombings. He also trained the Somalis who killed 18 U.S. soldiers in Mogadishu in 1993. He planned an unsuccessful attack on U.S. troops at a Yemeni hotel in 1992. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen by President Bush on September 24, 2001. His height is circa six feet five inches.

Ibrahim Athar: alias Chief. Pakistani from Bawalpur identified by India as one of five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport.

Simplicio Atienza: on April 9, 1987, Atienza was arrested in the Calubang neighborhood in connection with the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Nobuyuki Wakaoji, chief of the Manila branch of Mitsui, by five armed members of the New People's Army. Atienza was also charged with robbery.

Atif: alias of Kamran. Believed to be the mastermind of the May 26, 2004, attack in which car bombs exploded near the residence of the U.S. consul general and the Pakistani-American Cultural Center, a private English-language school not affiliated with the U.S. government. A policeman was killed, and 34 people, mostly police officers and journalists, were injured. He was arrested in a roundup of people involved in a failed assassination plot in April 2002 against Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf.

Itisgemenet Atinkut: one of four Ethiopians who hijacked an Ethiopian Airlines plane flying from Addis Ababa to Bahr Dar on April 12, 1992; the hijackers diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya, where they surrendered. Ethiopia requested their extradition the next day, saying they were former security members of the deposed regime. The hijackers were brought before a Nairobi chief magistrate on April 14. The magistrate declined to release them on bond. The case was due for review on April 28, 1992.

Sawfat Hasan 'Abd-al-Qani Atiq: alias Faysal. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of the nine gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution charged the nine of forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate state figures, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Osman Ato: lieutenant of fugitive Somali warlord Mohamed Farah Aidid and owner of a garage where Pakistani UN soldiers found a weapons cache on June 28, 1993. In the resulting shootout, two Pakistani soldiers died and three were wounded, while two Somali gunmen were killed and several others were wounded by fire from a U.S. Cobra helicopter.

Ahmed Nawaz Atta: Pakistani, age 19, questioned by the FBI about possible involvement in a terrorist organization and held by U.S. authorities as of November 2001 in their 9/11 investigations.

Hassan bin Attash: Yemeni arrested in Karachi, Pakistan, in September 2002 on suspicion of involvement in terrorism. The Washington Post claimed he was held in Jordan for 10 months before being moved to Guantánamo Bay.

Tawfiq bin Attash: alias of Walid Muhammad bin Attash.

Walid Muhammad Salih Mubarak bin Attash: aliases Tawfiq bin Attash, Khallad, Tawfiq Attash Khallada. The Yemeni, who was born and raised in Saudi Arabia and who lost his left leg in a battlefield accident in 1997, told a U.S. military tribunal at Guantánamo Bay on March 12, 2007, that he organized the USS Cole attack and the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He ran a terrorist training camp in Logar, Afghanistan. He claimed to have purchased the explosives and faked travel documents for the bombings. He also helped choose the 9/11 attackers. He was arrested in April 2001. He had been chosen by Osama bin Laden to be the 20th hijacker for 9/11 but he was prevented from joining the team when he was arrested and detained briefly in Yemen in 2001. He had served as a bodyguard for bin Laden. His father, Mohammed, is reportedly close to bin Laden. His younger brother, Hassan, has been held at Guantánamo since 2004.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Abli Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared bin Attash an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted the military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali (alias Ammar al-Baluchi), Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. The charge sheet said that circa December 1999, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed gave bin Attash a razor knife, which he used to check airline security measures on flights to Malaysia, Bangkok, and Hong Kong. On these flights, bin Attash obtained information on U.S. carriers.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment on capital charges before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Attaullah: leader of a group of 10 al Qaeda members arrested June 12–13, 2004, in Karachi.

Attaullah: Iraqi based in Peshawar and believed to be the al Qaeda ringleader of a bombing that killed a dozen people, including four Americans working for DynCorp, on August 29, 2004. He was also believed to be behind a suicide bomber who attacked a Kabul shopping center two months later near a group of Icelandic peacekeepers, killing an American woman and an Afghan girl and injuring three soldiers.

Adel Attayab: Sudanese employee of an Arab-financed relief agency in Peshawar and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. He was charged under the 14 Foreigners Act.

Muhsin Musa Matwalli Atwah: aliases Abdul Rahman, Abdul Rahman al-Muhajir, Abdel Rahman, Mohammed K.A. al-Namer, Abu 'Abd al-Rahman al-Muhajir. Born June 19, 1964, in Egypt, Atwah was wanted in connection with the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He faced life in prison without parole on various conspiracy charges. He had been an al Qaeda member since 1990, providing explosives training in Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Sudan. He was part of an al Qaeda cell in Somalia in the early 1990s that trained Somali tribesmen to attack U.S. soldiers. The Rewards for Justice Program offered five million dollars for his apprehension. His height was circa five feet five inches. He is believed to have died at age 41 in North Waziristan on April 12, 2006, in a Pakistani helicopter air strike.

Jasbir Singh Atwal: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. Atwal was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and charged with attempted murder.

Jaspal Singh Atwal: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. Atwal was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and charged with attempted murder.

Augusto: disturbed man holding a hand grenade and a gun who hijacked a Philippine Airlines domestic flight carrying 278 passengers from Davao City to Manila on May 25, 2000. He was wearing a ski mask and swim goggles. He demanded that the plane return to Davao, but the pilots said the plane was low on fuel. The hijacker parachuted out of the plane near Manila after robbing the passengers, none of whom were injured. Police searched a forested hilly area outside Manila. Passengers described the man as hysterical; the man had told pilot Butch Generoso that he had family problems. He made flight attendants collect about $25,000 from the passengers and then demanded more. After the second collection, he screamed at the pilot to open the nearest exit, which the pilot refused to do. Once the plane descended to 6,000 feet, the pilot depressurized the plane. The hijacker demanded a baseball hat and money belt; then, wearing a homemade parachute, he tried to jump from an exit on the right rear side of the plane. The wind was too strong to make the jump, but a flight attendant pushed him out. He pulled the pin from a grenade but mistakenly threw the pin, not the grenade, back into the cabin. He died upon impact, according to the Darwin Awards.

Aung Sang Suu Kyi: Nobel-winning Burmese opposition leader whose release was demanded by two Burmese students demanding democracy in their military-ruled nation; on October 6, 1989, the two students hijacked Myanmar Airways XY-ADW, a Burmese Airways Fokker 28 on a domestic flight from Mergui to Rangoon, and diverted it to U Taphao Naval Air Base in Thailand. She had been placed under house arrest July 20, 1989, after anti-government speeches. Her release was also demanded by two Burmese students who, on November 10, 1990, hijacked Thai International Airways Flight TG304, an Airbus 300 flying from Bangkok to Yangon, diverting it to Calcutta's Dum Dum Airport.

Saw Than Aung: Karen rebel leader whose followers kidnapped two French citizens and a dozen Burmese civilians on October 18, 1983.

Abu Muslim Australia: alias of David M. Hicks.

Hassan Dahir Aweys: resident of Somalia listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. He was an Osama bin Laden associate in the 1990s. On June 23, 2006, he was named leader of the ruling Conservative Council of Islamic Courts in Somalia.

Daidoji Ayako: female Japanese Red Army member released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977.

Aden Hashi Ayro: leader of Hizbul Shabbab, variant al-Shabaab, a violent youth gang of the Islamic Courts Union of Somalia. He was believed to have been wounded on January 8, 2007, when the United States conducted an air strike on Badmadow Island off southern Somalia. Ayro was an associate of Fazul Abdullah Mohammed, Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan, and Abu Taha al-Sudani. The United States found bloody clothes at the air strike site where 5 to 10 al Qaeda suspects had been killed, including Mohammed, a planner of the bombings of the U.S. embassies of Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. Mohammed and Nabhan were wanted on suspicion of planning and carrying out the bombings. Al-Sudani is an explosives specialist with suspected al Qaeda ties. Mohammed was believed to have planned the Africa bombings as well as the car bombing of a Mombasa beach resort in Kenya and the simultaneous attempt to shoot down an Israeli aircraft in 2002.

Ayro was killed in a 2:00 A.M. U.S. air strike on Dusa Mareb. He reportedly had trained in assassination and insurgency in Afghanistan in the late 1990s. He had gone into hiding since his sharia courts group had been removed from Mogadishu in early 2007. In November 2007, he had called on his followers to attack African Union peacekeepers. He reportedly had ordered the killings of a U.K. journalist, four foreign aid workers, and a Somali peace activist. He was a member of the Ayr subclan of the Hizbul Shabbab group.

Mohammad Ayud: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell, Ayud, age 63, was arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and a prayer house frequented by supporters of the late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. He was believed to be one of the group's ideological leaders.

Dr. Azahari: chief bomb maker of the Jemaah Islamiyah. As of June 24, 2004, he remained at large. He was believed to have been involved in the August 5, 2003, suicide bombing at Jakarta's Marriott Hotel that killed 16 and injured 149.

Mohammed Azam: one of four Pakistanis arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992, for suspected involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. Chemical tests on the suspects' clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges were not dropped.

Masud Azhar: variant of Masood Azhar; possible alias of Mohammad Masud Azhar.

Maulana Masood Azhar: variant Masud Azhar. Pakistani-born Kashmiri militant and deputy chief of the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin whose release after six years in an Indian prison was obtained by the five Kashmiri hijackers of an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport. He had traveled to India in 1992 to help the militants. He was arrested in 1994 and was held in a high-security jail near Jammu in Kot Balwal. Terrorists had conducted three previous attacks attempting to obtain his release. In one, several Western tourist hikers were kidnapped. One was killed; the other three have never been found and are presumed dead. India noted that despite press accounts, Azhar is not a religious leader. The press said he is a Muslim cleric and ideologue of the Harkat ul-Ansar terrorist group, which is believed to have terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. He was released by India on December 31, 1999, and founded the Jaish-i-Muhammad.

Early in February 2000, Azhar's radical activism led the Pakistani military government to place him in protective custody. He had been given a hero's welcome upon his release, speaking at religious meetings throughout the country. He announced he was forming a new Islamic army of 600,000 men and called for a jihad against India and the United States. Pakistan urged him to settle down in Punjab with his new bride, whom he married after the hijacking.

Azhar had close ties to the Taliban and Pakistan's intelligence service. He had been placed under house arrest in October 2001 but was freed after two days. He claimed credit for the October 1 suicide bombing of the Srinagar, India, legislative assembly in which 38 people died, but he later withdrew the claim. He was held in a police station for several hours but was later placed under house arrest and, as of December 31, 2001, was not charged. India requested extradition. On March 22, 2002, the Pakistani government quietly permitted him to go home as a form of house arrest. His group, Jaish-i-Muhammad, is on the U.S. State Department list of terrorists and was banned by Pakistan in January 2002. On December 29, 2002, Pakistani police carried out a court order that freed him from house arrest. He left for an unknown place after midnight.

Mohammad Masud Azhar: possible alias Masud Azhar. Imprisoned secretary general of Harkat ul-Ansar (Movement of Friends) of Bahawalpur, Punjab, an Islamic group, whose release was demanded by the Kashmiri rebels of the Al-Faran (Jungle Warriors) Muslim group who kidnapped five foreign tourists in the Indian Himalayas on July 4, 1995.

Chiming Abdul Azi: Thai whose trial began December 28, 2004, in Cambodia, for colluding with Indonesian al Qaeda and Jemaah Islamiyah terrorist Hambali to attack the U.K. and U.S. embassies in 2002. On December 29, 2004, the court sentenced two Thai Muslims and one Cambodian to life sentences.

Maulana Abdul Aziz: leader of the July 2007 Red Mosque standoff that led to 100 deaths when Pakistani troops stormed the facility. Aziz was released on bail by the Supreme Court of Pakistan on April 17, 2009, after two years of house arrest. He returned to Islamabad two days later, calling on a cheering crowd to spread sharia law to the rest of the country. At least 26 charges remained against him.

Mohammed Jaweed Azmath: one of two Indian Muslims arrested September 12, 2001, by police in Texas who pulled them from an Amtrak train. They had $5,000 in cash, hair dye, and box cutters. The Indian duo had boarded TWA Flight 679 on September 11, which left Newark at 6:10 A.M. The plane was grounded in St. Louis after the terrorist attacks, and the duo then boarded the train. Ayub Ali Khan had two Indian passports with different names for his parents and different addresses. Azmath had two passports that included fake names for his parents and different dates of birth. As of December 8, Khan was being investigated for possessing a false passport and fraudulently obtaining a work permit. Indian officials said they came from lower-middle-class families in Hyderabad. The duo lived in a Jersey City apartment, where the Wall Street Journal found stories about bioterrorism. Investigators conducted anthrax tests. The duo's former roommate, Mohammad Aslam Pervez, was indicted in mid-October on charges of lying to the FBI about financial transactions. He was held without bond. Police were investigating how the duo managed to send $64,000 to relatives. By mid-December, the government was backing away from suggesting they were part of the 9/11 plot. Khan was represented in New York by attorney Lawrence Feitell. The duo faced new charges on December 13 that they ran up $470,000 on fraudulent credit cards.

Osama Azmiry: alias Wali Khan Amin Shah.

Azzam: terrorist who apparently died in the August 7, 1998, al Qaeda truck bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York.

Hamza Azzam: arrested by Pakistani police on December 5, 1995, in connection with the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. He was later released. Confusion may have resulted because of his shared last name with Majid Azzam and the late professor Abdullah Azzam, Osama bin Laden's teacher and advisor.

Huthiafa Azzam: arrested by Pakistani police on December 5, 1995, in connection with the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. He was later released. Confusion may have resulted because of his shared last name with Majid Azzam and the late professor Abdullah Azzam, Osama bin Laden's teacher and advisor.

Majid Azzam: Palestinian master of philosophy and chemistry student at Punjab University arrested by Pakistani Federal Investigation Agency police on December 5, 1995, at his Lahore flat. He was arrested in connection with the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. He had come to Pakistan on Egyptian travel documents issued to Palestinian refugees. He had received a bachelor's degree from Sudan University.

B

---

Commander Alinor Baakal: one of two leaders of the 11 Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who, on July 8, 1987, kidnapped Teofila Smith and Linda Madrid, two Filipinos working for the United Nations in Lanao del Sur, Philippines.

Habib Alwi Baaqil: leader of a pro-Suharto Muslim group in 2000 in Indonesia. On September 15, 2000, Indonesian president Abdurrahman Wahid suspected Baaqil was connected with the bombing campaign of September 13, 2000, in which a car bomb exploded in a garage under the Jakarta stock exchange, killing 15 and injuring 30.

Abubaker Baasyir: variant Abu Bakir Bashir; alias Sheik Abdush Shomad. Spiritual leader, age 64, of the Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) of Indonesia, a terrorist group linked to al Qaeda; local authorities summoned Baasyir to Jakarta on October 17, 2002, to question him about a series of church bombings by al Qaeda-linked militants. He collapsed and was hospitalized after a press conference. Jailed al Qaeda operative Omar al-Farouq told local investigators Baasyir was involved in the bombings, and, on October 19, Baasyir was arrested. Police suspected Baasyir knew ahead of time about the October 12, 2002, Bali nightclub attacks in which 202 died. On January 28, 2003, Indonesian National Police chief Dai Bachtiar said Baasyir had given a blessing to the “jihad operation” in Bali. Baasyir approved the plan, which had been developed by senior militants at a meeting in Bangkok in February to strike U.S. and other Western targets in Indonesia and Singapore.

On April 14, 2003, Indonesian prosecutors filed treason charges against Baasyir for plotting to overthrow the government. His trial began on April 23. He was charged in a 25-page indictment with involvement in church bombings on Christmas Eve 2000 that killed 19 people, a failed plot to bomb U.S. interests in Singapore, and a plot to assassinate president Megawati Sukarnoputri in 2001 when she had been vice president. The government said Baasyir is JI’s leader. The charges carry a life sentence. He was not charged with the Bali bombings. On May 28, Ali Imron and Hutomo Pamungkas, alias Mubarok, both suspected of involvement in the Bali bombings, testified that they believe Baasyir to be JI’s leader. Other JI members Imam Samudra and Mukhlas did not implicate Baasyir; Samudra recanted an earlier confession, saying the government had beaten him.

On June 26, Faiz bin Abu Bakar Bafana, age 41, a Malaysian and the treasurer of JI, told the court via teleconference from a Singapore jail that Osama bin Laden had set in motion a series of plots that JI had pursued in Singapore and Indonesia in 2000. Bafana said Baasyir approved of the planned attacks and had appointed Ali Ghuftron—charged with organizing the Bali bombings—as an operations chief of JI.

On September 2, 2003, Chief Judge Muhammad Saleh announced that an Indonesian court convicted Baasyir of treason for JI involvement and attempting to overthrow the government, sentencing him to four years in prison. The court ruled that the prosecution had not proven that Baasyir was JI’s commander. The court also rejected the charge that he was involved in the Christmas Eve 2000 church bombings. He was also found guilty of an immigration violation for the 14 years he spent in exile in Malaysia. Prosecutors had requested 15 years; the maximum was life. Baasyir said he would appeal. On September 8, 2003, prosecutors appealed Baasyir's verdict, hoping to win a ruling that he was the commander of JI. They also wanted a tougher sentence. On December 1, 2003, an Indonesian appeals court overturned the treason charges and reduced Baasyir's sentence from four to three years. He was cleared of charges of leading the JI. The court upheld his conviction on immigration violations. On March 9, 2004, the Indonesian Supreme Court further reduced Baasyir's sentence, permitting him to go free by April 4, 2004. The court offered no explanation for halving his sentence.

On April 16, 2004, two weeks before Baasyir was set to go free, Indonesian officials named him a terrorism suspect, which would permit them to keep him in prison after he finished serving his sentence on immigration charges. As Baasyir was walking out of Jakarta's Salemba Prison on April 28, he was rearrested with what the government said was solid evidence he was the JI leader. On July 23, 2004, the constitutional court ruled Baasyir could not be tried by retroactive imposition of the anti-terrorism laws.

Two Islamic Army in Iraq terrorists seized two Indonesian women, two Lebanese, and six Iraqis on October 2, 2004, and demanded his release. Baasyir refused to be released in exchange for the women.

On March 3, 2005, Baasyir, age 66, was acquitted on the most serious terrorism charges against him but was sentenced by the five-member court to two years six months in prison for conspiracy in connection with the Bali nightclub bombings. Officials had sought to convict him as the spiritual leader of JI and for directing the nightclub bombings or the 2003 bombing of Jakarta's Marriott Hotel in which 12 people were killed. Judge Mahmud Rochimi said "neither the defense witnesses nor the prosecutors' witnesses said the defendant has planned or provoked other people to commit the bombings." The judges said Baasyir approved plans to attack the Bali nightclubs, telling the two bombing plotters they should do what they thought best. Baasyir had faced the death penalty on the most serious charges, although prosecutors later requested an eight-year sentence. He was credited with time served and was due to be released by the end of 2006. He said he would appeal. He was freed on June 8 and returned to teaching at the Pondok Pesantren Ngruki boarding school. The Australian government protested.

Ghazi Baba: Pakistani and Jaish-i-Muhammad's senior commander in Kashmir as of December 2001, Baba was linked to the December 13, 2001, attack on the Indian Parliament in which eight people were killed. On August 30, 2003, Indian security forces killed him in a gun battle in Srinagar.

Ghulam Nabi Baba: leader of Harkat ul-Ansar and accused of involvement in the kidnapping of six Western tourists. He was arrested in India on December 1, 1997.

Imran Babar: name given by one of the terrorists who, on November 26–28, 2008, attacked various sites in Mumbai, India. He phoned an Indian television anchor from the Jewish outreach center with a list of grievances. He cited the 2002 riots in Gujarat that killed more than 1,000 people, the 1992 destruction of the centuries-old Babri mosque by Hindu mobs, and India's control over part of Kashmir. "Are you aware of how many people have been killed in Kashmir? Are you aware of how your army has killed Muslims? We die every day. It's better to win one day as a lion than die this way."

Mohammed Junaid Babar: Pakistani American, age 29, of Queens, New York, who in June 2004 pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Manhattan to providing al Qaeda with money, night-vision goggles, waterproof socks, and other equipment to be used against American troops in Afghanistan. The prosecution released the transcripts of his testimony in early August. He admitted meeting a senior al Qaeda member in South Waziristan, Pakistan, earlier in 2004 and turning over the equipment. Babar had testified in a U.K. case against seven colleagues who planned to set off bombs throughout the United Kingdom. He was granted immunity. He was a coconspirator in the case of Syed Hashmi, a U.S. citizen wanted in the United States on charges of procuring military equipment for al Qaeda and who was arrested on June 6, 2006, at Heathrow Airport as he attempted to board a flight to Pakistan.

Mahbubul Huq Bablu: leader of the student wing of the opposition Bangladesh Nationalist Party who was killed on March 9, 1987, when a bomb exploded in a Dhaka University Mohsin Hall hostel. It was unclear if the bomb was planted in the third-floor room or whether the students were preparing it for a planned general strike against increases in bus fares.

Babu: alias of Kulaveerasingham Veerakumar.

Sajid Badat: one of 20 people arrested in November–December 2003 in a series of antiterrorist raids in the United Kingdom, Badat was charged on December 3, 2003, with two explosives offenses and conspiring with would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid. Explosives materials, including triacetone triperoxide, were found in his Gloucester home during his November 27, 2003, arrest. He had been a student at the College of Islamic Knowledge and Guidance in Blackburn, United Kingdom. He pleaded not guilty in September 2004. On October 4, 2004, a U.S. federal grand jury in Boston charged Badat with seven counts of attempted murder, trying to destroy an aircraft, and other crimes related to a conspiracy with Reid. The unsealed indictment said that when Badat was arrested in November, he “admitted that he was asked to conduct a shoe bombing like Reid.” The indictment said Badat aided Reid and had planned his own attack. Badat had gone to the U.K. Embassy in Brussels on September 11, 2001, falsely claimed his passport was stolen, and received a new one.

On February 28, 2005, Badat pleaded guilty in London’s Central Criminal Court to plotting to destroy a U.S. airliner with a bomb packed into his shoe. He had volunteered to use the same techniques as Reid. Badat decided against going through with the attack and disassembled and kept the bomb at his Gloucester home. He was convicted of conspiring with Reid and a Tunisian to make the bomb. Badat had received explosives training in Afghanistan and Pakistan and had returned to the United Kingdom with his bomb on December 10, 2001. On December 14, 2001, he e-mailed his handlers saying he “might withdraw.” He was scheduled to fly from Manchester to Amsterdam for an onward flight to the United States, which was to be bombed. Badat used Belgian telephone cards, which were later confiscated from Reid, to contact Nizar Trabelsi, the Tunisian plotter who as of February 2005 remained in jail in Belgium.

Badat’s parents emigrated from Malawi in the 1960s to Gloucester, where Badat was born. He gave sermons at a local mosque.

On April 22, 2005, Badat was sentenced to 13 years.

Bader al-Bader: placed under surveillance by Thai authorities during the April 5, 1988, hijacking of Kuwait Airlines Flight 422, a B747 flying from Bangkok to Kuwait and diverted to Mashhad, Iran. The Lebanese, with a faked Kuwaiti passport, was prevented from boarding the plane at the last minute. Authorities believed he was involved in planning the hijacking.

Faiz bin Abu Bakar Bafana: Malaysian treasurer, age 41, of Jemaah Islamiyah, who, on June 26, 2003, told an Indonesian court via teleconference from a Singapore jail that Osama bin Laden had set in motion a series of plots that JI pursued in Singapore and Indonesia in 2000. Bafana said Abubaker Baasyir approved of the planned attacks and appointed Ali Ghufon as JI operations chief; Ghufon was charged with organizing the Bali bombings. Bafana had plotted with Zacarias Moussaoui and Mohammed Mansour Jabarah to bomb U.S. ships docked in Singapore Harbor in 2000. Bafana was arrested in Singapore along with 14 other JI operatives in December 2001.

Doris Baffrey: a Filipino married to an American, Baffrey confessed on October 31, 1980, that she had planted the April 6 Liberation Movement bomb that exploded inside a delegate's bag at the opening session of the American Society of Travel Agents convention in Manila, injuring 20 people. She had believed it was simply a big firecracker. She had been working at the Philippine Tourism office in New York and had attended the convention.

Veronico Bagamasbad: variant Pagasmapad; aliases Cris, Emil. Arrested January 24, 1991, for masterminding the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila in the Philippines. Bagamasbad was detained while driving along the seaside Roxas Boulevard and was charged with illegal possession of firearms and furtherance of rebellion. He said his group planned to kidnap five more Japanese executives for ransom money.

Pargat Singh Bagga: one of four Sikhs who tried to gun down Indian ambassador Julio Ribeiro in Bucharest, Romania, on August 20, 1991. The Liberation Tigers Force of Khalistan on October 11, 1991, demanded his release after the retaliation kidnapping of Romanian chargé d'affaires Liviu Radu in New Delhi on October 9, 1991.

Pervez Baghi: variant Perwez Bhagi. One of six Pakistanis arrested December 29, 1995, in the Philippines. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted the six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She said testimony against Baghi appeared faked and ordered his release.

Ajaib Singh Bagri: Sikh sawmill worker from Kamloops, British Columbia, Canada, captured on October 27, 2000, in connection with the June 23, 1985, bombing of Air India Flight 182, a B747 flying from Montreal to London that crashed off Ireland, killing 329 people. He faced eight charges, including first-degree murder, conspiracy, and attempted murder. He was also charged with the attempted murder of the passengers and crew of Air India Flight 301, in which two baggage handlers were killed in a bombing in 1991 at Tokyo's Narita Airport. His trial began April 28, 2003. On March 16, 2005, after a four-year trial, British Columbia Supreme Court Justice Ian Josephson acquitted Indian-born Canadian Sikhs Ripudaman Singh Malik, age 58 (a millionaire businessman), and Bagri, age 55, of all charges for both Air India flights. The judge said the key witnesses—former girlfriends, paid informants, and former business partners—were not credible. Prosecutors claimed the bombings were revenge by Sikh separatists for a 1984 raid by Indian forces at the Golden Temple at Amritsar, a holy site.

Bahauddin: Sudanese lecturer at an Arab-financed college of science and technology in Peshawar and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. He was held under the 14 Foreigners Act.

Mahmoud Mohammad Ahmed Bahaziq: main financier of the Pakistan-based Lashkar-i-Taiba. On May 27, 2008, the United States imposed financial sanctions against him.

Fahad Ral Bahli: Saudi citizen director of the Malawi branch of Registered Trustees of the Prince Sultan Bin Abdul Aziz Special Committee on Relief, Bahli was one of five suspected members of al Qaeda detained on June 21, 2003, by the Malawi National Intelligence Bureau two weeks before President Bush was scheduled to visit Africa. Malawian officials said the group sent money to al Qaeda, and U.S. officials flew the suspects to Botswana on an Air Malawi plane the next day, despite a court order preventing their deportation. On July 25, they were released in Sudan after being cleared of suspicion of al Qaeda membership. The two Turks, a Saudi, a Kenyan, and a Sudanese were to be sent to their respective countries.

Syaiful Bahri: on September 22, 2005, Bahri, age 36, was sentenced in Indonesia to 10 years in prison for “providing assistance” to fugitive Malaysians Azahari bin Husin and Noordin Mohamed Top, the alleged ringleaders of the September 9, 2004, suicide car bombing of the Australian Embassy in which 10 Indonesians died.

Shukri Abu Baker: one of two founding members of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development, Baker was sentenced to 65 years in prison on May 27, 2009, for funneling millions of dollars to Hamas. Baker, age 50, was convicted in November 2008 on 108 counts, including funding schools and social welfare programs controlled by Hamas.

Vartan Bakerjian: Syrian asylum seeker suspected of being a member of a terrorist group, Bakerjian was deported on December 27, 1988, upon arrival at Sydney via Manila, when he was found to be carrying a false U.S. passport. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees had issued an asylum-seeker registration card to him. However, he had earlier been rejected for asylum by the Australian Embassy in Athens and escorted back to Manila, where he had stayed for several days before leaving for Australia. On January 6, 1989, he boarded a Philippine Air Lines flight to Karachi for transit to Athens.

Appiah Balakrishnan: name on a fake ID card found in the possession of the alleged Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) assassin of Lalith Athulathmudali, who was shot to death on April 23, 1993, in Sri Lanka. The assassin's body was found in a cul-de-sac beside a cooperative packing center on Mugalan Mawatha in Kirulapone town, 100 yards from the scene of the crime. The suspect died of cyanide poisoning, a LTTE trademark. He allegedly lived in Kokkuvil in Manipay, Jaffna, Sri Lanka.

Anton Balasingham: chief negotiator for Sri Lanka's Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) who died of cancer in London at age 68 on December 14, 2006. He had been a member of the LTTE since its founding 30 years earlier, political advisor to LTTE leader Velupillai Prabhakaran, and representative to the 1985 peace talks. He was a spokesperson for the LTTE on February 21, 1995, when the LTTE tacitly admitted to the killing of Rajiv Gandhi, former Indian prime minister, on May 22, 1991. He held a U.K. passport.

Abdul Jamal Balfas: Indonesian arrested at Manila International Airport on March 13, 2002, for belonging to a group with al Qaeda connections. He was attempting to board a plane for Bangkok during the night. Police said his luggage held “components for improvised explosives.” He was released in April because Philippine prosecutors did not have enough evidence to charge him.

Banat: one of two Abu Sayyaf rebel leaders and eight other Muslim extremists killed on January 7, 1996, by Philippine Army troops. They were suspected of kidnapping 3 Philippines-born U.S. citizens and 10 others on December 27, 1995. The hostages were freed on December 31, 1995.

Kunio Bando: Japanese Red Army (JRA) rifleman of the Karuizawa siege. He was freed during the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, when five JRA members held 53 hostages in a 79-hour siege. He was flown with other terrorists to Libya, where they surrendered.

Bando belonged to Jemaah Islamiyah's Hidaka Commando Unit, which hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh, on September 28, 1977. After 135 hours of flying to Damascus and Kuwait and being stuck in a coup in Bangladesh, the hijackers surrendered in Algiers. They were taken from the airport in three black limousines and granted asylum. Japan agreed to Algerian demands not to press for the return of the hijackers or the six-million-dollar ransom. Japan asked Algeria to bar the hijackers from leaving and ensure the money was not used for new terrorist actions. Algeria refused, saying it “will not tolerate that its good faith and good will be exploited.” Algeria claimed on October 18 that the ransom was hidden in Dacca, Kuwait, and Damascus before the hijackers arrived in Algiers and that each terrorist carried only $1,000. On October 27, Japanese chief cabinet secretary Sunao Sonoda charged that the hijackers and prisoners had left Algeria, which had confiscated two-thirds of the ransom. On September 29, 1980, the Japanese government filed a damage suit for six million dollars against the five JRA hijackers.

Ka Banong: New People’s Army (NPA) of the Philippines member searched for by the military as of July 10, 1989, in connection with the NPA’s April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Gurcharan Singh Banwait: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. Each suspect was initially charged with conspiracy to possess explosives with intent to injure. The charges against Banwait were dropped.

Haji Mohammad Akhtar Bareeh: suspected associate of Ramzi Yusuf arrested by Pakistani police on March 19, 1995, from a bungalow in Karachi Satellite Town.

Bari: Egyptian arrested November 22, 1995, in connection with the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80.

Commander Walang Baro (No Shirt): leader of a group that, on March 27, 1991, kidnapped a French Catholic priest, Yves Caroff, in Cotabato, Philippines.

Abdi Rahim Mohammed Barood: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Dhiren Barot: aliases Issa al-Hindi, Eisa Hindi, Issa al-Britani. One of 13 people arrested by British authorities on August 3, 2004. Barot, age 32, was suspected of helping arrange—and probably traveled to the United States to participate in—the pre-9/11 surveillance of five U.S. financial services buildings that were the subject of the terrorist alert in the United States on August 1. He and other al Qaeda operatives in the United Kingdom had access to the surveillance reports. The individuals were picked up in London, the neighboring towns of Luton and Watford, and Blackburn in northwestern England. Police said he and two other al Qaeda terrorists had conducted the surveillance, took photographs, and documented security around the buildings.

Khalid Sheik Mohammad reportedly told his captors that Barot had been sent to New York to surveil Jewish targets. He said he sent him in late 1999 or early 2000 to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to meet Riduan Isamuddin, alias Hambali, al Qaeda’s Southeast Asia leader.

On August 18, British prosecutors charged eight British citizens alleged to be al Qaeda operatives with plotting against financial targets in New York, New Jersey, and Washington, D.C. U.S. officials said they were considering filing their own charges against Barot and the others. The eight were accused of plotting radiation, chemical, and biological terrorist attacks against the United States. A second court appearance was scheduled for August 25.

Attorney Mudassar Arani represented seven of the defendants. The other detainees were identified as Mohammed Naveed Bhatti, age 24; Abdul Aziz Jalil, age 31; Omar Abdul Rehman, age 20; Junade Feroze, age 28; Zia Ul Haq, age 25; Qaisar Shaffi, age 25; and Nadeem Tarmohammed, age 26. They were charged with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit a public nuisance by using “radioactive materials, toxic gases, chemicals and/or explosives to cause disruption.” Barot and Tarmohammed were charged with possessing a “reconnaissance plan” of the Prudential Financial headquarters in Newark with information “likely to be useful to terrorists.” The information covered February 19, 2001, to August 2004. Barot was also charged with having information on those dates regarding the New York stock exchange, the Citigroup Center in Manhattan, and Washington, D.C.’s International Monetary Fund (IMF) building at 19th and G Streets, NW. Shaffi was charged with possessing part of a terrorist guidebook containing information on preparing chemicals and explosives.

Pakistani authorities said detained Pakistani computer expert Mohammad Naeem Noor Khan, who had been held since July, would be a key witness, noting that Barot had met Khan in Pakistan in March.

The Washington Post reported on October 15 that Barot had entered the United States on a student visa and that the FBI was trying to trace his movements. He had posed as a student while conducting surveillance of financial installations that could be terrorist targets.

On April 12, 2005, the United States announced that during the previous month a federal court in Manhattan heard the four-count indictment of Barot, Tarmohamed, and Shaffi for their plans to blow up financial buildings in Washington, D.C., New York, and New Jersey, including the New York stock exchange and Citigroup Center in New York, the Prudential Financial building in Newark, and the IMF and World Bank headquarters in Washington, D.C. The trio surveilled financial facilities between August 2000 and April 2001 and conducted video surveillance in Manhattan. The United States said it would seek extradition from the United Kingdom, where these suspects and five others were charged with possession of reconnaissance plans and other information useful in conducting a terrorist attack. The group was also linked to a plan to attack London’s Heathrow Airport. They faced life sentences in the United States.

On October 12, 2006, Barot pleaded guilty in a U.K. court to plotting to bomb the IMF building and other financial centers in the United States in August 2004. He also pleaded guilty to planning attacks in the United Kingdom involving radiological devices and plotting to blow up three limousines packed with gas cylinders in underground parking garages. Prosecutors found plans for those attacks on computers seized in Pakistan in July 2004 from Mohammed Naeem Noor Khan. Barot’s seven accomplices were scheduled to be tried in 2007. On November 7, 2006, Judge Neil Butterfield sentenced Barot to life in prison with the possibility of parole in 40 years. The sentence was later reduced to 30 years, as he had not carried out the planned attacks.

Barot was a former airliner ticket clerk and a Muslim convert who wanted to create “another memorable black day for the enemies of Islam.” He had planned to blow up a subway train as it passed through a tunnel under the Thames and proposed to al Qaeda financiers in Pakistan that he use a six-man team to explode gas cylinders in limos near the Savoy, Ritz, and other London hotels. He wanted to add napalm and nails to the bombs. He had written, “Imagine the chaos that would be caused if a powerful explosion were to rip through here and actually rupture the river itself. This would cause pandemonium, what with the explosions, flooding, drowning, et cetera, that would occur.” Barot was born in India but grew up in the United Kingdom. He faced extradition to the United States on four counts of conspiring to use unconventional weapons and murder. He was represented by attorney Ian MacDonald. He was also wanted in Yemen on terrorism charges.

He was sentenced to life in prison on November 2006 for providing al Qaeda detailed reconnaissance and plans for the U.S. financial centers.

Mohammed Sulaymon Barre: a Somali who left his country during the civil war of the 1990s, Barre obtained UN refugee status and arrived in Pakistan, settling with his family and working for a financial services company. In November 2001, he was arrested by Pakistani authorities, who turned him over to U.S. forces in Afghanistan four months later, saying he was a terrorist. He was soon flown to Guantánamo Bay, Cuba. His attorney planned to file a habeas petition in a U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C., on June 26, 2008. Barre, age 42, was one of three Guantánamo Bay detainees with UN refugee status. Military prosecutors said he had contact with terrorist financiers. He was represented by J. Wells Dixon, an attorney with the Center for Constitutional Rights.

Haji Akhtar Mohammad Barriech: Pakistani arrested March 20, 1995. He was initially incorrectly identified as Amal Kasi, who was wanted in the January 25, 1993, shooting of several Central Intelligence Agency officers at CIA headquarters. Barriech was suspected of links with Ramzi Yusuf, mastermind of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center.

Adel Meguid Abd-al-Bary: variant Adel Mohammed Abdul Almagid Bary. Egyptian, age 39, arrested with Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidarous by London police on extradition warrants on July 11, 1999, at the request of the United States. On July 12, 1999, they appeared in Bow Street Magistrate's Court, where Arvinder Sambi of the Crown Prosecution Service said their fingerprints appeared on originals of faxes that claimed credit for the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. One fax was received at a shop in London; another was sent after the bombings from a post office. The originals were found at the London offices of the Advice and Reform Council, believed to be an al Qaeda front. Chief Magistrate Graham Parkinson ordered them held for a week pending receipt of more evidence from the United States. On May 2, 2000, the Bow Street Magistrate's Court ordered his extradition to the United States. Federal prosecutors in New York indicted him. The U.K. Law Lords approved extradition on December 17, 2001.

Riaz Basara: identified by the Sunni Muslim Warriors of Jhangvi as a key organizer of the February 20, 1997, attack in Pakistan in which 12 gunmen shot and killed seven workers at an Iranian cultural center in Multan. The attackers fired automatic weapons while storming the center after spraying guards with chili powder. Once inside, they shot the Iranian head of the center and six other employees. They then torched the building and escaped by car and motorcycle. Basara was wanted in the 1990 assassination of a former head of the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Abdul Basheer: suspected Singaporean member of Jemaah Islamiyah, Basheer, age 28, was arrested by Singaporean authorities in February 2007, accused of planning to pursue "militant jihad" in Afghanistan.

Abu Bakir Bashir: variant of Abubaker Baasyir.

Chaudrey Bashir: alias of Sheik Omar Saeed.

Mohammad Bashir: named as a Punjabi terrorist by the Hindustan Times, Bashir was involved in a 1993 meeting with underworld boss Dawood Ibrahim to plan a campaign of stabbings, killings, arson, and looting in Bombay and other parts of Gujarat. The paper said he had links with the Student Islamic Movement of India, Sikh militants, and Pakistani intelligence.

Mufti Abu Bashir: arrested for the July 26, 2008, bombings in Ahmedabad, India, that killed 56 and injured 191.

Abdul Basit: name on a Pakistani passport believed to belong to Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Domingo Baskinas: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Ejaz Batra: one of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special anti-terrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore. Batra remained at large.

Benahuddin Batugan: one of two Filipino Muslims arrested July 11, 1991, when a bomb triggering device was found in their carry-on luggage while they were attempting to board Northwest Airlines Flight 20, bound for Seoul, Seattle, and Memphis. They were Mindanao residents.

Diarco Bautista: alias Grant. Believed to be one of 10 members of the New People's Army of the Philippines who, on March 4, 1990, shot to death Stewart Frank Raab, age 76, an American rancher who refused to pay revolutionary taxes of $34,000.

Rafael Baylossi: Communist Party of the Philippines secretary general whose release was going to be demanded in October 1989 by the New People's Army in a foiled campaign of attacks against U.S. officials and diplomats.

Mastikin Bayu: would-be hijacker of Ethiopian Airlines Flight 664 scheduled to fly from Sanaa to Addis Ababa on July 2, 1995. He told police he wanted to go to Kampala, Uganda. He was arrested by Sanaa police.

Alamayhu Bekele: one of three people who, on November 23, 1996, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET961, a B767 carrying 163 passengers and 12 crew, at 11:20 A.M., after takeoff from Addis Ababa. Scheduled to fly to Nairobi, Kenya; Brazzaville, Congo; Lagos, Nigeria; and Abidjan, Ivory Coast, the hijackers demanded to fly to Australia to obtain political asylum. They were armed with an ax, a fire extinguisher, and a device they claimed was a bomb. At one point, a drunken hijacker forced copilot Yonas Mekuria away from his seat and played with the joystick controls, putting the plane into steep turns and banks. The hijackers refused to believe the plane was running out of fuel, claiming the plane could fly for 11 hours without stopovers. Rekha Mirchandani, age 29, an Indian passenger, said crewmen told her the hijackers said, "If we die, we want others to die with us. We want to make history." The plane crashed into the Indian Ocean near the Grand Comore Mitsamiuti Beach in the Comoros Islands at 3:20 P.M., killing 127 people, most of them Africans and Asians. The pilot, Captain Leul Abate, tried to minimize casualties by landing in the sea near the shore, where rescuers would quickly find survivors. However, the plane bounced and flipped before breaking apart. This was the third hijacking Abate had survived.

Among the survivors were U.S. consul general-Bombay Franklin Huddle; his wife, Chanya; another American named McFarland; and three Italians. Eight Israelis were on the flight. A Nigerian passenger, Alphonso Dala, also survived.

Police initially arrested two men for the hijacking but determined they were innocent when the copilot said he did not recognize them.

The hijackers were ultimately identified as Ethiopians who had lived in Djibouti for years before coming to Addis Ababa five weeks before the hijacking. Authorities were unable to determine the motives of Alamayhu Bekele, Mateias Solomon, and Sultan Hussein, who did not belong to any political party. Kenyan survivor Kanaidza Abwao, a young hotel executive whose hand was broken in the crash, said the hijackers used the plane's public address system to read a statement in Amharic, French, and English: “There is a problem with the government. We were prisoners, and now we have changed the destination. If anyone tries to attack us we are going to blow the plane up. I have a grenade.” Ethiopian survivor Bisrat Alemu remembered a similar statement.

Among the dead was Mohamed Amin, age 53, a Reuter Television cameraman whose 1984 photos alerted the world about the Ethiopian famine. He was returning home to Nairobi with Brian Tetley, who wrote the texts for Amin’s photo books. Also killed was Leslieanne Shedd, age 28, a commercial officer with the U.S. Embassy, who was headed for Kenya to meet friends for Thanksgiving. Missing was Ron Farris, age 46, a missionary doctor returning from India to Abidjan.

Roman Bekele: worked in the Worker’s Party of Ethiopia office in Dire Dawa and was one of four Ethiopians who, on September 4, 1992, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET555, a B727 flying from Dire Dawa to Addis Ababa. They diverted it to Djibouti, where they surrendered after being assured they could request asylum. The hijackers wanted to flee an undemocratic regime in Ethiopia.

Mohammed Belfas: Indonesian from Germany identified by Finnish banking authorities as an Osama bin Laden contact. Agus Budiman was charged with helping Belfas obtain a Virginia ID card on November 4, 2000.

Francisco Belmonte: first-year law student on leave and student activist at the University of the Philippines, Diliman, who went into hiding after the June 16, 1989, arrest of Donato Contingente in connection with the New People’s Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Belmonte and five other students were linked by Contingente to the slaying. The military filed charges of murder and frustrated murder against seven student suspects before the office of Quezon City prosecutor Juarlito Galisanao. The military said Belmonte drove the getaway car. A warrant was issued on July 9, 1989.

Mak Ben: spokesperson for a Cambodian Khmer Rouge faction that, on March 10, 1993, attacked the Moat Peam fishing village on the Tonle Sap Lake, south of the tourist town of Siem Reap where the Angkor temple complex is located, killing 33 ethnic Vietnamese and injuring another 29 people, including 3 ethnic Khmers.

Abdul Nacer Benbrika: alias Abu Bakr. Radical Muslim preacher in Melbourne arrested November 8, 2005, with 15 others in coordinated raids in which police seized weapons, computers, backpacks, and bomb-making materials. Benbrika said it would be a violation of Islam for him to warn his students not to join the holy war in Iraq. On November 14, a 20-page police report said the Islamists in Sydney stockpiled bomb-making materials, trained at rural hunting camps, and were considering Australia’s only nuclear reactor—used to make radioactive medicines and irradiated semiconductor parts—as a target. Eight men in Sydney were charged with conspiring to make explosives for use in a terrorist attack. All eight faced life imprisonment. Ten held in Melbourne were charged with membership in a terrorist group. By December 19, the arrest tally had risen to 18 Islamic radicals, including Australian-born Muslims who were planning to assassinate prime minister John Howard.

On March 21, 2008, Australian Supreme Court justice Bernard Bongiorno postponed the trial of 12 terror suspects, including Benbrika, until authorities eased their harsh incarceration practices. The 12 had pleaded not guilty to forming a terrorist cell in Melbourne.

Mabay Benito: alias Commander Bobby. Muslim rebel charged on April 2, 1979, by the Philippine military in the city court in Marawi with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although the MNLF denied responsibility.

Ka Benjie: alias of Alfredo de Leon.

Basil Bentungo: one of four individuals identified by the Philippine Army as members of the Bangsa Moro Islamic Liberation Organization, a splinter of the Moro National Liberation Front, who, on May 5, 1987, kidnapped two Swiss nationals, Alex Braunwalder of St. Gallen and Jacky Sudan of Fribourg; five Filipino nurses; and three others returning from a general food distribution and medical relief assistance mission for the International Red Cross in Dalama village, Mulonlo Town, 477 miles southeast of Manila.

Seleshi Berhane: leader of the Ethiopian Unity Patriot Front (later changed to the Ethiopian National Patriot Front). On June 21, 1996, Ethiopian police investigated reports that the group planned to throw grenades at the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) office near Bole Road. The group was believed responsible for the 1993 murder attempt against an American working for USAID.

Yolanda Berruete: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Ta Bet: Khmer Rouge commander believed involved with the July 26, 1994, attack on a train that killed 9 people and abducted 200 people in Cambodia. He had been undersecretary of the southwestern zone during the Khmer Rouge reign. He was a commander of operations in the Chhuk District.

Aime Betou: chairman of the Zairian Socialist Party who claimed responsibility for the March 27, 1984, Kinshasa bombing of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Bhagyanathan: brother of Nalini, a Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam woman suspected of involvement in the murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister, on May 22, 1991. He was arrested by Indian authorities on June 11, 1991.

Saeed Bharam: one of two men arrested by Pakistani police on February 28, 1999, who confessed to the November 12, 1997, murder of four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan.

Basanta Bhattari: one of three hijackers led by a leader of a Nepalese student organization connected with the Nepalese Communist Party who took over a Royal Nepalese Airlines Twin Otter on a domestic flight from Biratnagar to Kathmandu on June 10, 1973, and diverted it to Forbesganj, India. The plane was carrying a Nepal State Bank shipment of three million Indian rupees ($400,000) seized by the group. The trio escaped into the jungle in a waiting jeep.

Faisal Bhatti: member of Lashkar-i-Jhangvi arrested June 4, 2007, by Pakistani police on suspicion of involvement in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl.

Sant (Saint) Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale: Sikh leader arrested September 20, 1981, in connection with the murder of a Hindu editor who opposed Sikh secessionism. His release was demanded by the Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Bhola: alias of Mistri Zahoor Ibrahim.

Shahnawaz Bhutto: student and son of former Pakistani prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto who, on September 13, 1978, told a London telephone operator that there was a bomb at 10 Downing Street. On December 15, 1979, he was put on two year's probation and ordered to pay up to $2,200 in court costs. His father was hanged by the Pakistani government in April 1979.

Daniel Biampandou: People's Army officer cadet sentenced to 20 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court for the detonation of two bombs on March 20, 1982, that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Abdul Kareem Jassim Bidawi: one of six Iraqis who were among the nine suspected terrorists, including the brother of Ramzi Yusuf, who were arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. Bidawi denied links with Abu Sayyaf and said he operated a Manila recruitment agency. He claimed that several of those arrested were at his agency to get assistance in extending their visas. Authorities said the nine were scheduled to meet with Abu Sayyaf leader Janjalani in the Makati financial district, but he was a no-show.

Haleem Jassim Bidawi: one of six Iraqis who were among the nine suspected terrorists, including the brother of Ramzi Yusuf, who were arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila.

Bilal: Pakistani who was one of three people arrested April 2, 2000, in Torkham, a Pakistani border crossing at the foot of the Khyber Pass, as they were trying to enter Afghanistan. The two Pakistanis were suspected of affiliation with the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, which sends fighters to Indian Kashmir. Their Yemeni companion reportedly had ties to Osama bin Laden.

Leonidas Bimenyamana: one of three Hutu-led Army for the Liberation of Rwanda rebels charged on March 3, 2003, by U.S. attorney Roscow Hoard of the District of Columbia with bludgeoning to death U.S. tourists Rob Haubner and his wife, Susan Miller, in Uganda in 1999. In an attempt to weaken U.S. and U.K. support for the new Rwandan government, Bimenyamana, age 34, and the others also killed four British and two New Zealand tourists on a trip to see mountain gorillas. The rebels were charged with murder, conspiracy, and other counts.

Yuan Bin: captain, age 30, of an Air China jet that he hijacked on October 28, 1998. The plane landed safely in Taiwan. He said he was frustrated over pay and working conditions. He was taken into custody.

Ramzi Binalshibh: alias Ramzi Omar. Yemeni economics student, age 29, in Hamburg, Germany, who was believed to have been planning to be the 20th 9/11 hijacker—he even made a martyr video—but had to scrub his mission when he could not get a visa to enter the United States. On November 14, 2001, the FBI concluded that Binalshibh was meant to be the fifth hijacker on Flight 93 but that hijacker leader Muhammad Atta had failed three times to get him into the United States. The FBI concluded that Zacarias Moussaoui was not originally intended to be the fifth hijacker but may have been part of a plan for several waves of chemical and biological weapons attacks. Germany indicted Binalshibh and fugitive Said Bahaji and Zakariya Essabar as part of an al Qaeda cell that operated in Hamburg since 1999. Binalshibh had placed a $2,200 deposit at the Flight Training Center in Venice, Florida, before being rejected for a U.S. visa because of suspected links to the USS Cole bombing. He helped find flight schools for the hijackers, helped them enter the United States, and helped finance the attacks. He and Atta had begun a Muslim prayer group at Hamburg Technical University and worshiped at a radical mosque. Binalshibh disappeared on September 5, 2001, leaving behind four Hamburg addresses. He was frequently seen with Said Bahaji, a German citizen whose father was Moroccan. Bahaji, Atta, and Binalshibh rented an apartment on Marien Street in Hamburg on December 1, 1998, that served as an al Qaeda cell. Hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi lived there; Pennsylvania hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah was a frequent visitor. Bahaji, the cell's logistics specialist, showed up in Karachi, Pakistan, on a Turkish Airlines flight in early September, accompanied by individuals claiming to be Abdullah Hussainy, a Belgian of Algerian origin, and Ammar Moula, a Frenchman. Investigators determined in mid-November that they were Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, age 24, a Moroccan who also lived on Marien Street. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked Binalshibh's financial assets. He was also believed to be a leader of a plot to crash a plane into Heathrow Airport.

On September 5, 2002, al Jazeera televised "confessions" by Binalshibh and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, two of Mohammed Atta's roommates, who said al Qaeda was claiming credit for the 9/11 attacks. He said he was the "coordinator" of the attacks.

On September 10–11, 2002, Pakistani police arrested him in an apartment in Pechs, Karachi. He was charged in Germany with 3,000 counts of murder. He was believed involved in the planning of the 9/11 attacks, the USS Cole bombing, and the 2002 bombing of a Tunisian synagogue.

His release was demanded on April 25, 2003, by a Lebanese man who hijacked a bus carrying 16 passengers in Bremen, Germany.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Abli Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On October 10, 2006, Binalshibh filed a legal challenge in federal court in Washington, D.C., to contest his detention and request a public defender.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali (alias Ammar al-Baluchi), Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash (alias Khallad). The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. Binalshibh's arraignment on capital charges was scheduled for June 5, 2008. His military defense counsels were Navy Lt. Richard Federico and Navy Commander Suzanne Lachelier. His civilian attorney was Thomas Durkin.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself. He was the only defendant of the five whose legs were shackled in the court. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Nguyen Thai Binh: would-be hijacker of Pan American Flight 841, a B747 flying from San Francisco to Honolulu and Saigon on July 2, 1972. He had a switchblade and a bag of explosives and demanded to fly to Hanoi in protest of U.S. bombing of North Vietnam. The pilot grabbed the hijacker and told a policeman to shoot him. The officer fired five shots at the hijacker, killing him. Several people were injured while leaving the plane.

Gurpratap Birk: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four of them also planned to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian; blow up a nuclear plant in India; and destroy other infrastructure. In January 1985, Birk solicited the assistance of an FBI undercover operative to train a group of men in the United States in the use of explosives and weapons. They would then launch a terrorist campaign in India. In the January meeting, he also told the operative of the assassination plan. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges. The judge refused bail.

Sam Bith: Khmer Rouge leader who masterminded the July 26, 1994, kidnapping of three Westerners from a train in southeast Cambodia near Phnom Voar. Bith ordered the trio killed on September 28, 1994, after negotiations broke down. He defected to the government in 1997 and received a general's rank in the Cambodian Army. He was arrested in May 2002 after another Khmer Rouge leader implicated him in the killings. Bith was sentenced to life in December 2002 after being found guilty of conspiracy to kidnap Australian David Wilson, Briton Mark Slater, and French citizen Jean-Michel Braquet. Bith, age 74, died in prison on February 15, 2008.

Jaswinder Singh Bittu: one of four Sikhs who tried to gun down Indian ambassador Julio Ribeiro in Bucharest, Romania, on August 20, 1991. The Liberation Tigers Force of Khalistan demanded his release on October 11, 1991, after the retaliation kidnapping of Romanian chargé d'affaires Liviu Radu in New Delhi on October 9, 1991.

Commander Bituin: alias Commander Star. Spokesperson for the Sandigan (Pillar) unit of the April 6 Liberation Movement of the Philippines, Bituin claimed credit on September 12, 1980, for setting off bombs at nine locations in downtown Manila, wounding 30 Filipinos and killing 1 American.

Jean-Paul Bizimana: alias Xavier Van Dame. Rwandan rebel convicted by a judge in Kampala on January 9, 2006, of killing eight foreign tourists, including an Oregon couple and their guide who were on a gorilla-watching trip in 1999. He faced the death penalty.

Commander Bomb Blast: Sierra Leonean rebel member of the West Side Boys, former army soldiers, whose release was demanded by the rebel soldiers who seized 11 U.K. troops and 1 Sierra Leonean soldier on August 25, 2000, in the Masiaka-Forodugu area, 60 miles east of Freetown.

Commander Bo: leader of the 26th Regiment of the Khmer Rouge, which kidnapped and killed two Britons and an Australian traveling in a taxi from Phnom Penh to Sihanoukville on April 11, 1994.

Bo Mya: leader of Karen rebels who, on June 18, 1990, threatened to assassinate Americans and other foreigners in Burma. He had led the insurgency since 1975.

Commander Bobby: alias of Mabay Benito. Muslim rebel charged on April 2, 1979, by the Philippine military in the city court in Marawi with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although the MNLF denied responsibility.

Ka Bogie: identified by the Philippine military as a planner of the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Ka Bogs: alias of Jaime Fuentes.

Gonzalo Bondoc: aliases Comrade Ross, Comrade Nonong, Roc. Member of the Pampanga operational command of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines named by police on May 18, 1990, as a suspect in the May 13, 1990, NPA murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. He was arrested before the crime took place but was believed to have masterminded the killing.

Buyungan Bongkak: detained Islamic rebel who grabbed a guard's rifle and opened fire October 7, 2003, in Manila's police headquarters, killing three officers and wounding three others before being shot to death. He was one of five Abu Sayyaf suspects arrested for a 2002 bomb attack in southern Zamboanga City.

Bonnie: named by Jaime Agrava, a New People's Army of the Philippines leader, as one of the team that, on January 17, 1992, kidnapped U.S. citizen Michael Barnes.

Brian Borthwick: British citizen accused by the Philippine government of providing equipment to three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos; on February 11, 1977, Borthwick admitted to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government. Borthwick was believed to have died in 1977 in a Singapore prison.

Antonio Bosch: naturalized Filipino of Spanish and German ancestry detained by the Southern Luzon Command in the Philippines on June 9, 1988, on suspicion of links with New People's Army (NPA) rebels. He was detained while on his way to an NPA mountain camp. On June 11, 1988, murder and kidnapping charges were filed against him, as he had allegedly trained the NPA rebels. Witnesses reported that he had participated in several guerrilla attacks against security forces in the rebel-infested Bondoc Peninsula on Quezon Province and was part of the group that raided San Francisco Town on February 12, 1988, killing a police officer and wounding two others.

Jean Bouissou: Frenchman accused of having devised and prepared an explosive device and sentenced to 10 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court for the detonation of two bombs on March 20, 1982, that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Ahmed Bouzid: French citizen arrested January 13, 1992, by Cotonou, Benin, police in connection with the United Transit Airlines Flight 772 bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171, although Paris police said his name did not appear in any dockets. On January 24, 1992, he was charged in Cotonou with "conspiracy with criminals, and murders."

Boya: alias used by a 15-year-old who played hooky from Kobe High School to join eight other Japanese Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

About Elkassim Britel: Italian citizen detained in Lahore, Pakistan, on March 10, 2002. He was taken to Morocco, where he was sentenced to nine years on terrorism charges.

Kerry Browning: woman arrested by Australian federal police on October 17, 1988, for causing damage to vehicles in the April 10, 1988, firebombing of the car of the third secretary of the South African Embassy in Canberra.

Jovenal Bruno: alias Abu Jihad. International liaison officer of the Abu Sayyaf Group captured in Jolu, Sulu, Philippines, and who identified the safe house of six members of the breakaway ISNG faction of the overseas support structure of Hamas in the Philippines on April 1, 1995.

Agus Budiman: Indonesian, age 31, living on Seminary Road in Alexandria, Virginia, indicted in U.S. District Court on November 19, 2001, for identification fraud in helping Mohammed Belfas, an Indonesian from Germany, obtain a Virginia ID card on November 4, 2000. The charge carried a 15-year prison term. Budiman attended the same Hamburg mosque as 9/11 hijacker leader Muhammad Atta but claimed he had not seen him since coming to the United States in October 2000. Finnish banking authorities said Belfas was an Osama bin Laden contact. Authorities interviewed Budiman on September 19 and October 1; the Immigration and Naturalization Service arrested him on October 30 for overstaying his visa and working while using a tourist visa. In late November, he was ordered held without bond. The FBI testified on November 26 that Ramzi Binalshibh, the reputed 20th hijacker, twice used Budiman's U.S. address for his visa applications; both tries failed. During the testimony, Budiman's attorney, Greg English, told U.S. Magistrate Judge Theresa C. Buchanan that he himself was a former Army officer, his wife worked for the Department of the Army, they had friends killed at the Pentagon, and he could not in good conscience represent someone charged with terrorism. He had believed it was a simple fraud case. The hearing was postponed until November 29 to permit Budiman to get another attorney, later identified as Mark Thrash.

During the hearing, prosecutors said that hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah listed Budiman's address as a possible host site on his U.S. visa application. A prosecution witness said Budiman helped Atta move into a Hamburg apartment, and he also had contact with hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi. The judge said the fraud case should be sent to the grand jury and ordered Budiman held without bond. On February 1, 2002, he was ordered held while authorities continued to investigate him. He was indicted February 21, 2002, on ID fraud and faced 15 years in prison. He pleaded guilty at his March 4, 2002, arraignment to aiding the unlawful production of ID documents. He agreed not to fight deportation proceedings. On May 11, 2002, he was sentenced to seven months or time served.

Losembe Buenene: sentenced May 7, 1984, to 10 years for the murder of two people and the destruction of public property in the March 27, 1984, Kinshasa bombing of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Naeem Bukhari: alias Ata-ur-Rahman. Identified by a suspect arrested May 16, 2002, as the leader of the kidnappers of Daniel Pearl on January 23, 2002. Bakhari was wanted for the killings of 10 prominent Pakistani Shi'ites and was believed to be the operations chief of a group that included three Pakistanis of Yemeni descent who had guarded Pearl and participated in his murder. The Lashkar-i-Jhangvi leader was also wanted for questioning in the June 14, 2002, car bombing outside the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 Pakistanis and injured 51 others. On June 29, 2002, the Pakistani government offered a $50,000 bounty.

Awil Aden Burhan: Somali Army captain and one of three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. They demanded the release of 21 political prisoners, including 7 Somali youths sentenced to death. The hijackers surrendered November 27 after being granted a news conference. They received political asylum in Ethiopia. On December 4, the Somali government demanded the return of the hijackers.

Barnabe Buscayno: alias Commander Dante. Release was demanded by the New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of Tomas Manotoc, a professional basketball coach, top amateur golfer, and purported son-in-law of Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, on December 29, 1981. NPA denied involvement, saying it was a put-up job by Marcos.

Kyanzila El-Busi: sentenced May 7, 1984, to 10 years for the murder of two people and the destruction of public property in the March 27, 1984, Kinshasa bombing of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Mohammad Maqboo Butt: founder of the Kashmir National Liberation Front whose release was demanded by the Kashmir Liberation Army kidnappers of Ravindra Hareshma Mhatre, assistant commissioner of the Indian High Commission in Birmingham, United Kingdom, on February 3, 1984. The kidnappers killed Mhatre. In retaliation, Indian president Giani Zail Singh ordered Butt's execution. Butt had been jailed in India for the 1966 murder of an Indian intelligence official, the 1976 murder of a bank manager, a bank robbery, and an air hijacking. On February 11, 1984, he was hanged in New Delhi. His execution touched off demonstrations that left five dead.

Muhammed Butt: the FBI detained the Pakistani and turned him over to Immigration and Naturalization Service for deportation on September 19, 2001, after interviewing him regarding the 9/11 attacks. On October 23, Butt apparently died of a heart attack in the Hudson County Correctional Facility in Kearney, New Jersey. An anthrax test was negative.

Shaheen Butt: Pakistani owner of the Manhattan Foreign Exchange, a money remittance business in New York. He was swept up on March 20, 2003, when federal agents in the Operation Green Quest terrorist financing task force arrested nine people and executed nine search warrants. The FBI and Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement arrested four people and seized $71,000 in an investigation of the Exchange, which had illegally moved $33 million to Pakistan in three years. Much of the money came from the sale of faked U.S., U.K., Pakistani, and Canadian passports. An undercover federal agent claiming to be a drug money launderer told Butt that drugs were the source of the $200,000 he gave him. An aide of Butt told the agent he could obtain a fake driver's license, photo ID card, immigration green card, and Social Security card for $21,000. Butt was charged with money laundering, immigration fraud, and other counts.

C

---

Ciise Maxamad Cabbdullah: alias The Somali. Reported by Italian investigators as working for Abu Musab al-Zarqawi and Ansar al-Islam in 2003. Mohammed Daki housed him with four other immigrants. Ten days before they arrested Daki, police picked up Cabbdullah and two associates. Cabbdullah, as of March 18, 2005, was on trial in Italy for his connection to international terrorists.

Alex Capitulo: alleged commander of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines provincial operations command in Pampanga, Capitulo was named by police on May 20, 1990, as a planner of the May 13, 1990, NPA murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. He was charged with double murder and illegal possession of firearms.

Cesario Capitulo: alias Ka Jody. One of eight members of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines who died on July 2, 1989, in a four-hour gun battle in Barangay Duquit, Mabalacat, Pampanga, when the Angeles Metropolitan District Command foiled the NPA's plan to attack the July 4 celebration at Clark Air Base. All eight belonged to General Guerrilla Unit One operating in eastern Pampanga towns.

Abdullah Catli: on January 9, 1995, Philippine police announced they were searching for Catli in connection with a newly discovered plan to murder the pope during his visit to the Philippines. Catli allegedly was one of four Turks who had entered the country disguised as priests.

Cha Tae-kun: one of six South Korean college students who failed to seize the U.S. Information Service (USIS) building in Seoul on July 24, 1989. The Chinese literature senior at Korea University was arrested by police on July 26 for violating the National Security Law.

Ali Asad Chandia: one of the "Virginia jihad network" of 11 individuals who aimed to aid terrorists against the Indian government and conduct attacks against U.S. troops. The group had practiced by playing paintball in Virginia.

On May 22, 2006, the last man in the Virginia jihad group began his trial. Prosecutors charged Chandia, age 29, with training at a terrorist camp in 2001 or 2002 and helping Lashkar-i-Taiba by acquiring an electronic autopilot system and video equipment for use on model airplanes. In his College Park home, police found materials praising the 9/11 attacks. Chandia was represented by attorney Marvin Miller, who said his client taught third grade at Dar al-Huda, a Muslim school in College Park, Maryland. He faced four counts of providing or conspiring to provide material support to Lashkar-i-Taiba and up to 60 years in prison. On June 6, a federal jury convicted Chandia on three counts of providing material support to Lashkar-i-Taiba or conspiring to do so. He was acquitted of a fourth count of supporting terrorism. He faced 45 years in prison. U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton sentenced Chandia to 15 years on August 25. On January 23, 2008, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld the conviction but sent the case back to the lower court for resentencing because the earlier judge "failed to make the factual findings” needed for a “terrorism enhancement” of a sentence. On April 25, he was resentenced to 15 years in prison by Judge Hinton.

Chang Chipu: Shan rebel leader whose release was demanded by the kidnappers of two Soviet doctors in Burma on May 4, 1973.

Chang Hsin-Kuo: variant of Zhang Qingguo.

Thong Chankhunthong: alias Thongchai from Sayabouri Province. One of four Laotians arrested during the March 8, 1989, rescue of Yoshiaki Asao, the Japanese branch manager of Mitsui kidnapped March 1, 1989, from his home in Vientiane, Laos, and taken into Thailand. Laotian police said the kidnappers were exiled Lao reactionaries from the Thonglit Chokbengboun (named after a former rightist general) group.

Seifullah Chapman: one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, 42-count federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Chapman was accused of instructing the others in combat tactics based upon his U.S. military experience.

On January 27, 2004, four of the defendants waived their right to a jury trial, claiming that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. Chapman (represented by John K. Zwerling), Hammad Abdur-Raheem, Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem, and Masoud Ahmad Khan were scheduled for a February 9 bench trial in front of Judge Brinkema.

On March 4, 2004, Judge Brinkema found three guilty of conspiring to aid Lashkar-i-Taiba and weapons charges. On June 15, Judge Brinkema imposed an 85-year sentence on Chapman. On July 29, 2005, she reduced the sentence to 65 years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Charles: alias of Nixon.

Lam Van Chat: alias of Lam Van Tu.

Mohammed Nawaz Chaudhary: one of four Pakistanis arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992, and suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges were not dropped.

R. S. Chawla: one of three suspected Sikh militants arrested by Nepalese police at Tribhuvan International Airport on May 22, 1985, as they were about to board Indian Airlines Flight 404 bound for New Delhi. Police found they were carrying bombs in transistor radios and suspected they intended to hijack the plane.

Ka Che: alias of Alfredo de Leon.

Imran Cheema: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. Cheema was believed to be a potential suicide bomber who came to Barcelona from Pakistan between October 2007 and mid-January 2008.

Chen Chi-Li: alias Duck. Leader of the largest criminal operation in Taiwan, the Bamboo Gang, who planned the October 15, 1984, assassination of Henry Liu, a prominent Chinese American journalist who authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. Chen escaped to Taiwan but was arrested there on November 30, 1984. On February 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Justice Ministry filed preliminary charges against him. The trial began on April 2, 1985. He was found guilty on April 9 and was sentenced to life in prison. On June 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Supreme Court upheld the conviction.

Chen Chin-hsing: wanted by Taiwan police in an April kidnapping and murder of a popular entertainer's teenage daughter and the murder of a plastic surgeon and two nurses, he surrendered to police on November 19, 1997, after taking hostage the family of South African defense attaché E.G.M. Alexander. Chen released the attaché's wife, Anne, and then was driven by a police motorcade to an undisclosed location.

Chi Ta-qian: variant Hsu Ta-Chun. Hijacker of Hsiamen Airline Company Flight 8086, a B737 flying from Harbin to Hsiamen on December 12, 1993, and diverted to Chiang Kai-Shek International Airport, where he requested political asylum. He was a staff member of the China Light Industry Import-Export Corporation who had quarreled with his general manager. On April 28, 1994, a Taiwan court sentenced him to 12 years in prison for air piracy.

Chiang Hung-Chun: Chinese security official at the Shenyang Institute of Physical Culture and one of six hijackers of Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai. His five-year sentence was later commuted. (See also An Chien-wei.)

Chien Chu-yuan: tried to hijack a China Airlines B737 from Taiwan to Beijing with a fake hand grenade on February 22, 1988. He was injured when he was overpowered by passengers and a guard. The plane landed safely in Kaoshiung, its final destination in southern Taiwan.

Chiep Chet: former Khmer Rouge soldier, age 27, and one of 25 kidnappers who, on March 26, 1996, kidnapped 26 Cambodian mine removers and their British supervisor, Christopher Malone Howes, as they were clearing a road in Gradow village, Angkor Thom District, near the Angkor Wat temple. He had surrendered in 1995. On July 12, 1996, he was sentenced by the Siem Reap Provincial Tribunal to five years for illegally detaining Howes and for serving Khmer Rouge policy. He was born in Chup village, Svay Chek commune, Angkor Thom District, Siem Reap Province. He had agreed to assist the Khmer Rouge in the kidnapping and was to receive 500 baht. He said he never received the money.

Isao Chinen: accused of throwing a bomb at Crown Prince Akihito in 1975. His release was demanded on September 28, 1977, when the Hidaka Commando Unit of the Japanese Red Army hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh. Chinen refused to go. (See also Kunio Bando.)

Cho Chong-Chu: sophomore student in Seoul City University's Environmental Engineering Department and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando (PYC) arrested after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs on May 20, 1988, injuring a student and a riot policeman. PYC was affiliated with Hakturyon (part of the Student Struggle League, a subordinate section of the Union of the Seoul District Students General Association), a student league "organized to crush military dictatorship" that was set up on May 15 at Konguk University. On April 18, the group formed the Patriotic Youth Suicide Squad in the editorial room of Konguk University's student newspaper and held a swearing-in ceremony by writing their names in blood on the national flag.

Cho Hyong-sok: senior chemistry student at Konguk University and one of several South Korean students who, on October 13, 1989, forced their way into the residence of U.S. ambassador Donald Gregg and set off explosives. The six students threw homemade bombs and Molotov cocktails at local guards, demanding that Washington stop pressuring Seoul to open its markets to U.S. agricultural and fishery products. The group was arrested while staging a sit-in in Gregg's reception room. They claimed to be members of an anti-U.S. national salvation shock brigade struggling to attain national sovereignty. Police took homemade bombs, a tear gas canister, Molotov cocktails, and six steel pipes from the students. The six were charged with violating the anti-firebomb law and the law governing assault and battery. On November 10, 1989, prosecutors indicted the six students and ordered a nationwide manhunt for four others.

Choe Chung-hwa: variant of James Choi.

Choe In-sun: arrested in the March 18, 1982, arson attack against the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan that killed a Korean student and injured three others; he was indicted on April 29, 1982. Choe was found guilty and was sentenced to 10 years on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict.

Choe Ki-shik: Catholic diocesan priest arrested April 8, 1982, in Wonju for hiding the arsonists in the March 18, 1982, attack against the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan that killed a Korean student and injured three others.

James Choi: variant Choe Chung-hwa. The former Korean Army general and Canadian citizen and dissident fled Canada after word leaked of his participation in a North Korean-backed plot to assassinate South Korean president Chun Doo-Hwan. On February 24, 1982, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police issued a warrant on charges of conspiracy to kill the president, conspiracy to defraud, and illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He allegedly paid three Canadian men $68,000 to kill the president, probably during the president's expected visit to Ottawa. Choi is the son of former South Korean ambassador to Malaysia Choe Hong-hui, former president of the International Tae Kwon Do Federation, who made frequent trips to North Korea. Choi's brother lived in North Korea and met with North Korean president Kim Il Sung during a September 1980 visit to the country. Choi was last seen in June 1982 by Austrian police, who said he was driven into Czechoslovakia from Vienna by North Koreans in a car bearing diplomatic license plates.

Chon Pong-ku: business administration senior and one of five college students arrested November 15, 1989, after throwing firebombs into a U.S. air base in Kunsan, Chollabuk-do, during the morning's anti-U.S. demonstration. On February 2, 1990, Judge Pang Kuk-song of the Kunsan Branch of the Chonju District Court sentenced him to 18 months in jail for throwing firebombs at the base and staging illegal rallies to demand the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Korea. The judge said he must be punished since he had illegally organized several violent rallies over the past two years in violation of the law governing assemblies and demonstrations.

Chong Chong-chol: attempted, on May 18, 1985, to hijack a South Korean airliner en route from Seoul to Cheju Island and divert it to North Korea. He was subdued by passengers.

Chong Chong-hyo: manager of the Tonam-dong branch of the Hanil Bank who offered a hiding place to a relative who was one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others.

Chong Hong-hui: Hanguk University senior in English and one of five radical students who, on September 17, 1986, briefly occupied the Japanese Information Office in Seoul, South Korea, to protest the 10th Asian Games and Japanese prime minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's planned visit. Police confiscated a Molotov cocktail and four knives.

Chong Won-Sok: junior and journalism major at Korea University and one of 12 radicals arrested by the Agency for National Security Planning for throwing seven Molotov cocktails into a U.S. engineering unit at 5 ka, Ulchiro, Seoul, on March 18, 1988. He was a member of the Anti-U.S. Youth Group, a pro-North Korean clandestine organization formed by 72 students from 26 universities.

Chou Wen-chiang: hijacker of China Southern Airlines Flight CZ3572, a B737-2542 en route on June 6, 1994, from Fuxhou to Guangzhou and diverted to Chiang Kai-Shek International Airport in Taiwan. He told interrogators he was born in 1958, was a resident of Guangdong Lien County, and had a heart ailment.

Mumtaz Ahmed Chowdhury: arrested in Mumbai, India, on July 20, 2006, as a suspect in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800. He had links with terrorists in Nepal and Bangladesh and unspecified links to Pakistan.

Arunchalam Chrishanthakumar: British Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) leader convicted by a London court on June 12, 2009, of supplying bomb-making equipment to LTTE and sentenced to two years in prison.

Chu Hyok: Korea University senior and Russian language major who led the Anti-U.S. Youth Group, a pro-North Korean clandestine organization formed in early 1988 by 72 students from 26 universities.

Fructuoso Chua: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Dongo Chuga: member of the Lendu tribe arrested May 26, 2001, by Ugandan soldiers after admitting to being one of the 14 gunmen who killed six Red Cross workers 30 miles north of Bunia in the Democratic Republic of the Congo on April 21, 2001. He was believed to be a member of the Congolese Liberation Front.

Chun Chin-suk: sole woman among the 72 demonstrators who attacked the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library on May 23, 1985. On October 2, 1985, she received a three-year stay of her two-year sentence.

Yong Ki Chung: alias Eiki Kurosawa. Would-be hijacker of an All Nippon Airways YS11 flying from Tokyo to Sendai who threatened to blow up the plane if not flown to North Korea. The pilot returned to Tokyo, where the hijacker offered no resistance and was arrested.

Jacinto Ciloza: Portuguese Army first lieutenant who forced a Portuguese military plane to fly from Mozambique to Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, in protest of the Salazar government on March 12, 1963.

Rodrigo Cinco: alias Ka (Comrade) Lodring. One of two suspected members of the New People's Army working inside the Subic Bay Naval Base as scavengers and arrested by Philippine police on December 6, 1988. The duo was from Barangay Cabalan of Olongapo City.

Charles Glen Coatley: Zimbabwean who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Coatley was charged by South Africa with kidnapping rather than hijacking and was released on bail on December 1, 1981. After Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982.

Donato Continente: aliases Comrade Donut, Comrade Danny. Staff member of the Philippine Collegian and member of the political assassination team of the New People's Army (NPA) arrested by the military on June 16, 1989. He was detained in front of Vinzons Hall at the University of the Philippines, Diliman. The military filed murder charges against him on June 19 regarding NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Continente insisted he was only a member of the surveillance team. On December 28, 1992, Philippine state prosecutors decided to recommend amnesty.

Michel le Cornec: Frenchman accused of devising and preparing the two bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville, Congo, movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb on March 20, 1982. He was sentenced in absentia to 10 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court.

Eleazar Corpus: alias Ka (Comrade) Victor. His release was demanded on October 22, 1986, by the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Eduard Corpuz: alias Ka (Comrade) Manny. His release was demanded on October 22, 1986, by the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Macedo Correia: former member of the Popular Forces of April 25 group in Portugal who turned state's evidence in 1985. In the November 27, 1985, trial, he said the group planned to overthrow the Zairean government.

Rolando Cortez: one of two suspected members of the New People's Army working inside the Subic Bay Naval Base as scavengers and arrested by Philippine police on December 6, 1988. The duo was from Barangay Cabalan of Olongapo City.

Manuel Crisologo: Philippine businessman arrested September 23, 1972, who admitted on February 11, 1977, to plotting to kill president Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government. He was sentenced to six years and fined $1,333.

Arnulfo de la Cruz: alias Ka (Comrade) Eden. One of eight members of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines who died in a four-hour gun battle in Barangay Duquit, Mabalacat, Pampanga, on July 2, 1989, when the Angeles Metropolitan District Command foiled the NPA's plan to attack the July 4 celebration at Clark Air Base. All belonged to General Guerrilla Unit One operating in eastern Pampanga towns.

Lilibeth de la Cruz: wife of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade assassination team leader, Nilo de la Cruz. She was arrested August 5, 1991.

Nilo de la Cruz: leader of 10 members of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade arrested June 23, 1990, in Manila. He was the only member of the group who refused to testify about firing two rifle-launched M-203 grenades into the U.S. Embassy residential and recreational compound on December 14, 1989. He remained at large when his wife, Lilibeth, was arrested August 5, 1991.

Renato Cudia: alias Ka (Comrade) Jason. Hit man of the New People's Army Mariano Garcia Brigade in Pampanga, Philippines, arrested June 29, 1989, by constabulary agents while he was visiting his wife in St. Ines, Mabalacat. He had a 50,000-peso reward on his head. He was one of the suspects in the October 28, 1987, slaying of U.S. Sgt. Randy Davis of the Third Component Repair Squadron at Clark Air Base. He was also involved in the ambush and slaying of former mayor Daniel Lacson of Magalang, Pampanga, in 1986, and Vice Mayor Felipe Siron of Mexico Town in 1987.

Danilo Cunanan: alias Ka (Comrade) Marty. Vice commander of the New People's Army (NPA) Mariano Garcia Brigade assassination team in Pampanga, Philippines. He was killed on October 5, 1989, while trying to escape from police who had arrested him in Barangay San Jose, San Fernando, Pampanga. He was suspected in the NPA assassination of two retired U.S. Air Force officers as they drove from Camp O'Donnell in Tarlac Province near Clark Air Base on September 26, 1989.

Ricky S. Cura: suspected member of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) Alex Boncayao Brigade who lived in Purok I, Barangay Anunas. He was arrested in connection with four separate October 28, 1987, attacks by NPA sparrow units that killed two active duty U.S. servicemen, a retired U.S. Air Force soldier, and a retired Filipino member of the U.S. Air Force near Clark Air Base north of Manila. He was arrested while trying to escape on a tricycle in Barangay Pampanga.

D

---

Muhammad Dad: spokesperson in Beirut for the Eritrean Liberation Forces-Revolutionary Council during the September 13, 1975, kidnapping of two Americans and six Ethiopians from the Kagnew communications facility near Asmara, Ethiopia.

Ayako Daidoji: leftist woman convicted of involvement in several bombings of business firms in 1974 and 1975 in Japan. The Japanese Red Army (JRA) Hidaka Commando Unit demanded her release on September 28, 1977, when they hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh. On June 13, 1988, the Philippine Department of National Defense announced a search for the JRA member. (See also Kunio Bando.)

Kenneth H. Dalgliesh: former British intelligence agent who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Dalgliesh was charged by South Africa with kidnapping rather than hijacking and was released on bail on December 1, 1981. After Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982.

Xavier Van Dame: alias of Jean-Paul Bizimana.

Vicente Dangan: Filipino priest who led the ambush and murder of mayor of Kabangkalan Pablo Sola on March 10, 1982. The attack came a few months after the bodies of seven farmers were dug up on the plantation of Sola, who was charged with the murders.

Soule Dankoro: retired Benin lieutenant colonel and former minister of the previous Kerekou administration arrested November 24, 1995, for suspected involvement in the November 14, 1995, firing of three RPG-7 rockets at the Cotonou conference center. The center was to host the sixth Francophone summit of 47 heads of state on December 2–4.

Comrade Danny: alias of Donato Continente.

Commander Dante: alias of Barnabe Buscayno.

Vincent Daoume: one of the 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who conducted an April 22, 1988, gun and machete attack on the French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvea Island in New Caledonia, killing 3 policemen and injuring 5 before taking 15 hostage. He was killed in a French rescue operation on May 7, 1988.

Abdul Majid Dar: former chief commander, age 47, of Hizbul-Mujaheddin, the largest guerrilla group in Kashmir, who favored dialogue on the region. He was killed on March 23, 2003, when gunmen fired on his car near his brother's home in Sopore, 30 miles south of Srinagar. His sister and mother were injured. Two separatist groups claimed credit.

Ali Mohammad Dar: member of the Pasdaran-e Inquilab-e Islami who was among the Kashmiri Muslim separatists who, on June 25, 1991, kidnapped one Dutch and seven Israeli tourists. One of the Israeli hostages grabbed an assault rifle from the kidnappers and shot Dar to death. Dar was from Kashmir's Rainawari District near Srinagar.

Tariq Ahmad Dar: member of Lashkar-i-Taiba arrested in early November 2005 on suspicion of being the main financier and planner of the October 29, 2005, nighttime bombings of two Indian markets and a bus in New Delhi that killed 59 people and wounded 210. The representative for a pharmaceutical company was brought to New Delhi for questioning but was not formally charged.

Comrade Darwin: believed to be one of 10 members of the New People's Army of the Philippines who, on March 4, 1990, shot to death Stewart Frank Raab, age 76, an American rancher who refused to pay revolutionary taxes of $34,000.

Hossein Dasgiri: aliases Hossein Shahriarifar, Pajiri Mahmed. One of three Iranians arrested June 3, 1994, by police in Hat Yai, Thailand, in connection with the March 5, 1994, discovery of a truck loaded with a ton of explosives in Thailand. Police believed that the Iranians had planned assassination attempts against senior members of the U.S., Israeli, Pakistani, and other embassies and that the truck bomb was to be used against the Israeli Embassy. Dasgiri was picked up at the Inthra Hotel in the Hat Yai District. He implicated two other Iranians arrested with him as taking part in falsifying passports. He was sought under arrest warrants on charges of conspiring to commit premeditated murder, robbery resulting in the death of others, and making and possessing explosives. He held a valid passport issued by Iran under the name Pajiri Mahmed, which he used to reenter Thailand. He entered and left Thailand through immigration checkpoints in Sadao and Su-ngai Kolok districts 10 times under different names. On August 5, 1994, the Criminal Court ordered his detention for the sixth time. He was charged with murder and illegal possession of explosives.

On August 18, he pleaded not guilty in a Bangkok court to charges of murder, robbery, illegal assembly, bringing illegal arms into the country, and illegal possession of explosives and firearms between August 20, 1993, and March 11, 1994. Thai police believed he was a Muslim fundamentalist involved in other terrorist acts in other countries during the previous two years. Witnesses said they had seen him purchase the water tank that held the bomb in the truck, and six witnesses picked him out of a lineup. On July 17, 1996, a Thai court convicted him of premeditated murder and sentenced him to death. He was also found guilty of armed robbery, illegal possession of firearms and explosives, being a mobster, and hiding a corpse. He was ordered to pay 5,500 baht to the owner of the rented truck that was to be used as the bomb. His attorney planned to appeal.

Daud: alias of Zulkarnaen.

Frank Davis: Nigerian leader of three self-proclaimed members of the Black Liberation Front who bungled a morning robbery attempt then seized eight hostages at the Spaghetti House restaurant in London on September 28, 1975. They demanded to be flown to Jamaica. On October 1, the radio announced the arrest of two other men on charges of involvement in the robbery. On October 3, the group released the remaining six hostages. Davis shot himself in the stomach, causing serious injuries. On June 30, 1975, the three were found guilty of attempted robbery.

Fama Daya: one of four Ethiopians who, on March 8, 1994, hijacked a Saudi Arabian Airlines A300 Airbus on a flight between Addis Ababa and Jeddah and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya. One female hijacker disembarked with the passengers but was arrested. Kenyan troops stormed the plane, shooting an Ethiopian hijacker lured out of the plane and overpowering his female accomplice. Police said they would be tried in Kenya.

Alberto Daylom: Red Scorpion Group logistics officer of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade who was killed in a February 1, 1993, shootout during a raid by Philippine National Police. He was involved in killing U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group on April 21, 1989.

Choua Dazi: Libyan-based spokesman for Movement for Democracy and Justice in Chad (MDJT) rebels who kidnapped U.S. missionary Steven Godbold in October 2007.

Mohammed Ismael Deib: Syrian and one of six Arabs arrested April 1, 1995, by Philippine authorities in Caloocan (or Kalookan) as members of the little-known Islamic Saturday Meeting. The group had ties to Ramzi Yusuf. Documents taken from the six detainees indicated they planned to attack U.S. and Saudi citizens in the Philippines. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms and explosives. Police had seized several M-16 Armalite rifles, dynamite, and detonators. Police said the suspects were preparing for a series of bombings to disrupt the May 8 elections. In December 1995, they were tried before the Caloocan City Regional Trial Court for illegal possession of firearms and explosives.

Redendo Cain Dellosa: Abu Sayyaf member who confessed in March 2004 to hiding TNT in a TV set he carried onto a ferry; after his confession, he escaped. On February 27, 2004, an explosion on the Superferry 14 caused it to sink, killing 100 people an hour after it left Manila.

Trevor Demain: restaurant owner arrested in connection with the January 11, 1988, car bombing of the home of three members of the African National Congress of South Africa in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo.

Nebiu Zewolde Demeke: Ethiopian student residing in Morocco who, on February 11, 1993, hijacked Lufthansa Flight 592, an Airbus 310 flying from Frankfurt to Cairo, and diverted it to New York's JFK International Airport, where he demanded political asylum. He surrendered an hour later. He was arraigned in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on charges of aircraft piracy and interfering with a flight crew. He faced 20 years. Germany requested extradition. Demeke told the pilot he had attempted to emigrate but had been refused entry into the United States. His economist father was a political prisoner in Ethiopia. His family moved to Morocco after he was jailed. The hijacker was ordered held without bail on February 12, 1993, by a magistrate in Brooklyn pending a February 26 hearing.

Simon Denouse: London-based, South African-backed Seychelles exile who worked for Italy and was blown up, along with Mike Asher, by their own bomb on October 20, 1982, before they could launch a coup against the government of Seychelles president Albert France Rene. The Seychelles Resistance Movement claimed credit.

Mohammed Jamil Derbah: Lebanese leader of a Canary Islands fraud ring broken up by police on November 20, 2001. The group had links to Hizballah and the Shi'ite Amal movement. Police arrested 17 people, including Derbah, who had been involved in arms trafficking and financing the groups. The arrests came at the end of a two-year investigation.

Clive Derby-Lewis: arrested April 18, 1993, in connection with the April 10, 1993, assassination of South African Communist Party general secretary Chris Hani. He had served on a now-defunct parliamentary body called the President's Council. His wife was also detained in the West Rand town of Krugersdorp. He had founded the Stallard Foundation, a pro-apartheid, white supremacist, anticommunist group. The Weekly Mail said he supplied the gun used in the killing and was the mastermind behind a hit list found in the apartment of the triggerman. He was held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act, which allows for detention without trial for 10 days with the option to extend the period for further questioning. On May 8, 1993, he was charged with murder. On October 14, he was convicted of murder and was sentenced to death the next day. On December 1, 1994, the Conservative Party expressed shock that the appeals court affirmed the death sentence.

Gabriella (Gaye) Maoverna Derby-Lewis: arrested April 18, 1993, in connection with the April 10, 1993, assassination of South African Communist Party general secretary Chris Hani. Her husband was also detained in the West Rand town of Krugersdorp. She was a right-wing columnist and editor of the Conservative Party's weekly Die Patriot. She was held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act, which allows for detention without trial for 10 days with the option to extend the period for further questioning. She was held without bail on April 21. She appeared in court on April 30 and was accused by police of arranging to obtain addresses of people, including Hani, who were on the hit list of the triggerman. On October 14, 1993, she was acquitted of conspiracy.

Jean-Pierre Deteix: Frenchman working for the separatist Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front (FLNKS) as a public relations consultant whose car was bombed on May 2, 1988, in New Caledonia. The National Committee against Independence claimed credit.

Kashmir Singh Dhillon: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. Each suspect was initially charged with conspiracy to possess explosives with intent to injure. On December 24, 1986, Dhillon was found guilty of conspiring to blow up an airplane and sentenced to life in prison.

Armajit Singh Dhindsa: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. Dhindsa was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and charged with attempted murder.

Digambar Dhingre: alias Bandu Shingre. Leader of the Free India Army, Indian Independent Forces, Azad Hind Sena arrested for firebombing the U.S. Consulate in Bombay on March 25, 1982. He was charged with attempted murder, trespass, rioting, and arson.

A. Dhirai: arrested by Indian police in a Delhi hotel on July 5, 1991, in connection with the bombing that killed former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. Dhirai, age 17, had direct links with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). She was remanded to police custody for 30 days. Police found documents suggesting a plot to smuggle two other suspects in the bombing—Sivarasan and Subha—to Nepal and on to a third country, probably Singapore or another Southeast Asian country where the LTTE has sympathizers. The duo had contacted an LTTE member in Kathmandu, Nepal.

Alfonso Dhlakama: leader of the Mozambique National Resistance Movement in 1987.

Lobsang Dhondup: arrested by Chinese authorities near the site of an April 2002 bombing in Chengdu, capital of Szechuan Province. The Chinese executed Lobsang Dhondup, age 28, on January 26, 2003, in Ganzi near the Tibetan border in Szechuan Province. He was convicted of carrying out a string of bombings to protest Chinese rule in Tibet. The Szechuan Provincial High People's Court rejected an appeal by his teacher, Tenzin Deleg Rinpoche, age 52, a senior Buddhist monk, and affirmed his suspended death sentence, which usually means life in prison. Tenzin was held incommunicado for eight months until the day of his trial. Human rights organizations said that attorneys Zhang Sizhi and Li Huigeng were not permitted to represent him in his appeal and that the two defendants were tortured into confessing. Ten other Tibetans were detained in connection with the series of bombings, which killed one person.

Nagendra P. Dhungel: one of three hijackers led by a leader of a Nepalese student organization connected with the Nepalese Communist Party who took over a Royal Nepalese Airlines Twin Otter on a domestic flight from Biratnagar to Kathmandu on June 10, 1973, and diverted it to Forbesganj, India. The plane was carrying a Nepal State Bank shipment of three million Indian rupees ($400,000), which the group seized. The trio escaped into the jungle on a waiting jeep.

Alphone Dianou: leader of the 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who conducted an April 22, 1988, gun and machete attack on the French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvéa Island in New Caledonia, killing 3 policemen and injuring 5 before taking 15 hostage. He had trained for the Roman Catholic priesthood in the Pacific Regional Seminary in Suva, Fiji, but dropped out three years into the seven-year program. He was killed in a French rescue operation on May 7, 1988.

Joao Dias: one of five Mozambicans sentenced to death by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

Commander Kagi Digo: leader of a group who, on March 27, 1991, kidnapped French Catholic priest Yves Caroff in Cotabato, Philippines.

Paul Dikeledi: leader of African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa operations inside Transvaal Province shot to death on July 9, 1987, in Swaziland by three white men as the ANC members were taking a taxi from Matsapha Airport in Mbabane.

Abdasil Malangka Dima: member of Abu Sayyaf captured in Basilan Province by Philippine military intelligence on April 29, 2006. He was wanted in the 2001 abduction of missionaries Martin and Garcia Burnham from Wichita, Kansas; tourist Guillermo Sobero, of Corona, California; and 17 Filipinos. Terrorists beheaded Sobero. Martin Burnham was killed during a rescue attempt.

Noor Din: Malaysian citizen suspected of helping plan the October 12, 2002, bombings of two Bali nightclubs that killed 202 people. The Jemaah Islamiyah member was grabbed in Gresik on Java Island, where police seized an M-16 rifle and ammunition belonging to Ali Imron.

Dixon: one of two militants who killed themselves on July 28, 1991, by triggering an explosion during an Indian police raid. He was wanted in connection with the May 22, 1991, murder of former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Mujahid Dokubo-Asari: jailed for treason in September 2005 in Nigeria. His release was demanded by the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta gunmen who, on February 18, 2006, took nine hostages, including three Americans, two Egyptians, two Thais, a Briton, and a Filipino, from a barge belonging to Willbros, a Houston-based oil services firm that was laying pipeline for Shell. Dokubo-Asari's release was demanded on June 7, 2006, by gunmen who kidnapped a Nigerian and five South Korean oil workers from a natural gas plant. The hostages were freed the next day at the direction of Dokubo-Asari.

Yahya Doloh: one of the Islamic militants who conducted several coordinated attacks against 11 police posts in three Thai provinces, leaving 112 people dead—107 of them militants—on April 28, 2004. Doloh, age 32, was one of five attackers who died in the raid in Yupo.

Pendatun Domianga: true name of Commander Zapata.

John Dube: deputy representative to Zambia of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa and member of Spear of the Nation who was believed to have planned joint ANC-ZAPU (Zimbabwe African People's Union) attacks in Rhodesia in 1968 and 1968. He was killed on February 12, 1974, when a letter bomb exploded in the ANC office in Lusaka, Zambia.

Duck: alias of Chen Chi-Li.

Peter S. Duffy: British member of the Wild Geese of the Congo Wars of the 1960s who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Duffy was charged by South Africa with kidnapping rather than hijacking. He was released on bail on December 1, 1981. After Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982. On July 26, 1982, he was found guilty on three charges.

Abu Dujana: military leader of Jemaah Islamiyah captured on Java Island by Indonesian authorities on June 9, 2007. The Arabic speaker was believed involved in the 2002 Bali nightclub bombings and other terrorist attacks, including those on the Australian Embassy and Jakarta's Marriott Hotel. He trained in Afghanistan, where he met Osama bin Laden. On April 21, 2008, an Indonesian court sentenced him to 15 years in prison for illegal possession of firearms and explosives and of harboring suspected terrorists.

Dulmatin: aliases Joko Pitoyo, Joko Pitono, Abdul Matin, Pitono, Muktarmar, Djoko, Noval, Amar Usman. Electronics specialist thought instrumental in the Bali, Indonesia, bombings on October 12, 2002, that killed 202 people. He received training in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan and was a senior figure in Jemaah Islamiyah. The U.S. offered a five-million-dollar reward for information leading to his arrest. On March 9, 2010, Indonesian police raided an Internet cafe in Pamulang, Banten Province, and killed Dulmatin, 40. His group called itself the Aceh branch of al Qaeda for Southeast Asia (Tandzim al Qoidah Indonesia Wilayah Serambi Makkah).

Ablom Duma: leading member of the outlawed African National Congress of South Africa. On January 24, 1978, his right arm was severed when his booby-trapped mailbox exploded in Manzini, Swaziland.

Sanjay Dutt: Bollywood star arrested in April 1993 for links with Bombay underworld boss Dawood Ibrahim. By July 23, 1994, he was among the 189 charged with conspiracy in the March 12, 1993, multiple Bombay bombings that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250. He was sentenced to six years on July 31, 2007, for receiving weapons from gangsters involved in the bombings. He was temporarily freed from Pune prison on August 23, 2007, until his attorneys could receive a copy of the verdict.

Agus Dwikarna: commander, age 36, of the Lashkar Jundullah militia and one of three Indonesians arrested March 13, 2002, by police at Manila International Airport because of al Qaeda ties. They were held for possession of components for explosives found in their luggage while attempting to board a plane for Bangkok during the night.

Lashkar Jundullah helped train al Qaeda operatives. Their paramilitary training camp located in dense jungle near the port city of Poso on Sulawesi Island was dismantled soon after the 9/11 attacks. Trainees included two dozen Filipino members of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, several members of the Malaysian Mujaheddin Group (which is affiliated with Jemaah Islamiyah, an al Qaeda-linked group that planned to bomb several Western embassies in Singapore), and scores from the Middle East, Europe, and North Africa. Police believed trainees also included several hundred al Qaeda operatives from Europe, a link organized by Indonesian Parlindungan Siregar while living in Spain.

Dwikarna was a businessman active in several radical groups, such as the Indonesian Mujaheddin Council led by Abubakar Baasyir, a cleric accused by Malaysia and Singapore of being the ideological leader of Jemaah Islamiyah. When police found plastic explosives and detonation cable in his suitcase, Dwikarna claimed he was set up by Indonesian intelligence and that he and his two arrested traveling companions were on a business trip. Authorities said Dwikarna had provided alibis to several hundred foreigners traveling in the area by giving them documents on the letterhead of the Muslim charity he worked for—Committee to Overcome Crisis.

Dwikarna's colleagues, Abdul Jamal Balfas and Tamsil Linrung, were released in April because Philippine prosecutors did not have enough evidence to charge them. Tamsil Linrung had been the treasurer of one of Indonesia's largest Muslim political parties, which said the government had orchestrated the arrests as a political attack.

A Philippine regional trial court sentenced Dwikarna to 17 years (U.S. State Department's Pattterns in Global Terrorism 2002 reports 10 years) on July 12, 2002. Police found the name of Omar al-Farouq, another al Qaeda operative, on Dwikarna's computer. Indonesian police tracked him down in June and handed him over to U.S. authorities, who interrogated him in Afghanistan.

Steven Michael Dwyer: Wichita, Kansas, resident sentenced to 10 to 17 years in prison on May 25, 1978, on charges of attempted murder. The Ananda Marg member was ordered to pay $13,333 to Jyoti Sarup Vaid, personal secretary to the Indian Embassy chargé d'affaires, whom he had stabbed on February 7, 1978, in the Philippines.

E

---

Brutus Ebipadei: spokesperson for the Nigerian Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta in January 2006.

Ka Eddie: member of New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines and the Communist Party of the Philippines political assassination team. The military was looking for Eddie as of July 10, 1989, in connection with the NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Eddie had used his membership with the Farmers Movement of the Philippines (KMP) as cover and worked as a bodyguard for KMP Chairman Jaime Tadeo.

The Editor: alias of Masao Adachi.

Edjoc: alias of Edwin Jocson.

Edres Edres: Moro National Liberation Front commander with ties to the Abu Sayyaf group in the Philippines in late 1994.

Abdulkim Edris: variants Dris, Idris. Head of an Abu Sayyaf explosives team arrested by Philippine police on November 14, 2002. Police said the group planned to use truck bombs against the U.S. Embassy, the Manila stock exchange, and other targets. Edris told police the group planned to use cell phones to set off ammonium nitrate bombs in a series of attacks slated for November. Police said cohorts of Edris implicated him in the Zamboanga bombings and claimed he was trained to make car bombs by two Yemenis from al Qaeda at a Basilan Island Abu Sayyaf camp in 2001. He escaped from police custody July 14, 2003.

Comrade Efren: spokesperson on July 6, 1990, for the New People's Army of the Philippines Negros Regional Command kidnapers of Fumio Mizuno, a Japanese citizen working as an overseer for development projects in Central Negros Occidental Province on May 29, 1990.

Ibrahim Eidarous: Egyptian wanted in the United States for involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. His fingerprints were found on a fax sent to news media claiming credit for the attacks. In December 2001, the House of Lords ruled that the government could extradite him to the United States. On March 12, 2008, British home secretary Jacqui Smith ordered he be surrendered to U.S. officials. Eidarous died of leukemia in July 2008 while under house arrest in London.

Mohammed Salman Eisa: alias Ibrahim. Believed to be a Nigerian al Qaeda terrorist, he was arrested August 2, 2004, by Lahore Airport police as he was boarding a flight to the United Arab Emirates.

Sepala Ekanayaka: wearing dynamite sticks around his neck, Ekanayaka hijacked Alitalia Flight 1790, a B747 flying from Rome to Tokyo via New Delhi, Bangkok, and Hong Kong, on June 30, 1982. He released 138 passengers in Bangkok but demanded three million dollars and a meeting with his estranged Italian wife and four-year-old son. He and his family stayed at the Intercontinental Hotel in Galle, 72 miles from Colombo, Sri Lanka. After he deposited $280,000 of a $300,000 ransom payment in a bank, he was arrested July 3 and charged with extortion.

Yokiko Ekita: variants Yukiko, Yuriko. Japanese radical released from prison with five other Japanese Red Army (JRA) members in 1977 to meet the demands of the hijackers of a Japan Airlines plane in Dhaka. On June 13, 1988, the Philippine Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member. She was arrested March 20, 1995, by Romanian authorities while arriving on a Japan Airlines flight. She had entered Romania with a false passport on September 25, 1994. On March 24, 1995, she was flown to Japan's Narita International Airport, where she was taken into custody by airport police. She was accused of the bombings of major Japanese companies in the early 1970s for which she had been arrested in May 1975. She had carried a false passport for Peruvian citizen Maria Yamamore Galvez.

Yukiko Ekita: variant of Yokiko Ekita.

Yuriko Ekita: variant of Yokiko Ekita.

Sman Esma El: Cambodian whose trial in Cambodia began December 28, 2004, for colluding with Indonesian al Qaeda and Jemaah Islamiyah terrorist Hambali to attack the U.K. and U.S. embassies in 2002. On December 29, 2004, the court sentenced two Thai Muslims and El to life.

Ghassan Elashi: one of two founding members of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development sentenced to 65 years in prison on May 27, 2009, for funneling millions of dollars to Hamas. Elashi, age 55, was convicted in November 2008 on 108 counts, including funding schools and social welfare programs controlled by Hamas.

Sergeant Joaquin Elema: one of two men sentenced to death by an Equatorial Guinean court on September 16, 1988, for an assassination attempt against president Teodoro Obiang Nguema. An exile group claimed the duo had been executed.

Mohamed Emali: arrested by Congolese police on February 3, 1993, in a Brazzaville hotel in connection with the United Transit Airlines Flight 772 bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171. He was the managing director of the Congolese Arab Libyan Lumber Company (SCALIB) since 1987. He was released on February 11 after interrogation by French and Congolese police.

Seiichi Endo: Aum Shin Rikyo's health minister who traveled from Japan to Russia in November 1993. Aum purchased a MIL-17 helicopter built in the Tartar region of Russia at a cost of 78 million yen. He was involved in Aum's biological experiments. The former graduate student in biology at Kyoto University had obtained Bacillus anthracis from the University of Tsukuba. In July 1993, he used a truck to spray anthrax around central Tokyo near the Diet.

Abayneh Epino: one of three former Ethiopian security agents who, on November 25, 1991, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight 616, a B737 flying from Addis Ababa to Dire Dawa, and diverted it to Djibouti. The three were taken into custody by the Djibouti government. They had worked for the security and investigation agency of the former government. Ethiopia called the trio criminals who should be brought to justice.

Ibi Esho: retired Benin lieutenant, former intelligence chief, and ambassador to Moscow arrested November 24, 1995, for suspected involvement in a coup attempt after the November 14, 1995, firing of three RPG-7 rockets at the Cotonou conference center. The center was to host the sixth Francophone summit of 47 heads of state on December 2–4.

Ibrahim Estafesa Estefai: spokesperson for the rebels who kidnapped Salvatore Barone and Paolo Bellini in Ethiopia on November 16, 1987.

Noel Etabag: aliases Comrade Nonoy, Ka Tatay. Identified by military sources on July 27, 1989, as a top Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) official who was heading an urban hit squad formed in October 1988 to target Americans. He was believed to be the chief organizer, planner, and advisor of the New People’s Army (NPA) political assassination team that murdered U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters on April 21, 1989. Etabag was the overall advisor of the group before his reassignment to the CPP-NPA’s Visayas Commission. A former political detainee who was among those released by President Aquino upon her February 1986 inauguration, he returned to the rebel movement and became a central committee member. The military posted a 100,000-peso cash reward for information leading to his capture.

Roberto Eusebio: supporter of deposed president Ferdinand Marcos arrested December 10, 1987, in a raid on his suburban Pasig, Manila, apartment. He said he and other Marcos supporters were planning to stage bomb attacks during the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) summit. Police seized bundles with wired timing devices, dynamite sticks, bullets, and military uniforms. He said his group was responsible for bombings earlier that week.

Manolo “Luna” Evangelista: spokesperson in 1987 for the regional operation command of the Northern Luzon Wing of the New People’s Army in the Philippines.

F

---

L.S.F.: alias Yannie Kang. Alleged by La Mañana on April 1, 1995, to have entered Uruguay within the previous two weeks along with two other Japanese Red Army members using false passports. She used a U.K. passport. The paper speculated that they planned to carry out a bombing in neighboring Brazil or Argentina. They were believed to be in the River Plate area.

Rashid Facha: British-born Pakistani initially identified as one of the four bombers of the London subway system on July 7, 2005.

Mustafa Mohamed Fadhil: variant Mustafa Muhammad Fadil; aliases Moustafa Ali Elbishy, Mustafa Mohammed, Mustafa Fazul, Hussein, Hassan Ali, Abd Al Wakil Al Masri, Abu Anis, Abu Yussrr, Nu Man, Khalid, Abu Jihad, Abu Jihad al-Nubi. Indicted in the Southern District of New York on December 16, 1998, for involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiring to kill U.S. nationals. The court listed 238 counts in the indictment against the Egyptian. He met with three other conspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in late July and the first week of August 1998 to plan the bombings. He rented the house where the Tanzania bomb was prepared. He transported the bomb to the embassy in a 1987 Nissan Atlas truck that he and his associates had bought a month earlier. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He holds Egyptian and Kenyan citizenship and claims to have been born in Cairo on June 23, 1976. He is circa five feet four inches tall and weighs circa 130 pounds.

Jamal Ahmad al-Fadl: testified in February 2001 in U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York, in the case of the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He said that in 1993, he helped Osama bin Laden in his efforts to obtain uranium in Sudan. Bin Laden was willing to pay $1.5 million. Al-Fadl was a Sudanese Muslim defector from the group and had been a U.S. informant since 1996. He lived and studied in the United States in the mid-1980s and attended a Brooklyn mosque, where he was recruited to fight in Afghanistan against the Soviets. He had originally joined al Qaeda in 1989 in Afghanistan but defected when caught stealing money from bin Laden. In 1991, he managed bin Laden's businesses, purchasing a farm north of Khartoum and a salt flat near Port Sudan for $430,000. He pleaded guilty to an unspecified charge and cooperated with the government under a plea agreement.

Fahd: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Lebanese to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each with 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in the Lahore High Court.

Ireneo Fajardo: variant Irineo Farjardo. Arrested January 7, 1987, for illegal possession of firearms, Fajardo pleaded not guilty on April 8, 1987, to kidnapping for ransom and robbery at a court hearing in Binan, Laguna, Philippines, in connection with the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Nobuyuki Wakaoji, chief of the Manila branch of Mitsui, by five armed members of the New People's Army. He was named on September 9, 1988, by Philippine authorities in the kidnapping. Fajardo was released on bail.

Ruperto Fajardo: named on September 9, 1988, by Philippine authorities in the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila by the Japanese Red Army. Fajardo was released on bail.

Saleem Fanja: one of two men arrested by Pakistani police on February 28, 1999, who confessed to the November 12, 1997, murder of four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan.

Dawood Mohammad Fanse: individual linked to the Dawood Ibrahim crime syndicate who was believed to have gone to Dubai to arrange transportation for some of the arms used in the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250.

Mohamed Fara: spokesperson for the Somali Coast Liberation Front during the kidnapping of French ambassador Jean Gueury in March 23, 1975.

Sheik Farid: Bangladeshi cleric who created the Harkat-e-Jihad-e-Islami in 1995 with Osama bin Laden's friend Abdul Hye in an Islamic seminary in Chittagong. The group trained seminary students on the use of light arms at two small camps in southeastern Bangladesh. They then sent the trainees to fight alongside the Taliban against other factions in Afghanistan. The group has between 2,000 and 3,000 activists and perhaps 10,000 members. The group publishes a monthly magazine, Wake Up, Freedom Fighter.

Abu Faraj Farj: aliases Abu Faraj Libbi, Dr. Tau-feeq. On August 20, 2004, the Los Angeles Times reported that Pakistani officials had offered $350,000 for the arrest of the Libyan al Qaeda leader for giving instructions for the two failed assassination attempts against Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf in December 2003. Farj was in contact with al Qaeda computer expert Mohammed Naeem Noor Khan, who was captured on July 13. Farj was based in the Bajaur tribal area. He was captured in 2005 in Pakistan and was ultimately transferred to the Guantánamo Bay military prison.

Amjad Hussain Farooqi: fugitive killed on September 25, 2004, following a two-hour gun battle in Nawabshah, a town in the southern province of Sindh, by Pakistani security forces. He was wanted for organizing the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Daniel Pearl and carrying out two unsuccessful assassination attempts against President Gen. Pervez Musharraf in December 2003. Three other al Qaeda associates, including an Islamic cleric, were arrested in the raid. Pakistani authorities said Farooqi worked with Abu Faraj Libbi, a Libyan al Qaeda lieutenant closely linked to Ayman Zawahiri. Farooqi was one of the hijackers of an Indian Airlines plane in December 1999. On September 27, 2004, Pakistani police arrested four more suspected extremists. On October 5, 2004, DNA tests confirmed that the Pakistani killed in the gun battle was Farooqi.

Omar al-Farouq: al Qaeda operative tracked down by Indonesian police in June 2002 after his phone number was found in the computer files of al Qaeda member Agus Dwirkarna. He was handed over to U.S. authorities and interrogated in Afghanistan. Al-Farouq was believed to be a native of Kuwait or Iraq who trained in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan. Al Qaeda operations chief Abu Zubaydah had sent him to Indonesia four years earlier to build contacts with local Muslim radicals. He was a recruiter and top financier for Indonesian extremists. He told investigators that the group wanted to conduct multiple attacks in South Asia around the first anniversary of 9/11. The al Qaeda lieutenant of Osama bin Laden escaped from an Afghan prison in the summer of 2005. On September 25, 2006, U.K. troops killed him when he shot at 200 British troops storming his Basra, Iraq, safe house at dawn.

Abdul Fatah: Indonesian radical sentenced on September 8, 2005, to seven years in prison for his role in the September 9, 2004, suicide car bombing of the Australian Embassy in Jakarta in which 10 Indonesians died.

Kamal son of Abdul Fateh: one of five Libyans arrested March 27, 1993, by police in Peshawar, Pakistan, at a checkpoint near the Gulbahar crossing. Police found in their vehicle two .30 pistols and 30 cartridges, fake passport stamps, U.S. dollars, and Pakistani currency.

Ali Fauzi: brother of Mukhlas and Amrozi believed to have helped his brothers with the car bombs that exploded at two Bali nightclubs on October 12, 2002, killing 202 people.

Arturo Espiritu Favis: Philippine-born American living in Sacramento, California, arrested November 5, 1981, by Manila International Airport police after arriving from San Francisco with 4 handguns, a shotgun, 3,000 bullets, 200 capsules of heroin, one-eighth kilo of powdered heroin, and a half-pound box of marijuana leaves. Police believed he was a Filipino dissident organization's courier.

Khalid 'Abd-al-Rahman Hamad al-Fawwaz: U.K.-based Saudi lieutenant of Osama bin Laden arrested by British authorities on September 23, 1998. The United States requested extradition of the civil engineer who had headed bin Laden's Advice and Reform Committee, which was founded in August 1994. He was bin Laden's Kenya representative and issued orders to one of the cells involved in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy. He was released on bail after being charged with possessing firearms without a license provided he returned to appear before the Bow Street Magistrates Court on October 12.

On September 27, 1998, London police re-arrested Fawwaz, age 36, and arrested six other fundamentalists in Operation Challenge. London police said the U.S. request for his deportation was for "conspiring with bin Laden and others against U.S. citizens during January 1993 through September 27, 1998." Police found in his house copies of statements issued by the World Islamic Front for Fighting Jews and Crusaders, bin Laden and Ayman al-Zawahiri's group. Scotland Yard also found a forged passport. On September 8, 1999, Fawwaz's lawyer, Edward Fitzgerald, claimed that his client was regularly in touch with MI5 before and after the attacks. The next day, a British magistrate ordered Fawwaz held for extradition to the United States on conspiracy charges. His lawyers said they would appeal to London's High Court. The final extradition decision rested with Home Secretary Jack Straw. By May 2000, the United Kingdom had agreed to extradite him to the United States, and in late 2001 he had lost an appeal and was awaiting transport to the United States.

Zulfeqar Fayyaz: one of three initial suspects in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Haroun Fazil: alias Abdallah Mohammed Fadhul. Wanted by the FBI in connection with the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi on August 7, 1998. The explosives expert was a citizen of the Comoros who had been living in Sudan. On September 2, the FBI and Comoran police raided homes belonging to his wife and parents in Moroni, Comoros, but he eluded capture. Comoros agreed to extradite him to Kenya if found. Investigators believed the explosives for the bombs came from the Middle East and were shipped to the Comoros. From there, they went via small boat to a landing north of Dar and were trucked to a truck repair plant in Nairobi. Police believed Fazil rented the villa outside Nairobi that was used to build the bomb, helped plan the assault, and then drove the white pickup truck that led the truck bomb to the embassy. He was charged with 12 counts of murder, 1 count of conspiracy to commit murder, and 1 count of conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. He faced the death penalty if convicted in the United States. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York.

Andre Feissona: admitted at his June 5, 1983, trial that he had taken part in a bomb attack in Bangui, Central African Republic, on July 14, 1982. He claimed he had been recruited by Iddi Lala, the leader of the Central African National Liberation Movement, and had been trained in Libya.

Joao Benedito Fernandes: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement's December 6, 1982, sabotage of a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses. On February 22, 1983, he was sentenced to four years.

Reverend Frank Fernandez: rebel priest who, on April 22, 1988, signed a two-page announcement by the Negros Regional Rebel Chapter of the Philippines saying it would step up attacks on government agencies and other foreign establishments in Negros.

Eduardo Figueras: son of a former Manila mayor arrested September 23, 1972, Figueras admitted on February 11, 1977, to plotting to kill Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government. He was sentenced to six years and fined $1,333.

Antonio Fonseca: Portuguese acquitted by a Beira, Mozambique, court on February 22, 1983, of charges of spreading anti-Mozambique propaganda and insulting government leaders. His was part of the case against defendants in the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

Benjamin Fox: Portuguese citizen and section chief of the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement's December 6, 1982, sabotage of a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses. On February 22, 1983, a Beira court sentenced him to eight years.

Ka (Comrade) Fred: alias of Nestor Angelo. His release was demanded on October 22, 1986, by the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Ka (Comrade) Freddie: New People's Army of the Philippines member cited in a July 9, 1989, warrant regarding the April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Johan Fritz: South African who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Fritz was released unconditionally. After Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982.

Fuad: one of four Ethiopians who, on March 8, 1994, hijacked a Saudi Arabian Airlines A300 Airbus on a flight between Addis Ababa and Jeddah and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya. One female hijacker disembarked with the passengers but was arrested. Kenyan troops stormed the plane, shooting an Ethiopian hijacker lured out of the plane and overpowering his female accomplice. Police said the hijackers would be tried in Kenya. The accomplices of the injured Fuad said he was a former Air Force officer who had been expelled from Saudi Arabia to Ethiopia but did not want to return.

Jaime Fuentes: aliases Ka (Comrade) Bogs, Ka Popoy. Identified by the Philippine military as a planner of the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto: variant Dogwer Wilfredo Reiz Fukumoto; alias of T.T.

Dogwer Wilfredo Reiz Fukumoto: variant of Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto; alias of T.T.

Masao Fukushima: wanted by Japanese authorities for firing five handmade rockets at the Akasaka Palace during the opening ceremonies for the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo on May 4, 1986.

Suzuki Furuya: alias of Yoshiaki Yamada.

G

---

Muhammad G.: Ghanaian, age 36, and one of 15 people arrested by Spanish authorities on December 19, 2005, on charges of setting up a recruiting network for al Qaeda that sent Islamic militants to Iraq. Police said two men were preparing to travel to Iraq as fighters. There was no evidence that they were preparing attacks in Spain, but they had materials to make explosives. He helped Africans travel to the United States under false identities.

Dia Mahmoud Gabri: traveling companion of Saifullah Mokhlis Yunos, special operations chief of the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front, Gabri was arrested in May 15, 2003, by Philippine security forces.

Abogado Gado: alias Mubarak. Leader of the Cotabato syndicate in the Philippines. On March 27, 1991, six of his gunmen kidnapped a French Catholic priest. His group had earlier kidnapped three Mindanao State University professors. Gado denied involvement, but the government offered a reward of 500,000 pesos for his arrest.

Carmelita Gamboa: charged on May 20, 1990, for harboring a criminal when police discovered Gabriel Warner inside her home. Warner was named by police as a planner of the May 13, 1990, New People's Army of the Philippines murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base.

Gao Gunagkai: temporary sawmill worker who, on November 26, 1993, failed to hijack a flight between Nanjing and Fuzhou, China. The plane landed in Hangzhou, where he was apprehended by police. He said he was trying to flee poverty.

Gao Jun: variant Kao Chun. Shandong Province businessman who, on December 8, 1993, hijacked China Northern Airlines Flight 2138, a McDonnell Douglas 82 flying from Qingdao to Fuzhou, and diverted it to Chiang Kai-Shek International Airport, Taiwan, where he was detained. Taipei radio said he was born in Qingdao on February 24, 1968, and was accompanied by a woman during the hijacking.

Alfredo Gonzalez Garcia: organizer of the April 7, 1978, attack by the previously unknown Canary Islands Intelligence Service against Antonio Cubillo, leader of the Movement for Self-Determination and Independence of the Canary Islands. Cubillo was stabbed at the entrance to his home in Algiers but recovered. On May 7, 1978, an Algiers court sentenced Gonzalez to death in absentia.

Gareng: clothing vendor on a terrorism watch list who was last seen in June 2004 in Solo in the Red Zone, an area frequented by militants, including those taught by cleric Baasyir. Police suspected him of being one of the three Jemaah Islamiyah suicide bombers who, on October 1, 2005, attacked Bali restaurants, killing 25 and injuring 100. Police found his head at the scene of the bombing.

Jomo Gbomo: spokesperson for the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta from April 2006 to May 2007.

Abdul Rehman Geelani: alias of Sayed Abdul Geelani.

Sayed Abdul Geelani: alias Abdul Rehman Geelani. One of the defendants in the July 2002 trial of a trio from Kashmir accused of aiding the December 13, 2001, Lashkar-i-Taiba attack on the Indian Parliament. They were charged under the new Prevention of Terrorism Act with conspiracy to “threaten the unit, integrity, and sovereignty of India, to strike terror in the people.” He was convicted on December 16, 2002, of waging war against India and was sentenced to death the next day.

Alexander Michael Gerol: Toronto man charged with conspiracy to kill South Korean president Chun Doo-Hwan as part of a North Korean-backed plot in February 1982. He was also charged with conspiracy to defraud and illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He reportedly had connections with a criminal organization engaged in narcotics trafficking, arms smuggling, and contract killings. On February 17, 1984, he admitted in a county court trial that he had plotted to kill Chun. He was tried for defrauding the North Koreans who hired them and pleaded guilty to the charge. A murder charge was dismissed due to the absence of defendant Choe Chung-hwa. Gerol was sentenced to one year. At the time of sentencing, he was serving a six-year term for bombing a Toronto disco.

Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani: alias Fupi (Swahili for “small”). Tanzanian, age 24, indicted on December 16, 1998, by the U.S. District Court in Manhattan on 238 counts in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, on August 7, 1998. He was charged with buying and transporting the bomb-laden truck to the U.S. embassy in Dar es Salaam. Prosecutors said he obtained and stored bomb materials, surveilled the target, and escorted the Egyptian suicide bomber from Kenya. The former Islamic cleric bicycled around Dar es Salaam to find the bomb-making materials because he did not drive a car. He obtained a passport with a fake name before the bombing. The charges carry the death penalty. The U.S. State Department announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture, similar to the five-million-dollar reward for Osama bin Laden, and circulated posters printed in English, Arabic, French, Dari, and Baluchi at all of its diplomatic facilities. He is five feet three inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He had gone to an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan.

On July 25, 2004, Pakistan authorities arrested Ghailani in an upscale neighborhood in Gujarat, 100 miles southeast of Islamabad, and seized two laptop computers. Police also detained his wife and five other African or Pakistani al Qaeda suspects. The terrorists were picked up after a 10-hour shootout with 240 Punjab policemen and members of the Inter-Services Intelligence agency.

Ghailani was also suspected in efforts to finance al Qaeda via African diamond trading. He had traveled to Liberia in March 1999 to tour diamond fields controlled by the Liberian government and their contacts in the Revolutionary United Front in Sierra Leone. Information from his computer included maps and messages from terrorists who had surveilled U.S. financial locations, leading to a terrorist threat warning in the United States on August 1, 2004.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On March 17, 2007, Ghailani told a U.S. military tribunal at Guantánamo that he did not realize he was part of a bombing plot when he purchased TNT for a friend, thinking it was “soap for washing horses,” and expressed contrition. His friend told him they were mining diamonds in Somalia. He admitted that he trained in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan in the late 1990s, after the bombing, and prepared passports for the group.

On March 31, 2008, Pentagon prosecutors charged him with capital murder in the Tanzania bombing and sought the death penalty at the military commission at Guantánamo Bay. He speaks English and read the entire Harry Potter series while behind bars. He was represented by Marine Lt. Col. Jeffrey Colwell.

Ghailani's war crime charges were dropped by the Pentagon in May 2009 so he could face a civilian trial in New York City. He was the first Guantánamo Bay detainee selected for civilian trial. He was flown to New York on June 9, 2009, to face charges in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Abdul Ghani: currency counterfeiter associated with Ramzi Yusuf arrested March 21, 1995, in Pakistan.

Abdul Ghani: seen in a green Toyota minivan fleeing the scene of Jemaah Islamiyah's October 1, 2005, triple suicide bombings at Bali restaurants that killed 25 and injured 100.

Usman Ghani: ethnic Pashtun, age 26, from the Northwest Frontier Province who fought for the Taliban in Afghanistan. He was arrested in connection with the March 2, 2006, suicide bombing at the U.S. Consulate that killed several people. His trial began on February 22, 2007, in Karachi's central jail. The two defendants in the trial pleaded not guilty. The defendants and the bomber were linked with the banned Pakistani Jaish-i-Muhammad group. Ghani was represented by attorney Mushtaq Ahmed.

Abolghassen Ghassemian: unemployed Iranian dissident, age 42, who was one of 15 Iranians from Sydney who attacked the Iranian Embassy in Australia on April 6, 1992, beating diplomatic staff and injuring three, damaging cars, ransacking files, and setting fires. He was remanded until June 1.

Prosecutors opposed bail. A large number of Iranian passports and $65,000 U.S. dollars in cash were stolen. The defendants each faced up to 10 charges related to attacks on embassy officials and property damage. His student brother, Mahmoud Ghassemian, age 44, was arrested with him.

Mahmoud Ghassemian: Iranian dissident student, age 44, who was one of 15 Iranians from Sydney who attacked the Iranian Embassy in Australia on April 6, 1992, beating diplomatic staff and injuring three, damaging cars, ransacking files, and setting fires. He was remanded until June 1. Prosecutors opposed bail. A large number of Iranian passports and $65,000 U.S. dollars in cash were stolen. The defendants each faced up to 10 charges related to attacks on embassy officials and property damage. His unemployed brother, Abolghassen Ghassemian, age 42, was arrested with him.

Hooshang Ghazalmohammareh: one of 15 Iranian dissidents from Sydney who attacked the Iranian Embassy in Australia on April 6, 1992, beating diplomatic staff and injuring three, damaging cars, ransacking files, and setting fires. He was remanded until June 1. Prosecutors opposed bail. A large number of Iranian passports and $65,000 U.S. dollars in cash were stolen. The defendants each faced up to 10 charges related to attacks on embassy officials and property damage.

Abdullah Ghaznavi: spokesperson in July 2006 for the Pakistani-based Lashkar-i-Taiba Islamic insurgents who denied responsibility for the March 3, 2009, attack on the Sri Lankan cricket team in Lahore, Pakistan.

Ahmed Yaar Ghaznavi: spokesperson for the Islamic Inquilab Mahaz (Front for Islamic Uprising), a little-known group with ties to Lashkar-i-Taiba Kashmiri separatists, after they set off bombs the night of October 29, 2005, at two Indian markets and a bus in New Delhi, killing 59 people and wounding 210.

Fathur Rahman Ghozi: alias Mike. Indonesian bombing expert arrested January 15, 2002, by Philippine authorities. Ghozi was an associate of Amrozi, who set off the two car bombs in Bali on October 12, 2002, that killed 202 people. Ghozi was a former student at an Islamic school in Indonesia run by Baasyir, cofounder of the Jemaah Islamiyah (JI). He had visited Singapore in October 2001 to help with truck bombings, including one against the U.S. Embassy on Napier Road. Police believed he knew Hambali and was behind a series of bombings in Manila on December 30, 2000, that killed 22 and injured 100. On February 19, 2002, prosecutors cited lack of evidence when dismissing charges of illegal possession of firearms and explosives against him. However, they recommended charging him with violating Philippine passport law because he had applied using different names. By March 17, 2002, Philippine police were searching for about four tons of missing commercial explosives he might have stolen and smuggled for international terrorists. He led police to a cache of weapons and 2,200 pounds of explosives buried behind a mosque in General Santos City. The explosives were to be used for an attack in Singapore, probably against the U.S. Embassy. He said he learned explosives-handling techniques at a camp on the Pakistan–Afghanistan border. He said he had been sent to the Philippines several times during the previous five years to establish local contacts and acquire explosives.

On April 18, 2002, he was given a maximum of 12 years for possession of explosives. The next day, he pleaded guilty to forgery and was sentenced to terms of four to six years each on two counts of falsifying documents to obtain Philippine passports. He was also fined 200,000 pesos for illegal possession of explosives. On July 14, 2003, he and two other suspected JI extremists escaped from police intelligence custody in Manila. One of his fellow escapees was Abdulmukim Idris, who was part of an Abu Sayyaf plot to plant a truck bomb on a highway overpass in Manila in 2002.

On October 12, 2003, Philippine police and soldiers shot Ghozi to death in a gun battle in Lanao del Norte Province on Mindanao Island. The fugitives had flagged down a car on a highway in Pigkawayan in North Cotabato, but the car sped away. Ghozi grabbed his colleague's gun and started shooting. He was hit and wounded by police returning fire and was pronounced dead at the hospital.

Ali Ghufron: alias of Mukhlas.

Hassan Ghul: alleged to have worked as a courier for senior al Qaeda operative Khalid Sheikh Muhammad. Ghul, a Pakistani, was arrested in Iraq on January 23, 2004.

Akhtar Hussain Gilani: arrested by the Pakistani Federal Investigation Agency on March 29, 1995, on suspicion of having close contacts with Amal Kasi—who, on January 25, 1993, shot to death several Central Intelligence Agency officers in Langley, Virginia—and Ramzi Yusuf—mastermind of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center.

Sheik Mubarik Ali Gilani: head of Jamaat ul-Fuqra in January 2002. The group had earlier been on the U.S. terrorist list. Journalist Daniel Pearl was investigating this group's links to would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid.

Ranjit Singh Gill: Sikh arrested by the FBI at a gas station in Aberdeen, New Jersey, on May 11, 1987, in connection with the August 10, 1986, assassination in Pune, India, of Gen. A. S. Vaidya, retired commander of the Indian Army, who had been commander in chief when the Indian Army stormed the Golden Temple in Amritsar in June 1984. Gill was wanted by the Indian government on conspiracy charges regarding the murder.

Sukhdial Singh Gill: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. Gill was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and was charged with attempted murder.

Mohammed Alam Gir: variant Alamgir; aliases Salamulla Tippu, Mohammed Salamollah. Leader of three hijackers of a Pakistan International Airlines B720 flying from Karachi to Peshawar on March 2, 1981, and diverted to Kabul, Afghanistan. The hijackers demanded and obtained the release of Gir's father and brother from prison. On March 14, the terrorists surrendered peacefully to Syrian authorities. On March 17, 1981, Pakistan's Federal Investigation Agency filed hijacking charges against Gir. The Karachi city magistrate charged him with absconding from his trial for involvement in kidnapping and threatening to kill Sikander Hayat. The next day, the Karachi magistrate said Gir had trained in Kabul for four months. On March 23, Syria turned down Pakistan's extradition request, stating there was no bilateral extradition treaty. On April 30, Pakistan offered a $20,000 reward for the arrest of Gir. On March 18, Pakistan requested extradition from Kabul. On July 10, 1984, a Kabul news service reported the arrest and execution of Gir, who had been arrested in connection with a March 15, 1983, murder in Kabul.

Lieutenant Colonel Alfred Gom: Nigerian serving with the UN Interim Force in Lebanon who admitted on June 22, 1979, to smuggling weapons from southern Lebanon for the Palestine Liberation Organization. He was one of two UN officers Israeli authorities had arrested on June 16, 1979, after their car smashed into an Israeli car on the Jerusalem highway. Police found two suitcases filled with explosives, ammunition, and three sub-machine guns.

Antonio Gomes da Costa: alias Mau Huno. Leader of the East Timorese Fretilin independence movement arrested by Indonesian troops on April 3, 1993, at his house in Manufasi, 55 kilometers south of Dili, the capital. He was captured with an M-16 automatic weapon.

Brian Gore: Australian Roman Catholic priest charged in the Philippines on February 26, 1983, with the ambush and murder of Pablo Sola, mayor of Kabangkalan, on March 10, 1982.

Alemayehu Gorfe: one of four Ethiopians who, on September 4, 1992, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET555, a B727 flying from Dire Dawa to Addis Ababa, diverting it to Djibouti, where the hijackers surrendered after being told they would be permitted to request exile. The hijackers wanted to flee an undemocratic regime in Ethiopia. Gorfe had been a captain in the former Dergue regime's Eastern Army Zone.

Chisthi Goulam: Pakistani detained in the United States for carrying false documents. He told visiting Italian investigators in June 2002 of a plan to set off a bomb in St. Peter's Basilica. The plan was called off in July 2001.

Joe Gqabi: head of the African National Congress of South Africa office in Salisbury, Zimbabwe, who was shot to death on August 1, 1981, in the front yard of his Ashdown Park home.

Gregorio: on January 18, 2000, National Union for the Total Independence of Angola defectors told the United Nations that Jonas Savimbi had ordered a rebel named Gregorio to shoot down two UN planes on December 26, 1998, and January 2, 1999, killing 23 passengers and crew members in Angola.

Husnain Gul: one of two individuals arrested February 7, 2008, by Pakistani authorities in connection with the December 27, 2007, assassination of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. One was a brother of the suicide bomber.

Mohammed Gulab: Indian who was one of four people detained on January 19, 1999, and charged with involvement in a plot by Osama bin Laden to bomb the U.S. Embassy and two consular offices in Madras and Calcutta. The attacks were to take place before the January 26 anniversary of the Indian constitution. Police recovered two kilograms of RDX explosives and five detonators when the plotters were arrested in Siliguri, West Bengal.

P.S. Guladi: one of three suspected Sikh militants arrested by Nepalese police at Tribhuvan International Airport on May 22, 1985, as they were about to board Indian Airlines Flight 404 bound for New Delhi. Police found they were carrying bombs in transistor radios and suspected they intended to hijack the plane.

Gun Gun: alias of Rusman Gunawan.

Rusman Gunawan: alias Gun Gun. In late June 2004, prosecutors opened the case against Gunawan, age 27 (brother of Hambali, leader of Jemaah Islamiyah), charging him with providing $50,000 to the terrorists behind the August 5, 2003, suicide bombing at Jakarta's Marriott Hotel that killed 16 and injured 149. Gunawan had been a student in Pakistan when his brother asked him to send the money from Amar Baluchi to the planners of the attack via various intermediaries. Gunawan allegedly led Al Ghuraba, a group of militant Indonesian and Malaysian students living in Karachi; several received weapons training. Gunawan was detained on September 22, 2003, in Karachi after his brother was captured in Thailand. Pakistan turned him over to Indonesian authorities along with five other students.

Dante Guro: identified by the Philippine Army as one of four members of the Bangsa Moro Islamic Liberation Organization, a splinter of the Moro National Liberation Front, who, on May 5, 1987, kidnapped two Swiss nationals, Alex Braunwalder of St. Gallen and Jacky Sudan of Fribourg; five Filipino nurses; and three others returning from a general food distribution and medical relief assistance mission for the International Red Cross in Dalaman village, Mulonlo Town, 477 miles southeast of Manila.

Macalinog Guro: leader of four individuals identified by the Philippine Army as members of the Bangsa Moro Islamic Liberation Organization, a splinter of the Moro National Liberation Front, who, on May 5, 1987, kidnapped two Swiss nationals, Alex Braunwalder of St. Gallen and Jacky Sudan of Fribourg; five Filipino nurses; and three others returning from a general food distribution and medical relief assistance mission for the International Red Cross in Dalaman village, Mulonlo Town, 477 miles southeast of Manila. Guro had applied to serve as acting mayor of Butig and demanded a 150,000-peso ransom to cover his application expenses.

Afshan Guru: one of the defendants in the July 2002 trial of a trio from Kashmir accused of aiding the December 13, 2001, Lashkar-i-Taiba attack on the Indian Parliament. They were charged under the new Prevention of Terrorism Act with conspiracy to "threaten the unit, integrity, and sovereignty of India, to strike terror in the people." Guru was convicted on December 16, 2002, of waging war against India and was sentenced to death the next day.

Allan Gutierrez: alias Comrade Tom. Member of the Pampanga operational command of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines named by police on May 18, 1990, as a suspect in the May 13, 1990, NPA murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. He was arrested before the crime took place but was believed to have masterminded the killing.

Renaldo Guzman: one of five New People's Army members arrested in connection with the explosion of three grenades during the April 19, 1981, Easter Sunday mass at the San Pedro Cathedral in Davao City that killed 13 and wounded 177. On April 30, 1981, police said the grenades were supplied by the Moro National Liberation Front.

Yoshima Gyoja: Japanese Red Army (JRA) member arrested August 22, 1975, when he attempted to enter the United States from Canada using a forged voter registration card (purportedly issued by the New York City Board of Election) and another false document. He was deported to Japan on September 1, 1975, and was arrested at Tokyo International Airport by Japanese police on charges of forgery and using forged personal documents. He was alleged to have been a member of the JRA's Operation Translation plan to kidnap Japanese businessmen in West Germany. He had studied in Berlin between September 1972 and January 1973 and then returned to Japan. In April 1974, he went back to West Germany and was last seen a month later in Dusseldorf. It was believed he was attempting to enter the United States to sabotage the visit of Emperor Hirohito scheduled for October 1975.

H

---

Bashar Habib: Iraqi explosives expert trained in Libya who was a leader of the Islamic Preaching Group (Hizb al-Dawa al Islamiyah), which issued a terrorist hit list in late 1995 that included the name of Colin Bell, New Zealand's ambassador to the Philippines.

Mayumi Hachiya: alias Bai Huahui. Name on a fake passport used by a woman arrested December 1, 1987, in Bahrain in connection with the November 30, 1987, explosion on Korean Air Lines 858, a B707 flying from Baghdad via Abu Dhabi to Seoul, that killed 115.

On December 12, 1987, the previously unknown Friends of Mayumi Hachiya in the Middle East warned Bahrain that it would retaliate if it extradited her.

Shinichi Hachiya: name on a fake passport used by a man arrested December 1, 1987, in Bahrain in connection with the November 30, 1987, explosion on Korean Air Lines 858, a B707 flying from Baghdad via Abu Dhabi to Seoul, that killed 115. He was believed to be Akira Miyamoto.

Najee Haded: one of three Pakistanis arrested January 9, 1995, in Malate, Philippines, for making bombs as part of a plan to assassinate the pope. He escaped during the police raid on the sixth floor of an apartment of the Josefa Building.

Wadih el-Hage: born in Lebanon to a Christian family, the Muslim convert studied urban planning in the United States and became a U.S. citizen via marriage. In 1994, he ran Osama bin Laden's Kenyan operations. He returned to the United States in September 1997. The Arlington, Texas, resident lived in a three-bedroom apartment with his wife and seven children at the South Campus Apartments. He drove a 1981 Honda Prelude and 1984 Chevrolet Caprice and had $150 in a checking account. He was earning $1,600 per month as a manager at Lone Star Wheels and Tires.

The FBI arrested el-Hage, age 38, and seized computer disks from his Texas home. Magistrate Judge Leonard Bernikow ordered el-Hage held without bail on charges of lying to the FBI about not knowing Pakistani plotter Mohammed Sadiq Odeh or Abu Ubaidah al Banshiri, a former military commander for bin Laden. El-Hage was well-known to bin Laden's top military commanders, al Banshiri and Abu Hafz el Masry. He told the FBI he did not know that al Banshiri had drowned in a Tanzanian ferry accident in Lake Victoria in May 1996 even though he had traveled to the scene with Haroun Fazil. He was bin Laden's secretary while living in Sudan until 1994 and lived and worked with Fazil while working in the gem business in Kenya until 1997. He helped Odeh obtain an identity card and sent him to Somalia in 1997 for bin Laden. The U.S. State Department announced a two-million-dollar reward for the capture of Fazil, who was charged in the Kenya attack. On September 21, el-Hage was indicted with eight counts of perjury, providing false passports and other assistance to bin Laden loyalists suspected of attacking U.S. and UN forces in Somalia in 1993 and 1994, and providing false passports to bin Laden associates traveling to the Caucasus. During el-Hage's September 23 bail hearing in Manhattan, federal prosecutors said he had once purchased guns in Texas for Mahmud Abouhalima, one of the 1993 World Trade Center bombers, and that he had contacts with El Sayyid Nosair, who helped plan the World Trade Center bombing and who killed Jewish Defense League leader Meir Kahane in 1990.

Prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald suggested that additional charges could be filed against him. Prosecutors believed el-Hage was associated with the suspected murderer of a radical Islamic preacher in Texas in the late 1980s. Bruce McIntyre was named el-Hage's court-appointed attorney. The indictment of el-Hage indicated that al Qaeda operates in Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Yemen, Somalia, Eritrea, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Bosnia, Croatia, Algeria, Tunisia, Lebanon, the Philippines, Tajikistan, Chechnya, Kashmir, Azerbaijan, Kenya, and the United States. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York. He was charged with 224 counts of murder and with training the Somalis. On October 8, he pleaded not guilty.

On June 22, 1999, el-Hage sprang from his chair in the courtroom and rushed U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand, who had refused to publicly read a letter from el-Hage. El-Hage was subdued and handcuffed by U.S. marshals. During the trial, he was one of 15 men charged with conspiracy in the bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Fellow defendant Mohamed Rashed Daoug Ow hail yelled, "God is great" in Arabic. The other defendants—Mamdouh Mahnmud Salim, Mohamed Sadeek Odeh, and Ali Mohamed—were also handcuffed. El-Hage railed against the restrictions placed on him in prison. Each of the defendants had been held in solitary confinement. Sam Schmidt, his other attorney, asked that the letter be made a part of the public record. Judge Sand refused, saying the letter could contain coded messages to fugitives. Sand reaffirmed his decision on June 29 but said the letter could be paraphrased and released by el-Hage's lawyer after federal prosecutors reviewed it.

El-Hage was convicted on May 29, 2001, and was sentenced to life in prison. On November 2, 2005, Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy of the U.S. District Court upheld the 2001 conviction. Attorney Joshua L. Dratel said he would appeal.

Tran Van Hai: one of four hijackers of Air Vietnam 509, a DC3 flying from Ho Chi Minh City to Phu Quoc Island on October 29, 1977. The group shot and killed the flight engineer and radio operator and seriously injured a steward. The plane landed at Thailand's Utapao Airfield, where the hijackers were denied asylum. The hijackers said they were heading for Kota Bharu, Malaysia, but landed at Seletar, Singapore, when the pilot said he was out of fuel. The hijackers requested political asylum. In November, Singapore announced it would try the hijackers and deny the Vietnamese request for extradition, noting that Vietnam was not a party to any of the three international conventions on hijackings and that there was no bilateral extradition treaty. The hijackers faced charges of armed robbery, abduction, wrongful confinement, dishonestly retaining a stolen aircraft, and crimes under the Arms Offenses Act. On December 15, 1977, the four were sentenced to 14 years for possession of arms. Hai was also sentenced to six strokes of the cane for being in the company of Lam Van Tu during the offense. The hijackers apparently wanted to go to the United States or France.

Pervez Salman Haider: on September 18, 1999, Pakistani judge Javed Alam said the Islamic Mujahid Qaumi Movement member would be acquitted and the case dismissed for lack of evidence in the March 8, 1995, murders of U.S. diplomats in Pakistan. However, Haider was not to be released because he was wanted in other criminal cases.

Shamus-ud-Din Haider: military spokesperson for the Jaish-i-Muhammad in Pakistan in February 2002.

Asmal Dansis Hakare: named on March 21, 1994, as one of four suspects in the March 5, 1994, discovery of a truck loaded with a ton of explosives in Thailand. Police believed the suspects had planned assassination attempts against senior members of the U.S., Israeli, Pakistani, and other embassies and that the truck bomb was to be used against the Israeli Embassy.

Mahfuh bin Haji Halimi: one of a group of suspects—17 Jemaah Islamiyah and 1 Moro Islamic Liberation Front—arrested in August 2002 by Singaporean authorities for planning terrorist activities against Western sites. (See also Ab Wahab bin Ahmad.)

Ham Wun-kyong: leader of 72 demonstrators who attacked the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul on May 23, 1985. On October 2, 1985, he was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Hambali: alias of Nurjaman Riduan Isamuddin (see Nurjaman Riduan Isamuddin entry for further information). Key Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) figure in Indonesia arrested in Bangkok on August 14, 2003. On January 28, 2003, Indonesian National Police chief Dai Bachtiar said Hambali provided $35,000 to finance the October 12, 2002, Bali nightclub attacks in which 202 people died; Hambali gave money to Malaysian operative Wan Min Wan Mat, who forwarded the funds to Jemaah Islamiyah operative Mukhlis. On March 11, 2003, the government announced that the August 1, 2000, car bombing of Philippine ambassador Leonides Caday's home in Jakarta was carried out by the same JI terrorists accused in the Bali blasts. The government said the attack was ordered by Hambali in July 2000 during a meeting in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. On April 4, 2007, Hambali told a U.S. military commission at Guantánamo Bay that he had no al Qaeda links and was not involved in the Bali nightclub bombings.

Isaac Hamdi: alias Osman Hussein; variant Hussein Osman. Briton of Somali origin (other reports said Ethiopian origin), age 27, suspected in the Shepherd's Bush attack in West London. Other Ethiopians throughout Europe helped him escape immediately after the bombing. Police tracked his cell phone. He had been in London, Paris, Milan, and Rome. His brother (or brother-in-law) Ramzi Hamdi, age 34, runs a jewelry store near the central train station and, along with Isaac, was detained by police in Rome on July 29, 2005, in connection with the failed copycat bombings of the London subway system on July 21, 2005. Another brother was detained later; the brothers were held for possession of false documents and other charges. Isaac Hamdi had lived in Italy from 1991 to 1996 and speaks fluent Italian. He obtained false Somali documents and used the name Osman Hussein to obtain U.K. citizenship.

On July 31, Hamdi told Italian police the attacks were not intended to harm anyone—failing to mention the photo of nails attached to a bomb that ran in the international media—but rather to draw attention to the war in Iraq. He claimed the group was not linked to al Qaeda. He was represented by attorney Antoinetta Sonessa. Italian police said he was probably a member of a group of amateurs rather than part of an Islamist cell. The United Kingdom requested extradition, and an Italian court approved it on August 17. Hamdi appealed the ruling on August 26. On September 13, a lawyer for the British government said Hamdi would be extradited within 10 days after an Italian court rejected his appeal. On September 22, British police arrested him, and he was charged with attempted murder, conspiracy to murder, and explosives offenses.

In mid-2007, he was found guilty of conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He will be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Abdul Hamid: alias Turki. Afghan leader of the Kashmiri rebels of the Al-Faran (Jungle Warriors) Muslim group that kidnapped five foreign tourists in the Indian Himalayas on July 4, 1995. He was killed in a clash with Indian authorities on December 4, 1995, in southern Anantnag District.

Fazlulah Hamidi: Pakistani from Baluchistan and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. He was charged under the Maintenance of Public Order Act.

Dion Hamilton: British citizen and director of the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services, Hamilton was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement's December 6, 1982, sabotage of a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

Finlay Dean Hamilton: British director of a shipping firm in Beira sentenced to 20 years by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) sabotage of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack. Hamilton was also convicted of concealing at his Beira home four pistols, three grenades, and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Abu Hamza: Yemeni who was one of three al Qaeda suspects arrested by Pakistani authorities on January 9, 2003, after a gun battle in Karachi in which one of the terrorists threw a grenade. Police seized rifles; grenades; street maps of Karachi, Hyderabad, and Lahore; a satellite telephone; a laptop computer; suspicious documents; literature calling for a holy war; and $30,000 in cash from the terrorists' house. Two of the detainees claimed to be Abu Hamza of Yemen and Abu Umar of Egypt. Abu Umar's wife and three children were also detained. Seven other suspects were later released; they were all family members of Sabiha Shahid, a leader of the Jamaat-e-Islami party who lived on the first floor. Police said Hamza and Umar appeared to have entered Pakistan from Afghanistan in 2002.

Han Chae-ik: demonstrator from Chosun University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea.

Han Fengying: wife of Yang Mingde, who, on September 30, 1993, hijacked Sichuan Airlines Aircraft 2625, a TU-154 flying from Jinan to Guangzhou, and diverted it to Taiwan's Taoyuan Airport, where he requested political asylum for himself, his wife, and his son, who had accompanied him. She said that she vaguely knew of his plans but that she fell asleep during the flight. On November 9, 1993, the couple was indicted on charges of violating Taiwan's Civil Aviation Law. The prosecution suggested an eight-year sentence. On January 5, 1994, she was sentenced by the Taoyuan District Court to six years in prison. Their child was placed in an orphanage. The couple was to be repatriated back to the mainland after serving their sentences.

Han Ki-won: senior in the Department of Food Engineering at Yonsei University and one of five students charged by Seoul police on February 25, 1988, with breaking into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul, smashing three large glass windows, and illegally using explosives in an attack on February 24, 1988, in which they used 30 Molotov cocktails. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths and were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day.

Han Ok-pun: sophomore at Ewha Women's University and one of five students charged by Seoul police February 25, 1988, with breaking into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul, smashing three large glass windows, and illegally using explosives in an attack on February 24, 1988, in which they used 30 Molotov cocktails. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths and were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day.

Han Shuxue: one of two hijackers of a China Northern Airlines MD82 on the Changchun–Fuzhou route that was diverted to Taiwan on November 12, 1993. (It was hijacked again on December 8, 1993, on its Qingdao–Fuzhou run.) On January 4, 1994, Taiwan prosecutors indicted Shuxue for violating Taiwan’s aviation law. He was a hospital doctor who had been divorced twice and had incurred heavy debts, according to Xinhua.

Mohammed Haneef: Indian graduate of Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences in Bangalore in 2002 and doctor in northwest England’s Halton Hospital until 2005. Haneef was scheduled to move to the Gold Coast Hospital in Australia but was arrested in Brisbane. On July 14, Australian police charged him with providing support to a terrorist organization in connection with the June 29, 2007, bombing of a London disco and the June 30, 2007, ramming of a flaming SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow Airport in Scotland. He allegedly gave terrorists Sabeel and Kafeel Ahmed a cell phone SIM card registered in his name. He was represented by attorney Stephen Keim. He was granted bail on July 16 after the judge said the prosecutors had not established his links to a terrorist group. On July 27, Australia’s chief prosecutor dropped the charges, saying it was a mistake to have linked him to the bombings. His Australian work visa remained cancelled. The next day, he flew to India. On August 21, an Australian court ruled that the immigration minister had incorrectly revoked the visa.

Chris Hani: South African Communist Party general secretary and leader of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa’s military arm, Umkhonto we Sizwe (Spear of the Nation, known as MK) who was assassinated on April 10, 1993 (Easter Sunday), while parking his car in his driveway in the racially mixed Johannesburg suburb of Boksburg. Hani, age 50, had received numerous death threats and had survived two previous assassination attempts. The ANC was suspected of numerous terrorist attacks. He was seen as a possible successor to Nelson Mandela.

Hani had been a member of MK since the early 1960s. In 1982, he became MK’s deputy commander and was named chief of staff in 1987. When the ban on the ANC was lifted in 1990, he was viewed as the leader of the militant wing. In 1991, he replaced the ailing Joe Slovo as South African Communist Party (SACP) secretary general, leading a group dominated by white Jewish intellectuals.

Mohammad Hanif: one of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Mohammed Hanif: one of three members of the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin al-Almi arrested July 8, 2002, by Pakistani authorities in connection with the June 14, 2002, car bombing of the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 and injured 51. Authorities also seized a large quantity of explosives and weapons. Two men publicly admitted their guilt and said the bomb was built to kill Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. The duo, identified as Mohammed Imran, the group’s leader, and Mohammed Hanif, his deputy, said they tried to set off the bomb near the president’s motorcade in Karachi in April, but the remote control failed. The trio—Imran, Hanif, and Ashraf—were arraigned August 3 in the Anti-Terrorism Court on charges of conspiracy, terrorism, attempted murder, and use of a lethal explosive. The terrorism charge carries the death penalty. The trio and Waseem Akhtar, a Pakistan Rangers paramilitary police member, were also arraigned on charges of plotting to kill Musharraf. On April 14, 2003, an antiterrorist court inside the Karachi central jail sentenced Hanif and Imran to death for the bombing. Two others received life sentences; a fifth was acquitted. The defense said it would appeal.

Abubakar Hapilon: alias of Isnilon Totoni Hapilon.

Isnilon Totoni Hapilon: aliases Abubakar Hapilon, Amah Hi Omar, Abu Omar, Abubakar, Bakkal, Abu Musab. Deputy chief of Abu Sayyaf Group with warrants out for his arrest in connection with kidnapping. On May 29, 2002, the United States announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture. On July 23, 2002, he was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in a May 27, 2001, attack in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, hostage taking, and three counts of hostage taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition whenever they were apprehended. Hapilon was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006. He was born on March 18, 1966, in Lantawan, Basilan, Philippines, weighs 120 pounds, and is circa five feet six inches tall.

Amin Al-Haq: alias Muhammad Amin. Pakistani who served as Osama bin Laden's security coordinator. The United States ordered his assets frozen on October 12, 2001.

Anwar ul-Haq: ethnic Pashtun, age 27, from the North West Frontier Province who fought for the Taliban in Afghanistan. He was arrested in connection with the March 2, 2006, suicide bombing at the U.S. Consulate that killed several people. His trial began February 22, 2007, in Karachi's central jail. The two defendants pleaded not guilty. The defendants and the bomber were linked with the banned Pakistani Jaish-i-Muhammad group. Ul-Haq was believed to be the main logistics organizer. He stood as a lookout and signaled bomber Raja Tahir by cell phone. Ul-Haq was represented by attorney Mohammed Ilyas Khan.

Kohi Hara: arrested by Japanese police on July 6, 1995, after admitting he sprayed tear gas at two Yokohama rail stations on July 2, 1995, and a train on April 19, 1995, affecting 571 people. He was upset over romantic and workplace problems. Police did not believe he was involved with Aum Shin Rikyo but noted he had been a member of a criminal organization. Aum members were involved with similar attacks during that period.

Suchat Harabi: variant Suchart Herabi 'Abdallah. Surrendered to police March 23, 1990, and denied charges of involvement in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok. He was detained and refused bail. Harabi had served five years in jail for a prior robbery. A Thai Muslim living in Pattani, he allegedly helped plan the murders. His brothers, Mat Herabi 'Abbas and Suvit Kulik Herabi, were also sought regarding the attack. He was a Thai citizen; his father came from an Arab country and had married a Thai woman. On June 21, 1990, the Bangkok Public Prosecution Department charged Harabi with conspiring to murder the victims. The prosecutor said Harabi identified the targets for his accomplices to shoot. On July 17, 1990, the Bangkok Criminal Court announced he would be tried in secret on charges of premeditated murder. The first hearing was postponed to September 4 and 18 because a witness remained abroad. In July 1991, he was acquitted because of weak police evidence and post office records showing he was in the south when the murders took place in Bangkok.

Harminder Singh Harchandwala: leader of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi that was diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. On January 20, 1986, he was sentenced to death in Lahore but was given a stay of execution on February 13, 1986. He was identified as a member of the outlawed All-India Sikh Student Federation who had been trained in commando camps in Pakistan.

Hermawan Harjanto: would-be hijacker of a Merpati Nusantara Airlines Vickers Viscount flying from Surabaya to Jakarta, Indonesia, on April 5, 1972. The hijacker waved a grenade to divert the plane to Yogyakarta, Java. The hijacker demanded 20 million rupiahs and a parachute. He was shot and killed by the pilot while negotiating.

Christiaan Harmse: one of two white mine workers arrested at a roadblock outside the mining town of Mooiooi. Harmse, age 26, was charged with the January 5, 1997, bombing of a mosque, post office, and store in Rustenburg, South Africa, that injured a Sudanese citizen and a South African. Explosives were found in the defendants' car and in the home of one of the men. The Boere Aanstonds Troep claimed credit.

Hasan: his release from a Kenyan jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Hasan: arrested October 9, 2005, by Indonesian authorities, the construction worker shared a rented house with one of the three Jemaah Islamiyah suicide bombers who, on October 1, 2005, attacked Bali restaurants, killing 25 and injuring 100. He had left Bali three days before the bombings, returning to his village in Java.

Ahmad Hasan: on September 4, 2005, an Indonesian court sentenced the Indonesian Muslim extremist to death for helping build the bomb used in the September 9, 2004, suicide car bombing of the Australian Embassy in which 10 Indonesians died.

Khwaja Mahmood Hasan: one of 11 members of a "Virginia jihad network" named in a 42-count federal indictment on June 25, 2003, for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. By August 25, Hasan, age 27, had pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and to discharging a firearm in relation to a crime of violence. On November 7, 2003, Hasan received 11 years and 3 months.

On February 24, 2006, U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema reduced the sentences of two members of the Virginia jihad network—Khwaja Mahmood Hasan and Yong Ki Kwon—who had cooperated in the investigation. Prosecutors asked her to cut Hasan's sentence to 45 months. Brinkema gave him 37 months. With time served and good behavior, Hasan was due to be released shortly after the new sentence was announced. Hasan was represented by attorney Thomas Abbenante. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Raza Khurshid Hashemi: one of six Pakistanis arrested December 29, 1995, in the Philippines. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17, 1996, for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She said testimony against Hashemi appeared faked and ordered his release.

Razi Hashi: one of six Pakistanis arrested December 29, 1995, in the Philippines. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17, 1996, for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She said testimony against Hashi appeared faked and ordered his release.

Salamat Hashim: chairman of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) of the Philippines. He was believed to be in Egypt as of July 2000. On July 13, 2003, Hashim, who had renounced terrorism on behalf of the MILF and agreed to resume peace talks, died of a heart ailment and an ulcer and was buried in Butig in Lanao del Sur Province.

Satoru Hashimoto: the Tokyo District Public Prosecutor's Office filed charges against Hashimoto on October 13, 1995, for the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto, age 33; his wife Satoko, age 29; and their son Tatsuhiko, age 1. On July 2, 1995, Hashimoto was the driver of a vehicle involved in spraying cyanide gas into underground rail stations in Yokohama. He was a member of Aum's Home Affairs Ministry. On July 25, 2000, a Japanese court sentenced him to death for the subway attack and for killing an attorney.

Raza Begam Hashmi: one of six Pakistani passport holders who were among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati.

Syed Hashmi: alias Fahad. A U.S. citizen, age 26, wanted in the United States on charges of procuring military equipment for al Qaeda, Hashmi was arrested June 6, 2006, by Heathrow Airport police as he attempted to board a flight to Pakistan. He was ordered held without bail in a London court, but he refused extradition. He had lived in the United Kingdom since 2003 on a student visa that later expired. He had been indicted May 24 in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York and charged with four counts of providing material support to al Qaeda in connection with a conspiracy that began in January 2004 and continued through May 2006. He provided military gear to a third group that transferred the supplies to Pakistan for al Qaeda operatives fighting U.S. troops in Afghanistan. He was scheduled to appear in a London court on June 15. In March 2007, the British High Court rejected his claim that the U.S. warrants were flawed. He was extradited to the United States on May 25, 2007, and appeared in federal court the next day. He was the first terrorist suspect extradited to the United States by the United Kingdom. Arraignment was scheduled for May 30, 2007, before U.S. District Judge Loretta A. Preska. He faced 50 years in prison on the three counts.

Mansur Hasnain: aliases Imtiaz Siddique, Hyder, Haider Ali Faruqi, Mansur Hussain. Involved in a 1999 Indian air hijacking, police believe he lured Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl to his kidnapping and murder on January 23, 2002. Police raided the Hasnain residence in Punjab's Toba Tek Singh town and detained some of his relatives.

Adouani Hamouda Ben Hassan: sentenced to death on March 24, 1991, by the Supreme Court in Djibouti after he admitted he was behind the March 18, 1987, bombing of the Historil Restaurant that killed 12 and injured 40. His lawyer said the conspiracy was committed for the Palestinian cause. He was given two months to appeal. If successful, the death sentence would be commuted to life in prison.

Ezzedine Hassan: one of two members of the Sudanese security services who, on March 24, 1996, hijacked Sudanese Airways Flight 214, an Airbus 320 flying from Khartoum to Port Sudan and Jeddah. They forced the pilot to land at Asmara, Eritrea, where the duo surrendered. They wanted to go to Jeddah. One hijacker was a former officer in the Sudan Army who had led a foiled coup attempt. The hijackers requested political asylum. Sudan requested extradition.

Jafar Ibrahim Hassan: one of two members of the Sudanese security services who, on March 24, 1996, hijacked Sudanese Airways Flight 214, an Airbus 320 flying from Khartoum to Port Sudan and Jeddah. They forced the pilot to land at Asmara, Eritrea, where the duo surrendered. They wanted to go to Jeddah. One hijacker was a former officer in the Sudan Army who had led a foiled coup attempt. The hijackers requested political asylum. Sudan requested extradition.

Naveed Ul Hassan: on June 29, 2002, Pakistan announced Hassan was wanted in connection with the June 14, 2002, truck bombing of the U.S. Consulate that killed 14 Pakistanis and injured 51 others. He was arrested November 17, 2004, near Pakistan's main border checkpoint with India at Wagah, near Lahore, in connection with the Consulate bombing and a small New Year's (2002–2003) blast that wounded nine people in Karachi.

Safwat Hassan: Egyptian Islamic Group terrorist arrested following the failed June 26, 1995, assassination attempt against Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Abdel Raouf Hawas: Sudanese student arrested, along with one other man, by Indian police on June 14, 2001, for planning a car bomb attack on the U.S. Embassy. The plan, according to Deputy Police Commissioner Ashok Chand, was two years in the making. The two men were charged with possession of 13 pounds of explosives, detonators, and timers. Hawas said he was acting on orders from Abdul Rehman Al Safani, a Yemeni man with ties to Osama bin Laden. Abbas Hussain Sheikh and Mohammed Arshad, both Indians, were arrested on charges of helping Hawas. Hawas said the explosives and detonators found in the car had been provided by two Sudanese Embassy diplomats—the chargé d'affaires and the consul, the embassy's senior intelligence agent. Hawas told the police that Safani worked for bin Laden. On August 14, Indian investigators in a New Delhi city court charged Osama bin Laden and five others with planning to bomb the embassy. Four of the conspirators were held in a New Delhi jail.

Abdul Rauf Hawash: Sudanese arrested in India on June 15, 2001, for plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi under Osama bin Laden's orders.

Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi: Saudi al Qaeda 9/11 paymaster who shipped credit and ATM cards to Fayez Ahmed in Florida before the attack. Some prosecutors believed al-Hawsawi was Mustafa Muhammad Ahmad, alias Shaykh Saiid, Osama bin Laden's financial chief. He was arrested in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, on March 1, 2003, in a safe house with Khalid Sheik Mohammed. He was an unindicted coconspirator in the Zacarias Moussaoui case and was named in the false statements case against Ali S. Marri, a Qatari who the FBI said gathered information in his Peoria, Illinois, apartment about dangerous chemicals and the U.S. infrastructure. At Moussaoui's trial, al-Hawsawi claimed to have seen Moussaoui at an al Qaeda guesthouse in Kandahar in early 2001. When arrested, al-Hawsawi claimed to be a Somali.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Abli Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo Bay who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali (alias Ammar al-Baluchi), Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash (alias Khallad). The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. Authorities said al-Hawsawi provided the 9/11 hijackers with money, Western clothing, traveler's checks, and credit cards. At his June 5, 2008, arraignment on capital charges before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself. Major Jon Jackson, an army attorney, said his client felt pressured by fellow defendant Khalid Sheikh Muhammad and asked that al-Hawsawi's case be separated. The formal opening of the trial of the six defendants was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Kiyohide Hayakawa: Aum Shin Rikyo construction minister and No. 2 in the cult, Hayakawa was arrested by Japanese police on April 19, 1995, for attempts to purchase six Russian tanks. He had traveled to Russia in November 1993. Aum purchased a MIL-17 helicopter built in the Tartar region of Russia at a cost of 78 million yen. Hayakawa was arrested on suspicion of the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto, age 33; his wife Satoko, age 29; and their son Tatsuhiko, age 1.

Dr. Ikuo Hayashi: chief of Aum Shin Rikyo's treatment ministry, he conducted plastic surgery on fellow Aum member Takeshi Matsumoto and provided him one million yen. Hayashi was arrested by Japanese police on April 8, 1995, for hiding an Aum suspect. On March 26, 1996, he admitted he had released sarin into the subway. Police suspected him of injecting drugs into a kidnap victim. He was convicted and sentenced to life in prison on May 26, 1998, for the Aum Shin Rikyo sarin gas attack of March 20, 1995.

Shoji Hayashi: alias of Yoshimi Tanaka.

Tasuo Hayashi: variant Yasuo Hayashi. On February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for Hayashi in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting. He and a female Aum member were arrested on murder charges in December 1996 on the southern island of Ishigakijima. On December 12, 1996, he led Japanese police to a bottle containing 40 milliliters of VX nerve gas on a riverbank in Kodaira, a western Tokyo suburb. On June 29, 2000, the Tokyo District Court sentenced him to death for releasing sarin gas from three plastic bags into the Tokyo subway. He was directly responsible for the deaths of eight people on a commuter train.

Yasuo Hayashi: variant of Tasuo Hayashi.

Hamid Hayat: on May 29, 2005, Hamid Hayat's Pakistan–South Korea–San Francisco flight was diverted to Japan when his name appeared on the no-fly list. The FBI investigated and returned the Hayat and his father to the United States, where a polygraph raised additional questions. On June 5, the FBI arrested Hamid, age 23, and his Pakistani American father, Umer Hayat, age 45, an ice cream truck driver from Lodi, California, after Hamid acknowledged attending an al Qaeda camp in Pakistan for six months in 2003 to 2004. His father admitted touring several militant camps in Pakistan and paying the airfare and expenses for his son's training at the Tamal camp near Rawalpindi. The leader of the camp was a close family friend, Maulana Fazlur Rehman. Hamid trained in weapons, explosives, and hand-to-hand combat and volunteered to attack U.S. supermarkets and hospitals. The Hayats were charged with making false statements to the FBI. Two Muslim clerics—Mohammed Adil Khan and Shabbir Ahmed—from the San Joaquin Valley, California, farming area were also detained on immigration charges in connection with the case. Khan is affiliated with the Farooqia Islamic Center outside Lodi. Ahmed is imam at the nearby Lodi Muslim Mosque.

The Hayats were indicted June 16 in the U.S. District Court in Sacramento on charges of lying to FBI investigators. Hamid was charged with two counts of making false statements to agents on June 3 and 4; his father faced one count. Each count has an eight-year prison term. They pleaded not guilty and were held without bond. On July 15, the duo agreed to be deported to Pakistan on immigration violations; other charges were dropped.

On September 22, Hamid Hayat was indicted on charges of having "intended, upon receipt of orders from other individuals, to wage jihad in the United States." He was accused of providing support and resources for carrying out terrorist acts from March 2003 until he was arrested. He faced 39 years in prison. He was represented by attorney Wazhma Mojaddidi.

On January 27, 2006, prosecutors added a charge of making a false statement during questioning to the charges Hamid was facing.

The case began in March 2006. The prosecution's star witness was Naseem Khan, age 32, a Pakistani immigrant who spoke Pashto and Urdu and worked in a convenience store. He testified that Hamid had attended a training camp Ayman al-Zawahiri had passed through in 1998 or 1999, raising doubts about Khan's credibility. Khan had also told the FBI in 2001 that he had seen Abdelkarim Hussein Mohamed al-Nasser, a suspect in a 1996 bombing in Saudi Arabia, in Lodi, as well as Ahmed Mohammed Hamed Ali, a suspect in the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, in Stockton, California, in 1999.

On April 25, 2006, the federal jury in Sacramento convicted Hamid Hayat on one count of providing material support to terrorists and three counts of lying to the FBI. He faced a minimum sentence of 30 years and a maximum of 39 years. On September 10, 2007, Hamid was sentenced to 24 years in a federal prison.

Umer Hayat: on June 5, 2005, the FBI arrested Pakistani American Umer Hayat, age 45, an ice cream truck driver from Lodi, California, and his son, Hamid Hayat, age 23, after Hamid acknowledged attending an al Qaeda camp in Pakistan for six months in 2003 to 2004. Hamid trained in weapons, explosives, and hand-to-hand combat and volunteered to attack U.S. supermarkets and hospitals. The Hayats were charged with making false statements to the FBI. Two Muslim clerics—Mohammed Adil Khan and Shabbir Ahmed—from the San Joaquin Valley, California, farming area were also detained on immigration charges in connection with the case. Ahmed is imam at the nearby Lodi Muslim Mosque. Khan is affiliated with the Farooqia Islamic Center outside Lodi.

On May 29, Hamid returned from Pakistan on a flight from South Korea to San Francisco. His name appeared on the no-fly list. The plane was diverted to Japan, and he was interviewed by the FBI. Once he arrived in the United States, a polygraph indicated deception. His father admitted touring several militant camps in Pakistan and paying the airfare and expenses for his son's training at the Tamal camp near Rawalpindi. The leader of the camp was a close family friend, Maulana Fazlur Rehman.

The two were indicted June 16 in the U.S. District Court in Sacramento on charges of lying to FBI investigators. Hamid was charged with two counts of making false statements to agents on June 3 and 4; his father faced one count. Each count has an eight-year prison term. They pleaded not guilty and were held without bond. On July 15, the duo agreed to be deported to Pakistan on immigration violations; other charges were dropped. The elder Hayat faced 16 years in prison.

The case began in March 2006. The prosecution's star witness was Naseem Khan, age 32, a Pakistani immigrant who spoke Pashto and Urdu and worked in a convenience store. He testified that Hamid he had attended a training camp Ayman al-Zawahiri had passed through in 1998 or 1999, raising doubts about Khan's credibility. Khan had also told the FBI in 2001 that he had seen Abdelkarim Hussein Mohamed al-Nasser, a suspect in a 1996 bombing in Saudi Arabia, in Lodi, as well as and Ahmed Mohammed Hamed Ali, a suspect in the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, in Stockton, California, in 1999.

On April 25, 2006, a separate jury deadlocked on Umer's case, forcing District Judge Garland E. Burrell Jr. to declare a mistrial. A retrial was scheduled for June 5, but, on May 31, 2006, Umer pleaded guilty to lying to customs agents about the $28,000 he and family members were carrying on a trip out of the country in 2003. In return, he would not be retried on charges of lying to the FBI about his son's attendance at a terrorist training camp. Prosecutors would also recommend that he serve no more jail time. He was scheduled for sentencing on August 18.

On August 25, 2006, Umer was sentenced to time served plus 36 months of supervised release. The next day, an uncle and cousin, both U.S. citizens, were barred from reentering the United States after an extended stay in Pakistan until they answered FBI questions.

Nicholas Francis Henry Heath: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress's firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send him to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Ka Hector: alias of Alfredo de Leon.

David William Hedges: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress's firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send him to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Mahfudh Ashur Hemed: Kenyan accused of assisting Fazul Abdullah Mohammed, who was believed to have organized the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Hemed's attorney said he and his wife, Lutfiya Abubakar, were held without sufficient evidence.

Rashid Salehe Hemed: Tanzanian charged by the Tanzanian courts with murdering 11 people and injuring 70 in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam. He was to stand trial in Tanzania. On April 4, 2000, prosecutors reduced charges against Hemed to a maximum penalty of 14 years in prison on one count of conspiracy to commit murder.

On April 14, 2000, Tanzania's High Court ordered him tried on a charge of conspiracy to murder. On July 18, 2000, the High Court released him on $25,000 bail. Hemed also put up three surety bonds worth $62,500. He was told to remain in Dar es Salaam. Police had found samples of substances used to prepare the bomb on his clothes. He was also accused of housing some of the suspects. On December 22, 2004, the Tanzanian High Court freed Hemed, age 34, who had been arrested in September 1998 on 15 counts of helping carry out the bombing. Judge Emilian Mushi ruled there was not enough evidence to convict him, even though a bomb detonator was discovered in his house and Hemed admitted knowing people—including Khalfan Khamis Mohamed, who was convicted in New York—involved in the bombing. In February 2004, three court assessors advised that the charges were based on mere suspicion.

Suleiman Abdalla Salim Hemed: suspect in the August 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania detained by a Somali militia in Mogadishu in March 2003.

David M. Hicks: Australian cowboy and kangaroo skinner, age 23, who spent 5½ years at the Guantánamo Bay military prison for Taliban connections. He was captured in Afghanistan in 2001.

On March 1, 2007, the Pentagon announced Hicks would face two counts of providing material support for terrorism. The charges were reduced from the original conspiracy to commit murder, attempted murder, and aiding the enemy. The ninth-grade dropout was the first individual tried under the Military Commissions Act of 2006 and the first person convicted at Guantánamo. The charges indicated he had spent 1999 through 2001 working and training with extremists in the Balkans, Pakistan, and Afghanistan before joining al Qaeda. He had joined the Kosovo Liberation Army and Lashkar-i-Taiba after converting to Islam. He had 20 conversations with Osama bin Laden and was at several al Qaeda training camps in Afghanistan. He was alleged to have collected intelligence on the U.S. Embassy in Kabul in 2001. After 9/11, he went to Kandahar, where he was given an AK-47; he also guarded a tank, surveilled the empty U.S. Embassy, and fought U.S. forces. He later went to Kunduz and joined al Qaeda and the Taliban “on the frontline outside the city for two hours” before trying to take a taxi to Pakistan.

He was represented by military attorney U.S. Marine Corps Maj. Michael Mori and civilian Australian attorney David H. B. McLeod. A nascent Bring David Hicks Home movement put pressure on the Australian prime minister to request extradition and a local trial. Hicks also had petitioned for British citizenship. His hearing was scheduled for March 26, and he was expected to plead not guilty. Two of his attorneys—civilians Rebecca Snyder and Joshua Dratel—were barred from representing him, and his final representative, Major Mori, could not obtain a continuance to further prepare. Hicks abided by a plea agreement, using an Alford plea to say that while he did not admit guilt, he accepted that prosecutors had enough evidence to convict him of material support of terrorism. He showed little emotion over the fact that he would serve any sentence in an Australian prison. He faced a life term, but the full military commission’s jury panel would consider his plea. The commission deliberated for two hours before sentencing him to seven years in prison on top of the five he had already spent in Guantánamo. On March 30, the presiding officer of the military commission announced that a pretrial agreement limited Hicks’s sentence to nine months and that he would be sent to an Australian prison by May 29 and released on December 30, just after the Australian elections. Under the terms of the plea agreement, which was negotiated without the prosecution team’s input, Hicks was given a yearlong gag order, would not allege illegal treatment, and waived any appeal. He arrived in Australia on May 20, 2007. He was to serve in isolation at Yatala Labor Prison, a maximum-security facility near Adelaide.

On September 10, 2007, USA Today reported that Hicks had renounced Islam, was working on a high school diploma, and was exploring attending college. He was released from prison on December 29, 2007. Australian law barred him from profiting from any media deal. Thirty media organizations were vying for his biography.

Amad al-Hidai: one of three Iraqi terrorists who, according to Seoul police on March 4, 1992, had been ordered to attack targets in South Korea on the eve of El Al flights to South Korea.

Toshikiko Hidaka: escaped arrest when his two Japanese Red Army colleagues, Jun Nishikawa and Kazuo Tohira, were arrested in Stockholm on March 5, 1975, while taking photographs and making sketches of a building housing the embassies of Lebanon, Austria, and four other countries. Hidaka was placed on an international wanted list. He committed suicide after being arrested in Jordan in 1975 for using a false passport.

Hidekichi: Japanese later arrested as one of two people who fired 10 revolver shots into the Tokyo office of the pro-Pyongyang General Association of Korean Residents in Japan on November 18, 1983, to protest the October 9, 1983, bomb explosion in Rangoon that was blamed on the North Korean government.

Toshiaki Higashitani: one of three Maruseido members who attacked the U.S. consulate in Fukuoka and set off an incendiary device on November 22, 1974. On February 25, 1976, the Fukuoka District Court sentenced the former university student to six years.

Alex Hildebrant: individual who attempted to divert a Trans-Australia Electra L188 flying from Sydney to Brisbane to Singapore. He was sentenced to seven years.

Ahmad Ikbal al-Hindi: Pakistani resident of Sur Bahir identified as the leader of a Muslim Brotherhood plot to murder Bashir Baghruti, communist leader in Judaea and Samaria, and knife a Jew after he prayed at the Western Wall. The plot was foiled on August 11, 1981. Al-Hindi’s father was a janitor in the Al-Aqsa Mosque on the Temple Mount.

Francisco Hipolito: charged on May 20, 1990, for harboring a criminal when police discovered

Gabriel Warner—named by police as a planner of the May 13, 1990, New People's Army of the Philippines murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base—inside her home.

Musa Abdul Hir: alias of Zulkifli bin Hir.

Zulkifli Hir: variant of Zulkifli bin Hir.

Zulkifli Abdul Hir: variant of Zulkifli bin Hir.

Zulkifli bin Hir: variants Zulkifli, Zulkifli Hir, Zulkifli Abdul Hir, Zulkifli bin Abdul Hir, Abdul Hir bin Zulkifli; aliases Musa Abdul Hir, Musa, Marwan, Musa Abdul. Malaysian U.S.-trained engineer who claimed to have been born on either January 5, 1966, or October 10, 1966, in Muar, Johor, Malaysia, and believed to be the head of the Kumpulun Mujahidin Malaysia terrorist organization and a member of Jemaah Islamiyah (JI)'s central command. In 2002, he was the Indonesian head of JI in the Philippines. Since August 2003, he has been in the Philippines, where he was believed to have conducted bomb-making training for Abu Sayyaf. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his arrest and conviction.

Zulkifli bin Abdul Hir: variant of Zulkifli bin Hir.

Yoshi Hirano: suspected member of the Japanese Red Army detained on August 10, 1988, in the Philippines after Shiuharo Inoye claimed Hirano had taken 4.5 million pesos from him. Hirano claimed U.S. citizenship but lacked supporting documentation.

Makuto Hirata: on February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for Hirata in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

Kenichi Hirose: Aum Shin Rikyo member who pleaded guilty on December 11, 1995, to releasing sarin into the Tokyo subway system on March 30, 1995, and begged forgiveness. He was charged with murder and attempted murder.

Sensui Hiroshi: Japanese Red Army member released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977.

Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan: former army lieutenant colonel and leader of the Reform the Armed Forces Movement rebel group in the Philippines in 1987. He was arrested in December 1987 for staging a bloody failed coup attempt against the Aquino government. He had threatened an attack against the December 14–16, 1987, Association of Southeast Asian Nations summit. In August 1990, he ordered the resumption of "tactical operations" against the Corazon Aquino government. By August 25, 1990, 21 bombs had exploded.

Hong Yang-kyon: senior student at Hanyang University and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Abu Hoshier: variants Abu Ghoser, Abu Ghosher, Khodor Abu Hoshar. Received a copy of Encyclopedia Jihad, a military training manual with bomb specifications and advice for insurgents, from Khalil Deek, an al Qaeda member arrested in Pakistan in December 1999. The Jordanian was detained in Jordan on December 13, 1999, as a member of a 28-person plot to attack Israelis, Americans, and other Christian tourists. He was an anti-Soviet 1980's Afghan War veteran who joined Muhammad's Army, a radical Islamic group that mounted terrorist attacks in Jordan in the 1980s. After Hoshier's release from prison in Jordan in 1993, he moved to Yemen, where he contacted Egypt's Islamic Jihad. On September 18, 2000, the military court sentenced him to death for the plot but acquitted him on charges of links to Osama bin Laden.

Michael Howard: arrested in connection with the January 11, 1988, car bombing of the home of three members of the African National Congress of South Africa in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo.

Hsu Ta-Chun: variant of Chi Ta-qian.

Johnny and Luther Htoo: the Htoo twins, age 12, were leaders of a Christian breakaway faction of Karen National Union rebels called God's Army. On the eve of Thai Army Day, January 24, 2000, the Burmese group hijacked a bus to Ratchaburi, 75 miles west of Bangkok, and infiltrated a sprawling provincial hospital dressed as medical personnel. They then relayed intelligence to the larger strike force, took over the facility and 750 hostages, placed explosives, and demanded treatment for their wounded at their Burmese camp, refuge on Thai territory, and no more Thai support of the Burmese military against their insurgency. They initially sequestered the doctors and nurses away from the patients. The rebels threatened to blow up the hospital if their demands were not met. They released 50 hostages in exchange for food.

After a 22-hour standoff, hundreds of Thai commandos launched a predawn raid, killing nine rebels and injuring more than eight Thai soldiers and police officers. One rebel escaped. None of the patients, staff, or visitors were injured. Four patients died from illnesses untreated during the siege.

The boys' 200 followers believed the twins had mystical powers. The group broke with Karen, which has fought the Burmese government for 50 years. The group might have ties with the Vigorous Burmese Student Warriors, who took over the Burmese Embassy in Bangkok in October and then were freed during negotiations and disappeared into the jungle.

The twin brothers were reportedly on the run through the jungle after their hideout was overrun by Burmese forces on January 27. The 200 God's Army rebels split into three separate bands headed by the Htoos and adult rebel Su Bia. Other Karen rebels joined in the battle.

On January 17, 2001, the Thai government said it would consider giving asylum to the twins, who had surrendered the day before with five boys, two girls, a middle-aged woman, and four young men. Prime minister Chuan Leekpai met with the duo at the Suan Phung border patrol headquarters. The boys admitted they had no mystical powers and said they wanted to give up fighting. On November 19, 2001, the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok announced that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service was sending a team to interview the duo about possible resettlement in the United States.

On July 17 and 19, 2006, Johnny Htoo and eight other members of God's Army left a refugee camp in Thailand and surrendered to the government in two groups. It was not clear where Luther was.

Bai Huahui: alias of Mayumi Hachiya.

Peter Huang: Taiwanese who shot Nationalist Chinese premier Chiang Ching-kuo when the diplomat entered the Plaza Hotel in New York City on April 24, 1970. Huang was a member of the World United Formosans for Independence, who fought for Taiwanese freedom. He was arrested along with the organization's executive secretary for the botched assassination attempt.

Huang Shugang: one of two hijackers of the April 6, 1993, China South (Nanfang) Airline Company Flight CZ3157 scheduled to fly from Shenzhen to Beijing and diverted to Taipei's Taoyuan (Chiang Kai-Shek) Airport. Taiwanese authorities detained the duo 20 minutes after the plane landed. Shugang was from Tangshan in Hebei Province and was in charge of procurement at a Tangshan steel mill. He had also worked as a salesman for a restaurant of the guesthouse run by the Tangshan Iron and Steel Company. Police found in their possession 52,000 renminbi (worth $10,600) and 800 Hong Kong dollars. The hijackers did not understand that hijacking is a serious criminal offense in Taiwan and asked prosecutors why they were detained. Beijing requested extradition, which Taiwan initially rejected, saying it would try the hijackers. Beijing said Shugang had been passing embezzled checks.

On June 3, the Taoyuan prosecutor indicted the hijackers, accusing them of violating Taiwan's Civil Aviation Law, National Security Law, and rules restricting weapons. He asked the judge to show leniency as the two had surrendered peacefully and had not exhibited violence toward the crew or passengers.

On June 5, 1993, Beijing reiterated the extradition request, saying the duo had embezzled public funds and illegally held and sold guns. They had hijacked the plane to avoid legal punishment for their crimes.

The two hijackers were sentenced to 10 years in jail by the Taoyuan Local Court. On October 16, 1993, a Civil Aviation Administration of China spokesperson said the lenient treatment led to a spate of Chinese hijackings to Taiwan later in the year. On May 19, 1994, the Taiwan High Court cut the hijackers' jail terms to seven years. Their 10-year sentence had been upheld by a senior court. The Supreme Court returned the case to the Taiwan High Court for retrial. The lower court determined that they deserved leniency. Judge Wang His-pao of the Taiwan High Court said they could be paroled after serving slightly less than two years in jail. The hijackers said they would appeal the decision.

Huang Wen-hsiung: tried to assassinate Chiang Ching-kuo, son of Chiang Kai-shek, in New York on April 24, 1970. He ended his exile and returned to Taiwan on May 18, 1996.

Hudama: alias of Imam Samudra,

Ahmed al-Hudathy: alias of one of three terrorists allegedly working for Iraqi intelligence who made threats against senior diplomats, according to the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Thailand in September 1991.

Hung Chu-chun: alias of Ang Tiu-cho.

John Wong Ah Hung: alias of Arifin bin Ali.

Yukiko Hurukita: Japanese Red Army terrorist alleged by Seoul newsmen on September 12, 1988, to have entered South Korea traveling under altered Japanese passports stolen in Spain from Japanese tourists. The Seoul Olympics were approaching.

Azfar Husain: one of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. They faced life in prison. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement.

Nasir Husain: one of four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, the Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986. The hijackers threw grenades and fired machine guns at the passengers, killing 22 and injuring 100 others. Husain was arrested at the scene. On September 8, he was charged with hijacking an aircraft, murder, attempted murder, and several other crimes. He carried a Bahraini passport. The United States filed a protection arrest warrant against the four to request extradition in case Pakistan decided not to prosecute. During their trial in an Adiyala prison courtroom on January 5, 1988, the five accused hijackers admitted taking over the plane with the intention of blowing it up over Israel after securing the release of 1,500 Palestinians from Israeli prisons.

Shaid Abdo al-Husayn: one of three Iraqi terrorists who, according to Seoul police on March 4, 1992, planned to attack targets in South Korea on the eve of El Al flights to South Korea.

Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn: variant Mohammed Hussein Zein-al-Abideen; alias of Abu Zubaydah.

Dr. Azahari bin Husin: alias Demolition Man. U.K.-trained Malaysian engineer and Jemaah Islamiyah bomb maker believed responsible for the October 1, 2005, suicide bombings in a Bali resort area that killed 26 and injured 100. He was mentioned in a confessor letter by one of the suicide bombers who, on September 9, 2004, killed 9 Indonesians and injured 161 in a bombing of the Australian embassy in Jakarta. The former university lecturer was believed to have helped design the Bali bombs and the bombs used in the attacks on Jakarta's Marriott Hotel in 2003 and the Australian Embassy in 2004. On November 22, 2004, Kompas newspaper reported that Indonesian traffic police had stopped the Malaysian three times, but he was not recognized and bribed his way out. He died on November 9, 2005, in a gun battle at his Java hideout during which the terrorists set off a dozen explosions that blew the roof off the building. Police found 30 bombs inside his hideout, along with a recruitment video.

Asim Hussain: one of four members of the al-Zulfikar organization arrested August 5, 1991, by Pakistani authorities for planning to assassinate the president, the prime minister, the Sindh chief minister, the leader of the Muhajir Qaumi Movement, and other VIPs. Police seized four Kalashnikovs, 36 Soviet-made bombs, two pistols, two rifles, three revolvers, a Mauser, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Hasib Hussain: unemployed Muslim, age 18, who exploded a bomb on July 7, 2005, at 9:47 A.M. on London Bus No. 30 at Tavistock Square, killing 13 people. He placed the bomb at the rear of the upper deck of the bus, which had been detoured because of the King's Cross/Russell Square bombing a few minutes earlier. Police first said there was no evidence of a suicide bomber; they later said there were four suicide bombers. Some theorized that Hussain intended to hit another train but was prevented from entering a train station when all were closed. Hussain then hopped on a bus and was attempting to reset the timer when the bomb went off. The Pakistani lived in Leeds and had completed vocational business studies at Matthew Murray High School. He had become more religious two years earlier. He had flown to Karachi, Pakistan, on a Saudi Arabian Airlines flight from Riyadh on July 15, 2004.

Mohammad Hussain: alias Kaka. One of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Mohbar Hussain: aliases Mustafa, Bomar Hussein. Palestinian leader of the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, the Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986. After the hijackers threw grenades and fired machine guns at the passengers, killing 22 and injuring 100 others, Hussain ordered a fellow hijacker to shoot him in the stomach, where he was wearing explosives. The compatriot winged him and then fled. Hussain was arrested at the scene. On September 8, he was charged with hijacking an aircraft, murder, attempted murder, and several other crimes. He carried a Bahraini passport. The United States filed a protection arrest warrant against the four to request extradition in case Pakistan decided not to prosecute. During their trial in an Adiyala prison courtroom on January 5, 1988, the five accused hijackers admitted taking over the plane with the intention of blowing it up over Israel after securing the release of 1,500 Palestinians from Israeli prisons. On July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced Hussain to death by hanging for hijacking and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each defendant to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court.

Sadiq Hussain: arrested March 17, 1988, by Pakistani police after he placed a Soviet-made time bomb in the crowded Pir Widhai bus terminal in the center of Rawalpindi. Authorities called him "an agent of the Afghan secret police" and said he received an advance of 30,000 rupees ($1,705) against a payment of 200,000 rupees ($11,370) for the job. A young shoe polisher brought the bomber's behavior to the attention of a policeman, who arrested Hussain shortly after he had placed the bomb.

Said Hussain: would-be Pakistani hijacker of a domestic B747 from Islamabad on February 3, 1978. His grenade exploded, injuring three people. The plane landed safely, and he was turned over to police. He was sentenced to death by a military court, and president Mohammed Zia ul-Haq rejected a clemency petition from the hijacker's mother. On November 5, 1979, Hussain was hanged at the central jail in Rawalpindi.

Shaukat Hussain: one of the defendants in the July 2002 trial of a trio from Kashmir accused of aiding in the December 13, 2001, Lashkar-i-Taiba attack on the Indian Parliament. Mohammad Afzal, a fellow defendant, said he and Hussain helped find hideouts. They were charged under the new Prevention of Terrorism Act with conspiracy to "threaten the unit, integrity, and sovereignty of India, to strike terror in the people."

Musaddeq Hussein: one of five Pakistanis who arrived in Sharm el-Sheikh on the Red Sea from Cairo on July 5, 2005. Hussein, age 18, and the others were wanted for questioning in the July 23, 2005, bombing of the resort area, killing 88 people and injuring 119.

Sultan Hussein: one of three Ethiopians who, on November 23, 1996, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET961, a B767 carrying 163 passengers and 12 crew, after takeoff from Addis Ababa. The plane crashed into the Indian Ocean, killing 127 people, most of them Africans and Asians. Authorities were unable to determine the motives of Alamayhu Bekele, Mateias Solomon, and Sultan Hussein, who did not belong to any political party. (See also Alamayhu Bekele.)

Hyder: alias of Mansur Hasnain.

Salman Hyder: Pakistani roommate, age 19, of Ahmed Nawaz Atta, also 19, a Pakistani questioned by the FBI about possible involvement in a terrorist organization; as of November 2001, Hyder was held by U.S. authorities in connection with their 9/11 investigations.

Abdul Hye: Muslim cleric from Chittagong who reportedly received funds directly from Osama bin Laden. On January 19, 1999, three members of the previously unknown Harkat-ul-Jihad of Bangladesh attempted to kill Shamsur Rahman, age 70, one of the country's leading poets, with an ax. Rahman's wife, daughter-in-law, and maid warded off the trio, two of them teens. Besides the ax, the attackers also carried a single-shot, homemade rifle. Two attackers were arrested at the victim's home. They said they planned to kill Rahman and three other intellectuals because of their liberal beliefs.

Police detained 16 more suspects in Dhaka and Chittagong. Hye and fellow cleric Sheik Farid, the group's two top leaders, fled the country. It appeared that Hye and Farid created the group circa 1995 in an Islamic seminary in Chittagong. The group trained seminary students on the use of light arms at two small camps in southeastern Bangladesh. They then sent them to fight alongside the Taliban against other Afghanistan factions. The group has between 2,000 and 3,000 activists and perhaps 10,000 members and publishes a monthly magazine, Wake Up, Freedom Fighter.

I

---

Ahmed Mohammed Ibrahim: Ethiopian student, age 24, and suspected Eritrean Liberation Front member arrested December 10, 1969, in Madrid Airport while carrying a suitcase containing explosives. He said he and a companion had attempted to hijack an Ethiopian Airlines flight on the Madrid–Rome–Athens–Addis Ababa run on December 12, 1969, and were to fly the plane over Paris and London to distribute leaflets and then destroy the plane on the ground in Copenhagen.

Dawood Ibrahim: Muslim who lives in Dubai accused by Indian police of being a crime boss wanted for running prostitution, gambling, and extortion rackets in Bombay and masterminding the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250.

Husen Kamen Ibrahim: Iraqi terrorist in Chiang Mai wanted by Thai authorities on January 21, 1991, following receipt of a terrorist threat against U.S. interests and by Philippine authorities for the bombing of an embassy before the Gulf War broke out on January 17. He arrived on a Pakistani airliner on January 21.

Mistri Zahoor Ibrahim: alias Bhola. Pakistani from Karachi identified by India as one of five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport.

Muktar Said Ibrahim: alias Muktar Mohammed Said. Somali (other reports said he was from Eritrea), age 27, seen wearing a white baseball cap and a T-shirt with a palm tree on the front in the upper deck of the No. 26 bus on Hackney Road minutes before a backpack detonated on July 21, 2005, in an abortive copycat attack on the London bus and subway system. He had immigrated to the United Kingdom in 1990 and had been sentenced to five years in prison in 1996 for a series of gang muggings. He became devout in prison. He obtained early release in 1998 and may have spent time at the Finsbury Park mosque in London. He became a U.K. citizen in September 2004. He was arrested July 29, 2005, in a televised raid in London. On August 8, 2005, a London court charged Muktar Said Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, Hussain Osman, Manfo Asiedu, Adel Yahya, and Yasin Hassan Omar. They were ordered held until a November 14 hearing, when they would enter pleas on conspiracy and explosives offenses.

His trial began January 15, 2007. Ibrahim allegedly had practiced firing rocket-propelled grenades in Sudan in 2003 and had trained for jihad in Pakistan in 2004. Omar, Yahya, and Ibrahim attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, who was convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred. On March 19, 2007, Ibrahim told the court that he intentionally made fake bombs out of hydrogen peroxide that would not explode. He learned the technique off the Internet. He was represented by attorney George Carter-Stephenson.

On July 9, 2007, the jury convicted him of conspiracy to murder by plotting to bomb London's public transport system. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He will be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Ibrahim was given U.K. citizenship despite sexually assaulting a 15-year-old girl and spending time in juvenile detention for two gang-related robberies. Prime Minister Brown said Ibrahim would have been deported under current U.K. laws.

Saaid Ibrahim: Dutch citizen of Ethiopian origin freed on December 18, 2002, by a Rotterdam court on charges of planning attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

Idris: brother of Imam Samudra. Both were suspects in the October 12, 2002, Bali bombings. Idris was at large as of Samudra's November 21, 2002, arrest. Bomber Amrozi claimed Idris gave him $5,000 in U.S., Singaporean, and Malaysian currency. On June 30, 2003, police arrested Idris, one of the organizers of the Bali bombing, who also had helped in a bank robbery in Sumatra in order to fund terrorist operations.

Abdalmukim Idris: variants Edris, Abdul Dris. Part of an Abu Sayyaf plot to plant a truck bomb on a highway overpass in Manila in 2002. On July 14, 2003, he and two other suspected Jemaah Islamiyah extremists escaped from police intelligence custody in Manila.

M. Idris: one of three Eritreans, age early twenties, who threw hand grenades and fired submachine guns at an Ethiopian Airlines B707 parked at Karachi Airport on June 18, 1969. The trio had arrived from Beirut on June 16 and claimed they were dramatizing their opposition to Ethiopian rule in Eritrea. The trio was sentenced to one year of hard labor.

Azhar Iqbal: one of four Pakistanis arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992, suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges were not dropped.

Ahmet Ikaz: listed by Interpol as a Pakistani criminal, age 24, and one of seven men killed on March 2, 2002, by Macedonian police who initially said the men were plotting terrorist attacks at the U.S., German, and U.K. embassies in Skopje. Five of the dead were Pakistani or Middle Eastern; the others might have been ethnic Albanians. Police had been following them since detaining two Jordanians and two Bosnians in February and seizing computer disks with information on embassies and government installations. The police fired warning shots when attempting to detain the terrorists, who fired back. Police suffered no casualties in the shootout on a dirt road leading to Ljuboten. Police seized eight Chinese-designed hand grenades (probably from Albania), a rocket-propelled grenade launcher with ammunition, an antitank weapon, four automatic weapons, two pistols, a bazooka, flares, and a dozen new uniforms of the Albanian National Liberation Army. The terrorists wore civilian clothing. Some carried Turkish banknotes and two carried plastic cards with Arabic writing.

On April 30, 2004, Macedonian police spokeswoman Mirjana Konteska told the media that police had ambushed and killed seven innocent South Asian (six Pakistanis and one Indian) illegal immigrants to show police were participating in the War on Terrorism. Three former police commanders, two special police officers, and a businessman were charged with murder and faced life sentences. The immigrants had been smuggled into Macedonia from Bulgaria by a special Macedonian police group who told the victims they would be transferred to Western Europe. The next day, police accused former interior minister Ljube Boskovski of ordering the killings. Boskovski reportedly fled to Croatia to avoid arrest and extradition.

Rasiah Ilanthirayan: Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam spokesperson in February 2007.

Sulpicio Ilaw: believed to be 1 of 10 members of the New People's Army of the Philippines who, on March 4, 1990, shot to death Stewart Frank Raab, age 76, an American rancher who refused to pay revolutionary taxes of $34,000.

Babr Imran: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Imran, in his twenties, was from Multan, Pakistan.

Hakimin Imran: key commander of Abu Sayyaf arrested by soldiers at a military checkpoint on Basilan Island, Philippines, on November 27, 2002. He was accused of taking part in kidnapping 50 teachers and students in March 2000 and providing security to the terrorists who raided a resort on May 27, 2001, and kidnapped three Americans.

Mohammed Imran: one of three members of the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin al-Almi arrested July 8, 2002, by Pakistani authorities in connection with the June 14, 2002, car bombing of the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 and injured 51. They also seized a large quantity of explosives and weapons. Two men publicly admitted their guilt and said the bomb was built to kill Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. The duo, identified as Mohammed Imran, the group's leader, and Mohammed Hanif, his deputy, said they had tried to set off the bomb near the president's motorcade in Karachi in April, but the remote control failed. The trio—Imran, Hanif, and Ashraf—were arraigned August 3 in the Anti-Terrorism Court on charges of conspiracy, terrorism, attempted murder, and use of a lethal explosive. The terrorism charge carries the death penalty. The trio and Waseem Akhtar, a Pakistan Rangers paramilitary police member, were also arraigned on charges of plotting to kill Musharraf. On April 14, 2003, an antiterrorist court inside the Karachi central jail sentenced Hanif and Imran to death for the bombing. Two others received life sentences; a fifth was acquitted. The defense said it would appeal.

Ali Imron: brother of Mukhlas and Amrozi who was believed to have helped his brothers detonate one of the car bombs that exploded at two Bali nightclubs on October 12, 2002, killing 202 people. On January 14, 2003, two more suspects, including field coordinator Ali Imron, were arrested on Berukan Island in eastern Kalimantan Province, bringing the total to 20. On September 18, 2003, a court sentenced Ali to life in prison on charges that he had participated in making the bomb and driving the minivan to the area. However, the court also noted that he had asked his friends and family not to follow his example.

Sachio Inagaki: would-be hijacker of an All Nippon Airways B727 flying from Nagoya to Sapporo on August 19, 1970. The hijacker demanded that the plane land at Hamamatsu Air Defense Base, where he demanded a rifle, ammunition, and two drums of gasoline. He had broken up with a girlfriend and was suicidal. He was ultimately overpowered by police.

Suresh Pandurang Inamdar: dismissed airline technician who confessed on June 6, 1981, to cutting cables in the tail section of Air India's B707 Makalu, scheduled to fly prime minister Indira Gandhi on April 20, 1981. On June 11, 1981, a Bombay judge dismissed charges against five men, including a trio with Air India's engineering department, when Inamdar, a defendant in a related case, claimed he had been beaten into a false confession.

Yoshihiro Inoue: Aum Shin Rikyo intelligence minister who had traveled from Japan to Russia in November 1993. Aum purchased a MIL-17 helicopter built in the Tartar region of Russia at a cost of 78 million yen. Inoue was arrested by Japanese police on May 15, 1995. He had been on a wanted list for the February 28, 1995, abduction of Kiyoshi Kariya, age 68, manager of a notary public office in Tokyo's Meguro Ward. Police believed Inoue led a firebomb attack on the Tokyo headquarters of Aum on the eve of the subway sarin attack. He and the other Aum members then carried out the subway attack. He faced further charges in connection with the May 16, 1995, parcel bomb attack on Tokyo governor Yukio Aoshima.

Selliah Kailaya Inthiran: resident of Enaikoddai, Jaffna, Sri Lanka, who operated a truck transport service between Jaffna and Colombo and was one of two Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) intelligence operatives who directed the LTTE suicide bomber who rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May 1, 1993, May Day parade in Colombo, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others.

Iqbal: member of a group from Serang in western Java that set off the Paddy's Bar bomb on October 12, 2002, in Bali. Iqbal was a suicide bomber who had an explosives-laden backpack.

Mohammad Iqbal: one of four members of the al-Zulfikar organization arrested August 5, 1991, by Pakistani authorities for planning to assassinate the president, the prime minister, the Sindh chief minister, the leader of the Muhajir Qaumi Movement, and other VIPs. Police seized four Kalashnikovs, 36 Soviet-made bombs, two pistols, two rifles, three revolvers, a Mauser, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Shaib Iqbal: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan

Hideo Iraba: variant Iraba, name on a passport carried by Osamu Maruoka, a Japanese Red Army terrorist, when he was arrested in Okinawa, Japan, on November 21, 1987.

Ka Irene: alias of Zaldy Realubit.

Yusuf Mohammed Isa: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Nurjaman Riduan Isamuddin: alias Hambali. Key Jemaah Islamiyah figure in Indonesia. On January 28, 2003, Indonesian National Police chief Dai Bachtiar said Hambali provided $35,000 to finance terrorist attacks, giving the money to Malaysian operative Wan Min Wan Mat, who forwarded the funds to Mukhlis. Hambali was arrested in Ayutthaya, 60 miles north of Bangkok, Thailand, on August 12, 2003. The sleeping Hambali did not have time to wake up and fire his handgun. He was with his Malaysian wife, Norawizah Lee, in a $75-per-month apartment. Authorities also arrested two Malaysian lieutenants at the same time. Hambali was fingered by Muslim Thais and a phone intercept. He had moved between Thailand, Malaysia, Cambodia, and Burma.

Hambali was brought to an unnamed country for questioning on the following:

- Plans to bomb the U.S. embassies in Manila and Singapore
- Mid-1990s abortive plot to blow up 11 U.S. planes over the Pacific
- August 2000 car bombing of the Philippine ambassador's house in Jakarta, with the assistance of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front
- Plans to bomb 11 sites in Indonesia on Christmas Eve 2000
- Plans for car bombing the U.S. and Israeli embassies in Singapore in summer 2001
- 9/11 attacks; he had been videotaped at a January 2000 meeting in Malaysia with two of the hijackers and had arranged for flying lessons and a letter of accreditation to a U.S. flying school for Zacarias Moussaoui
- October 2002 bombings in Bali that killed 202 people
- August 2003 bombing of Jakarta's Marriott Hotel in Indonesia that killed 10 people

- Interest in recruiting pilots for terrorist operations

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared Hambali an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

Tarik S. Ishmael: Jordanian head of the Saudi-based Islamic International Relief Organization, Ishmael was detained by Philippine police on July 8, 1994, on suspicion of involvement with Abu Sayyaf.

Manzoorul Islam: head of the Jamaat ul-Mujaheddin, which fights for Kashmir's merger with Pakistan, Islam was killed on August 19, 2004, by Indian soldiers in a gun battle. The clash came hours before president Abdul Kalam began a visit to the region. Islam had been in a car in Srinagar that soldiers had signaled to stop.

Nazrul Islam: unemployed Bangladeshi who rushed with a knife and pistol from the rear of a Bangladesh Airlines Fokker Friendship F27 flying from Jessore to Dacca and forced the pilot to land at Calcutta's Dum Dum Airport on July 25, 1979. He eventually surrendered.

Ismail: detained on October 28, 2003, by Indonesian police in connection with the August 5, 2003, suicide bombing at Jakarta's Marriott Hotel that killed 16 and injured 149. He allegedly purchased the vehicle used in the bombing.

Abu Ismail: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Ismail, in his twenties, was from Dera Ismail Khan, Pakistan.

Mullah Ismail: alias Mullah Ahmad Shah. Senior Taliban commander in the Kunar Province of Afghanistan killed by Pakistani security forces in a shootout as he traveled with a kidnapped trader on their way to the North West Frontier Province on April 15, 2008. He had seized the trader in an Afghan refugee camp in Pakistan and had tried to run a checkpoint, opening fire on police. He was wanted for using a shoulder-fired rocket to shoot down a U.S. MH-47 Chinook helicopter in June 2005, killing eight Navy SEALs and eight Army air crew from the 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment. He was also a facilitator of al Qaeda terrorists in the area and had organized numerous attacks on NATO, U.S., and Afghan forces in northeastern Afghanistan.

Qari Ismail: member of a Taliban-linked group named by Pakistani prosecutors on March 1, 2008, as having received the equivalent of $6,500 from Tehrik-e-Taliban leader Baitullah Mehsud to organize the December 27, 2007, assassination of former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto.

Shaban Hassan Ismail: on August 20, 1998, FBI director Louis Freeh and senior FBI agents visited Nairobi for an update on the investigation of the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. FBI and local police officers raided the local headquarters of the Mercy International Relief Agency, a Muslim group, carting away files, computer equipment, a fax machine, audio and video tapes, $3,500 in cash, and three glass bookshelves. They also took into custody Ismail, the group's education coordinator. The group's attorney, Abdikadir Hussein Mohamed, said the agency is registered in Ireland and the local chapter was founded by Kenyans of Somali extraction. It operates orphanages and other charities in Kenya, Ethiopia, Uganda, and Somalia and has no association with Osama bin Laden, who often uses charities as covers for his overseas operations. The group's bank accounts were frozen after the raid.

Junait Isra: one of two Filipino Muslims arrested July 11, 1991, when a bomb-triggering device was found in their carry-on luggage while boarding Northwest Airlines Flight 20, bound for Seoul, Seattle, and Memphis. They were Mindanao residents.

Mahmud Sardar Issa: Sudanese who heads the Islamic Zakat Fund Trust in Blantyre and one of five suspected members of al Qaeda detained on June 21, 2003, by the Malawi National Intelligence Bureau two weeks before President Bush was scheduled to visit Africa. Malawian officials said the group had sent money to al Qaeda, and the next day the detainees were flown to Botswana on an Air Malawi plane by U.S. officials despite a court order preventing their deportation. On July 25, they were released in Sudan after being cleared of suspicion of al Qaeda membership. The two Turks, a Saudi, a Kenyan, and a Sudanese were to be sent to their respective countries.

Westhi Djadi Issa: on May 7, 1984, Issa was sentenced to 20 years for the murder of two people and the destruction of public property in the March 27, 1984, bombing in Kinshasa of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Juanito Itaas: arrested by military police in Davao, Philippines, on August 27, 1989, for illegal possession of firearms. He admitted to killing U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group on April 21, 1989. On September 8, 1989, the New People's Army said Itaas was not the gunman. On February 28, 1991, Quezon City Regional Trial Court Branch 88 Judge Tirso Velasco sentenced him to life in prison after he was found guilty of murdering Rowe and seriously injuring his driver, Joaquin Vinuya. Itaas received a life sentence for Rowe's murder and another 17 years for wounding Vinuya. He was also to pay 30,000 pesos to the victims' families. On December 28, 1992, Philippine state prosecutors decided to recommend amnesty.

Noel Itabay: New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines member for whom a warrant was issued on July 9, 1989, in connection with NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Hiroshi Itagaki: one of three Chukaku-ha (Middle Core Faction) radicals arrested October 13, 1987, for firing five handmade rockets at the Akasaka Palace during the opening ceremonies for the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo on May 4, 1986. He was already on trial for making bombs in Iwate Prefecture during October 1986.

Tariku Itan: one of four Ethiopians who hijacked an Ethiopian Airlines plane flying from Addis Ababa to Bahr Dar on April 12, 1992, and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya, where the hijackers surrendered. Ethiopia requested their extradition the next day, saying they were former security members of the deposed regime. They were brought before a Nairobi chief magistrate on April 14. The magistrate declined to release them on bond. The case was due for review on April 28, 1992.

Ryoichi Iwabuchi: Aum Shin Rikyo member, age 64, arrested by Japanese police on March 31, 1995, for possessing illegal explosives—a 500-cc bottle of inflammable solid sodium—in a van stationed in Fujinomiya, Shizuoka Prefecture.

Akira Iwakoshi: Japanese Red Army (JRA) hijacker of a Japan Airlines DC8 flying from Osaka to Tokyo on July 15, 1974. He demanded the release of imprisoned JRA leader Takaya Shiomi and a plane to take them to North Korea. After landing in Tokyo and Osaka, the plane flew on to Nagoya for refueling, where the passengers escaped. Police ran into the plane, where Iwakoshi attempted suicide by cutting his throat. He was arrested before he succeeded.

Masanobu Iwao: Aum Shin Rikyo member arrested April 14, 1995, for breaking and entering the facility of Sagamihara in Kanagawa Prefecture on November 6, 1994. The facility is the firm's major laser research lab. Aum was allegedly interested in laser weapons.

J

---

Ghazali Jaafar: political chief of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in the Philippines in early 2003. On March 9, 2003, he was charged with the March 4, 2003, bombing by a MILF member at the main terminal of Davao Airport in which 21 people were killed and 149 were injured.

Mohammed Mansour Jabarah: aliases Abu Hafsa al Kuwaiti, Sammy. Canadian Kuwaiti of Iraqi descent arrested in Oman in February 2002 on charges of organizing a plot to bomb the U.S. and Israeli embassies in Singapore. Canadian officials announced they would hand him over to the United States. He was held in a secret location in the United States. Canada claimed Jabarah volunteered to go to the United States for questioning. He had apparently talked to the FBI about his al Qaeda contacts, including Hambali and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. He pleaded guilty to terrorism charges on July 30, 2002. But on January 18, 2008, Jabarah, age 26, was sentenced to life in prison in a New York federal courtroom after federal prosecutors announced that he had lured his captors and hid steak knives, rope, and instructions on how to make explosives in a plan to kill them. He wrote angry passages in his diary about the death of his childhood friend Anas al-Kandari, who introduced him to al Qaeda in Kuwait; al-Kandari died while attacking a Marine Corps outpost in Kuwait in October 2002. Jabarah wrote a will, a hit list, and observations about martyrdom, including, "If they release me then I will kill them until I am killed." He attended al Qaeda terrorist training camps in Afghanistan with his brother, Abdul Rahman Jabarah. He also worked with Faiz Bafana, who dealt with Zacarias Moussaoui, on a 2000 plot to attack U.S. warships in Singapore. After Moussaoui obtained too many explosives, Bafana shifted to planning operations against the U.S., U.K., and Israeli embassies and large office buildings in Singapore.

Fares Kfah al-Jabel: one of 16 Middle Eastern terrorists who planned to attack Saudi diplomats and officials overseas, the Saudi Arabian Embassy told Thai officials on March 20, 1990. He carried an Iraqi passport.

Marwan al-Jabour: accused al Qaeda paymaster arrested in Lahore, Pakistan, in May 2004. The Washington Post claimed he was held in Jordan for six weeks. The Palestinian was released from detention in Afghanistan on June 30, 2006. As of December 2007, he was believed to be in Gaza.

Billy Jack: alias of Avelino Langilao. Muslim rebel charged on April 2, 1979, by the Philippine military in the Marawi City Court with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although MNLF denied responsibility.

Sobomabo Jackrich: junior member of the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta in Nigeria arrested on December 29, 2008, by Nigerian soldiers when he surfaced to attend peace talks.

Comrade Jacky: spokesperson on August 2, 1990, for the New People's Army of the Philippines kidnappers of Fumio Mizuno, a Japanese citizen working as an overseer for development projects in Central Negros Occidental Province on May 29, 1990.

Pierre Jacobs: one of two white mine workers arrested at a roadblock outside the mining town of Mooinooi. Jacobs, age 32, was charged with the January 5, 1997, bombing at a mosque, post office, and store in Rustenburg, South Africa, that injured a Sudanese citizen and a South African. Explosives were found in the defendants' car and in the home of one of the men. The Boere Aanvals Troepe claimed credit.

Zukifli bin Mohamed Jaffar: one of a group of suspects—17 Jemaah Islamiyah and 1 Moro Islamic Liberation Front—arrested in August 2002 by Singaporean authorities for planning terrorist attacks against Western sites. (See also Ab Wahab bin Ahmad.)

Jaikumar: Sri Lankan member of Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) arrested in Madras on June 24, 1991, by Indian police in connection with the bombing that killed former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. Jaikumar was related to Robert Paes, who had been arrested a few days earlier. Jaikumar was to be formally charged on counts of harboring two other key suspects and on suspicion of being a coconspirator. He was third in command of LTTE's intelligence wing. He had sheltered Sivarasan, the mastermind of the murder, for two days after Gandhi was killed.

Kalaw Jalali: Abu Sayyaf member killed on January 13, 1995, in a clash with government troops in District Lantawan, Isabela, Basilan, Philippines.

Azman bin Jalani: one of a group of suspects—17 Jemaah Islamiyah and 1 Moro Islamic Liberation Front—arrested in August 2002 by Singaporean authorities for planning terrorist attacks against Western sites. (See also Ab Wahab bin Ahmad.)

Ustad Zain Jali: spiritual leader of the Philippine Moro National Liberation Front in 1992.

Jamal Jaloud: one of six Iraqis who were among the nine suspected terrorists, including the brother of Ramzi Yusuf, arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila.

Muhammad Jamal: representative of the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party (EPRP) in Khartoum, Sudan, who said during a kidnapping of two Italians on November 28, 1987, that the EPRP "shall not hesitate either to kidnap or kill foreign citizens who are helping the Ethiopians build up their military strength."

Nasir Jamal: variant Nassir Jamal. One of three hijackers of a Pakistan International Airlines B720 flying from Karachi to Peshawar on March 2, 1981, and diverted to Kabul, Afghanistan. On March 14, the terrorists surrendered peacefully to Syrian authorities. On March 17, 1981, Pakistan's Federal Investigation Agency filed hijacking charges against him. On March 23, Syria turned down Pakistan's extradition request, stating that there was no bilateral extradition treaty. On April 30, Pakistan offered a $10,000 reward for his arrest. On March 18, Pakistan requested extradition from Kabul.

Nassir Jamal: variant of Nasir Jamal.

Qayyum Abdul Jamal: part-time school bus driver, age 43, from Mississauga who was one of 17 people arrested June 2, 2006, in nighttime raids in the Toronto suburbs. The 17 had a huge cache of explosives, including three tons of ammonium nitrate and a detonator made from a cell phone. They were planning to set off truck bombs at public targets, including power plants in Ontario, the Parliament building in Ottawa, the Toronto stock exchange, and the Toronto offices of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service near the downtown CN Tower. A police spokesperson denied the group had targeted the Toronto subway system. The group also planned to take over the Canadian Parliament, hold hostages, and behead prime minister Stephen Harper if Canada did not withdraw its 2,300 troops from Afghanistan. They also planned to demand the release of Muslim prisoners in Afghanistan and Iraq. The group wanted to take over the downtown Toronto studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. They had talked about using remote-controlled toys to carry explosives into police stations.

The next day in court they were charged under antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. They had Arabic names and ranged in age from 15 to 43. Most were believed to be Canadian citizens, but they also included people from Somalia, Egypt, and Pakistan. Most were born in Canada or arrived as young children. Police said the group had trained outside Toronto and were "adherents of a virulent ideology inspired by al Qaeda." Jamal was to be charged with planning to set off large explosions and receiving terrorist training. Canadian authorities spotted the 17 via Internet chat rooms, e-mail, and telephone communications. They had communicated with fellow militants in the United States and Europe.

On June 4, the Toronto Star reported the government had provided the terrorists with three tons of explosives in a sting operation. They had intercepted the ammonium nitrate and substituted harmless powder before the arrests. Once the group paid the $4,000 for the materials, they were arrested. More arrests outside Canada were expected. Authorities were looking into whether the detainees had links to Islamists held in the United States, United Kingdom, Bangladesh, Bosnia, Denmark, and Sweden. Police said 10 of the men had gathered in a wooded area near Washago, 90 miles north of Toronto, for terrorism training.

Judnam Jamalul: one of six Abu Sayyaf members killed on January 6, 2007, in a gun battle with Philippine Navy and Army Special Forces. He was wanted in the 2001 abduction of missionaries Martin and Garcia Burnham from Wichita, Kansas; tourist Guillermo Sobero, of Corona, California; and 17 Filipinos. Terrorists beheaded Sobero. Martin Burnham was killed during a rescue attempt.

Jahmaal James: one of 17 people arrested June 2, 2006, in nighttime raids in the Toronto suburbs. The 17 had a huge cache of explosives, including three tons of ammonium nitrate and a detonator made from a cell phone. They were planning to set off truck bombs at public targets, including power plants in Ontario, the Parliament building in Ottawa, the Toronto stock exchange, and the Toronto offices of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service near the downtown CN Tower. A police spokesperson denied the group had targeted the Toronto subway system. The group also planned to take over the Canadian Parliament, hold hostages, and behead prime minister Stephen Harper if Canada did not withdraw its 2,300 troops from Afghanistan. They also planned to demand the release of Muslim prisoners in Afghanistan and Iraq. The group wanted to take over the downtown Toronto studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. They had talked about using remote-controlled toys to carry explosives into police stations.

The next day in court they were charged under antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. They had Arabic names and ranged in age from 15 to 43. Most were believed to be Canadian citizens, but they also included people from Somalia, Egypt, and Pakistan. Most were born in Canada or arrived as young children. Police said the group had trained outside Toronto and were "adherents of a virulent ideology inspired by al Qaeda." Most were to be charged with planning to set off large explosions and receiving terrorist training.

Canadian authorities spotted the 17 via Internet chat rooms, e-mail, and telephone communications. They had communicated with fellow militants in the United States and Europe.

On June 4, the Toronto Star reported the government had provided the terrorists with three tons of explosives in a sting operation. They had intercepted the ammonium nitrate and substituted harmless powder before the arrests. Once the group paid the $4,000 for the materials, they were arrested. More arrests outside Canada were expected. Authorities were looking into whether the detainees had links to Islamists held in the United States, United Kingdom, Bangladesh, Bosnia, Denmark, and Sweden. Police said 10 of the men had gathered in a wooded area near Washago, 90 miles north of Toronto, for terrorism training.

William James: name on an a British passport used by one of two Iraqi terrorists arrested January 21, 1991, in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of an international terrorist network financed and armed via Iraqi diplomatic pouches. He was deported on January 28, 1991, but ultimately flew to Nepal on January 31. He was not charged in Thailand, but he was arrested by Nepalese police upon arrival. Nepal deported him back to Bangkok on February 3, 1991. On February 7, the two Iraqis were deported to Athens.

Abdurajak Abubaker Janjalani: Libyan-trained Abu Sayyaf Group leader who died in a gunfight with authorities on Basilan Island on December 19, 1998. He had established the group in Basilan, Philippines, in the late 1980s. He was a teacher of Islam in the local madrassa and had studied in Libya.

Khadaffy Janjalani: leader of a faction of the Abu Sayyaf Group operating from Central Mindanao since 2003. Some reports claimed he was killed on June 2, 2001, in a battle with Philippine troops; others that he died in a September 2006 gun battle with Philippine security forces. On May 29, 2002, the United States announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture. On July 23, 2002, he was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in an attack on May 27, 2001, in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, hostage taking, and three counts of hostage taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition when they were apprehended.

The U.S. Department of the Treasury blocked Janjalani's assets on December 17, 2004. Janjalani, age 30, was added to the U.S. list of Most Wanted Terrorists on February 28, 2006. On January 20, 2007, DNA tests confirmed his death in September 2006.

Abdul Jari: one of three Bangladeshis arrested in the Rajbarana District on June 26, 1990, by Thai police, who seized 9 M-16 and 36 AK-47 assault rifles, 10 rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs), 5 RPG launchers, 10 hand grenades, 10 sticks of TNT, 33 AK-47 magazines, 8 M-16 magazines, a .38 caliber revolver, and one sack of M-16 ammunition from a house in Soi Pracha-uthit 61 in Bang Mod following a brief gun battle with arms smugglers. They were wanted for questioning in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok.

Kenny Jaster: arrested in early November 1987 in Transkei, South Africa, on charges of planning to assassinate Transkei political leaders.

Feda Mohammad Khan Jatoi: one of four Pakistani members of the Pakistan People's Party who, on March 26, 1991, hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur–Singapore route. After nine hours of negotiations, the Singapore Army stormed the plane and killed the hijackers, who had threatened violence against the passengers if their demands were not met in five minutes.

Javed: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Javed, in his twenties, was from Okara, Pakistan.

Mohamad Javet: Pakistani wanted for questioning on June 19, 1994, by Thai police in connection with a plot to harm Nepalese crown prince Dipendra Bir Bikram Shah at the Asian Institute of Technology in Pathum Thani. Javet escaped by telling police he had to obtain his passport in a car parked nearby.

Mohammed Jawad: threw a homemade grenade into a U.S. military jeep on December 17, 2002, in Afghanistan, injuring Army Sgt. 1st Class Michael Lyons, Army Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Marti, and Afghan interpreter Assadullah Khan Omerk. Jawad, age 19, was captured and incarcerated at Guantánamo Bay. Prosecutors sent charges to the Pentagon in October 2007. On January 31, 2008, he was formally charged with attempted murder of two U.S. soldiers and a translator. He faces three counts of attempted murder and three counts of causing serious bodily harm and life in prison when his case comes before a U.S. military war crimes tribunal. The Afghan citizen was born in a Pakistani refugee camp. He refused to accept a U.S. military lawyer, army reservist Col. J. Michael Sawyers, and had to be dragged from his cell to his hearing on March 12, 2008. He has a seventh-grade education. In court, he was charged with attempted murder and intent to inflict bodily harm. The Pashto-speaker said he was in the vicinity of the Kabul bazaar when it was attacked but denied throwing the grenade. When he was captured, he was carrying two more grenades.

Manlia Plod Jayed: linked to the December 2, 1982, bombing of the Iraqi Consulate in Thailand by the Mujabbar Bakr Commando Group.

Adil Jazeeri: Algerian and suspected longtime aide to Osama bin Laden, Jazeeri was arrested in June 2003 by Pakistani police in Hayatabad, Peshawar. On July 13, Jazeeri was handed over to U.S. authorities, who flew him out of the country from Peshawar Airport. The Associated Press said he might have been brought to Bagram, Afghanistan, for questioning.

Yassir al-Jazeeri: Algerian or Moroccan suspected of being a high-level al Qaeda operative. He was arrested in Lahore, Pakistan, on March 15, 2003.

Abu Suleiman al Jaziery: al Qaeda “high value target” killed on May 14, 2008, when a U.S. Predator drone fired Hellfire missiles at two male guesthouses in Damadola, Bajaur, Pakistan. Authorities believed he was planning attacks outside Pakistan.

Abu Bakr Jaziri: Osama bin Laden’s head of organized fundraising, Jaziri served as the Afghan Support Committee’s financial chief. Jaziri moved to Pakistan in 2000. He was banned by the U.S. Department of the Treasury on January 9, 2002. By February 2005, he was listed as dead.

Mohamed Ahmed Jemil: one of two leaders in December 1986 of the Sudan-based Ethiopian People’s Revolutionary Army, which kidnapped foreigners.

Ka Jerome: alias of Noli Paniza.

Jiang Xiaofeng: hijacked a B737 on October 1, 1990. When he realized the captain had landed the plane at Guangzhou Baiyun International Airport, he beat the captain, caused the plane to collide with two other planes parked on the runway, and caused the deaths of 128 people, including 30 Taiwanese, and injuries to 53 others.

Osman Jibril: aide to Osman ‘Ajib, self-proclaimed leader of the Eritrean Liberation Front/Popular Liberation Forces. They were shot to death by an unidentified gunman in front of a Khartoum hotel on November 15, 1980.

Commander Yusop Jikiri: leader of a group of Moro National Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped an American, a German, and their Filipino guides from a bus bound for Jolo, capital of Sulu Province, on November 19, 1984.

Jul Jilang: Moro National Liberation Front commander with ties to the Abu Sayyaf Group in the Philippines in late 1994.

Ahmed Nur Ali Jim'ale: resident of Mogadishu, Somalia, and Dubai, United Arab Emirates, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. In 1989 he was the founder of Al Barakaat, which operates in 40 countries.

Ka Jimmy: one of eight members of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines who died on July 2, 1989, in a four-hour gun battle in Barangay Duquit, Mabalacat, Pampanga, when the Angeles Metropolitan District Command foiled the NPA's plan to attack the July 4 celebration at Clark Air Base. All belonged to General Guerilla Unit One operating in eastern Pampanga towns.

Hiroiyuk Jo: Aum Shin Rikyo member sentenced to 12 years by the Tokyo District Court on November 13, 1995, for stabbing to death Hideo Murai, the chief scientist of Aum, in front of the group's Tokyo office in April 1995. Jo said the leader of the Kenji Kamimine gang told him to kill any cult leader.

Edwin Jocson: alias Edjoc. New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines member sought by the military July 10, 1989, in connection with NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Ka Jody: alias of Cesario Capitulo.

Ka Joel: alias of Alfredo Sunga.

Prince Johnson: leader of a group of Liberian rebels who took 16 foreigners hostage on August 6, 1990.

Klaas de Jonge: teacher living in Zimbabwe who took asylum in the Dutch embassy in Pretoria. South African police raided the embassy on July 9, 1985, to apprehend him, saying that he was suspected of arms trafficking for the African National Congress (ANC). The South Africans returned him to the embassy on July 19, 1985. On May 15, 1986, his ex-wife, Helene Passtoors, a Belgian, was found guilty of treason for helping the ANC but not guilty of terrorism charges. On September 7, 1987, he was finally allowed to leave South Africa as part of a prisoner exchange in Maputo, Mozambique.

Edgar Jopson: variant of Edwin Jopson.

Edwin Jopson: variant Edgar Jopson. New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines leader for whom a warrant was issued on July 9, 1989, in connection with the NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Gloria Jopson: former wife of former New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines leader Edwin Jopson and wife of Romulo Kintanar, a senior NPA member in 1989. Kintanar and Gloria Jopson escaped from the Camp Crame stockade in November 1988, six months after they had been captured in San Juan. Near her parents' home, police found the getaway car used by the NPA sparrow hit team in the April 21, 1989, assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. The government offered an $18,000 reward for her capture. She and her husband were captured by police on August 5, 1991. She became a widow of a top Communist Party official in 1982. She was a member of NPA's finance commission.

Leopold Joredie: spokesperson for the 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who conducted a gun and machete attack on a French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvea Island in New Caledonia on April 22, 1988, killing 3 policemen and injuring 5 before taking 15 hostage.

Fumihiro Joyu: second in commander of Aum Shin Rikyo released from prison in December 1999. He had headed the group's Moscow offices.

Wa'il Julaidan: Saudi who accompanied Osama bin Laden to Afghanistan in 1980 and fought with him in the 1989 Jalalabad battles. Julaidan had conducted graduate studies in the United States. He served as bin Laden's logistics chief and link to the Islamic nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) in Peshawar, serving as president of the Islamic Coordination Council of 13 NGOs. He also was executive director in 2000 of the Saudi Joint Relief Committee for Kosovo and chief of the Pakistan-based Islamic charity Rabita.

Jung Soon Chun: suspected of being the leader of a group that included the arsonists who set fire to the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others. The college dropout went into hiding on December 9, 1980, after he led an abortive plot to set fire to the U.S. Information Service office in Kwangju. He was arrested in late March 1982, but National Police reported that he had no connection with the Pusan incident. He was booked for the Kwangju incident.

K

---

Wail Racched al-Kaatib: Lebanese and one of six Arabs arrested April 1, 1995, by Philippine authorities in Caloocan (or Kalookan) for being members of the little-known Islamic Saturday Meeting. The group had ties to Ramzi Yusuf. Documents taken from the six detainees indicated they planned to attack U.S. and Saudi citizens in the Philippines. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms and explosives. Police had seized several M-16 Armalite rifles, dynamite, and detonators. Police said the detainees were preparing for a series of bombings to disrupt the May 8 elections. In December 1995, they were tried before the Caloocan City Regional Trial Court for illegal possession of firearms and explosives.

Eid Kabalu: spokesperson in early 2003 of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in the Philippines. On March 9, 2003, Kabalu was charged with the March 4, 2003, bombing by a MILF member at the main terminal of Davao Airport in which 21 people were killed and 149 were injured.

Mohamed Gulam Kabba: Ugandan aid worker who has assisted southern Sudanese refugees and had visited Somalia in 1997 on an official invitation from the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), Kabba was among 20 suspects arrested September 15, 1998, while attempting to enter Uganda from Kenya. The Washington Post claimed the police had been tipped off that the Islamic extremists planned to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Kampala. Two men were believed to be associates of Osama bin Laden. All but four of the suspects were released on October 5. The foursome had not been charged as of October 5, although Ugandan law requires charges be made within 48 hours of arrest.

Laurent Kabila: leader of the group of rebels that kidnapped three Americans and one Dutch student from Jane Goodall's Gombe research camp in Tanzania on May 19, 1975. He went on to become president of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the former Zaire.

Winter Kabwiko: member of the African National Congress of South Africa arrested by police in Lusaka, Zambia, on May 17, 1989, after he shot dead an unnamed woman, age 26. It was not clear whether they had been living together.

Lorenzo Kadama: leader of the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province, on October 22, 1986. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Muna Abdir Kadir: one of four Ethiopians who, on March 8, 1994, hijacked a Saudi Arabian Airlines A300 Airbus on a flight between Addis Ababa and Jeddah and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya. One female hijacker disembarked with the passengers but was arrested. Kenyan troops stormed the plane, shooting an Ethiopian hijacker lured out of the plane and overpowering his female accomplice. Police said they would be tried in Kenya.

Kahafa: alleged by Indian police to have instructed in Pakistan the 10 terrorists who attacked Mumbai locations on November 26–28, 2008.

Abdullahi Hussein Kahie: resident of Mogadishu, Somalia, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier.

Kaka: alias of Mohammad Hussain. One of seven individuals sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Dorie Kalajal: Moro National Liberation Front commander with ties to the Abu Sayyaf Group in the Philippines in late 1994.

Brigadier Foday Kallay: leader of the West Side Boys, former army soldiers who, on August 25, 2000, seized 11 U.K. troops and a Sierra Leonean soldier in the Masiaka-Forodugu area, 60 miles east of Freetown. On September 10, U.K. troops freed the hostages and detained Kallay with two dozen of his followers.

Hoseyn Kambuzian: one of three suspected members of an Iranian hit squad released on April 6, 1984, by the Philippine Commission on Immigration and Deportation in spite of protests over security concerns and accusations of a payoff. Some suspected involvement in the disappearance of nine pro-Shah Iranian students on August 16, 1983.

Fyad H. Abdul Kamil: one of two male Lebanese hijackers of a South African Airways B727 flying from Salisbury, Rhodesia, to Johannesburg, South Africa, on May 24, 1972. The duo threatened to blow up the plane. At a refueling stop in Salisbury, they let some of the passengers deplane. In Blantyre, Malawi, they demanded money from the Anglo-American Mining Company. The next day, all passengers and crew escaped. Troops fired on the jet, and the hijackers were captured. On September 18, 1972, they were sentenced to 11 years. They were released in Malawi in 1974. Some reports claimed they then went to Cairo, while others said they were deported to Zambia on May 21, 1974.

Abdel Rahman al-Kanadi: arrested August 29, 2000, in Pakistan for his role in the Egyptian Islamic Jihad bombing of the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan in 1995. He was carrying a Canadian passport and was chief of the Human Concern International office in Peshawar. Egypt considered requesting extradition.

Kang Chong-chol: senior at Hanyang University and one of five students charged on February 25, 1988, by Seoul police with breaking into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul, smashing three large glass windows, and illegally using explosives in an attack on February 24, 1988, in which they used 30 Molotov cocktails. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths who were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day.

Kang In-song: freshman in the Public Relations Department on the Ansan Campus of Hanyang University who was arrested November 30, 1991, after 70 university students threw 30 firebombs in front of the American Cultural Center in Ulchi-ro, Seoul.

Kang Myong-kun: one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others. Kang Myong-kun was indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982, found guilty, and sentenced on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. Kang Myong-kun attended classes on leftist ideology held at a Christian training camp in 1981. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict.

Yannie Kang: alias of L.S.F.

Mir Aimal Kansi: alias of Amal Kasi.

Tshimanga Kanyindindu: on May 7, 1984, Kanyindindu was sentenced to 20 years for the murder of two people and the destruction of public property in the March 27, 1984, bombing in Kinshasa of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Kao Chun: variant of Gao Jun.

Kao Tung-ping: girlfriend of Zhuo Changren, who joined five others to hijack Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai on May 5, 1983. Her four-year sentence was later commuted. (See also An Chien-wei.)

Toshiro Kaoshi: Japanese Red Army sniper alleged by Quezon City Radyo ng Bayan on September 5, 1988, to be in town just before the Seoul Olympics.

Pravakaran Karatikalan: member of the Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers (probably the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam) arrested May 19, 1982, by Indian police while attacking two fellow Sri Lankans.

Joseph Paul Karoma: imprisoned Sierra Leonean rebel leader whose release was demanded by the rebels who, on August 4, 1999, kidnapped 34 UN employees, aid workers, journalists, and West African peacekeepers during a meeting outside Freetown.

Azam Amir Kasab: variant Ajmal Amir Kasab; alias Muhammad Ajmal Kasab. Lone surviving Lashkar-i-Taiba gunman, age 22, in the November 26–28, 2008, attacks in Mumbai. He claimed to be from Faridkot, in Punjab Province, Pakistan. He said he dropped out of school after the fourth grade. His father owned a food stall. He joined Lashkar-i-Taiba in 2005. He trained with them in Muzaffarabad, Kashmir, Pakistan, where he received extensive Islamic religious training as well as instruction in weapons. He spoke Punjabi and Urdu. He attacked the Leopold Café, the Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus rail station, and the art deco Metro movie theater before his stolen police car was intercepted at Chowpatty, a beach on Mumbai's far west side. Police said that when he was injured and arrested, his backpack contained an AK-47, a pistol, magazines, six hand grenades, raisins, cashews, and the cash equivalent of $110. Police said he would be charged on 12 counts of murder, criminal conspiracy, and waging war against the state. Kasab claimed the attack began from Karachi, Pakistan, where the killers hijacked a fishing trawler.

Basr Kasemi: variant Kazemi; aliases Hammad Habadi Ariwi, Mohammed Hamadi. One of three Iranians arrested June 3, 1994, by police in Hat Yai, Thailand, in connection with the March 5, 1994, discovery of a truck loaded with a ton of explosives in Thailand. Police believed that the detainees planned assassination attempts against senior members of the U.S., Israeli, Pakistani, and other embassies and that the truck bomb was to be used against the Israeli Embassy. On August 16, 1994, he was released for lack of evidence connecting him to the truck bomb.

Farooq Kashmiri: head of Kashmiri operations of the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin told reporters on February 4, 2000, that his group was not involved with the five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport. He said Islam forbids harming innocent civilians.

Mohammed Rizwan Kashmiri: leader of the Harkat-e-Jihad-e-Islami (variant Harkat-ul-Jihad-i-Islami), a Kashmiri separatist group with bases in Bangladesh, in January 2002.

Amal Kasi: alias Mir Aimal Kansi. Pakistani who shot two people to death and wounded three others outside CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia, on January 25, 1993. A search of his room on February 8, 1993, found two semiautomatic pistols, a bulletproof vest, and 550 rounds of ammunition in addition to the AK-47-type assault rifle used in the killings. On February 9, 1993, he was charged with capital murder, first-degree murder, three counts of malicious wounding, five weapons charges, and federal charges of fleeing prosecution. He was described as five feet five inches tall and weighing 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. He was issued a business visa in Karachi, Pakistan, on December 4, 1990, with a birth date of October 22, 1964. He had entered the United States via JFK Airport on March 3, 1991. He also filed an application for asylum in Arlington, Virginia, on February 3, 1992. He hailed from Baluchistan, where he went into hiding in Quetta.

Kasi was the son of a well-known Quetta building contractor who died in 1989. His father founded Pakistan Particle Board in Karachi in the early 1970s. His father's will left 20 million rupees ($500,000) for the construction of the Kasi Ward, a medical general ward in Civil Hospital, Quetta. His father sent him to a prestigious private grammar school. Kasi graduated from Baluchistan University in Quetta with a Master of Arts in English literature and inherited $100,000 after his father's death. In 1988, he became close to students affiliated with the Pashtun Students Organization, the student wing of Mahmood Khan Achakzai's Pakhtoon Khwa Milli Awami Party. Kasi fired shots during a 1989 demonstration against an American professor. He frequently carried a weapon.

On August 23, 1993, the FBI announced a $100,000 reward for information leading to his arrest. On February 18, 1995, the FBI placed him on the 10 Most Wanted List. The reward was increased to two million dollars on October 2, 1995.

On November 11, 1997, Kasi was convicted of the murders of the CIA staffers. The next day, the previously unknown Aimal Secret Committee claimed credit for shooting to death four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan, and threatened to kill more Americans if Kasi was sentenced to death. On August 15, 2002, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit rejected his appeal of his death sentence. The U.S. Supreme Court and Virginia governor Mark R. Warner also rejected his appeals.

He was executed by lethal injection on November 14, 2002.

Hayashi Kasinori: alias of Yoshimi Tanaka.

Mas Selamat bin Kastari: Singaporean member of Jemaah Islamiah (JI) who was believed to have fled Thailand in January 2002. He was suspected of planning to hijack a U.S., U.K., or Singaporean jet flying out of Indonesia, Malaysia, or Thailand and fly it into Singapore's Changi Airport. He was also believed to be involved in plans to bomb the U.S. Embassy and a government building. On February 3, 2003, Indonesian police announced the arrest of Kastari for the hijacking plot. Kastari was picked up on February 2 on the island of Bintan on immigration violations. He had fled Singapore in December 2001. He was deported to Singapore in 2006. He was held under Singapore's Internal Security Act, which permits indefinite detention without trial. On February 28, 2008, Kastari, JI's chief of operations in Singapore, fled from the Whitley Road Detention Center in Singapore after asking to use the restroom. As of March 14, 2008, Kastari, age 47, remained at large. Police described him as five feet two inches tall; weighing 139 pounds; and having a limp.

The JI leader was captured on April 1, 2009, in Johor, Malaysia, in a joint operation involving the security agencies of Malaysia, Indonesia, and Singapore.

Germain Katanga: lieutenant in the Nationalist and Integrationist Front in the Ituri region of the Congo who was placed under house arrest in Kinshasa's Grand Hotel on February 27, 2005, in connection with the February 24, 2005, shooting to death of nine Bangladeshi soldiers serving as part of the UN peacekeeping force near Kafe in the northeast.

Ameril Umbra Kato: one of two Philippine rebel leaders whose surrender was demanded by the Philippine government on August 21, 2008, as part of the peace deal. The rebels balked.

Hisayuki Kawasaki: one of two Aso Red Army commandos who hijacked a Nagasaki bus on October 15, 1977, and held 24 hostages. Police stormed the bus and killed Kawasaki, who had been arrested previously on theft and kidnapping charges. The men were criminals who had used the terrorist ploy to give credibility to their demand to talk to justice minister Mitsuo Setoyama.

Jean Mena Kay: hijacked a Pakistani International Airlines 720B flying from Paris to Karachi, Pakistan, on December 3, 1971. He threatened to blow up the plane if he was not given 20 tons of medicine and flown to Bangladesh. A policeman overpowered him. During the scuffle, another policeman was slightly wounded. Kay was given a five-year suspended sentence in October 1972.

Robert Joseph Keesee: hijacker of a Bira Air Transport general aviation Cessna 182 flying in northern Thailand on September 18, 1970, and diverted to Dong Hoi, North Vietnam. The plane was fired upon while landing on the beach. Keesee was released to U.S. authorities with a group of American prisoners of war on March 14, 1973. He next showed up in the kidnapping and murder of U.S. vice-consul John S. Patterson in Mexico on March 22, 1974. On May 28, 1974, Keesee was arrested in San Diego on U.S. federal charges of planning and participating in the kidnapping. On April 29, 1975, Keesee was sentenced to 20 years for conspiracy to kidnap a diplomat. He and his partner had claimed to be the fictitious People's Liberation Army of Mexico.

Vuyo Kekani: Khayelitha teacher and Pan Africanist Congress member, age 52, detained by South African police in August 1993 in connection with the July 25, 1993, attack by five black gunmen who burst into the St. James Church of England in Kenilworth, a Cape Town suburb, firing AK-47 and R5 rifles and throwing two hand grenades at the congregation, killing 12 and wounding 56.

Harold Keke: Solomon Islands warlord who ordered the kidnapping and murder of Anglican missionaries in April 2003. Keke apparently used the group as human shields, and they were killed by one of his lieutenants.

Kembissila: sentenced to 20 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court for the detonation of two bombs on March 20, 1982, that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Robert Keouane: Central African Republic national tried in absentia and sentenced to 20 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court for the detonation of two bombs on March 20, 1982, that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Amanullah Kha: arrested September 5, 1985, in the United Kingdom in connection with the Kashmir Liberation Army (KLA)'s kidnapping of Ravindra Hareshma Mhatre, assistant commissioner of the Indian High Commission in Birmingham, United Kingdom, on February 3, 1984. The kidnappers killed Mhatre. Kha was the leader of the KLA.

C. Abdul Khadar: named by the Hindustan Times as being a Punjabi terrorist involved in a 1993 meeting to plan a campaign with underworld boss Dawood Ibrahim to undertake stabbings, killings, arson, and looting in Bombay and other parts of Gujarat.

Ahmed Said Khadr: Canadian investigated as a terrorism financier in March 2005. He was suspected of sending money to a terrorist group via a charity he ran; he died in an October 2003 gun battle in Pakistan.

Mehmoooh Khalib: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. He was believed to be a would-be suicide bomber who came to Barcelona from Pakistan between October 2007 and mid-January 2008.

Khalid: accomplice of Ahmad Saeed, director of Human Concern International Peshawar, who was arrested by Pakistani authorities on the Afghanistan frontier on December 3, 1995, on suspicion of financing the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. Police were searching for Khalid, the Egyptian fiancé of Saeed's daughter, as of December 11, 1995. He reportedly was in Saudi Arabia.

Kazi Parvez Khalid: one of six Pakistani passport holders who were among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati.

Saad Khalid: son, age 19, of a Pakistani technologist who was one of 17 people arrested June 2, 2006, in nighttime raids in the Toronto suburbs. The 17 had a huge cache of explosives, including three tons of ammonium nitrate and a detonator made from a cell phone. They were planning to set off truck bombs at public targets, including power plants in Ontario, the Parliament building in Ottawa, the Toronto stock exchange, and the Toronto offices of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service near the downtown CN Tower. A police spokesperson denied the group had targeted the Toronto subway system. The group also planned to take over the Canadian Parliament, hold hostages, and behead prime minister Stephen Harper if Canada did not withdraw its 2,300 troops from Afghanistan. They also planned to demand the release of Muslim prisoners in Afghanistan and Iraq. The group wanted to take over the downtown Toronto studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. They had talked about using remote-controlled toys to carry explosives into police stations.

The next day in court they were charged under antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. They had Arabic names and ranged in age from 15 to 43. Most were believed to be Canadian citizens, but they also included people from Somalia, Egypt, and Pakistan. Most were born in Canada or arrived as young children. Police said the group had trained outside Toronto and were "adherents of a virulent ideology inspired by al Qaeda." Most were to be charged with planning to set off large explosions and receiving terrorist training. Canadian authorities spotted the 17 via Internet chat rooms, e-mail, and telephone communications. They had communicated with fellow militants in the United States and Europe.

On June 4, the Toronto Star reported the government had provided the terrorists with three tons of explosives in a sting operation. They had intercepted the ammonium nitrate and substituted harmless powder before the arrests. Once the group paid the $4,000 for the materials, they were arrested. More arrests outside Canada were expected. Authorities were looking into whether the detainees had links to Islamists held in the United States, United Kingdom, Bangladesh, Bosnia, Denmark, and Sweden. Police said 10 of the men had gathered in a wooded area near Washago, 90 miles north of Toronto, for terrorism training.

Khalid reportedly set up the Religious Awareness Club at Meadowvale Secondary School to preach Islam. His father had lived in Saudi Arabia before immigrating to Canada a decade before the arrests. Khalid spent time with Fahim Ahmad, 21, and Zakaria Amara. Khalid was represented by attorney Arif Raza.

Al-'Arabi Khalifah: named by Cairo's MENA on May 16, 1996, as one of three men who confessed to the Ethiopians for involvement in the June 26, 1995, attempted assassination of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak. The three said they had visited Pakistan, Afghanistan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, and Sudan.

Muhammad Jamal A. Khalifah: brother-in-law of Osama bin Laden and financier of the Abu Sayyaf Group in 1991 to 1994 and the Jordan-based Islamist group Mohammed's Army. Earlier, in the late 1980s and early 1990s, Khalifah had lived in the Philippines where he ran a Muslim religious center for several years and arranged for recruits for Afghanistan. He was sentenced to death in absentia with a group of Jordanian Afghans on December 21, 1994, by the Jordanian State Security Court for belonging to an illegal society, participating in a conspiracy to carry out terrorist acts, and possessing explosives for illegal purposes. The Muslim fundamentalists bombed cinemas on January 26, 1994, and February 1, 1994, wounding nine people. The group had been seized in a crackdown on Muslim radicals in January 1994. Their trial began on August 27, 1994, when they were accused of planning to assassinate leading Jordanians, including 'Abd-al-Salam al-Majali, Jordan's former chief peace negotiator with Israel. Khalifah was arrested in December 1994 by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Francisco on immigration law violations and was investigated for links with terrorists. He had lied on his visa application, denying criminal charges pending against him. He had entered the United States two weeks earlier on a visa issued by the U.S. Consulate in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. Authorities found a bomb-making manual among his possessions. He was a member of the International Islamic Relief Organization, a Saudi-financed charity that sent money to Hamas. He was deported to Jordan and retried on terrorism charges. He was acquitted and moved to Saudi Arabia.

On January 31, 2007, Khalifah was assassinated in Madagascar.

Rabi' 'Abd-al-Ghani Khalifah: on August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution named him as one of five terrorists who had confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Abdullah Khalil: one of the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, the Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986. The hijackers threw grenades and fired machine guns at the passengers, killing 22 and injuring 100 others. Khalil was arrested at the scene. On September 8, he was charged with hijacking an aircraft, murder, attempted murder, and several other crimes. He carried a Bahraini passport. The United States filed a protection arrest warrant against the four so it could request extradition in case Pakistan decided not to prosecute. On January 5, 1988, during their trial in a courtroom at the Adiyala prison, the five accused hijackers admitted taking over the plane with the intention of blowing it up over Israel after securing the release of 1,500 Palestinians from Israeli prisons.

Muhammad 'Abd-al-Radi Khalil: alias Ihab. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme

State Security Prosecution charged the nine of forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate state figures, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Hafiz Abdul Khaliq: al Qaeda suspect arrested by Pakistani authorities on August 31, 2004, at the Matla-ul-Uloom-ul-Arabiyya (Horizon of Arabic Knowledge) school in Quetta run by Hafiz Hussain Ahmed, deputy parliamentary leader of Pakistani's main Islamic bloc, the Muttahida Majlis-e-Amal. He was visiting India with a parliamentary delegation when the raid occurred.

Mohminder Singh Khalsa: one of three men charged with a bombing campaign in mid-May 1985 that left 84 people dead and 100 injured throughout India. He died of a heart attack after 24 hours in police custody.

Sukhbir Singh Khalsa: one of two Sikh activists arrested in February 1984 who admitted to carrying out a grenade attack against the Soviet Embassy in New Delhi in August 1983.

Salmin Mohammed Khamis: arrested June 17, 2003, by Kenyan police for involvement in the November 2002 al Qaeda bombing of a hotel north of Mombasa. On October 24, 2003, the press reported that he told investigators that al Qaeda was going to destroy the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi in June with a truck bomb and an explosives-laden hijacked plane. The embassy was closed June 20 to 24. Kenya had banned flights to and from Somalia from June 20 to July 8. Khamis mentioned a coded e-mail from Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan, an at-large suspect in the hotel bombing, who had invited Khamis to participate in "al Qaeda activities." Khamis had attended a meeting of al Qaeda terrorists in May in Malindi, a coastal venue, where he met with Nabhan, two Somalis, and an Arab.

On June 27, 2005, Nairobi chief magistrate Aggrey Muchelule said the evidence was not strong enough to connect Kubwa Mohammed Seif, Said Saggar, Ahmed, and Khamis to the hotel bombing or the following attempt to shoot down a chartered Israeli plane. In summer 2003, the trio was charged with murder in the hotel bombing, but in November, the charges were reduced to conspiracy. On May 10, 2005, the prosecution dropped two other counts linking the suspects to the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy and the 2003 plot to destroy the new U.S. Embassy.

Abdul Qudoos Khan: Pakistani member of the Jamaat-e-Islami, Pakistan's largest religious party, who provided safe haven to Khalid Sheik Mohammed. He was arrested with Mohammed on March 1, 2003, in Rawalpindi, Pakistan.

Abdullah Khan: Toronto-born son of an Egyptian terrorist killed in a shootout with Pakistani police. On December 2, 2005, Khan returned to Canada following 14 months in a Pakistani prison. He was arrested on an extradition warrant from the United States for conspiracy to murder Americans abroad. He was suspected by the United States of being a weapons supplier for al Qaeda and part of the plot to assassinate Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf in December 2003. His brother Omar, age 19, was held in Guantánamo Bay for throwing a grenade that killed a U.S. Army medic in Afghanistan.

Aga Khan: Indian who was one of four people detained on January 19, 1999, and charged with involvement in a plot by Osama bin Laden to bomb the U.S. Embassy and two consular offices in Madras and Calcutta. The attacks were to take place before the January 26 anniversary of the Indian constitution. Police recovered two kilograms of RDX explosives and five detonators when they arrested them in Siliguri, in West Bengal State.

Ahmed Ali Khan: variant of Ali Ahmed Khan.

Ali Ahmed Khan: variant Ahmed Ali Khan; alias Abdulla Ahmed Ali. Arrested by British authorities on August 20, 2006, as a key facilitator in a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. He took direction from Rashid Rauf. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. They were also charged with conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. Khan lived in Walthamstow, United Kingdom. On his martyrdom video, he claimed to be the leader of the “blessed operation,” observing that “sheik Osama has warned you many times to leave our lands or you will be destroyed, and now the time has come for you to be destroyed.” The West should “stop meddling in our affairs. Otherwise, expect floods of martyr operations against you. We will take our revenge, [leaving] your people’s body parts decorating the streets.”

On June 2, 2008, Khan, age 27, told the jury that he was not involved in an airliner plot but had looked into setting off a nonlethal bomb at the British Parliament to protest U.K. participation in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. He said he and fellow defendant Assad Sarwar went to Pakistan to work with Afghan refugees and that they had considered bombing the Bank of England and the Canary Wharf financial district.

Khan’s family had moved to the United Kingdom from Pakistan in the 1960s.

Amanula Khan: variant Amanullah Khan. Leader of the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front in India in June 1991. On July 1, 1991, he demanded to hand over an Israeli hostage to the UN in Srinagar.

On October 18, 1993, Belgian police arrested him when he arrived in Brussels at the invitation of the Socialist Group of the European Parliament.

Brussels turned down India’s extradition request. Khan was expelled to Pakistan in late December. He had a legitimate visa, but it had been issued without consulting the central list of wanted persons.

Amanullah Khan: variant of Amanula Khan.

Ayub Ali Khan: one of two Indian Muslims arrested September 12, 2001, by police in Texas who pulled them from an Amtrak train. They had hair dye, box cutters, and $5,000 in cash. The Indian duo boarded TWA Flight 679 on September 11, which left Newark at 6:10 A.M. The plane was grounded in St. Louis after the terrorist attacks, at which point the duo boarded the train. Khan had two Indian passports with different names for his parents and different addresses. Mohammed Jaweed Azmath had two passports that included fake names for his parents and different dates of birth. As of December 8, Khan was being investigating for possessing a false passport and fraudulently obtaining a work permit. Indian officials said they came from lower-middle-class families in Hyderabad. The duo lived in a Jersey City apartment, where the Wall Street Journal found stories about bioterrorism. Investigators conducted anthrax tests. The duo’s former roommate, Mohammad Aslam Pervez, was indicted in mid-October on charges of lying to the FBI about financial transactions. Pervez was held without bond. Police were investigating how the two sent $64,000 to relatives. By mid-December, the government was backing away from suggesting they were part of the 9/11 plot. Khan was represented in New York by attorney Lawrence Feitell. The duo faced new charges on December 13 that they ran up $470,000 on fraudulent credit cards.

Azfat Khan: one of three Pakistani sailors arrested May 2, 1995, in Rosario, Argentina, while taking photos of the Argentine Zionist Union building at 2555 Salta Street in the old Pichincha District. They were placed at the disposal of Federal Judge Galeano. The trio worked on the Cypriot ship Mastrogorgis B, moored in Rosario. Police were investigating whether they were involved in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israel Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 96 and wounded 231.

Ishtiaq Ahmed Khan: one of 35 suspected foreign terrorists arrested by Philippine government agents on December 20, 1995, in Ermita, Manila. On January 11, 1996, the chief of the Bureau of Immigration ordered the Pakistani's release, along with three other Pakistanis, as there was no basis for filing criminal charges.

Ismail Khan: leader, age 26, of the 10 terrorists who attacked Mumbai, India, on November 26–28, 2008. Khan was from Pakistan's Dera Ismail Khan city. He died in the attacks.

Khalid Khan: Dutch national of Indian origin arrested October 3, 1981, in New Delhi in connection with the September 29, 1981, hijacking by the Dal Khalsa of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Majid Khan: Guantánamo Bay Pakistani detainee, age 27, selected by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed to bomb gas stations in the United States per the U.S. government.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On April 15, 2007, in his Combatant Status Review Tribunal hearing, Khan, who had graduated from a Baltimore area high school in 1999, said he tried to commit suicide and lost 30 pounds during a 27-day hunger strike. He claimed he helped the FBI detain an illegal Pakistani immigrant in 2002. Prosecutors said he took orders from Khalid Sheik Mohammed and was asked to determine how to poison U.S. reservoirs and blow up U.S. gas stations. He was also considered for membership in a team involved in an assassination attempt on Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. Khan had been detained in March 2003 while staying with his brother in Pakistan. He was represented by attorney Gitanjali Gutierrez.

Masoud Ahmad Khan: Khan, age 31, of Gaithersburg, Maryland, was one of 11 members of a "Virginia jihad network" named in a 42-count federal indictment on June 25, 2003, for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. There was no evidence they intended attacks within the United States, although Khan had downloaded an Internet photo of FBI Headquarters. On September 25, a new indictment was issued against seven defendants. Khan was charged with conspiracy to provide material support to al Qaeda and the Taliban.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, claiming that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. Seifullah Chapman, Hammad Abdur-Raheem, Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem, and Masoud Ahmad Khan (represented by Bernard Grimm and Jonathan Shapiro, who defended now-convicted Washington-area sniper John Allen Muhammad) were scheduled for a February 9 bench trial in front of Judge Brinkema.

On March 4, 2004, Judge Brinkema found three of the defendants guilty of conspiring to aid Lashkar-i-Taiba and weapons charges. She rejected the charge against Masoud Khan that he conspired to provide material support to al Qaeda. Khan was the only defendant convicted of conspiracy to wage war against the United States and assist the Taliban. On June 15, 2004, Judge Brinkema imposed a life sentence on Khan. On July 29, 2005, Judge Brinkema reduced the sentence by 20 years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Mohammad Ahmad Khan: Pakistani who surrendered to police in Manila on December 17, 1995, in connection with the arrests of five Pakistanis from Karachi on December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement. Khan was a cousin of Mohammad Nubin Khan, also arrested. On January 11, 1996, the chief of the Bureau of Immigration ordered the Pakistani's release, along with three other Pakistanis, as there was no basis for filing criminal charges.

Mohammad Mubi Khan: variant of Mohammad Nubin Khan.

Mohammad Nubin Khan: variant Mohammad Mubi Khan. Arrested in Manila in connection with the arrests of five Pakistanis from Karachi on December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement. Khan was a cousin of Mohammad Ahmed Khan, also arrested. On January 11, 1996, the chief of the Bureau of Immigration ordered the Pakistani's release, along with three other Pakistanis, as there was no basis for filing criminal charges.

Mohammad Rashid Khan: gambling kingpin and Muslim owner of a three-story residential building in which a bomb exploded on March 17, 1993, at Bow Bazaar Street in central Calcutta's Muslim district, killing 86 people and wounding 125. Police believed the blast was caused by carelessly handled explosives stockpiled for bomb making. Police found 25 live bombs at the blast site. Khan was arrested.

Dr. Mohammed Khan: wanted by the FBI for questioning regarding terrorism. He claims to have been born in Pakistan on March 4, 1970. He is considered armed and dangerous.

Mohammed Sher Mohammad Khan: the FBI announced on February 7, 2003, that it wanted to question the Pakistani in connection with terrorist threats against the United States. Khan may have entered the United States illegally after 9/11. The FBI said his name and birth date could be fictitious.

Mohammed Sidique Khan: variant of Sidique Khan.

Mohd Aslam bin Yar Ali Khan: one of a group of suspects—17 Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) and 1 Moro Islamic Liberation Front—arrested in August 2002 by Singaporean authorities for planning terrorist attacks against Western sites. Senior JI member Mohd Aslam bin Yar Ali Khan took over Ab Wahab bin Ahmad's magazine delivery route so he could videotape the Singapore Ministry of Defense, which was on the route. (See also Ab Wahab bin Ahmad.)

Mufti Mohammed Khan: Osama bin Laden associate from Pakistan arrested hours after the 9/11 attacks when he arrived at London's Heathrow Airport from New York. The Sunday Telegraph said he was to meet with bin Laden allies in London and Birmingham. The Telegraph claimed he was sent back to New York for questioning by the FBI.

Muhajid Khan: one of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested December 16, 1995, by Pakistani police in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The suspects were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement. The Manila Bulletin on December 20, 1995, said Khan was “the most wanted person in Karachi for murder and terroristic activities.”

Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan: alias Abu Talha. British Pakistani, age 25, arrested in Pakistan on July 13, 2004, on suspicion of involvement in the 2004 al Qaeda threat to U.S. and U.K. financial centers. He had been sending coded e-mails to other al Qaeda operatives planning attacks in the United States, United Kingdom, and South Africa. Data on Khan's computers led 12 days later to Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, a Tanzanian al Qaeda terrorist arrested July 25 (his detention was announced in early August) for his role in the August 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He was also linked to terror plots in the United States and United Kingdom, where 12 of his colleagues, including Dhiren Barot, were arrested. Information from those captures, including maps and photos found on their computers, led to a U.S. government warning about possible al Qaeda attacks on financial institutions in the United States and Washington, D.C.

He was released on August 20, 2007, after three years in custody and returned to his Karachi home. He was represented by attorney Babar Awan, who said his client was never charged or brought before any court.

Muzafar Khan: Pakistani who was one of three people arrested April 2, 2000, in Torkham, a Pakistani border crossing at the foot of the Khyber Pass, as they were trying to enter Afghanistan. The two Pakistanis were suspected of affiliation with the Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, which sends fighters to Indian Kashmir. Their Yemeni companion reportedly had ties to Osama bin Laden.

Nayeem Khan: member of the outlawed Indian group the People's League, which opposes Kashmir's 1947 accession to India. On April 5, 1991, the separatist Muslim Janbaz Force demanded his release, as well as that of his parents, in exchange for the two Swedish engineers kidnapped on March 31, 1991, between Tangmarg and Gulmarg in Kashmir in northern India.

Parviz Khan: arrested January 31, 2007, as the leader, age 36, of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading. Khan had planned to kidnap the serviceman in the Broad Street entertainment area of Birmingham. He was charged with providing equipment and funding for the plan. He was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. In mid-January 2008, Khan pleaded guilty to sending night-vision equipment, sleeping bags, walkie-talkies, computer equipment, and other gear to Pakistan to be used by extremists. The shipments had been made in 2005 and 2006. His plea was made public on January 29 at the opening of the trial of two codefendants. Khan had been stopped by U.K. authorities on his return from Pakistan in July 2006 when they found him carrying a notebook of “a shopping list from terrorist contacts of materials they wanted sent back in the next delivery.” He was under surveillance until his arrest.

Piloo Khan: variant Tilu Khan. Charged by Indian police on March 15, 1993, of direct involvement in planting several bombs that went off during the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250. He and fellow defendant Mangeshkar Gajanand Pawar had been arrested or convicted 18 times on charges of murder, attempted murder, kidnapping, extortion, and narcotics trafficking and had been linked to some of Bombay's many crime networks. The duo escaped the afternoon of March 15 in north Bombay during a shootout with police who were attempting to arrest them.

Raza Nasir Khan: Pakistani detained circa November 2001 after a New Jersey official became suspicious when Khan asked for maps of a hunting area near a nuclear power plant and had a handheld global positioning device. Khan said he had videotaped the World Trade Center days before the attacks. He was charged with illegal possession of firearms.

Roshan Jamal Khan: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell who were arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Saifullah Khan: Pakistani member of Harkat ul-Ansar arrested November 2, 1994, by Delhi police. He admitted his involvement in the October 19, 1994, kidnapping of three British tourists by Kashmiri militants. He said he had received weapons training in Afghanistan and Pakistan-occupied Kashmir.

Sher Khan: Indian Muslim separatist guerrilla shot dead on December 19, 1995, by Indian police in Srinagar, Kashmir, during a gun battle. He was believed to have shot to death U.S. tourist Stephen Paul Austerley Obuka in Habbakadal or Srinagar on July 19, 1994. Khan was wanted for several other murders and crimes in the area.

Sidique Khan: variant Mohammed Sidique Khan. Teaching assistant, age 30, at a Leeds public school who, on July 7, 2005, at 9:17 A.M., placed a bomb on the floor of the second carriage of London Underground Circle Line train 216 leaving Edgware Road Station for Paddington Station. The explosion ripped through a wall, damaged two other trains, and killed seven people. Khan was born in the United Kingdom to Pakistani parents. He was married and had an 8-month-old girl. He had recently moved to Dewsbury. He had earned a degree in education from Leeds University. He traveled to Karachi, Pakistan, with Shehzad Tanweer on November 16, 2004, on a Turkish Airlines flight and flew home with him on February 7, 2005. They had stayed at separate addresses near Lahore. Khan was in Israel for a day in the spring of 2003. The Sunday Telegraph said that in Pakistan in fall 2004, Khan, the leader of the team that set off four bombs that day, met with Mohammed Yasin (alias Ustad Osama), an explosives expert who manufactured "suicide jackets" for Harkat-e-Jihad.

On April 24, 2008, the prosecution played a video Khan made in November 2004 in which Khan bounces his baby girl on his knee and says, "Sweetheart, not long to go now. And I'm going to really, really miss you a lot. I'm thinking about it already. Look, I absolutely love you to bits and you have been the happiest thing in my life." He said he was "doing what I'm doing for the sake of Islam. I just wish I could have been part of your life. I just so much wanted to be with you. But I have to do this thing for our future and it will be best ... in the long run. That's the most important thing." In another video made in October 2004, Khan introduced her to her "uncles," including Waheed Ali, one of the defendants.

Tilu Khan: variant of Piloo Khan.

Omar Elmi Khareh: sentenced to life in prison in France in 1968 for attempting to assassinate French Territory of Afars and Issas political leader Ali Aref. His release was demanded by the Somali Coast Liberation Front kidnappers of French ambassador Jean Gueury on March 23, 1975, in Somalia. France agreed to the group's demands.

Joe Khatide: one of three members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa who were arrested May 19, 1988, in a house in Manzini, Swaziland, during a raid by police, who confiscated an AK-47 automatic rifle, a fully loaded AK-47 magazine, a hand grenade, and 57 rounds of ammunition. They were charged with illegal possession of arms of war and ammunition. On June 7, 1988, Khatide was freed in the Manzani Magistrates Court by Magistrate Tim Busenga after accused ANC member Nomsa Mavuso admitted she brought the hidden weapons without the knowledge of her codefendants.

Ahmad Javed Khawaja: gastroenterologist who was one of nine family members arrested by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen was a former resident of Florida. On March 5, 2003, he remained in jail awaiting trial. On May 31, 2003, the three-judge panel of the Lahore bench of the Supreme Court ordered his release. The decision cannot be appealed. The decision came a few days after he was found not guilty of multiple charges; prosecutors had sought to hold the two men despite their acquittal.

Ahmad Naveed Khawaja: Canadian who was one of nine family members arrested by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. He was a former resident of Florida. On March 5, 2003, he remained in jail awaiting trial. On May 31, 2003, the three-judge panel of the Lahore bench of the Supreme Court ordered his release. The decision cannot be appealed. The decision came a few days after he was found not guilty of multiple charges; prosecutors had sought to hold the two men despite their acquittal.

Omar Karar Khawaja: variant Umar Karar Khawaja. One of nine family members arrested by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen was a former resident of Florida. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Umar Karar Khawaja: variant of Omar Karar Khawaja.

Usman Ali Khawaja: Canadian arrested with eight other family members by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Santokh Singh Khela: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. Each suspect was initially charged with conspiracy to possess explosives with intent to injure. On December 24, 1986, he was found guilty of conspiring to blow up an airplane and was sentenced to life in prison.

Michael Khumalo: one of two members of the African National Congress of South Africa arrested October 17, 1987, in Mbabane, Swaziland. Police seized large trunks of arms, ammunition, and explosives.

S. S. Khurana: one of three suspected Sikh militants arrested by Nepalese police at Tribhuvan International Airport on May 22, 1985, as they were boarding Indian Airlines Flight 404 bound for New Delhi. Police found they were carrying bombs in transistor radios and suspected they intended to hijack the plane.

Omar Khyam: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot.

Mohammed Junaid Babar, who had pleaded guilty to terrorism charges in a federal court in New York in 2004, was the government's key witness. In June 2003, Khyam met Babar in Pakistan to say that the United Kingdom was "unscathed and needed to be hit because of its support for the United States." Judge Michael Astill issued a life sentence to Omar Khyam, age 26, for conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. (See also Jawad Akbar.)

Ki Ung-yol: Hanyang University junior hospitalized with a head injury sustained on October 18, 1990, in a skirmish with riot police when 11 radical students were arrested as they tried to seize the U.S. Embassy in South Korea to protest against the Uruguay Round negotiations. The members of the National Alliance of Student Representatives were armed with 4 homemade bombs, 20 firebombs, and 7 metal clubs.

Tetsuya Kibe: senior Aum Shin Rikyo member sentenced on October 12, 1995, to a year in jail for trespassing. Tokyo judge Hironobu Takezaki said he had "caused anxiety to society" by transferring gun parts between two cars in a private parking lot in Tokyo to escape a police search.

Haji Musa Kigango: chief administrator of territory held by the Ugandan rebel group National Resistance Army. On November 13, 1985, Kigango claimed credit for an ongoing hijacking.

Sipho Kikaya: Pan Africanist Congress member detained by South African police in connection with the July 25, 1993, attack by five black gunmen who burst into the St. James Church of England in Kenilworth, a Cape Town suburb, firing AK-47 and R5 rifles and throwing two hand grenades at the congregation, killing 12 and wounding 56.

Naoko Kikuchi: Aum Shin Rikyo member wanted by Japanese police in connection with the May 16, 1995, parcel bomb attack on Tokyo governor Yukio Aoshima. On February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for him in connection with a plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

Shunsuke Kikuchi: Japanese who reported his passport had been lost in September 1984 while visiting India. On May 14, 1986, homemade rockets were fired at the U.S. and Japanese embassies in Jakarta from room 827 in the President Hotel. The room had been rented to a man with Kikuchi's passport later identified as Japanese Red Army terrorist Tsutomu Shirozaki.

Yu Kikumura: Japanese citizen arrested at Amsterdam's Schipol Airport on May 1, 1986, as he claimed his luggage, which contained a one-kilogram bomb, detonators, six fuses, and a false passport. He had arrived on a flight from Athens. He said he intended to use the bomb on an Israeli or U.S. target. He was charged with smuggling explosives. He had ties with Arab terrorist organizations. He was deported to Japan but was acquitted by Japanese courts after three months because of questions about the initial search.

On April 12, 1988, Hackensack police arrested Kikumura at the Vine Lombardi rest station in Ridgefield off the New Jersey Turnpike. He had three powerful homemade bombs and empty gunpowder boxes in the back seat of his 1980 Mazda. He was ordered held without bail for possession of the bombs and entering the United States at JFK International Airport on March 8 with a fraudulent three-month visa obtained in Paris on February 23 by using a stolen Japanese passport issued to Masatoshi Kishizono, an Osaka hospital worker. He faced charges that carried penalties of up to 90 years in prison and $260,000 in fines. He was remanded to federal custody at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan. He pleaded not guilty to federal charges on April 29 on advice of his lawyers, William Kunstler and Ronald Kuby. Kikumura was believed to have joined the Japanese Red Army in 1974, when he ran a bookstore in Athens. Police were investigating whether he was involved with Junzo Okudaira, who was sought for renting the car that exploded in front of a Naples, Italy, USO club on April 16 in which five people were killed. Kikumura had been in Italy six weeks before the bombing. On November 29, 1988, U.S. District Court Judge Alfred Lechner declared him guilty. On January 23, 1989, he was to be sentenced to a maximum of 100 years or life in prison.

Kim Chi-hi: arrested in the arson attack against the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, that killed a Korean student and injured three others. Indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982. He was found guilty and sentenced to 10 years on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdicts.

Kim Chin-ha: one of three radical students charged with attempting to break into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) American Cultural Center in Taegu, Samdok-dong, South Korea, after they threw three firebombs and two tear gas grenades at the facility on June 13, 1988. Kim was a senior math major and chairman of the student body at Taegu Teacher's College. On June 8, he and two others had formed a secret society called the Shock Brigade of Students in Taegu Regions for Saving the Nation.

Kim Chol: Seoul police reported that Chol provided an explosive to An Nae-sang, who planted it in a bookshelf in the library of the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju on February 24, 1988

Comrade Kim: spokesperson on June 26, 1990, for the New People's Army of the Philippines kidnappers of Fumio Mizuno, a Japanese citizen working as an overseer for development projects in Central Negros Occidental Province on May 29, 1990.

Kim Ho Ryon: leader of the Chosen Soren in Japan in 1974. He was identified by Mun Se Kwang, the would-be assassin of South Korean president Park Chung Hee on August 15, 1974, as having ordered the hit. Kwang said he received funds from Kim and worked out the assassination plan with him.

Kim Hwa-ok: arrested April 8, 1982, by South Cholla Province police as one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others.

Kim Hyon-chang: arrested April 8, 1982, by Wonju police as one of the leaders of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others. Kim was indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982, found guilty, and sentenced to death on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. Kim attended classes on leftist ideology held at a Christian training camp in 1981. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict. On March 15, 1983, president Chun Doo-Hwan commuted his death sentence to life in prison.

Kim Hyon Hee: variant of Kim Hyon Hui.

Kim Hyon Hui: variant Kim Hyon Hee. Claimed in a January 15, 1988, press conference that she was directed by Kim Jong Il to bomb Korean Air Lines Flight 858 on November 29, 1987, in Abu Dhabi. She claimed Kim Hyon Hui was her real name and that she was the eldest daughter of Kim Won-sok, a North Korean diplomat stationed in Angola as a fishing attaché. On February 3, 1989, she was formally indicted for the deaths of all 115 aboard the plane. She faced the death penalty for violating the National Security Law and Aviation Law. Her trial opened on March 7, 1989, by which time she had received dozens of marriage proposals from South Korean men. On April 24, 1989, the Seoul District Court convicted her and sentenced her to death. On May 1, 1989, her court-appointed attorneys persuaded her to appeal. On July 22, 1989, the Seoul Appellate Court upheld the death sentence, but she was pardoned in April 1990 on the grounds that she had been brainwashed by the North Korean government. On January 21, 1993, she was barred from entering the United States. She wanted to go to New York to attend a party to celebrate the publication of the English-language version of her autobiography, The Tears of My Soul.

Kim Il Su: alias of Yoshimi Tanaka.

Kim Min-sok: the chairman of the Seoul National University Student Council and one of 72 demonstrators who attacked the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul on May 23, 1985. On October 2, 1985, he was sentenced to five years in prison.

Kim Mun-su: medical student arrested October 27, 1988, after 20 college students threw dozens of firebombs at a branch of the KorAm Bank in southern Seoul.

Kim Myong-hui: one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others. Kim Myong-hui was indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982, found guilty, and sentenced on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. Kim Myong-hui attended classes on leftist ideology held at a Christian training camp in 1981. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict.

Kim Pong-chin: head of a branch temple of the Won Buddhist Church in Yongsan who was indicted for offering a hiding place to one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others.

Richard Kiri Kim: Oregon resident, age 51, and member of the California-based anticommunist Cambodian Freedom Fighters, who, on November 24, 2000, claimed credit for a midnight shoot-out at a police station and government buildings in Phnom Penh in which seven died and a dozen were wounded. On June 22, 2001, a Cambodian court accused Kim of being a key planner of the attack.

Kim Si-yol: senior student at Korea University and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Kim Sok-kyu: on July 26, 1989, Seoul police put the geography education senior at Seoul National University on a wanted list as being one of six South Korean college students who failed to seize the U.S. Information Service (USIS) building in Seoul on July 24, 1989.

Steve Kim: Korean American, age 57, who protested against North Korea on October 3, 2002, by firing seven shots from a .357 pistol in front of the United Nations headquarters, hitting several offices but causing no injuries. The naturalized U.S. citizen, a postal worker in Des Plaines, Illinois, was born in Korea. At the time of the shooting, the UN Security Council was meeting on Iraq. U.S. Secret Service agents, in the area to protect Cyprus president Glafcos Clerides, grabbed Kim just outside the building. Kim threw anti-North Korean leaflets in the area. He was expected to be arraigned in federal court in Manhattan for violation of the Protection of Foreign Officials Act. On April 3, 2003, he pleaded guilty to a single charge of making a violent attack on a foreign official. He said he did not intend to hurt anyone. He faced three years in prison.

Kim Ui-chung: junior majoring in civil engineering at Hanyang University and one of several South Korean students who, on October 13, 1989, forced their way into U.S. ambassador Donald Gregg's residence and set off explosives. The six students threw homemade bombs and Molotov cocktails at local guards, demanding that Washington stop pressuring Seoul to open its markets to U.S. agricultural and fishery products. The group was arrested while staging a sit-in in the residence's reception room. They claimed to be members of an anti-U.S. national salvation shock brigade struggling to attain national sovereignty. Police took homemade bombs, a tear gas canister, Molotov cocktails, and six steel pipes from the students. The six were charged with violating the anti-firebomb law and the law governing assault and battery. On November 10, 1989, prosecutors indicted the six students and ordered a nationwide manhunt for four others.

Kim Un-suk: arrested April 1, 1982, by Wonju police in the arson attack against the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, that killed a Korean student and injured three others. She was the companion of the suspected mastermind of the attack, Mun Pu-Sik. Kim Un-suk was indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982, found guilty, and sentenced to 10 years on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict.

Kim Yong-hui: one of 14 students armed with incendiary devices who occupied the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Seoul for 2½ hours before being overpowered and arrested by police on November 5, 1985.

Kim Yong-Hwan: demonstrator from Choson University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea. On February 22, 1990, a district criminal court sentenced three of the students, including Kim Yong-Hwan, to suspended prison terms of 2½ years for the firebombing; his sentence was suspended for four years. The trio was charged with blocking official duties, resulting in injuries and fire.

A. Kimihiro: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Yosida Kimtaro: one of nine Japanese United Red Army (JURA) hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. On January 12, 1988, one of the remaining JURA hijackers said in a media interview that Kimtaro had died from illness in 1985.

Romulo "Rolly" Kintanar: senior New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines member in 1989 who was married to Gloria Jopson, former wife of former NPA leader Edgar Jopson. Kintanar and Gloria escaped from the Camp Crame stockade in November 1988, six months after they were captured in San Juan. Kintanar was out of his confined area in order to present a birthday cake to his prison warden. Near Gloria's parents' home, police found the getaway car used by NPA's sparrow hit team in the April 21, 1989, assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Kintanar, chief of staff of NPA's general command, claimed credit for the attack on April 22, 1989. The government offered a $36,000 reward for his capture. He and his wife were captured by police on August 5, 1991.

Akira Kitagawa: expelled from France for his involvement in the Japanese Red Army's Operation Translation. On September 3, 1975, he was deported to Japan under Sweden's Anti-Terrorism Act. Japanese police arrested him upon his arrival at Tokyo International Airport. He was held for violation of the passport law.

Kouichi Kitamura: on February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for Kitamura in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

Kittu: one of three Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam gunmen who set off a truck bomb on January 31, 1996, at the Central Bank of Sri Lanka building in Colombo, killing 90 and wounding 1,400. The trio crashed an Isuzu truck into the security barricade at the front of the bank. Two gunmen fired automatic weapons at the guards, some of whom returned fire while others fled. The terrorist fired a grenade in front of a nearby office building. For several minutes, the driver attempted to crash the truck through the security barriers and finally rammed his vehicle into the building, causing the first two floors to collapse. The gunmen were grabbed by local citizens as they were fleeing a bakery after dropping off grenades, a suicide kit, two bombs, and two walkie-talkies.

Gaspard Kivouna: sentenced to 20 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court in the March 20, 1982, detonation of two bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Javed Akhter Kiyani: one of four Pakistani members of the Pakistan People's Party who, on March 26, 1991, hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur–Singapore route. After nine hours of negotiations, the Singapore Army stormed the plane and killed the hijackers, who had threatened violence against the passengers if their demands were not met in five minutes.

Ko Cahe-song: sophomore in trade at Chonnam National University arrested August 6, 1988, after 300 radical South Korean students demanding unification talks threw 120 firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju.

Ko Yong-chu: demonstrator from Chonnam National University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea. On February 22, 1990, a district criminal court sentenced three of the students, including Ko Yongchu, to suspended prison terms of 2½ years for the firebombing. His sentence was suspended for four years. The trio was charged with blocking official duties, resulting in injuries and fire.

Saburo Kobayashi: alias of Fumio Kutsumi.

Shogo Kodama: alias of Tang Cheang Tong.

Daniel Yudas Kogoya: member of the Nduga tribe of Irian Jaya, Indonesia. On January 8, 1996, some 200 members of the Free Papua Movement (OPM) kidnapped 26 people, including 13 wildlife researchers from the 1995–1996 Lorentz expedition in Mapenduma village in Irian Jaya, Indonesia. Seven of the hostages were Europeans. Kelly Kwalik apparently took over leadership of the Aceh Security Disturbance Movement, which took credit for the kidnappings.

Vinay Kohly: one of two Indian Spanish citizens who were charged on March 19, 2004, in Spain with aiding a terrorist organization and falsifying documents. They were ordered held without bail and were placed in isolation for five days at Soto del Real Prison.

Hikaru Koishi: one of three Maruseido members who attacked the U.S. consulate in Fukuoka by setting off an incendiary device on November 22, 1974. On February 25, 1976, the former university student was sentenced to six years by the Fukuoka District Court.

Komarudin: forest ranger in Tenggulun arrested November 11, 2002, by Indonesian police on suspicion of storing weapons and explosives for his friend, Amrozi, who was behind the October 12, 2002, bombing of two Bali nightclubs that killed 202. Police found canisters with two M-16s and an AK-47.

Mumba Konga: sentenced on May 7, 1984, to 20 years for the murder of two people and the destruction of public property in the March 27, 1984, bombing in Kinshasa of the national radio station Voice of Zaire and the central post office.

Takahiro Konishi: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. On May 19, 1988, in a 30-minute Tokyo-Pyongyang telephone interview with Kyodo, he said his group was not affiliated with the Japanese Red Army. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JURA member was at large.

Joseph Kony: Acholi leader of the Ugandan Lord's Resistance Army from 1986 to 2007. The United Nation's International Criminal Court issued an arrest warrant in July 2005 for him, his deputy Vincent Otti, and three other members of the group for war crimes and crimes against humanity. The group kidnapped hundreds of children, forcing them to become soldiers. He is believed to have hideouts in southern Sudan and northeastern Congo. He led a group that kidnapped a Spanish Catholic priest and three Ugandan nuns in the northern Lira District on February 28, 1994. In March 2008, he demanded that the court drop 33 counts of war crimes and crimes against humanity.

On August 28, 2008, the U.S. Treasury Department added Kony to its list of specially designated global terrorists, which imposes financial sanctions.

Abdelrazak Ibrahim Koshim: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Kponton: (Kponton and Kuvaye may be the same person.) Owner of a home in the Nukafu District of Togo where light weapons, explosives, bombs, heavy weapons, and transmission and logistic equipment were found following the January 5–6, 1994, terrorist attack on the presidential residence in which 67 people were killed and 28 others wounded.

Francois Krake: one of three Hutu-led Army for the Liberation of Rwanda rebels charged on March 3, 2003, by U.S. attorney Roscow Hoard of the District of Columbia with bludgeoning to death U.S. tourists Rob Haubner and his wife, Susan Miller, in Uganda in 1999. The terrorists also killed four British and two New Zealand tourists on a trip to see mountain gorillas in an attempt to weaken U.S. and U.K. support for the new Rwandan government. The rebels were charged with murder, conspiracy, and other counts.

Da-o Krongpinang: senior member of the Patani United Liberation Organization arrested in September 1994 by Thai authorities. He had graduated from Yala Teachers College and had received higher education in Saudi Arabia. He then went to Syria for sabotage training and resided in Thailand for 10 years. Naeo Na said he was behind almost every major sabotage event in the south, including a bomb attack at the Hat Yai train station that resulted in many casualties and the sabotage of trains in the Chana and Na Mom districts in Songkhla Province.

Mohamed Kubwa: trader charged by the Kenyan government on June 23, 2003, in the November 28, 2002, suicide bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured. Kubwa's father—Kubwa Mohamed, a Lamu County councilman—and he own property in Siyu, Kenya, a center of Islamic scholarship near the Somali border. Fazul Abdullah Mohammed is married to Mohamed Kubwa's half-sister, Amina. A court appearance was scheduled for July 8.

Anoja Kugenthirarasah: Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam suicide bomber who gained access to a military compound by pretending to be pregnant and attending prenatal classes at the hospital. She failed an assassination attempt against Lt. Gen. Sarath Fonseka, commander of the Sri Lankan Army.

Bertha Kumalo: one of three members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa arrested May 19, 1988, in a house in Manzani, Swaziland, during a raid by police, who confiscated an AK-47 automatic rifle, a fully loaded AK-47 magazine, a hand grenade, and 57 rounds of ammunition. They were charged with illegal possession of arms of war and ammunition. On June 7, 1988, she was freed in the Manzani Magistrates Court by Magistrate Tim Busenga after accused ANC member Nomsa Mavuso admitted she had brought the hidden weapons without the knowledge of her codefendants.

Sureh Kumar: one of two Indian Spanish citizens who were charged on March 19, 2004, in Spain with aiding a terrorist organization and falsifying documents. They were ordered held without bail and were placed in isolation for five days at Soto del Real Prison.

Ajith Kumara: lecturer of the proscribed Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna and the chief suspect in the throwing of two hand grenades into a 140-person governmental parliamentary group meeting in Sri Lanka's Parliament House on August 18, 1987, killing 1 and injuring 15, including the prime minister. On October 28, 1987, the government said that Kumara, his wife, and his child had been missing from their Ganemulla home since the attack. On April 8, 1988, he was arrested by police.

Eiki Kurosawa: alias Yong Ki Chung. Would-be hijacker of an All Nippon Airways YS11 flying from Tokyo to Sendai. He threatened to blow up the plane if not flown to North Korea. The pilot returned to Tokyo, where the hijacker offered no resistance and was arrested.

Fumio Kutsumi: hijacker on June 21, 1995, of All Nippon Airways Flight 857, a B747 flying from Tokyo to Hakodate Airport on Hokkaido. He identified himself as Saburo Kobayashi and claimed he was acting on behalf of Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo. Riot police raided Hakodate Airport on June 22, seizing the hijacker. He was on a year's leave of absence from his job at a small Tokyo bank. He apparently had no relation to the Aum cult.

Kuvaye: (May be the same as Kponton.) Owner of a home in the Nukafu District of Togo where light weapons, explosives, bombs, heavy weapons, and transmission and logistic equipment were found following the January 5–6, 1994, terrorist attack on the presidential residence in which 67 people were killed and 28 others wounded.

Kelly Kwalik: member of the Amungme tribe and leader of the Aceh Security Disturbance Movement (GPK), he apparently took over from Daniel Yudas Kogoya of the Nduga tribe. On January 8, 1996, some 200 members of the Free Papua Movement (OPM) kidnapped 26 people, including 13 wildlife researchers in the 1995–1996 Lorentz expedition in Mapenduma village in Irian Jaya, Indonesia. Seven of the hostages were Europeans.

Kyaw Ya: leader of the Burmese dissident students from the All Burma Students Democratic Front who, on December 29, 1990, hijacked the Daengsiri-udom, a Thai fishing trawler, as it was steaming into Ranong, Thailand. On January 3, 1991, the students destroyed the trawler after the owner refused to pay a ransom.

Kwon Kyong-kong: threw a beer bottle filled with flaming gasoline on the roof of the American Cultural Center in Kwangju on November 20, 1982. Kwon, age 22, surrendered to Suwon police on November 25.

L

---

Emmanuel B. Labordo: suspected member of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) Alex Boncayao Brigade who lived in Purok I, Barangay Anunas. He was arrested in connection with four separate attacks on October 28, 1987, by NPA sparrow units that killed two active duty U.S. servicemen, a retired U.S. Air Force soldier, and a retired Filipino member of the U.S. Air Force near Clark Air Base north of Manila. Labordo was arrested while trying to escape on a tricycle in Barangay Pampanga.

Antonio Lacaba: New People's Army (NPA) intelligence chief arrested July 29, 1991, by Philippine military authorities in suburban Manila for the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila. Authorities had set a 250,000-peso ($9,000) reward for his arrest. Lacaba was also held for involvement in NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Lacaba was identified by a detained NPA member in February 1991 as planning, in cooperation with the Japanese Red Army, the kidnappings of five Japanese executives for ransom. He was married to Nanette Lacaba, who was arrested with him. She was a top official of the intelligence section's Research and Documentation Staff.

Nanette Lacaba: member of the Philippines New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade and top official of the intelligence section's Research and Documentation Staff arrested August 5, 1991.

She was the wife of Antonio Lacaba, the intelligence chief.

Mufti Rashid Ahmad Ladehyanoy: Karachi religious leader who heads the nation's pro-Taliban party. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen on October 12, 2001.

Osama bin Laden: variant Usama bin Ladin; aliases Usama bin Muhammadbin Awad bin Ladin, Shaykh Usama bin Ladin, the Prince, the Emir, Abu Abdallah, Mujahid Shaykh, Hajj, the Director, the Teacher. Founder of al Qaeda and member of a Saudi family that made millions in construction, he studied at King 'Abd-al-Aziz University, where he was influenced by two members of the Muslim Brotherhood—'Abdallah 'Azzam, a Jordanian Palestinian, and Muhammad Qutb, brother of the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood's most extremist militant, Sayyid Qutb, who was executed by Egypt in 1966. Bin Laden was born on July 30, 1957, in Saudi Arabia. He is left-handed and walks with a cane. He is circa six feet five inches tall and weighs circa 160 pounds. On November 27, 1996, he said his followers were responsible for the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the U.S. military compound at Khobar Towers near Dhahran that killed 19 U.S. airmen and wounded 547 others. On February 24, 1998, he issued a fatwa that allows attacks on Americans worldwide. He was placed on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List in June 1999. The State Department's Rewards for Justice Program offered up to $25 million for his apprehension; the U.S. Senate voted 87 to 1 on July 13, 2007, to double it to $50 million. An additional $2 million is available via the Air Transport Association and the Airline Pilots Association.

As of October 2001, his cells were believed to be operating in the United States, Canada, Ecuador, Uruguay, Mauritania, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Sudan, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Somalia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Qatar, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, Jordan, Lebanon, Azerbaijan, Chechnya, Albania, Bosnia, Germany, the United Kingdom, Spain, France, Italy, Bangladesh, Malaysia, and the Philippines. As of July 2008, he was believed to be hiding in either Afghanistan or Pakistan.

Filemon Lagman: former leader of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade. On July 21, 1996, Philippine police reported that they had discovered a communist terrorist plot to attack the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit. The faction, led by Lagman, was planning bombings, murders, and hostage taking.

Lai Ming-lieh: individual from Chiayi, Taiwan, who was one of three members of the People's Liberation Front arrested November 5, 1977, in Taiwan for sending threatening letters to foreign-owned factories and businesses in January, saying the group would take violent measures unless they withdrew by June.

Hemant Lakhani: British arms dealer of Indian descent, age 68, arrested August 12, 2003, by federal officials in Newark, New Jersey, who charged him with selling Russian shoulder-fired SA-18 missiles to agents posing as al Qaeda terrorists planning to take down U.S. planes on U.S. soil. Police in New York also arrested Muslim and Malaysian resident Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed and Orthodox Jew and Manhattan jewelry dealer Yehuda Abraham, age 76, who ran a hawala to wire Lakhani the funds for the Grouse/Igla missiles. Lakhani had approached Russian criminals for an SA-18 as part of what would have been a longer-term deal for 50 more for five million dollars and a separate deal for tons of C-4 plastique. The Russian Federal Security Service (FSB) alerted the United States of the purchase attempt and provided an inert SA-18 for the sting operation. The trio was initially held without bail. Lakhani was charged with providing material support to terrorists and illegal weapons dealing. The FBI taped 150 conversations Lakhani had with undercover agents, include his praise of Osama bin Laden and the 9/11 attacks. In January 2002, when an FBI informant claiming to be part of a Somali group seeking antiaircraft guns and missiles talked to Lakhani, the arms dealer said bin Laden "straightened them all out" and "did a good thing." In April 2002, the informant said he represented a buyer who needed missiles for jihad against planes; Lakhani observed, "The Americans are bastards."

On September 4, Lakhani's bail hearing was postponed to September 11 so prosecutors could present a witness to bolster their case.

On December 18, prosecutors said Lakhani also offered to deliver tanks, antiaircraft guns, and a radioactive dirty bomb. He was represented by attorney Henry E. Klingeman, who said his client was not a terrorist and had no history of illegal arms trafficking.

On April 27, 2005, a federal jury in Newark, New Jersey, convicted Lakhani of five counts of trying to sell shoulder-launched missiles to what he believed was a terrorist group planning to down airliners. Lakhani was convicted of attempting to provide material support to terrorists, money laundering, and other charges. On September 12, 2005, he was sentenced to 47 years in prison.

Zaki-ur-Rehman Lakhvi: variant Lakhwi. Chief of operations of the Pakistan-based Lashkar-i-Taiba. On May 27, 2008, the United States imposed financial sanctions against him. He was alleged by Indian authorities to have directed the November 26–28, 2008, Mumbai attacks. The surviving terrorist from those attacks said that Lakhvi spoke with the hit squads as they moved from Karachi to Mumbai and may have contacted them during the attacks. Azam Amir Kasab, the sole survivor of the Mumbai terrorist hit team, said Lakhvi indoctrinated the 10 terrorists. India requested extradition from Pakistan.

Iddi Lala: leader of the Central African National Liberation Movement in the early 1980s.

Ram Bulchand Lalwani: member of the Dalit Panthers, an untouchable group modeled on the American Black Panthers, who threw a switchblade knife at prime minister Indira Gandhi on April 14, 1980. On April 18, 1980, fellow prisoner Khalias Parmar stabbed Lalwani in the stomach.

Ka Lando: alias of Medel Manalo.

Avelino Langilao: alias Billy Jack. Muslim rebel charged on April 2, 1979, by the Philippine military in the city court in Marawi with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although the MNLF denied responsibility.

Bashir bin Lap: alias Lillie (variant Lillie). Senior associate of Jemaah Islamiyah leader Hambali who provided information that led to the capture of Hambali in Thailand. On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

Nasrullah Largyal: imprisoned member of Harkat ul-Ansar (the Movement of Friends, an Islamic group) whose release was demanded by the Kashmiri rebels of the Al-Faran (Jungle Warriors) Muslim group who kidnapped five foreign tourists in the Indian Himalayas on July 4, 1995. Largyal was believed to be a Pakistani or Afghan founder of the group.

Frank Lynge Larsen: Zimbabwean psychologist and father of John Terence Larsen. Frank and John Larsen, together with Jonathan Richard Wheatley, a U.K. citizen, were arrested by London police on July 11, 1987, for conspiracy to kidnap members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa. Searches of their residence in Aldershot, Hampshire, uncovered a list of ANC members, bogus passports, and other forged identity papers. The Johannesburg Business Day speculated that the group planned to kidnap Solly Smith, head of ANC's London office, and ANC executive member Francis Melli.

John Terence Larsen: Zimbabwean computer technician and son of Frank Lynge Larsen. Frank and John Larsen, together with Jonathan Richard Wheatley, a U.K. citizen, were arrested by London police on July 11, 1987, for conspiracy to kidnap members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa. Searches of their residence in Aldershot, Hampshire, uncovered a list of ANC members, bogus passports, and other forged identity papers. The Johannesburg Business Day speculated that the group planned to kidnap Solly Smith, head of ANC's London office, and ANC executive member Francis Melli.

Omar Opik Lasal: escaped along with two other suspected Jemaah Islamiyah extremists from police intelligence custody in Manila on July 14, 2003. On October 8, 2003, he was arrested by soldiers at a checkpoint in Zamboanga del Sur. He was carrying a pistol but did not resist arrest.

Abdul Latif: Indian member of Harkat ul-Mujaheddin arrested by India on January 6, 2000, for providing support to hijackers for two months before five Kashmiri took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, and diverted it to Kandahar Airport. India said Latif was recruited by Pakistan's military intelligence service and had trained at guerrilla camps in Pakistan and Afghanistan, according to home minister L. K. Advani. Advani claimed India had intercepted conversations between the hijackers and their Pakistani handlers via an accomplice in Pakistan. The accomplice in turn contacted Latif. Pakistan and the guerrilla group denied involvement.

Vinceslas Lavelloi: one of the 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who conducted an April 22, 1988, gun and machete attack on a French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvea Island in New Caledonia, killing 3 policemen and injuring 5 before taking 15 hostage. He was killed in a French rescue operation on May 7, 1988.

Jorge Lebombo: one of five Mozambicans sentenced to death by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) sabotage of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

August McCormick Lehman: American arrested September 23, 1972, and charged with working with three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos after admitting to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government. On February 10, 1977, he was sentenced to six years in prison and fined $1,333.

Abraham Lentswane: one of three alleged members of the African National Congress who were indicted June 27, 1986, in a plot to shoot down a South African Air Force plane with a SAM-7 missile.

Alfredo de Leon: aliases Ka Benjie, Ka Rommel. Head of the Red Scorpion Group of the Philippine New People's Army rebels who kidnapped Michael Lynn Barnes, an American, on January 17, 1992, in the Philippines. De Leon had been arrested in November 1991 on charges of kidnapping Chinese Filipino businessmen but had escaped. He was believed to be the leader of a 100-member splinter group of the Alex Boncayao Brigade, which issued a shoot-to-kill order against him on March 13, 1992.

Li Zianyu: one of two hijackers of a China Northern Airlines MD82 on the Changchun-Foochow route that was diverted to Taiwan on November 12, 1993. (It was hijacked again on December 8, 1993, on its Tsingtao-Foochow run.) On January 4, 1994, Taiwan prosecutors indicted him for violating Taiwan's aviation law. Xinhua said he was a divorced former studio employee in Jilin's Tongyu County who lived by himself. It claimed he hijacked the plane to evade a debt of 22,000 yuan.

Liang Wei-Chiang: Hong Kong Chinese who hijacked British Airways 003 en route from Hong Kong to Beijing on March 22, 1984, and diverted it to Taipei, Taiwan. The anticommunist hijacker surrendered to authorities. He demanded the release of six Chinese imprisoned in South Korea for the hijacking of a Chinese domestic flight in May 1983. On July 12, 1984, he was charged by the Taipei District Procurator's Office with threatening the safety of civil aviation, which carries a seven-year sentence. He was not charged with skyjacking; the indictment said he had neither the intent nor the action of hijacking the flight. On September 1, 1984, he was sentenced to an 18-month suspended sentence and put on three months probation. The court said it viewed his actions as motivated by his hatred of communism.

Noli Libertad: spokesperson for the Philippine New People's Army Lt. Crispin Tagamolila Command on February 1, 1992, who said his group was holding U.S. citizen Arvey Duane Drown, who had been kidnapped on October 20, 1990.

Abu Faraj Farj al-Libi: variant al-Liby; alias Dr. Taufeeq. On April 30, 2005 (or May 2), Pakistani authorities, with the assistance of U.S. intelligence, arrested the Libyan citizen, age 42, the third in command of al Qaeda; he was wanted for two assassination attempts against president Gen. Pervez Musharraf and was also believed to be a key planner of the 9/11 attacks. At first, Pakistan said it would try him for the assassination attempts rather than hand him over to the United States. Pakistan had offered a $350,000 reward for his capture. He was arrested in the town of Mardan in the North West Frontier Province with three other men following a shootout. He ran from his hideout and jumped over a cemetery wall and into a guesthouse, where he was found hiding. Police fired tear gas into the building, and al-Libi emerged. In follow-up raids, Pakistani authorities grabbed 20 other suspects, including 8 in Lahore. Among them were three Uzbeks, an Afghan, and seven Pakistanis. Al-Libi was also linked to terrorist plans to conduct attacks before the 2004 U.S. elections. In 2003, he had succeeded the arrested Khalid Sheikh Muhammad as al Qaeda's operational planner. On May 11, 2005, Pakistani's interior minister said al-Libi was involved in a plot to kill prime minister Shaukat Aziz in a suicide bombing on July 30, 2004, near Islamabad. The suicide bomber killed eight others, including Aziz's driver. On June 6, 2005, Pakistan said it had surrendered al-Libi to the Americans a few days earlier.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

Ibn al-Shaykh al-Libi: suspected al Qaeda commander captured in Pakistan on November 11, 2002. President Bush ordered his U.S. assets frozen on September 24, 2001. He was a senior trainer for al Qaeda and had close contacts with Abu Zubaydah. He headed paramilitary training at Afghanistan's Khaldan camp.

Abu Anas al-Liby: variant Anas al-Libi; aliases Anas al-Sabai, Nazih al-Raghie, Nazih Abdul Hamed al-Ragie. Libyan indicted in 2000 in New York in connection with the August 7, 1988, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, murder, and destroy U.S. buildings, property, and the national defense infrastructure. He faced life in prison without parole on various conspiracy charges. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He claims a March 30, 1964, or May 14, 1964, birth date in Tripoli, Libya. He is circa six feet tall. He joined al Qaeda in the 1980s or early 1990s. The computer specialist was a member of the group's ruling council, the shura. He left Sudan before Osama bin Laden left for Afghanistan in 1996 and showed up in Qatar and then Manchester, United Kingdom, where he was given political asylum. In 2000, U.K. arresting authorities found he had fled, leaving a 180-page terrorist manual on a computer disk. He apparently led the early al Qaeda resistance to U.S. operations in Afghanistan following the 9/11 attacks, then fled to Sudan.

On March 18, 2002, the United States announced al-Libi's capture in Sudan but the next day claimed the person in custody was a "moderately high up" al Qaeda member wanted by a country other than the United States.

Lilie: variant Lillie; alias of Bashir bin Lap.

Lillie: variant Lilie; alias of Bashir bin Lap.

Lin Wenqiang: on February 18, 1994, hijacked China Southwest Airlines Flight 4567, a B737/2599 flying from Guiyang to Changsha and Fuzhou, and diverted it to Taiwan's Chiang Kai-Shek Airport, where he was arrested and subsequently requested political asylum. Chinese media said he was born in June 1958 as a peasant in Huangshi Village, Baizhong Township, Minqing County, Fujian Province. He had mismanaged the Wufengqiao ceramic tile factory and owed banks 7,470 yuan and the workers 70,000 yuan in back wages. Taiwanese prosecutors said they would demand “heavy punishment.”

Tamsil Linrung: Indonesian arrested at Manila International Airport on March 13, 2002, for membership in a group with al Qaeda connections. He was held for possession of explosives components. Linrung and companions were attempting to board a plane for Bangkok during the night. Police said their luggage held “components for improvised explosives.” He was released in April because Philippine prosecutors did not have enough evidence to charge him.

Liu Baocai: one of two hijackers of China South (Nanfang) Airline Company Flight CZ3157 scheduled to fly from Shenzhen to Beijing and diverted to Taipei’s Taoyuan (Chiang Kai-Shek) Airport on April 6, 1993. Taiwanese authorities detained the duo 20 minutes after the plane landed. He was from Lu County, Hebei, and was involved in fish culture. Police found 52,000 renminbi ($10,600) and 800 Hong Kong dollars in their possession. The hijackers did not understand that hijacking is a serious criminal offense in Taiwan and asked prosecutors why they were detained. Beijing requested extradition, which Taiwan initially rejected, saying it would try the hijackers. Beijing said Liu was involved in gambling and illicitly storing and selling firearms.

On June 3, the Taoyuan prosecutor indicted the hijackers, accusing them of violating Taiwan’s Civil Aviation Law, National Security Law, and rules restricting weapons. He asked the judge to show leniency as the two had surrendered peacefully and had not exhibited violence toward the crew and passengers.

On June 5, 1993, Beijing reiterated the extradition request, saying that the duo had embezzled public funds and illegally held and sold guns. They had hijacked the plane to avoid legal punishment for their crimes.

The duo was sentenced to 10 years in jail by the Taoyuan Local Court. On October 16, 1993, a Civil Aviation Administration of China spokesperson said that the lenient treatment of these two hijackers led to a spate of Chinese hijackings to Taiwan later in the year. On May 19, 1994, the Taiwan High Court cut their jail terms to seven years. Their 10-year sentence had been upheld by a senior court. The Supreme Court returned the case to the Taiwan High Court for retrial. The lower court determined they deserved leniency. Judge Wang His-pao of the Taiwan High Court said they could be paroled after serving slightly less than two years in jail. The hijackers said they would appeal the decision.

Liu Kuo-chi: originally from Taichung, Taiwan, Liu was one of three members of the People’s Liberation Front arrested November 5, 1977, in Taiwan for sending threatening letters to foreign-owned factories and businesses in January, saying the group would take violent measures unless they withdrew by June.

Liu Shang-chun: on March 10, 1997, the disgruntled Taiwanese journalist forced a Far East Air Transport B757 flying 150 passengers and 8 crew members on a domestic flight to land in Xiamen, China. He doused himself with gasoline and threatened to set himself on fire. Chinese police arrested him. No injuries were reported. The hijacker had recently been fired from a job in Hualien, Taiwan. He said his colleagues had harassed him because he was born in China and could not speak the Taiwanese dialect. On May 14, China permitted 15 Taiwanese officials and policemen into Xiamen to take him into custody after having first refused to repatriate the hijacker.

Mustafa Lo: government employee who tried to shoot at the car of Senegalese president Leopold S.

Senghor on March 22, 1967. Lo was overpowered by police. The government said he was part of a plot by supporters of ex-premier Mamadou Dia.

Faheem Khalid Lodhi: Pakistani-born Australian architect, age 36, charged with four counts of planning to bomb either the nation's electricity grid or defense installations in Sydney. His trial began April 24, 2006, in Sydney. He immigrated to Australia in 1996 and had worked at three Sydney defense installations. Intelligence agents searching his home in October 2003 found "a terrorism manual," according to prosecutors. On June 19, 2006, a New South Wales Supreme Court jury found him guilty of three charges—collecting maps of Sydney's electricity grid, acting in preparation for a terrorist act by gathering information about bomb making, and possessing documents with information about how to manufacture poisons—making him the first man convicted of plotting attacks under new antiterrorism legislation. The first and third charges carry 15-year sentences; the second carries a life sentence. Judge Anthony Whealy announced that Lodhi had been acquitted on the fourth charge of downloading aerial photographs of defense facilities from the Internet. The sentencing hearing was set for June 29.

Ka (Comrade) Lodring: alias of Rodrigo Cinco. One of two suspected members of the New People's Army working inside the Subic Bay Naval Base as scavengers who were arrested by Philippine police on December 6, 1988. The two were from Barangay Cabalan of Olongapo City.

Etienne Lona: leader of the militia believed responsible for the February 24, 2005, shooting to death of nine Bangladeshi soldiers serving as part of the UN peacekeeping force near Kafe in the northeast. On March 1, 2005, he turned himself in to UN peacekeepers.

Eugenio Lopez Jr.: former newspaper publisher accused on February 11, 1977, of plotting to kill Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government.

Daniel Lotibana: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Johanna Lourens: student and fiancé of Carl Niehaus, a member of the African National Congress (ANC) who was sentenced to 15 years on November 24, 1983, for his ANC connections. He had photographed the Johannesburg municipal gasworks in a plan to sabotage the plant. Lourens was sentenced to four years for helping him and acting as a messenger.

Dang Y. Lu: Chinese immigrant, age 28, to Brooklyn, New York, who tried to hijack American Eagle Flight 4959 on January 10, 2004, as it left New York's LaGuardia Airport. He wanted to go to Australia. The plane landed safely at Dulles Airport, where he surrendered to the FBI. On January 12, he was arraigned before Magistrate Judge Theresa Carroll Buchanan in federal court in Alexandria, Virginia, on charges of air piracy. Court documents said he had been treated for mental illness. He faced 20 years if convicted on the charge of trying to take control of an aircraft in the "special aircraft jurisdiction" around Washington.

Jojo Lucero: one of two factory workers carrying a bagful of dynamite when arrested by Philippine police on September 26, 1990, after a bomb exploded in a deep well at the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company's warehouse on Aurora Boulevard in Quezon City. Another bomb went off a few minutes later inside the Coca Cola Bottling Company plant on Otis Street in Pandacan, Manila. The bombers were from Samar and worked in a wire factory. They said they were to be paid 200 pesos each to deliver the dynamite to a man who would be waiting for them at the Del Monte Bakery. Police believed the attacks were conducted by rightist rebels or the Reform the Armed Forces Movement.

Jamil Lucman: former Moro National Liberation Front commander who surrendered to the Philippine government and served as intermediary with the four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988. One of the kidnappers was Lucman's niece, Commander Annie.

Lung Guiyun: variant Lung Kui-yun. One of two Chinese citizens who, on May 12, 1988, hijacked a Xiamen Civil Aviation Administration B737 passenger plane from Amoy to Qingquangang Air Force Base in central Taiwan. The duo was sentenced to 3½ years in prison. The mainland press claimed their sentences were reduced on two occasions, that they were later released after a little over a year, and that they were permitted to settle in Taiwan.

Lung Kui-yun: variant of Lung Guiyun.

Luo Changhua: trading company manager who, along with his wife, Wang I-yin, hijacked Fujian Airlines Flight FC-518, flying from Ganzhou to Xiamen, and diverted it to Taiwan on December 28, 1993, where they requested asylum. He was born in 1955 in Ganzhou, Jiangxi Province. On February 24, 1994, the Taoyuan District Prosecutor's Office indicted him for violations of the Civil Aviation Law and recommended a 12-year sentence.

Thomas A. Lyimo: Tanzanian owner of the Tommy Spades Manufacturing Company plant in Kimara, Tanzania, possibly the site that manufactured the bomb used in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Tanzania. It might also have been where the bomb was welded to the chassis of the water truck used in the bombing. The truck was reportedly at the plant for repairs shortly before the explosion. Lyimo was jailed with four others. Investigators found some of the same chemicals at the plant that were found in the bomb crater. He was released by Tanzanian authorities on September 21, 1998.

M

---

A.R.M.: alias Leal Oskiki. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army alleged by La Mañana on April 1, 1995, to have entered Uruguay using false passports within the previous two weeks. The paper speculated that they planned to carry out a bombing in neighboring Brazil or Argentina. They were believed to be in the River Plate area. Oskiki used a Paraguayan passport.

Leopoldo Mabilangan: aliases Comrade Hector, Ka Hector, Ka Che. Member of the Philippine New People's Arm (NPA) Banahaw Command in 1991 who demanded a five-million-peso ransom for Michael Lynn Barnes, an American kidnapped by the Red Scorpion Group of NPA rebels on January 17, 1992.

Theo Mabusela: one of two senior members of the South African Western Cape Pan Africanist Congress who were arrested by South African police on January 4, 1994, and held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act in connection with the December 30, 1993, attack on the Heidelberg Pub and Restaurant Tavern in Station Road, Observatory, Cape Town, that killed three women and a man and injured seven others.

Abdullah Macapaar: one of two Philippine rebel leaders whose surrender was demanded by the Philippine government on August 21, 2008, as part of the peace deal. The rebels balked.

Taha Macapodi: one of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988.

Virgilio Maceda: on July 29, 1991, police arrested the top official of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) Special Operations Department and charged him with involvement in NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. There had been a 250,000-peso ($9,000) reward for Maceda's capture.

Muhammadyalludin Mading: Thai whose trial for colluding with Indonesian al Qaeda and Jemaah Islamiyah terrorist Hambali to attack the U.K. and U.S. embassies in 2002 began in Cambodia on December 28, 2004. On December 29, 2004, the court sentenced Mading, a second Thai Muslim, and a Cambodian to life.

Iman al-Madnhom: one of seven Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) terrorists Philippine Angeles Metropolitan District Command and Clark Air Base were searching for on April 30, 1988; the terrorists had arrived from Manila earlier in the week to conduct sabotage and bombing missions and attack nightclubs frequented by U.S. servicemen. The terrorists reportedly arrived on a bus and carried black bags containing explosives to set off at the Sweet Apple Club and the Capcom information booth. The PLO denied involvement.

Mohammad Abdullah Madni: Saudi, age 22, arrested by Pakistani authorities on August 17, 1998, as he was attempting to enter Afghanistan at the Towr Kham border post in the North West Frontier Province. He claimed to be an Osama bin Laden associate, but authorities said he was not involved with the bombings of the two U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. He was to be handed over to Saudi security agents.

Muhammad Saad Iqbal Madni: al Qaeda operative, age 24, who had worked with would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid. He was arrested January 9, 2002, by Indonesian authorities. Egypt requested extradition as the stocky, bearded man was wanted on terrorism charges in Egypt. Madni held Egyptian and Pakistani passports. Indonesia quietly sent him to Egypt on January 11 without a court hearing or lawyer. His name appeared on al Qaeda documents found in Afghanistan. Indonesian officials told the media that he had been sent to Egypt because of visa violations. He had arrived in Jakarta on November 17, 2001 and had visited Solo, in central Java, believed to be a base for the al Qaeda-affiliated Jemaah Islamiyah.

Kamaruding Maeprommit: one of the Islamic militants who conducted several coordinated attacks against 11 police posts in three Thai provinces, leaving 112 people dead—107 of them militants—on April 28, 2004. At Pattani's 450-year-old Krue Se Mosque, 32 militants died when police fired assault rifles and rocket-propelled grenades at the terrorists holed up inside, who said they would never surrender. Twelve members of the T. R. Sport soccer team in Suso, plus seven friends, died in one of the police post attacks. Among the dead was Maeprommit, a midfielder from Songkhla Province, whose T. R. team won the local tournament before the attacks.

Camilo Magmente: Philippine constable second class identified on August 27, 1989, by the self-proclaimed shooter, Juanito Itaas, as being involved in the New People's Army sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe on April 21, 1989.

Ropah Mahama: one of two members of Thailand's Pattani United Liberation Organization (PULO) who died on August 5, 1994, when a grenade they were carrying while on their way to extort money accidentally exploded. They were motorcycling to the Nara Parawood Company in Narathiwat Province to demand three million baht in protection fees. The duo had been on the police's criminal list as followers of Haji Daoh Thanam, a southern terrorist leader of a new PULO faction. They had been involved in several crimes in the south, including an arson attack on a gas station and demanding protection money from rubber plantation owners in Narathiwat.

Wirot Mahamad: arrested in a warehouse in the La-Ngu district on November 28, 1990, by officials from the Southern Bangkok Metropolitan Police and the Satun Provincial Police for involvement in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok. Mahamad was brought to Bangkok the next day for further investigation.

Ishwari Mahato: leader of the Maoist Communist Center rebels killed in India on December 18, 2002.

Adurahmin Mohammed Mahdi: London-based spokesperson in mid-2007 for the Ogaden National Liberation Front, a separatist movement in the remote eastern area of Ethiopia.

Mahendiran: senior Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) leader arrested July 19, 1991, by Indian police near Cuddalore. He was suspected of being a friend of Sivarasan, the LTTE intelligence chief who masterminded the May 22, 1991, murder of former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Abdul Basit Mahmood: aliases Arbali Forlani, Abdul Karim. Identified on January 29, 1995, by the Philippine National Police as the leader of an international terrorist group mostly composed of 30 Muslim extremists. The police said he was on the December 11, 1994, Philippine Airlines Flight 434 that was bombed by Abu Sayyaf on its way to Tokyo. His group also aimed to kill the pope when he visited the Philippines in January 1995. He was later identified as Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Mian Abid Mahmud: one of six Pakistani passport holders among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati. They were released on bail. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She said testimony against Mahmud appeared faked and ordered his release.

Mian Basit Mahmud: one of six Pakistani passport holders among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She ordered Mahmud's release.

Mian Idriss Mahmud: one of six Pakistani passport holders among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila. The six were introduced to the media on January 2, 1996, as among those arrested in Makati. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She ordered Mahmud's release.

Abdullah Mahsud: variant Mehsud. After his release in March 2004 from Guantánamo Bay, he kidnapped two Chinese engineers in Pakistan in October 2004. One of them died during a rescue operation. He blew himself up in July 2007 when Pakistani police tried to arrest him.

Hasan Mahsum: leader of the Eastern Turkistan Islamic Movement (ETIM), which seeks independence for China's Xinjiang Province. On August 26, 2002, the United States added ETIM to the terrorist group list that triggers financial sanctions and immigration control.

Ibrahim Maiden: condominium manager, age 52, who trained in Afghanistan in 1993 and was the head of a Malaysian cell of Jemaah Islamiyah whose members were arrested in December 2001 and January 2002 by Singaporean and Malaysian authorities.

Cassius Make: senior member of Spear of the Nation (Umkhonto we Sizwe), the military wing of the African National Congress of South Africa, who was shot to death on July 9, 1987, in Swaziland by three white men as they were taking a taxi from Matsapha Airport in Mbabane.

Hassan Makhsun: leader of the Eastern Turkistan Islamic Movement (a small Islamic extremist group based in China's western Xinjiang Province and a militant ethnic Uighur separatist group) who was killed in October 2003 by Pakistani soldiers during raids on al Qaeda–associated compounds in western Pakistan.

Omar Abdullah Makki: leader of the terrorist group Lashkar-i-Taiba who was killed on June 20, 2001, near Srinagar, Kashmir.

Makoto Maemura: member of the rightist Asia Corps arrested April 15, 1982, after he threw a smoke bomb into the Tokyo theater Mrs. François Mitterrand, the French president's wife, had just left after a concert.

Guy Malamba: one of three alleged members of the African National Congress who were indicted June 27, 1986, for a plot to shoot down a South African Air Force plane with a SAM-7 missile.

Carolina “Bobby” Malay: on July 27, 1989, members of the paramilitary Philippine Constabulary arrested a Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) central committee member and her husband, Saturnino Ocampo, a member of the politburo of the CPP, in Manila's Makati financial district. The arrest came four days after the military offered rewards of $50,000 each for the arrest of 35 CPP members. Some observers suggested that the Malays, leaders of the pragmatic faction of the CPP, were turned in by rivals.

Daniel Joseph Maldonado: alias Daniel Aljughafi. Flown to the United States on February 12, 2007, after being arrested by Kenyan police. On February 13, 2007, he appeared before Magistrate Judge Calvin Botley in Houston and was accused of joining al Qaeda in Somalia to fight the internationally recognized government there and establish an Islamic state. He was ordered held without bail on federal charges of undergoing military training with a terrorist organization and conspiracy to use a destructive device. He was the first U.S. citizen to be prosecuted on suspicion of joining terrorists in Somalia. The complaint said he had flown from Houston to Cairo in November 2005. In November 2006, he flew to Mogadishu and joined the Islamic Courts and elements of al Qaeda. He said he was given an AK-47 assault rifle, fatigues, and combat boots and attended military training camps with al Qaeda members. A bomb maker taught him assembly techniques. He wanted to go into combat but contracted malaria. On February 21, 2007, Judge Botley ordered Maldonado jailed without bail. On April 20, 2007, Maldonado pleaded guilty to training with al Qaeda.

Nomad Maliala: Moro National Liberation Front commander with ties to the Abu Sayyaf Group in the Philippines in late 1994.

Abdul Malik: on March 26, 2007, the Pentagon announced that Abdul Malik, who had been arrested in East Africa earlier in 2007 and who had admitted involvement in the November 2002 Kenyan hotel bombing and attempted downing of an airplane, had been transferred to the Guantánamo Bay military prison camp. Reuters reported he was captured in Kenya. He was believed connected to al Qaeda suspect Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan, a Kenyan wanted in the hotel attack.

Farhan Malik: leader of the criminal Reza Commando Force (variant Asif Raza Commandoes) who phoned Calcutta police on January 22, 2002, to claim credit after four gunmen on two motorcycles fired AK-47 automatic weapons at the guard post of the American Center, a U.S. cultural center on Jawaharlal Nehru Road in downtown Calcutta, at 6:30 A.M., killing 5 policemen and wounding 20 people, including police officers, pedestrians, and a private security guard hired by the U.S. government.

Mohammad Abass Malik: Pakistani arrested August 18, 2000, by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Los Angeles for being in the United States without proper documentation. He was wanted for questioning in the bombings of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires in 1992 and the Argentine–Israel Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in 1994.

Qadeer Malik: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Ripudaman Singh Malik: millionaire owner of a Vancouver radio station, age 54, who was captured on October 27, 2000, in connection with the June 23, 1985, bombing of Air India Flight 182, a B747 flying from Montreal to London that crashed off Ireland, killing 329 people. He faced eight charges, including first-degree murder, conspiracy, and attempted murder. He was also charged with the attempted murder of the passengers and crew of Air India Flight 301, in which two baggage handlers were killed in a bombing in 1991 at Tokyo's Narita International Airport. According to prosecutors, Malik was retaliating against an Indian forces raid of Harmandir Sahib (Punjabi for "Temple of God" and also known as the Golden Temple), a Sikh holy site located in Amritsar and completed in 1601 C.E. His trial began April 28, 2003. On March 16, 2005, after a four-year trial, British Columbia Supreme Court justice Ian Josephson acquitted Indian-born Canadian Sikhs Malik and Ajaib Singh Bagri, age 55 (a preacher and sawmill worker), of all charges for both Air India flights. The judge said the key witnesses—former girlfriends, paid informants, and former business partners—were not credible.

Sher Mohammad Malikkheil: alias Sheroo. Pashtun tribesman with known links to Islamists. On February 28, 2008, a missile strike leveled his home near Kaloosha village in South Waziristan, Pakistan, killing 10 suspected al Qaeda and Taliban members and wounding another seven. He was a member of the Yargulkhel subtribe of the Wazir tribe.

Omar Ben Mamoud: Sudanese terrorist and alleged chairman of the International Mollah Force suspected by Philippine National Police on November 14, 1995, of entering the country to train Abu Sayyaf Muslim extremists in Mindanao. He was linked to Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf and Hadji Murad.

Daimal Mamud: local chairman of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine in the Philippines in December 1988.

Medel Manalo: aliases Ka Andres, Ka Lando. New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines political assassination team leader sought by the military as of July 10, 1989, in connection with NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe. Manalo's wife, Ressureccion, was also believed involved in the murder.

Ressureccion Manalo: wife of Medel Manalo. The Manalos were believed involved with the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters.

Ahmed Mandela: treasurer of the SC Villa soccer team in Uganda, he was among 20 suspects arrested September 15, 1998, while attempting to enter Uganda from Kenya. The Washington Post claimed the police had been tipped off that Islamic extremists planned to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Kampala. All but four of the suspects were released on October 5.

Imran Mandhai: Pakistani immigrant, age 19, who—along with his accomplice, Shueyb Mossa Jokhan, both of Hollywood, Florida—pleaded guilty on July 25, 2002, to a federal indictment that they conspired to destroy power stations, a National Guard armory, Jewish businesses, and Mount Rushmore. Mandhai told Judge William Dimitrouleas in Fort Lauderdale that they scouted targets in Broward and Miami-Dade counties in pursuit of their jihad. Jokhan agreed to turn state's evidence in the August 12 trial of Mandhai and received 4 years and 10 months on October 4. Mandhai was scheduled for sentencing on October 17.

Jershun Manlinong: Philippines studies student and student activist at the University of the Philippines, Diliman, who went into hiding after the June 16, 1989, arrest of Donato Contiente in connection with the New People's Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Manlinong and five other students were linked by Contiente to the slaying. The military filed charges of murder and frustrated murder against seven student suspects before the office of Quezon City prosecutor Juarlito Galisanao. Manlinong was listed as the gunman.

Surjit Singh Mann: unified Akali Dal president who, on August 19, 1989, was charged by the chief metropolitan magistrate in Delhi with conspiracy to kill prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, and wage war against the state. The trial was to begin on September 2, 1989. On November 29, 1989, Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi ordered the government to drop the charges. Mann had won a parliamentary seat while campaigning from his prison cell and had sworn allegiance to the constitution. He was a former Sikh police officer who had deserted the force.

Ka (Comrade) Manny: alias of Eduard Corpus. His release was demanded by the 50 New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of a Filipino engineer, a Filipino soldier, and two South Korean engineers in Pagudpud, Ilocos Norte Province, Philippines, on October 22, 1986. NPA killed the Filipino soldier on November 19, 1986.

Kumander Manny: Moro Islamic Liberation Front leader in the Philippines whose followers caused two million Philippine pesos worth of damage to Morrison Knudsen Corporation equipment in March 1993.

Mongesi Manqina: sympathizer of the South African Pan Africanist Congress who was sentenced to 18 years in prison by Cape Town Supreme Court Judge Gerald Friedman on October 26, 1994, for the August 25, 1993, murder by stabbing of U.S. citizen Amy Biehl, a white Fulbright exchange student from Newport Beach, California, who was studying at the black University of the Western Cape. On April 28, 1997, Manqina applied for amnesty from the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of South Africa. On July 28, 1998, the Commission freed all four men who had killed Biehl. The Commission said the killing was political and that the four had told the complete truth.

Abdullah Mansour: spokesman on August 8, 2008, for the Turkistan Islamic Party, which released a third video threatening attacks and calling on Muslims to avoid travel in the area. Mansour said, "We oppose implementing the Chinese Communist system in our homeland of East Turkistan because this system is based on atheism."

Mansur: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Lebanese to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court.

Ahmad Jabir al-Mansur: one of the April 5, 1988, hijackers of Kuwait Airlines Flight 422, a B747 flying from Bangkok to Kuwait that was diverted to Mashhad, Iran. He had arrived in Bangkok on March 30, 1988, with a forged Bahraini passport.

Baut Manut: one of four individuals identified by the Philippine Army as members of the Bangsa Moro Islamic Liberation Organization, a splinter of the Moro National Liberation Front, which, on May 5, 1987, kidnapped two Swiss nationals—Alex Braunwalder of St. Gallen and Jacky Sudan of Fribourg—five Filipino nurses, and three others returning from a general food distribution and medical relief assistance mission for the International Red Cross in Dalaman village, Mulonlo Town, 477 miles southeast of Manila.

Ahmad ‘Abd-al-Maqsud: one of three Jemaah Islamiyah extremists who threw petrol bombs at three South Korean tourists on a bus outside their hotel near the Egyptian pyramids on February 4, 1993. He was arrested at the scene and told police that he agreed to attack the bus with Hasan al-Sakran.

Domingo Maray: suspected communist New People’s Army sparrow unit assassin arrested by Philippine authorities on April 5, 1987. He was armed with a pistol and hand grenade and was stopped 45 meters from a stage where president Corazon Aquino sat at a rally in Tacloban. Maray was charged with the March 18, 1987, murder of a government militiaman in La Paz near Tacloban.

Jamal Alawi Mari: Yemeni captured a few weeks after 9/11 at his Karachi home by Pakistani and U.S. authorities on suspicion of working for charities that funded al Qaeda. He claimed he was imprisoned in Jordan and then taken to Guantánamo Bay.

Maria: alias of Mariko Yamamoto.

W. Mariaki: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Ernesto Mariano: suspected member of the Philippine New People’s Army (NPA) Alex Boncayao Brigade who lived in Purok I, Barangay Anunas. He was arrested in connection with four separate attacks by NPA sparrow units on October 28, 1987, that killed two active duty U.S. servicemen, a retired U.S. Air Force soldier, and a retired Filipino member of the U.S. Air Force near Clark Air Base north of Manila. Police seized a document describing a terrorist “Amerto plan,” which could stand for American Targets of Opportunity.

Daniel Marsa: one of four Ethiopians who, on September 4, 1992, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET555, a B727 flying from Dire Dawa to Addis Ababa, and diverted it to Djibouti, where they surrendered after being told they would be permitted to request exile. The hijackers wanted to flee an undemocratic regime in Ethiopia. Marsa was a captain in the former Dergue regime’s Ninth Army Division.

Martin: name given by Amrozi as one of the plotters who met with him and Samudra in Solo, Java, to discuss their plan to set off car bombs at two Bali nightclubs on October 12, 2002.

Raul Martinez: name of one of two factory workers who were carrying a bagful of dynamite when they were arrested by Philippine police on September 26, 1990, after a bomb exploded in a deep well at the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company’s warehouse on Aurora Boulevard in Quezon City. Another bomb went off a few minutes later inside the Coca Cola Bottling Company plant on Otis Street in Pandacan, Manila. They said they were to be paid 200 pesos each to deliver the dynamite to a man who would be waiting for them at the Del Monte Bakery. Police believed the attacks were conducted by rightist rebels or the Reform the Armed Forces Movement.

Joaquim Martino da Silva: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement's December 6, 1982, sabotage of a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

Osamu Maruoka: trained with the three Japanese Red Army (JRA) members who machine-gunned Lod Airport passengers on May 30, 1972. He was wanted as an accomplice in the incident. The student apparently had married JRA leader Fusako Shigenobu.

He was also one of five members of a JRA/Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) team that hijacked Japan Airlines Flight 404, a B707 flying from Paris to Anchorage to Tokyo that was seized after leaving Amsterdam on July 20, 1973. The leader of the hijackers, Katie George Thomas, accidentally killed herself when she pulled the pin on her grenade; she was the only member who knew Ali Hassan Salameh's plan for the hijacking. The terrorists identified themselves as the Organization of Sons of Occupied Territories, the Mount Carmel Martyrs, and the JRA acting for the People of Palestine. They might have been a PFLP splinter group. The group demanded the release of JRA terrorist Kozo Okamoto, who conducted the attack on Lod Airport, and five million dollars. The plane was denied landing privileges in Beirut, Bahrain, and Basra, Iraq, but refueled in Dubai. They eventually landed in Benghazi, Libya. All passengers and crew deplaned safely before the terrorists set off bombs that destroyed the $10 million plane. The group was initially accorded a hero's welcome, but Libya soon announced that they would be tried according to the Armed Robbery Law No. 148 of 1972. It does not appear that the hijackers were tried, although Maruoka was kept in prison for a year. Upon his release, he claimed he had been treated as a special political prisoner and had a cell equipped with color television. Reuters reported that the hijackers had been released and were at liberty in Damascus.

Maruoka was placed on an international wanted list and named as an accomplice by two JRA colleagues, Jun Nishikawa and Kazuo Tohira, who were arrested in Stockholm on March 5, 1975, while taking photographs and making sketches of a building housing the embassies of Lebanon, Austria, and four other countries. He was believed to have been one of the JRA terrorists who took over the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur on August 4, 1975, and held 53 hostages during a 79-hour siege. The terrorists obtained the release of several colleagues from Japanese prisons and flew with them to Libya. The Japanese decided to request extradition on August 26, 1975, but the Libyans denied it.

Maruoka led the JRA Hidaka Commando Unit that hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh, on September 28, 1977. (See also Kunio Bando.)

On September 9, 1988, Philippine authorities said he was involved in the JRA kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila on November 15, 1986.

Maruoka was arrested November 21, 1987, by city airport terminal police upon arriving from Hong Kong carrying a passport for Hideo Iraba and five million yen in cash (two million yen in Japanese bills, two million yen in U.S. bills, and one million yen in Southeast Asian currencies). Police believed he had returned to Japan to arrange an attack against the Seoul Olympics. He had a December 7, 1987, reservation on a Japan Airlines flight from Osaka to Seoul. A second police theory was that the JRA were planning a kidnapping to secure the release of radicals in Japan. Others believed the JRA would attack in Okinawa, where Maruoka had obtained his passport in July 18, 1987. He had traveled to nine countries in Southeast Asia since leaving Japan on August 3, 1987. The Public Security Division of the Tokyo Metropolitan Police Department rearrested him on suspicion of involvement in the 1977 Japan Airlines Flight 472 hijacking.

On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JRA member was at large.

On December 7, 1993, the Tokyo District Court sentenced him to life for hijacking two Japan Airlines planes in the 1970s.

Suding Maseng: one of two members of Thailand's Pattani United Liberation Organization (PULO) who died on August 5, 1994, when a grenade they were carrying while on their way to extort money accidentally exploded. They were motorcycling to the Nara Parawood Company in Narathiwat Province to demand three million baht in protection fees. The duo had been on the police's criminal list as followers of Haji Daoh Thanam, a southern terrorist leader of a new PULO faction. They had been involved in several crimes in the south, including an arson attack on a gas station and demanding protection money from rubber plantation owners in Narathiwat.

Abu Khabab al-Masri: alias of Midhat Mursi.

Abu Obaidah al-Masri: variant Abu Ubaida al-Masri. Egyptian explosives expert who was the external operations chief for al Qaeda and allegedly masterminded the July 7, 2005, bombings of the London Underground, the August 2006 plan to bomb 10 U.S.-bound planes from the United Kingdom, and a failed plot in Copenhagen in the fall of 2007. He was believed to be hiding in Pakistan, where the government believed he was behind the November 1995 suicide bombing of the Egyptian Embassy in Islamabad that killed 17 people. Reports of his demise in air strikes in January 2006 and October 2006 proved unreliable. He did lose two fingers, however. He was in his mid-forties at the time. He had fought in Bosnia in the early 1990s and was wounded in Chechnya. He also spent time in the United Kingdom. He had requested asylum—a request denied in 1999—in alias in Munich, where he dealt with a Moroccan computer scientist (the son-in-law of Ayman al-Zawahiri) and Jordanians who plotted in 2002 to shoot Jews. He had been jailed in Germany pending deportation but was later released. He surfaced in 2000 at a training camp near Kabul, where he taught explosives, artillery, and topography. He was five feet seven inches tall, with gray-black hair. He was part of the 055 Brigade, a paramilitary unit that fought against the U.S. incursion in 2001. He was believed to have trained recruits from Denmark and Germany in spring 2007 at a compound in North Waziristan, Pakistan. On April 9, 2008, the United States announced that he had died of hepatitis C in Pakistan a few months earlier, probably December 2007. He had succeeded Abu Hamza Rabia, an Egyptian killed in a missile strike in 2005 in Pakistan. He was replaced as al Qaeda's No. 3 by Shaykh Sayed al Masri ("the Egyptian"), who had been head of the group's finances. Others believe he was replaced by Khalid Habib, Hamza al Jawfi, or Midhat Mursi.

Abu Saeed al-Masri: senior al Qaeda commander in Pakistan who was close to Ayman al-Zawahiri. A Pakistani official claimed he was killed in clashes with authorities in Bajaur in August 2008.

Abu Ubaida al-Masri: variant of Abu Obaidah al-Masri.

Maher al-Masti: one of seven Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) terrorists Philippine Angeles Metropolitan District Command and Clark Air Base were searching for on April 30, 1988; the terrorists had arrived from Manila earlier in the week to conduct sabotage and bombing missions and attack nightclubs frequented by U.S. servicemen. The terrorists reportedly arrived on a bus and carried black bags containing explosives to set off at the Sweet Apple Club and the Capcom information booth. The PLO denied involvement.

Wan Min Wan Mat: former university lecturer arrested September 27, 2002, by Malaysian police in northern Kelantan state as a threat to national security. He was identified as one of the leaders of Jemaah Islamiyah in Malaysia. The group is linked to al Qaeda and had planned to bomb U.S. and other targets. On January 28, 2003, Indonesian national police chief Dai Bachtiar said Hambali had provided $35,000 to finance the October 12, 2002, Bali nightclub bombings that killed 202 people, giving the money to Malaysian operative Wan Min Wan Mat, who forwarded the funds to JI operative Mukhlis.

‘Abdol Matin: variant A. Mateen. Persian-speaking Afghan refugee residing in Abbottabad, Pakistan, who was arrested December 25, 1995, in connection with the December 21, 1995, car bombing in Peshawar’s shopping center that killed 42 people and injured 125. He came to Peshawar the day of the bombing and was also wanted for other bombs. Police said he and his accomplices purchased the brown Toyota Corolla used in the bombing from a bargain center in Peshawar. The group then fled in a gray double-cabin 1989 Toyota pickup.

Abdul Matin: alias of Dulmatin.

Hisahi Matsuda: bank robber freed during the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, when five Japanese Red Army (JRA) members held 53 hostages in a 79-hour siege. He was flown with the JRA terrorists to Libya, where they surrendered. The Japanese decided to request extradition on August 26, 1975, but the Libyans denied it on October 29, 1975. On February 15, 1997, Matsuda was one of six JRA members arrested by Lebanese authorities in Bekaa Valley and West Beirut.

Chizuo Matsumoto: true name of Shoko Asahara.

Takeshi Matsumoto: Aum Shin Rikyo strategist arrested by Japanese police on May 18, 1995, on kidnapping charges. He had undergone plastic surgery. He admitted receiving one million yen from Ikuro Hayashi, Aum’s plastic surgeon, to cover expenses while on the run.

Tomoko Matsumoto: wife of Aum Shin Rikyo leader Shoko Asahara, she served as the group’s acting leader when he was arrested in mid-1995. She herself was charged on June 26, 1995, with ordering the 1994 strangling of Aum pharmacist Kotaro Ochida, who had rebelled against internal discipline.

Satoshi Matsushita: on February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for Matsushita in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

Junich Matsuura: bank robber whose release was demanded during the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, when five Japanese Red Army members held 53 hostages in a 79-hour siege. Matsuura refused to be released because he was in poor health and was soon to be paroled.

Edgardo Mausisa: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Noma Mavuso: one of three members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa who were arrested May 19, 1988, in a house in Manzini, Swaziland, during a raid by police, who confiscated an AK-47 automatic rifle, a fully loaded AK-47 magazine, a hand grenade, and 57 rounds of ammunition. They were charged with illegal possession of arms of war and ammunition. On June 7, 1988, the other two ANC members were freed in the Manzani Magistrates Court by Magistrate Tim Busenga after Mavuso admitted she brought the hidden weapons without the knowledge of her codefendants.

Rorry McGuire: white Zimbabwean owner of a Bulawayo garage arrested in connection with the January 11, 1988, car bombing of the home of three members of the African National Congress of South Africa in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo. McGuire's wife, Julia, was also arrested.

Chuon Mean: alias Phan Mean. Former Khmer Rouge guerilla who, on June 26, 1995, told Indochine Productions, a Cambodian television company, that he was part of a Khmer Rouge group that kidnapped and killed two Britons and an Australian traveling in a taxi from Phnom Penh to Sihanoukville on April 11, 1994.

Phan Mean: alias of Chuon Mean.

Rajjinder Singh Meha: secretary of the All-India Sikh Students Federation whose release from prison was demanded on July 5, 1984, by the hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Baitullah Mehsud: Taliban commander in South Waziristan, Pakistan, sought by Pakistani authorities for the December 27, 2007, assassination of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto. Mehsud was formally charged on March 1, 2008. He remained at large, denying involvement.

Ibrahim Abdul Razak Memon: on April 21, 1993, Indian home minister S.B. Chavan told the Lok Sabha, the lower house of the Parliament of India, that he had played a pivotal role in the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250. He was arrested August 25, 1994, along with three of his sons—Isa, Yusuf, and Suleiman.

Isa Memon: one of three sons of Ibrahim Abdul Razak Memon arrested with their father on August 25, 1994, for their involvement in the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250.

Saud Memon: Pakistani who owned the property where Daniel Pearl was held, killed, and buried in January 2002. The Wall Street Journal quoted rights groups on November 12, 2007, as claiming that a suspect in the case who died earlier in the year, Saud Memon, had been questioned by Pakistani authorities regarding his role in the kidnapping and murder as well as his financing and facilitating of al Qaeda's anthrax program. On May 3, 2007, Memon appeared in a wheelchair before the Pakistani Supreme Court. Rights groups said Memon, then age 44, died on May 18, 2007, from meningitis and tuberculosis. Memon had been a textiles merchant with an export business and owned the nursery compound where Pearl had been held and killed. Witnesses claimed he had driven three of the killers to the compound. In 2003, the U.S. Department of the Treasury said he was a financier of the al-Akhtar Trust, a Karachi-based Islamic charity believed to finance al Qaeda in Pakistan and Afghanistan. Treasury froze the group's U.S. assets. Memon's home, in Karachi's Nazimabad district, is in Harkatul-Mujaheddin turf. Investigators believed he used a false passport to flee to Mozambique after Pearl's death. He then moved to South Africa.

Mohammed Abass Mensah: on January 31, 1985, the Ghanaian government said it had thwarted an assassination attempt by Mensah against head of state Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings in a sports stadium in Kumasi during an Ashanti cultural ceremony. The would-be assassins aborted the attempt because of the large crowd.

Rodrigo H. Mercado: suspected member of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) Alex

Boncayao Brigade who lived in Purok I, Barangay Anunas. He was arrested in connection with four separate attacks by NPA sparrow units on October 28, 1987, that killed two active duty U.S. servicemen, a retired U.S. Air Force soldier, and a retired Filipino member of the U.S. Air Force near Clark Air Base north of Manila. He was arrested while trying to escape on a tricycle in Barangay Pampanga.

Romualdo Mercado: arrested by Philippine authorities for plotting to assassinate president Corazon Aquino during a March 2, 1986, rally. Mercado revealed his plan to police after being arrested for an unrelated crime. He said he had been offered $24,000 for the hit. He had attended the rally and carried a hidden gun but had a change of heart when he approached Aquino.

Zwaye Mfeya: spokesperson for the Azanian People's Liberation Army, the armed wing of the South African Pan Africanist Congress, in December 1993.

Michael: one of four Eritrean Liberation Front hijackers of an Ethiopian Airlines DC3 flying from Bahr Dar to Gondar, Ethiopia, on January 22, 1971. The plane refueled in Khartoum and then flew on to Benghazi, Libya.

Jennie Kang Midei: true name of Jente Kai Midei.

Jente Kai Midei: Japanese Red Army member, age 51, who was carrying a British passport when arrested in Ciudad del Este, the capital of Alto Parafía Department, Paraguay, on June 12, 1995. The Japanese Embassy said the individual's true name was Jennie Kang Midei.

Mike: alias of Fathur Rahman Khozi.

Zahed Ahmed Mir: Fairfax, Virginia, roommate of Amal Kasi, a Pakistani who shot to death two people and wounded three others outside CIA

Headquarters in Langley, Virginia, on January 25, 1993. Mir had a temporary work permit and planned to leave the United States the week of February 10, 1993, but changed his ticket to February 9, leading police to suspect he was planning to flee. That night, a General District Court judge held a hearing; Mir was required to surrender his passport, stay in Virginia, and wear an electronic monitoring device. Two weeks later, he remained in jail. He had worked at airport newsstands for two years. Late in 1992, he had begun working as a security guard at Dulles Airport, handling metal detectors and x-ray video screens for Argent Bright International Services. Kasi had used Mir's credit card to buy a mail-order bulletproof vest. Mir had used a fake name of Zahed Mohamood Khawaja. He had also accompanied Kasi to purchase an AK-47. Federal prosecutors in Alexandria filed a criminal complaint charging Mir with a single count of filing a fraudulent resident application and lying to Immigration and Naturalization Service officials about his identity and U.S. work history. He was held under a rarely used Virginia law that allows police to detain material witnesses if it is impossible to ensure their appearance in court. On April 26, 1993, he was convicted in Alexandria of perjury and filing false statements when he lied to Immigration and Naturalization Service officials to obtain residence and work permits in 1988.

On January 24, 1994, he requested political asylum in the United States.

Maroof Ahmaed Mirza: imam, age 38, and a legal resident of Spain and a Pakistani national, Mirza was one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Saulat Mirza: member of the Muttahida Qaumi Movement arrested December 10, 1998, by Karachi Airport police as the prime suspect in the 1995 murder of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Shahnawaz Toor. On September 18, 1999, Pakistani judge Javed Alam said Mirza would be acquitted and the case dismissed for lack of evidence in the March 8, 1995, murders of U.S. diplomats in Pakistan. However, he was not to be released because he was wanted in other criminal cases.

Abdul Sattar Sharif ul Misri: one of two al Qaeda operatives arrested August 30, 2004, at a rented mud house in Quetta, Baluchistan, by Pakistani authorities. The Egyptian had a bounty on his head.

Abu Obaidah Misri: al Qaeda's chief of operations in Afghanistan's eastern Konar Province, Misri was killed January 13, 2006, when a Predator drone fired a missile in Damadola, a village 120 miles northwest of Islamabad near the Afghan border.

Nur Misuari: chairman in the 1990s of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in the Philippines. On November 24, 2001, he was arrested by Malaysian authorities on suspicion of connections to Abu Sayyaf while serving as a southern governor. He was grabbed in Malaysian waters fleeing a manhunt in the Philippines. He had lost the leadership of the MNLF earlier in the year and was about to lose the governorship.

Dedy Mizwar: seen fleeing in a white Suzuki minivan from the scene of Jemaah Islamiyah's October 1, 2005, triple suicide bombings at Bali restaurants that killed 25 and injured 100.

Mobutu: alias of the spokesperson of the Azanian National Liberation Army, the armed wing of the Black Consciousness Movement of Azania, in December 1993

Thelle Mogoerane: member of the African National Congress of South Africa who, on June 9, 1983, was hanged for the murder of four policemen during armed attacks against police stations between 1979 and 1981.

Binyam Mohamed: Ethiopian detainee and U.K. resident held at Guantánamo Bay, Mohamed was believed to be a member of a "North American support cell" that sent money, recruits, and other forms of support overseas to assist in global jihad. Mohamed lived in the United States as a teen for a few years before moving to the United Kingdom in 1994. In May 2001, unemployed, he turned up in Afghanistan, hoping the Taliban's antidrug policy would end his drug habit. Prosecutors said he trained at al Qaeda camps. He was detained at Karachi Airport in Pakistan in April 2002 while attempting to fly back to the United Kingdom on a false U.K. passport. At his 2004 hearing before the Combatant Status Review Tribunal in Guantánamo, he said he had received paramilitary training in Afghanistan on how to falsify documents and encode phone numbers in preparation for going to fight in Chechnya. Prosecutors said he agreed to rent apartments inside large buildings in the United States, fill them with natural gas, and set them off with timers. He and Jose Padilla were alleged to have been trained by Khalid Sheikh Muhammad in how to spray nightclubs with cyanide. In December 2005, he was referred to the military commission in Guantánamo on accusation of conspiring with Jose Padilla to set off a radioactive device in the United States. The charge sheet said he and Padilla had met in Pakistan after 9/11 to study how to build a dirty bomb, had discussed such an attack with al Qaeda leaders, and had agreed to blow up buildings. The charges against Mohamed, age 26, were dismissed after the June 2006 Supreme Court ruling that the current system of military commissions was unconstitutional. Pentagon prosecutors linked him to Abu Zubaydah and Khalid Sheikh Muhammad. On June 5, 2008, a U.K. judge ordered a hearing as to whether the British government had to turn over evidence to the defense. On February 23, 2009, Mohamed was released to the United Kingdom.

Khalfan Khamis Mohamed: alias Zahran Nassor Maulid. Tanzanian, age 24, and subject of a December 16, 1998, 238-count indictment issued by the U.S. District Court in Manhattan in the August 7, 1998, truck bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. Mohamed met with three coconspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in late July and the first week of August 1998 to plan the bombing and took photos of the embassy from a nearby Suzuki Samurai after the bombing. The charges carried the death penalty. The State Department announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture and circulated posters printed in English, Arabic, French, Dhari, and Baluchi at all of its diplomatic facilities. The State Department also announced it would advertise the reward on the Internet.

On October 8, 1999, Mohamed, whose house was used as a bomb factory and who was arrested in South Africa on October 5, 1999, was charged in federal court in New York on charges of murder and conspiracy in the two bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. He pleaded not guilty. He had been living in Cape Town since a few days after the bombings. Mary Jo White, U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, said he was the first person in custody believed to have had "direct operational responsibility" in the Tanzanian bombing as his rented house was used as the bomb factory and base of operations. He was also charged with purchasing the white Suzuki Samurai that was used as a utility vehicle by the killers.

On November 2, 2000, he and Mamdouh Mahmud Salim stabbed a guard, age 43, in the eye with a sharp object at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in New York. The guard lost his eye and the implement penetrated his brain.

On May 29, 2001, the jury found the defendants guilty of all 302 counts. He was found guilty of conspiracy and murder and faced the death penalty.

Sofia Kadir Mohamed: one of two or four Ethiopians (reports differ) who, on March 8, 1994, hijacked a Saudi Arabian Airlines A300 Airbus on a flight between Addis Ababa and Jeddah and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya. One report stated that of the 139 passengers, 130 were Ethiopians placed on board by Saudi officials for deportation. The captain and crew were threatened by what was later found to be a plastic gun. One female hijacker disembarked with the passengers but was arrested. Kenyan troops stormed the plane, shooting an Ethiopian hijacker lured out of the plane and overpowering his female accomplice. Police said they would be tried in Kenya.

Abu Qasim son of Mohammad: one of five Libyans arrested March 27, 1993, by police in Peshawar, Pakistan, at a checkpoint near the Gulbahar crossing. Police found two .30 pistols and 30 cartridges, fake passport stamps, U.S. dollars, and Pakistani currency in their vehicle.

Akhtar Mohammad: arrested in Quetta, Pakistan, in March 1995 for associating with Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf. Mohammad was released on April 2, 1995.

Bunia Mohammad: identified by Thai police on July 24, 1991, as one of three Pakistani suspects in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok. Mohammad was the suspected leader of the killers and was married to a Thai woman who resides in Chachoengsao. He was arrested in Pakistan by Interpol on October 9, 1991.

Khalid son of Mohammad: one of five Libyans arrested March 27, 1993, by police in Peshawar, Pakistan, at a checkpoint near the Gulbahar crossing. Police found two .30 pistols and 30 cartridges, fake passport stamps, U.S. dollars, and Pakistani currency in their vehicle.

Mohammad son of Raj Mohammad: one of two Indian terrorists arrested by Pakistani troops on May 4, 1994, after the duo crossed the Line of Control in the Nakyal subsector of Azad Kashmir.

Authorities found 18 kilograms of explosives along with accessories and two tubes of rocket launchers. The duo hailed from the Neka Panchggaran village of Indian-held Kashmir. They said they had been trained in handling explosives by a Burka Rifle Unit of the Indian Army. They were forcibly recruited by a Research and Analysis Wing (Indian intelligence) agent.

Mohammad Yusuf son of Sain Mohammad: one of two Indian terrorists arrested by Pakistani troops on May 4, 1994, after the duo crossed the Line of Control in the Nakyal subsector of Azad Kashmir. Authorities found 18 kilograms of explosives along with accessories and 2 tubes of rocket launchers. The duo hailed from the Neka Panchggaran village of Indian-held Kashmir. They said they had been trained in handling explosives at a Burka Rifle Unit of the Indian Army. They were forcibly recruited by a Research and Analysis Wing (Indian intelligence) agent.

Abdi Ismail Mohammed: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Aboud Rogo Mohammed: Kenyan Islamic preacher and cousin of two Kubwa family members who were charged with him on June 23, 2003, by the Kenyan government in the November 28, 2002, suicide bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured. A court appearance was scheduled for July 8.

Ahmed Mohammed: senior army soldier who resigned his commission in a dispute with the Comoran president and, on November 26, 1989, shot to death president Ahmed Abdallah and bodyguard Lt. Jassar in an attack by army rebels on the president's palace in Moroni. The coup attempt failed.

Ahmed Abdi Mohammed: one of four Ethiopians who, on September 4, 1992, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET555, a B727 flying from Dire Dawa to Addis Ababa, and diverted it to Djibouti, where they surrendered after being told they would be permitted to request exile. The hijackers wanted to flee an undemocratic regime in Ethiopia.

Bashe Musa Mohammed: Somali Army member who was one of three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. They demanded the release of 7 Somali youths sentenced to death for political activities and the release of 14 other political prisoners. The hijackers surrendered on November 27 after being granted a news conference. They received political asylum in Ethiopia. On December 4, the Somali government demanded the return of the hijackers.

Binyam Mohammed: variant of Binyam Mohamed.

Faqir Mohammed: deputy leader of Pakistan's Taliban movement in May 2008.

Fazul Abdullah Mohammed: aliases Fouad Mohammed, Abdul Karim. Charged with planning the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, and listed in October 2001 as one of the FBI's 22 Most Wanted Terrorists. Mohammed, a Comoran aged late twenties in 2001, is circa five feet four inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. He was the leader of the al Qaeda branch in Kenya and trained with Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan. He was linked to four people charged by the Kenyan government on June 23, 2003, in the November 28, 2002, suicide bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured. He speaks

French, Arabic, and English and carries a Kenyan passport. He taught at an Islamic school in Lamu, Kenya, under the Karim alias. He is married to Mohamed Kubwa's half-sister, Amina. Kubwa was charged in the November 28, 2002, attacks and Kubwa was believed to have been killed on January 8, 2007, when the United States conducted an air strike on Badmadow Island off southern Somalia.

On August 3, 2008, Mohammed escaped a Kenyan police raid. He was seeking treatment for a kidney problem. The 1998 al Qaeda attacks on the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania killed 225 and wounded 5,000.

Hafiz Dur Mohammed: one of two accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested in March 1995 by Karachi, Pakistan, police. He was implicated by Yusuf associate Ibrahim Rasul in terrorist activities in Karachi.

Khalfan Khamis Mohammed: arrested by South African authorities in October 1999. He was turned over to the FBI, indicted, and convicted on May 29, 2001, of involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Tanzania. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Khalid Mohammed: on August 21, 1998, the Nairobi Daily News reported that Mohammed was identified as the man who threw a grenade at guards at the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi during the August 7, 1998, bombing. He escaped. Witnesses later picked him out of a police lineup.

Mian Mohamood: variant Mian Abid Mahmud. One of six Pakistanis arrested December 29, 1995, in the Philippines. On January 11, 1996, Makati Regional Trial Court set January 17 for the arraignment of five of the Pakistanis to be charged with illegal possession of explosives. They were released on bail. On July 16, 1996, Judge Josefina Guevara-Salonga acquitted six Pakistanis of the charges in Manila, saying the police evidence was weak. She said testimony against Mohamood appeared faked and ordered his release.

Abdul Mohsin: Egyptian arrested in April 2000 in a police raid on a Peshawar, Pakistan, apartment. Mohsin had spent three months in jail in Canada on suspicion of involvement with Osama bin Laden's al Qaeda group. Police found several forged passports in the apartment. The police had raided the place on a tip that bin Laden's son was living in the apartment with Mohsen and an Algerian, who was also detained.

David Moise: member of the African National Congress of South Africa convicted of aiding others in laying mines at the South African Coal and Oil Company (SASOL) complex on June 2, 1980. He had received military training in Angola. On August 19, 1981, Johannesburg judge Charl Theron sentenced Moise to death. On June 9, 1983, his sentence was commuted to life in prison by state president Marais Viljoen.

Ta Mok: one-legged Khmer Rouge leader believed to have ordered the March 26, 1996, kidnapping of 26 Cambodian mine removers and their British supervisor, Christopher Malone Howes, as they were clearing a road in Gradow village, Angkor Thom District, near the Angkor Wat temple.

Abdullah Omar Mokhtar: spokesperson for the International Muslim Brotherhood organization who claimed credit for the January 12, 1983, shooting of several bullets through windows of the Soviet Embassy in Malaysia.

Zondi Roland Molapa: South Africa's most wanted African National Congress terrorist, Molapa was killed on July 26, 1986, when he attacked security forces approaching his parked car alongside the road to Katlehong. He was wanted for three midday bombings in Johannesburg that injured 30 people as well as for 17 other attacks.

Ismail “Tiger” Momen: along with his brother Yaqub, Momen was believed to be the mastermind of the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250. India requested extradition from Dubai, which observed that India had turned down extradition requests from Dubai.

Suleiman Momen: one of three sons of Ibrahim Abdul Razak Memon who were arrested with their father on August 25, 1994, for their involvement in the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250.

Yaqub Momen: Muslim who owned an abandoned brown van containing seven AK-56 rifles and four grenades found by Indian police investigating the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250. He and his brother Ismail “Tiger” Momen were believed to be the masterminds of the attacks. India requested extradition from Dubai, which observed that India had turned down extradition requests from Dubai.

Yusuf Momen: one of three sons of Ibrahim Abdul Razak Memon who were arrested with their father on August 25, 1994, for their involvement in the March 12, 1993, multiple bombings in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250.

Abdul Monan: leader of a group of Indonesian Muslim extremists who had participated in the Afghan conflict. He was arrested following a police raid on their Jakarta stronghold on July 31, 1993, during which 4 terrorists were killed and 22 wounded. The group had attacked tourist buses and hotels and had tried to terrorize villagers living near the capital. On August 5, 1993, London’s al-Sharq al-Awsat said he had been killed in a second police raid.

Tullio Moneta: South African born in Yugoslavia of Italian parents and member of the Wild Geese of the Congo Wars of the 1960s who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Moneta was charged by South Africa with kidnapping rather than hijacking and was released on bail on December 1, 1981. On July 26, 1982, he was found guilty of jeopardizing the Air India plane and passengers.

Armando Montemayor: alias Ka Melvin. New People’s Army (NPA) commander identified on May 12, 1989, by Col. Victor Tiangco, chief of Task Force Rowe, as a principal suspect in NPA’s April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe.

Florencio Montera: captured Philippine New People’s Army rebel who, on January 4, 1991, confessed to involvement in the November 15, 1986, kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila.

Basilio Montojo: one of three young Filipino hijackers of a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Davao to Manila and Bacolod on October 11, 1973. The plane landed in Hong Kong. President Ferdinand Marcos granted them amnesty in the Philippines. The hijackers agreed and surrendered their weapons.

Jalandoni Moohombsar: alias Commander Allan. Muslim rebel charged by the Philippine military in the city court in Marawi on April 2, 1979, with involvement in the March 9, 1979, kidnapping of Reverend Lloyd G. Van Vactor, an American missionary for the United Church of Christ at Dansalan College. The group was believed to be from the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), although the MNLF denied responsibility.

Mophete Mophete: phoned a Johannesburg news agency to claim credit for the Lesotho Liberation Army for the December 20, 1985, armed attack on a Christmas party in Lesotho that killed four women and three men, all black refugees from South Africa, six of whom were members of the African National Congress.

Yasuo Morioka: one of three Maruseido members who attacked the U.S. Consulate in Fukuoka by setting off an incendiary device on November 22, 1974. On February 26, 1976, the former university student was sentenced by the Fukuoka District Court to four years.

Jerry Mosololi: member of the African National Congress of South Africa who, on June 9, 1983, was hanged for the murder of four policemen during armed attacks against police stations between 1979 and 1981.

Marcus Motaung: member of the African National Congress of South Africa who, on June 9, 1983, was hanged for the murder of four policemen during armed attacks against police stations between 1979 and 1981.

Jason Moyo: director of military operations for Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU). Moyo was killed on January 22, 1977, when a mail bomb exploded in his Lusaka office. The bomb, mailed in Botswana, injured four others. ZAPU claimed the parcel was mailed by Rhodesian racists.

Austin Mphofu: one of the Zimbabwe African People's Union kidnappers of two U.S., two U.K., and two Australian tourists on July 23, 1982. The tourists were strangled. On November 22, 1984, High Court Judge Wilson Sandura sentenced Mphofu to death. He was hanged on April 7, 1986.

Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam: variant Fahid Mohammed Ally Msalam; aliases Fahid Muhammad 'Alim Salam, Fahid Mohammed Ally, Fahid Mohammed Ali Musalaam, Usama al-Kini. Fugitive Kenyan who, on December 16, 1998, was indicted by the U.S. District Court in Manhattan on 238 counts in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. The charges carried the death penalty. The State Department announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture. Msalam met with three other conspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in July and August 1998 to plan the bombing. He was charged with helping buy the truck used in the Tanzania bombing. He packed it with explosives and transported it to the embassy. Charges include murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and attack on a federal facility resulting in death. He is circa five feet seven inches tall and weighs 185 pounds. He was born in Mombasa, Kenya, on February 19, 1976. He speaks Swahili, Arabic, and English. He has worked as a clothing vendor.

After the 9/11 attacks, Msalam became al Qaeda's emir for Afghanistan's Zabul Province. He traveled between Afghanistan, Pakistan, and East Africa to plan suicide missions, train terrorists, and raise money. He became the group's operations chief in Pakistan in 2007 and directed at least seven suicide attacks, including a failed assassination attempt on Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto in October 2007. He also directed the September 16, 2008, car bombing of the Marriott Hotel in Islamabad that killed 53 people.

On January 1, 2009, Msalam was killed in a U.S. Predator missile strike on a Karikot, South Waziristan, Pakistan, building used for explosives training.

Fahid Mohammed Ally Msalam: variant of Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam, Fahid Muhammad 'Alim Salam.

Mubarok: alias of Hutomo Pamungkas.

Mohammad Mubeen: Pakistani, age 28, who renewed his driver's license 23 minutes before a suspected 9/11 hijacker at the same Florida Department of Motor Vehicles location. As of November 2001, he was held in federal custody in connection with the FBI's and Immigration and Naturalization Service's investigation of the 9/11 attacks.

Mohammad Yusuf Mughal: one of four Pakistani members of the Pakistan People's Party who, on March 26, 1991, hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur–Singapore route. After nine hours of negotiations, the Singapore Army stormed the plane and killed the hijackers, who had threatened violence against the passengers if their demands were not met in five minutes. Mughal was a member of the al-Zulfikar organization.

Lieutenant Mugisa: Uganda Army officer who escaped from Luzira Maximum Security Prison and, on November 10, 1985, hijacked a twin-engine turboprop Fokker Friendship en route from Entebbe Airport to Arua. The National Resistance Army claimed credit.

'Abd-al-Hadi Muhammad: alias Hamzah. Egyptian Islamic Group terrorist injured during the failed June 26, 1995, assassination attempt against Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Muhammad later died of his wounds.

'Abdallah Idris Muhammad: chairman of the Eritrean Liberation Front in 1989.

'Ali 'Id Muhammad: Egyptian terrorist arrested by Pakistani authorities on May 14, 1994, and deported to Egypt. He was detained by Cairo International Airport authorities upon arrival on May 14. He had left Cairo in 1990 and settled in Peshawar until he was arrested in Karachi. The arrest fell within Interpol's jurisdiction to arrest Arab Afghans after the expiration of the Afghan government's deadline for them to leave the country. He was wanted in a case involving the Vanguard of Conquest, a jihad group responsible for the 1981 assassination of Anwar Sadat and working to replace the Egyptian government with an extremist Islamic state.

Al-Arab Sadiq Hafiz Muhammad: alias Khali-fah. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution charged the nine of forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate a state figure, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Fazul Abdallah Muhammad: variant Fazul Abdallah Mohammed; aliases Abdallah Fazul, Abdalla Fazul, Abdallah Mohammed Fazul, Fazul Abdilahi Mohammed, Fazul Abdallah, Fazul Abdalla, Fazul Mohammed, Haroon, Harun, Haroon Fazul, Harun Fazul, Fadil Abdallah Muhamad, Fadhil Haroun, Abu Seif al Sudani, Abu Aisha, Abu Luqman, Fadel Abdallah Mohammed Ali, Fouad Mohammed, Abu al Fazul al-Qamari, 'Abdallah Fazul, Abu Sayf al-Sudani. Indicted September 17, 1998, in the Southern District of New York court for involvement in the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998, and the attacks on Mombasa, Kenya, on November 28, 2002. Muhammad was seen in Mogadishu after the bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Mombasa. He was wanted for murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He has used August 25, 1972, and December 25, 1974, as his birth date and claims to have been born in Moroni on the Comoros Islands. He is circa five feet four inches tall and weighs 130 pounds. He claims Comoran and Kenyan citizenship.

On May 14, 2003, he was reported to be in Kenya. On May 15, the United Kingdom suspended flights to and from Kenya. The U.K. government warned of a “clear terrorist threat” in Uganda, Ethiopia, Tanzania, Somalia, Eritrea, and Djibouti. On May 16, U.S. and U.K. marines searched the borders with Somalia and Sudan because of heightened fears of an al Qaeda attack.

Khalid Sheikh Muhammad (KSM): aliases Muktar Balucci, The Brain. Planned the Bojinka plan to bomb a dozen American planes in the 1990s and planned the 9/11 attacks. An ethnic Pakistani born in 1965, his parents were Baluchistan immigrants who moved to Kuwait, where he grew up. One of his brothers joined the Muslim Brotherhood in the 1980s and invited KSM to join. In 1983, he obtained a visa to study at Chowan College in Murfreesboro, North Carolina. He graduated from North Carolina State Agricultural and Technical State University in 1986. He later turned up in Afghanistan and moved on to Peshawar, where he met Osama bin Laden. He was arrested March 1, 2003, in Rawalpindi, Pakistan.

In March 2003, Tunis issued a warrant for his arrest for his role in the April 11, 2002, truck bombing that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia.

At the beginning of his trial with 13 other detainees in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, on March 10, 2007, he said he was responsible for 30 planned and actual terrorist attacks, including 9/11. “I was responsible for the 9/11 operation from A to Z.” He also claimed credit for the following:

- 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center, which was carried out by his nephew, Ramzi Yousef
- November 2003 attacks in Istanbul against U.K. and Israeli targets that killed 57 and wounded 700
- Would-be downing of a trans-Atlantic aircraft by shoe bomber Richard Reid
- 2002 bombing of a Kenya beach resort frequented by Israelis
- Failed 2002 missile attack on an Israeli passenger jet at Mombasa, Kenya
- 2002 bombing of two nightclubs in Bali, Indonesia, that killed 202
- 2002 shooting to death of a U.S. Marine in Kuwait’s Fikla Island
- Planned attacks against U.S. nuclear power plants; suspension bridges in New York; U.S. embassies in Indonesia, Australia, and Japan; Israeli embassies in India, Azerbaijan, the Philippines, and Australia; U.S. naval vessels and oil tankers around the world; an oil company on Sumatra, Indonesia, he claimed was owned by former secretary of state Henry Kissinger; the Sears Tower in Chicago, the Empire State Building, the New York Stock Exchange, the Library Tower (now known as the U.S. Bank building) in Los Angeles, and the Plaza Bank in Washington State; the Panama Canal; and Big Ben and London’s Heathrow Airport
- Planned assassination attempts against former presidents Carter and Clinton
- Assassination attempts against Pope John Paul II and Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf
- Supervising the “cell for the production of biological weapons, such as anthrax and others, and following up on dirty-bomb operations on American soil”

- Personally beheading Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl in February 2002: "I decapitated with my blessed right hand the head of the American Jew Daniel Pearl in the city of Karachi, Pakistan. For those who would like to confirm, there are pictures of me on the Internet holding his head."
- Plot to blow up a dozen airliners heading from the Philippines and other locations in Asia to the United States
- Plot to blow up a flight from London to the United States
- Planned attacks on U.S. military vessels in the straits of Hormuz and Gibraltar and the Port of Singapore
- Planned hijackings of planes leaving Saudi Arabia that would be crashed into buildings in Eilat, Israel
- Sending fighters into Israel to conduct surveillance
- Surveilling U.S. nuclear power plants
- Planned attack against North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) headquarters in Brussels, Belgium
- Planned attacks against Israeli passenger jets at Bangkok Airport
- Planned attacks against U.S. military bases and nightclubs in South Korea

He did not claim credit for the August 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, the USS Cole bombing in October 2000 in Yemen, or the attack on a U.S. Consulate in Pakistan in June 2002. Many observers doubted he was this active, suggesting his confessions would deflect attention away from the true planners.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali

Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared KSM an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted the military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi Binalshibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali (alias Ammar al-Baluchi), Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash (alias Khallad). The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. KSM, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. His defense team included Navy Reserve Judge Advocate Gen. Prescott L. Prince, Army Lt. Col. Michael Acuff, and civilian attorneys Scott McKay and David Nevin.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself and wanted to become a martyr. The formal opening of his trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Khamal Muhammad: Pakistani, age 23, arrested in San Francisco in January 2004 for overstaying his visa by eight months. He was deported in Pakistan in mid-May 2005. He told authorities he was an armed guard and cook for Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, which is on the State Department's terrorist group list.

Mahmud Muhammad: one of two Iraqi terrorists arrested January 21, 1991, in Bangkok, Thailand, who were part of an international terrorist network financed and armed via Iraqi diplomatic pouches. He was deported on January 28, 1991, but ultimately flew to Nepal on January 31. He was not charged in Thailand, but he was arrested by Nepalese police upon arrival. Nepal deported him back to Bangkok on February 3, 1991. On February 7, the two terrorists were deported to Athens.

Mahmud Hasab Muhammad: member of the Eritrean Liberation Front Executive Committee and deputy commander and chief of staff of the Eritrean Liberation Army, Muhammad was assassinated during the night of September 3, 1989, in Kassala, Sudan.

Mustafa 'Abd-al-Aziz Muhammad: alias al-Turki. Identified by the Ethiopian government as one of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa. On August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution charged the nine with forming a terrorist organization to destabilize the country, possessing arms and explosives, communicating with a foreign state to undermine the country's security, attempting to assassinate state figures, and attempting to blow up vital establishments.

Noor Uthman Muhammed: Sudanese captured at an al Qaeda safe house with Abu Zubaydah on March 28, 2002. Muhammed had trained at the Khaldan terrorist training camp in Afghanistan and later become a weapons instructor there for hundreds of terrorists. From 1996 to 2000, he was the facility's deputy commander. On May 23, 2008, U.S. military prosecutors at Guantánamo Bay charged him with war crimes, including conspiracy and providing support to terrorism. The defendant was five feet two inches tall and faced life in prison.

Uskar Mukawata: Indonesian arrested by Philippine police on September 14, 2002, in connection with the April 21, 2002, bombings in General Santos City after an Abu Sayyaf warning call. A bomb outside a department store killed 15 people, 4 of them children. Less than 40 minutes later, bombs went off near a radio station and a bus terminal. Some 71 people were injured in the bombings. A separate cell phone text message warned that 18 bombs would start exploding after lunch. On September 18, officials said he would be charged with planning the bomb attacks. Police suggested that Jemaah Islamiyah had established a beachhead in Mindanao.

Mukhlis: alias Ali Ghufon. Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) operative wanted for the Bali bombings of October 12, 2002, in which 202 people were killed, many of them Australian tourists. Mukhlis was a brother of Amrozi, who was also arrested in the case. Police were seeking three other relatives, including two other brothers belonging to JI. Police believed Mukhlis was the Malaysia chief of JI and had been involved in a failed plot to blow up the pipelines that supply Malaysian water to Singapore. Mukhlis was arrested December 3, 2002, and confessed two days later to helping plan the Bali bombings. On February 5, 2007, police told Parliament that Mukhlis had used a cell phone in his jail cell to guide Muslim fighters in the Poso region.

On November 8, 2008, the Indonesian government executed Islamic militants Imam Samudra, Mukhlis, and his brother Amrozi Nurhasyim for helping plan and conduct the October 12, 2002, Bali bombings. None expressed remorse, taunting relatives of the victims during their trials. The terrorists told the media that they hoped their executions would spawn revenge attacks in the country.

Simban Singh Mukhpanch: press spokesperson of the Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Getachew Mulate: hijacker on January 23, 1994, of an Ethiopian Airlines B757 flying from Dakar, Senegal, via Bamako to Addis Ababa and diverted to Italy's Ciampino Airport, where he surrendered and requested political asylum.

Bonnie Lou Muller: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send Muller to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Mun Chi-sik: on March 4, 1982, South Korean police announced they were investigating the Korean-born Canadian citizen and owner of a Toronto grocery store who was arrested in Seoul in September in connection with the North Korean-backed plot to assassinate South Korean president Chun Doo-Hwan in Canada in February 1982. Mun, a Seoul college dropout, reportedly bombed a Toronto restaurant in January 1980 to obtain insurance money.

Mun Pu-Sik: seminary dropout arrested April 1, 1982, by Wonju police in the arson attack against the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, that killed a Korean student and injured three others. Mun was believed to be the mastermind. He was indicted for arson in Pusan District Court on April 29, 1982, found guilty, and sentenced to death on August 11, 1982; defense lawyers appealed. On March 8, 1983, the Supreme Court upheld the appeals court's verdict. On March 15, 1983, president Chun Doo-Hwan commuted the death sentence to life in prison.

Mun Se Kwang: would-be assassin of South Korean president Park Chung Hee on August 15, 1974. Mun fatally wounded Park's wife and also killed a 17-year-old girl with a stray bullet during the National Day rally in Seoul. He was arrested after being wounded by security guards. South Korean investigators charged that the attack had been plotted by the North Korean government. Mun, a 22-year-old Korean who resided in Osaka, Japan, had been a member of the Osaka branch of the Korean Youth League, an anti-Park organization of Korean residents in Japan. He reportedly was recruited by North Korean agents in 1972 and was assigned to kill Park in November 1973. During his trial, he said he had been ordered to kill Park by Kim Ho Ryon, the leader of the Chosen Soren in Japan. He received funds from Kim and worked out the assassination plan with him.

Mohammed Ahmed Munawar: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Lebanese to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court.

Salip Abdullah Mundar: Philippine police arrested the key aide of Abu Sayyaf leader Khadafy Janjalani on May 2, 2002.

Mung Sang-hwa: demonstrator from Chonnam National University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea.

Mung Sang-pae: demonstrator from Chonnam National University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea. On February 22, 1990, a district criminal court sentenced three of the students, including Mung, to suspended prison terms of 2½ years for the firebombing. But his sentence was suspended for four years. The trio was charged with blocking official duties, resulting in injuries and fire.

Julie Nyangugi Mungai: Kenyan wife of Khader Musa Hamide and one of nine members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine arrested January 26, 1987, by the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service on immigration law violations. On February 17, 1987, Immigration Judge Roy J. Daniels released five of the defendants on their recognizance and set bail for the others in amounts ranging from $500 to $3,000. A deportation hearing was continued to April 28, 1987. Judge Daniels refused to hear in-chambers testimony from two government witnesses about the defendants' danger to society. On May 11, 1987, charges were dismissed by Immigration Judge Ingrid Hrycenko after Immigration and Naturalization Service official Gilbert Reeves, who had signed the charges, failed to appear for testimony. The next day Immigration and Naturalization Service district director Ernest Gustafson reinstituted the charges. Two Jordanians were charged with belonging to a group that advocates the destruction of property. Five other Jordanians and Mungai were charged with visa violations ranging from overstaying a temporary visa to taking too few courses to qualify for a student visa. The case lasted almost 20 years.

Sirojul Munir: convicted of hiding two of the bombers in the October 12, 2002, bombing of two restaurants in Bali. On October 24, 2006, the government reduced 45 days from his five-year sentence.

Abdul Hakim Murad: alias Saeed Ahmed. Arrested January 6, 1995, in the Philippines on suspicion of plotting with Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf to assassinate Pope John Paul II during his visit to the Philippines. Murad was turned over to the United States by Philippine authorities on March 8, 1995. On April 13, 1995, federal officials in New York charged him with conspiring with others to plant bombs on numerous commercial U.S. aircraft in what is known as the Bojinka plot. He faced 45 years. On October 5, 1995, U.S. officials charged Yusuf with possessing a letter threatening to conduct additional terrorist attacks and demanding Murad's release. On February 23, 1996, Yusuf was indicted for the December 1, 1994, bombing of the Greenbelt Theater in Manila, Philippines, that injured several moviegoers. On September 5, 1996, he was found guilty on all seven counts in the conspiracy to set off the airplane bombs. Defense attorneys said they would appeal. On April 4, 2003, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit upheld his convictions in the 1993 World Trade Center attack and the Bojinka plot.

Al Haj Murad: military chief in 2003 of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in the Philippines. On March 9, 2003, Murad was charged with the March 4, 2003, bombing by a MILF member of the main terminal of Davao Airport in which 21 people were killed and 149 injured. On July 13, 2003, the MILF central committee named him its chair.

Hideo Murai: Aum Shin Rikyo's minister for science and technology who, on April 23, 1995, was stabbed to death in front of the cult's Tokyo headquarters by a man who claimed to be a rightist. Murai had traveled from Japan to Russia in November 1993. Aum purchased a MIL-17 helicopter built in the Tartar region of Russia at a cost of 78 million yen. On October 13, 1995, the Tokyo District Public Prosecutor's Office said he was part of the hit team involved in the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto, age 33; his wife Satoko, age 29; and their son Tatsuhiko, age 1. He also sprayed sarin gas in Matsumoto in June 1994.

Tatsuko Muraoka: acting leader of Aum Shin Rikyo following the arrest of Shoko Asahara. On December 1, 1999, he said the group was responsible for a series of attacks and offered apologies.

Midhat Mursi: alias Abu Khabab al-Masri. Egyptian chemist in charge of al Qaeda's unconventional weapons program who may have become al Qaeda's external operations chief, succeeding Abu Ubaida al Masri in 2007. He attended a meeting with recruits from northern Europe who trained in Pakistan in spring 2007.

On August 3, 2008, al Qaeda announced that their senior explosives and poison expert had been killed in a U.S. air strike in Pakistan on July 28. He was believed to have trained the USS Cole bombers.

Tariq 'Ali Mursi: on November 8, 1998, the Egyptian fundamentalist and Osama bin Laden associate, who had been extradited the previous month by South Africa, refused to make any statements before the South African State Security High Court.

Murugan: alias Das. Sri Lankan suspected of involvement in the May 22, 1991, murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister. Murugan was arrested the night of June 14, 1991, on a State Transport Corporation bus between Villupuram and Madras. He was held under the Terrorists and Disruptive Activities Act. He was remanded to police custody for 28 days. Police believed he was a member of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

Musa: alias of Zulkifli bin Hir.

Mustafa 'Abd-al-Hamid Mustafa: on August 7, 1995, Mustafa was identified by the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution as one of five terrorists who had confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Shibli Mustafa: alleged associate of Osama bin Laden arrested March 17, 1999, by Karachi Airport police, who also detained four of his associates from Turbat, Baluchistan. They were picked up following an Interpol report when they arrived at the Jinnah Terminal after being deported from Dubai. Mustafa was returning from London after having served five years in prison for involvement in arms smuggling.

Mut: alias of Adinan Songkoewala.

Alhabsi Rin Mutahib: served in November 1993 as the information officer of the Moro National Liberation Front of the Philippines.

Yusuf Muzammil: Lashkar-i-Taiba leader alleged by Indian police as having directed the November 26–28, 2008, Mumbai attacks. India requested extradition from Pakistan.

Muzzafar: one of four members of the al-Zulfikar organization arrested August 5, 1991, by Pakistani authorities for planning to assassinate the president, the prime minister, the Sindh chief minister, the leader of the Muhajir Qaumi Movement, and other VIPs. Police seized 4 Kalashnikovs, 36 Soviet-made bombs, 2 pistols, 2 rifles, 3 revolvers, a Mauser, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Eskimo Mwasi: alias of Gilbert Sithela Ngwenya.

Mwenge: one of two former soldiers of the Federal Democratic Movement (FEDEMO) of Uganda arrested January 13, 1988, by the National Resistance Army in connection with the January 11, 1988, incident in which grenades were thrown into the hall and down a stairway of a building that houses the French chancery; the embassies of Libya, West Germany, and Sudan; and several firms. A Libyan diplomat and two Ugandans were killed, and a French diplomat and three Ugandans were injured in the attack by the Uganda Federal Army and the Uganda Democratic Alliance.

Bo Mya: Karen strongman whose rebels kidnapped two French citizens and a dozen Burmese civilians on October 18, 1983. He threatened to put the French couple on trial.

Myrna: one of 20 members of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo.

N

---

Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan: variant Salih 'Ali Salih Nabhan. Born on April 4, 1979, in Mombasa, Kenya, he is wanted in connection with the November 28, 2002, attacks in Mombasa against an aircraft and a hotel. He owned a Toyota sedan he traded in to buy the green Mitsubishi SUV used in the suicide attack on the Israeli-owned Paradise Hotel in which 16 died and 80 were injured. The same day, two SA-7 missiles were fired at an Arkia Israel Airlines charter B757-300 flying from Mombasa to Tel Aviv. Some relatives thought he was going to South Africa; his wife was told he was going to Somalia. The Nabhans, their child, and another couple had lived in Mombasa for three years. The other couple was also suspected. The two families left Mombasa on November 27. Police detained his wife, Fatuma Nabhan, a 17-year-old Kenyan, for questioning in Lamu, an island north of Mombasa. Nabhan was seen in Lamu on November 26. On December 16, police found bomb-making materials in his home. At that time, police were still holding Jelani Abu Sheikh, who sold the car to Nabhan and another man two weeks before the attack. Nabhan was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006.

On January 8, 2007, the United States conducted an air strike in Badmadow Island off southern Somalia. The U.S. Navy fired missiles at Nabhan's location in Dhobley, Somalia, on March 3, 2008. Nabhan was believed killed on September 14, 2009, in a 1 p.m. raid by U.S. Special Operations soldiers on Baraawe, southern Somalia.

Salih 'Ali Salih Nabhan: variant of Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan.

Musa Nada: one of two leaders of the 11 Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who, on July 8, 1987, kidnapped Teofila Smith and Linda Madrid, two Filipinos working for the UN in Lanao del Sur, Philippines.

Sohail Nadeem: arrested April 17, 1995, in a police shootout in eastern Karachi in which Nadeem Riaz, a member of the Haqiqi faction of the Muhajir Qaumi Movement, was killed. Riaz was a suspect in the March 8, 1995, lethal shooting of two U.S. Consulate officials and the wounding of a third in a morning ambush on a white Toyota Hiace minivan taking the diplomats to the consulate in Karachi, Pakistan.

Balasingham Nadesan: Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) political leader who said in December 2008 that the LTTE would continue to fight on, despite reverses in the field.

'Abd-al-Karim al-Nadi: named by Cairo's MENA on May 16, 1996, as having confessed to the Ethiopians his involvement in the June 26, 1995, attempted assassination of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Ethiopia. The three confessors said they had visited Pakistan, Afghanistan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, and Sudan.

Abdullmer Nagh: alias of one of three terrorists allegedly working for Iraqi intelligence who made threats against senior diplomats, according to the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Thailand in September 1991.

Muhammad Arif bin Naharudin: Al Ghuraba member, age 20, arrested in October 2003 by Singaporean authorities. He had received military training in Afghanistan or with a Pakistani militant group. Al Ghuraba was established in 1999 by Hambali. Naharudin was among 11 detainees who were being groomed as the next leaders of Jemaah Islamiyah.

Sam Sudin Naim: leader of an Al-Harkat-al-Islamia (AHAI) strike force who, in a clandestine interview with a Philippine newspaper, said his group did not know of the activities of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested by Pakistani police in a December 16, 1995, dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The arrested Pakistanis were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack delegates to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation conference in November 1995 and assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement. Naim claimed to have 70 AHAI members in Manila who were planning to “bomb and assassinate targets, including military and police intelligence officials.” He was expecting shipments of arms from Syria and Pakistan.

Abdur Rahman Najdi: variant Abu Abdel-Rahman Najdi. Najdi, a Saudi-born al Qaeda terrorist sought by the United States, called on Muslims to join the fight in Iraq against the U.S.-led occupation and to overthrow the Saudi royal family, whom he termed “U.S. puppets,” in an audiotape aired on August 18, 2003, on Pakistan’s al-Arabiya television. He released another audio message on September 7, 2003.

Seiki Nakagawa: member of the Japanese Yamaguchi-gumi gangster group who, on December 23, 1986, was charged in Osaka with attempted murder and endangering an aircraft. On November 6, 1986, he admitted that on October 26, 1986, he accidentally triggered a grenade that exploded on a Thai Airways A300 flying from Bangkok to Osaka via Manila, injuring 62 people.

Tomomasa Nakagawa: the Tokyo District Public Prosecutor’s Office filed charges against Nakagawa on October 13, 1995, for the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto, age 33; his wife Satoko, age 29; and their son Tatsuhiko, age 1. Nakagawa served as Aum Shin Rikyo leader Shoko Asahara’s doctor. Nakagawa faced further charges in connection with the May 16, 1995, parcel bomb attack on Tokyo governor Yukio Aoshima. On October 24, 1995, Nakagawa told the Tokyo District Court that he made the nerve gas used in the March 20, 1995, attack on the Tokyo subway system and that he helped other Aum members strangle a colleague. On January 23, 1996, he testified that Asahara had ordered him to release sarin in Matsumoto in June 1994, killing 7 people and injuring 140 others, as a test run for the Tokyo subway attack.

Horikazu Nakajima: restaurant owner arrested in late 1987 by police in Okinawa in connection with the false passport charge against Japanese Red Army member Osamu Maruoka, who was detained on November 21, 1987, with a passport in the name of Hideo Iraba.

Shojo Nakanishi: Japanese Red Army terrorist alleged by Seoul newsmen on September 12, 1988, to have entered South Korea traveling under altered Japanese passports stolen in Spain from Japanese tourists. The Seoul Olympics were approaching.

Tatsuji Nakaoka: hijacker of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka on November 6, 1972. The hijacker, armed with a gun and explosives, demanded two million dollars and a flight to Cuba. He allowed the passengers and crew to deplane in Tokyo and was overpowered while entering a DC8 by police who had hidden inside it. He was sentenced to 20 years on March 13, 1974.

Nalini: Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam woman suspected of involvement in the May 22, 1991, murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister. She was arrested the night of June 14, 1991, on a State Transport Corporation bus between Villupuram and Madras. She was held under the Terrorists and Disruptive Activities Act and was remanded to police custody for 28 days.

Nam Chong-Hyon: leader of 40 workers at the Namil Machinery Company in Chinchon, Chungchongpuk-do, South Korea, who took two Japanese executives hostage on December 28, 1988, demanding that they make amends to the company for the poor quality machines they had sold them earlier. The workers threatened to harm the hostages if police stormed the building. They demanded that the Japanese firm pay 500 million won for losses to the workers' firm. Nam, the head of the Korean firm, had filed a lawsuit against the Japanese firm when nine can-producing machines he had purchased on December 31, 1987, proved defective.

Daisuke Namba: executed for the attempted assassination of Crown Prince Hirohito in 1923. His name was used on the passport of Kozo Okamoto, the surviving Japanese Red Army member in the May 30, 1972, attack on Lod Airport in which 28 people were killed.

Conceshu Napon: one of five New People's Army members arrested in connection with the explosion of three grenades during the April 19, 1981, Easter Sunday mass at the San Pedro Cathedral in Davao City that killed 13 and wounded 177. On April 30, 1981, police said the grenades were supplied by the Moro National Liberation Front.

Farhad Naseem: variant Faha. Owner of a laptop computer seized by Pakistani police that contained e-mails from Sheik Omar Saeed, a key suspect in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl. On March 22, 2002, Naseem was charged in absentia by a Pakistani court with capital murder, kidnapping for ransom, and terrorism. He was accused of purchasing the scanner and digital camera used for the e-mails. On July 15, 2002, he was convicted and sentenced to 25 years.

Naseer: shot to death September 12, 2003, in a gunfight in central Bombay. He and another man were fleeing in a car containing hidden detonators, explosives, and guns. He was believed to have been the mastermind of two taxi bombs that went off in Bombay on August 25, 2003, killing 53 people and injuring another 160.

Sheikh Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri: aliases Abu Asim al Makki, Sheik Mohammed Omar al Harazi. Worked with Walid bin Attash in planning the October 12, 2000, bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen. He was believed to have given the order to three Saudi members of al Qaeda who were planning to attack U.S. and British warships in the Strait of Gibraltar in May 2002. He was mentioned by some of the defendants as having obtained funds for the October 6, 2002, al Qaeda bombing of the Limburg, a French supertanker, in the Arabian Sea five miles off the coast of Yemen. The news media reported that the Mecca-born al-Nashiri was arrested in November 2002. He fought against the Russians in Afghanistan and spent time in Yemen, where he owned Al Mur

Honey, a terrorist money laundry. He was detained in Saudi Arabia in 1998 and was deported the following year. He may have trained terrorists for the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. On July 7, 2004, a Yemeni court charged him and five other Yemenis in the USS Cole bombing. On September 29, 2004, Yemeni judge Najib al-Qaderi sentenced him to death.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced the transfer of the last 14 detainees from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On March 14, 2007, al-Nashiri told the Combatant Status Review Tribunal in Guantánamo that he had been coerced into making false confessions about the USS Cole bombing and the attacks on the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He had been sentenced in absentia to death in Yemen for his role in the USS Cole case. He said he had merely been involved in a fishing business with the USS Cole bombers. He claimed to have become a millionaire at age 19 and to have met with bin Laden several times in Afghanistan.

On June 30, 2008, he was charged on eight counts—including conspiracy to violate the laws of war, treachery, destruction of property, intentionally causing serious bodily injury, murder, and terrorism—for the October 12, 2000, bombing of the USS Cole in which 17 U.S. sailors were killed and 47 wounded. He was also charged in the failed attack on the USS The Sullivans in Aden, Yemen, in January 2000 and the attack on the French supertanker SS Limburg in the Gulf of Aden in October 2002. Five charges carried the death penalty. He had been in U.S. custody since November 2002. He was to be represented by civilian attorneys Theresa Duncan and Nancy Hollander of Albuquerque.

Sayed Abu Nasir: Bangladeshi, age 27, arrested on January 19, 1999, in India as the ringleader of a group of four people involved in a plot by Osama bin Laden to bomb the U.S. Embassy and two consular offices in Madras and Calcutta. Police recovered two kilograms of RDX explosives and five detonators. His Indian accomplices, who were picked up in West Bengal State, were identified as Mohammed Gulab, Mohammed Nawab, and Aga Khan. Other at-large members of the terrorist group included four Egyptians, a Sudanese, and a Myanmar national. Police said Abu Nasir and his gang crossed the border between Bangladesh and West Bengal in October. They then traveled to Madras and Calcutta to surveil targets. Abu Nasir claimed to have met bin Laden at a terrorist training camp in Kunar, Afghanistan, in 1995.

Nasr: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Nasr, in his twenties, was from Faisalabad, Pakistan.

Ahmed Idris Nasreddin: in August 2002, the Ethiopian, age 78, was designated by the U.S. government as an Italian-based financier of terrorism. The United States listed him and a dozen of his financial companies and other holdings on an official blacklist on April 19, 2002; the United Nations soon followed. The U.S. Department of the Treasury cited his support for Youssef Nada and the Al Taqwa Bank, which had “long acted as financial advisors to al Qaeda.” Nada and the bank had been designated by the United States and the United Nations as terrorism financiers in November 2001. Nasreddin later certified that he had terminated relations with Nada and the bank. In November 2007, Nasreddin did not appear on U.S. blacklists.

Athar Nassem: Pakistani, age 21, arrested with two associates on December 29, 1973, by Heathrow police for carrying five automatic pistols and 150 rounds of ammunition. On January 4, 1974, he and his accomplices were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. He was sentenced to one year.

Najim Nasser: one of six Iraqis who were among the nine suspected terrorists, including the brother of Ramzi Yusuf, arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila.

Sajjad Nasser: variant Sajjad Naseer. One of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them, including Nasser, on bail. The FBI said three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Irfan Kamran and Sajjad Nasser were due to appear for an April 4 bail hearing. Prosecutors opposed their release on the grounds that they were flight risks. Prosecutors had appealed their initial release, and the duo was jailed pending the hearing.

On April 8, U.S. District Judge Lewis T. Babcock ruled that “the government has failed to establish” that Kamran and Nasser posed any danger and ordered them released. Kamran had already posted his $30,000 bail. Nasser was released on $100,000 bail but was detained by the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement on a separate charge. Federal prosecutors said they still believed the two men were dangerous. The FBI had reported that Nasser had gone to a camp in Pakistan in summer 2001. The camp was run by the Army of Mohammed, which the United States lists as a terrorist organization. Nasser said he left early because he did not like the strenuous physical training.

Sayyid Abu-Nassir: Bangladeshi arrested by Indian police in January 1999 for connections to Osama bin Laden. He and three other men were planning to bomb the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi and U.S. consulates in Calcutta and Madras.

Armando Naval: one of three young Filipino hijackers of a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Davao to Manila and Bacolod on October 11, 1973. The plane landed in Hong Kong. president Ferdinand Marcos granted them amnesty. The hijackers agreed and surrendered their weapons.

Raymundo Navarro: student activist at the University of the Philippines who went into hiding after the June 16, 1989, arrest of Donato Contente in connection with the New People’s Army April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe. Navarro and five other students were linked by Contente to the slaying. The military filed charges of murder and frustrated murder against seven student suspects before the office of Quezon City prosecutor Juarlito Galisanao. A warrant was issued on July 9, 1989.

Mohammed Nawab: Indian who was one of four people detained on January 19, 1999, and charged with involvement in a plot by Osama bin Laden to bomb the U.S. Embassy and two U.S. consular offices in Madras and Calcutta. Police recovered two kilograms of RDX explosives and five detonators when they arrested the suspects in West Bengal State.

Ahmad Mustafa Nawawah: according to the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution on August 7, 1995, Nawawah, a fugitive in Sudan, helped five terrorists who had confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Ali Nawaz: administrative officer of Human Concern International arrested by Pakistani authorities on December 3, 1995, on suspicion of financing the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80.

Mohammed Nawaz: one of four Pakistanis arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992; the men were suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges had not been dropped.

Nazih: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Nazih, in his twenties, was from Faisalabad, Pakistan.

Osama Nazir: deputy chief of Jaish-i-Muhammad who was arrested by Pakistani authorities on November 17, 2004, for the March 17, 2002, attack on the Protestant International Church in Islamabad's diplomatic quarter. The terrorists threw hand grenades, killing 5 people and wounding 46 others. Nazir was found at a madrassa in Faisalabad, the city where al Qaeda leader Abu Zubaydah was captured in 2002. Nazir was believed involved in the failed assassination attempts on president Gen. Pervez Musharraf in December 2003 and prime minister Shaukat Aziz. Authorities confiscated cell phones, computer disks, documents, and other materials related to the organization. The Pakistani daily Dawn said Nazir had direct links with Osama bin Laden. Nazir also had met with July 7, 2005, London bomber Shahzad Tanweer in Pakistan in 2004.

Albert Sumbe Ncube: during his Rhodesian court hearing on December 5, 1976, the Zimbabwewan guerrilla said he had killed a Roman Catholic bishop and two missionaries, all of whom were West Germans.

Claude-Ernest Ndalla: sentenced to death on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court for planting the two March 20, 1982, bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Yusuf Shamte Ndange: driver of the truck bomb that exploded at the U.S. Embassy in Tanzania on August 7, 1998, killing 10 Tanzanians and injuring 70 people.

Floribert Ndjabu: leader of the Nationalist and Integrationist Front in the Ituri region of the Congo who was arrested in Kinshasa on February 27, 2005, in connection with the February 24, 2005, shooting death of nine Bangladeshi soldiers serving as part of the UN peacekeeping force near Kafe in the northeast.

Ndolo: Zairian tried in absentia and sentenced to 20 years of hard labor on August 17, 1986, by the Congolese Revolutionary Court in the March 20, 1982, detonation of two bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Dileep Nekit: one of five Mozambicans sentenced to death by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, which destroyed the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaged the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack. The local press said Nekit was the leader of 200 terrorists and had killed 45 people.

Ivo Nelson: in November 1977, he served in Denver as the spokesperson for the U.S. chapter of Ananda Marg.

Kay Nelson: in November 1977, she served as the spokeswoman for the Washington Ananda Marg.

Martin Nemadzivhanani: arrested by Australian federal police on October 17, 1988, and charged with being "knowingly concerned" in the April 10, 1988, firebombing of the car of the third secretary of the South African Embassy in Canberra.

Jean-Bosco Ngalina: Congolese or Zairian arrested in October 1990 and held in the Makala Central Prison in Kinshasa on suspicion of masterminding the United Transit Airlines Flight 772 bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171. He was a native of President Mobutu's Zaire Equateur Province. The Zairian newspaper Elima said he had confessed to building the bomb.

Andreas Sono Ngcobo: on December 10, 1984, the African National Congress (ANC) member assassinated Swaziland superintendent Petros Shiba, deputy chief of security police, in Mbabane. Ngcobo apparently was wounded at the scene. On December 18, he was killed at Esicelwini in Manzini. He was also linked to the murder of Inspector Jabulane Dlamini during an ANC/police shootout in April 1984.

Thembinkosi Paulson Ngcobo: possible African National Congress of South Africa member arrested October 28, 1983, while carrying a powerful bomb outside a hall where South African prime minister P.W. Botha was speaking. On March 15, 1984, Ngcobo was sentenced to 20 years.

Sub-Lieutenant Fransico Bonifacio Mba Nguema: one of two men sentenced to death by an Equatorial Guinean court on September 16, 1988, for an assassination attempt against president Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo. An exile group claimed the duo had been executed.

Gilbert Sithela Ngwenya: aliases Eskimo Mwasi, Ntjela. Leader of a group of Zimbabwe African People's Union rebels who kidnapped two U.S., two U.K., and two Australian tourists on July 23, 1982. On April 3, 1984, he claimed the six were still alive in Zambia. He was sentenced to death on November 22, 1984, by High Court Judge Wilson Sandura. On March 8, 1985, Ngwenya claimed the tourists had been strangled. He was hanged on April 7, 1986.

Sibusisa Ngwenya: one of three alleged members of the African National Congress who were indicted June 27, 1986, for a plot to shoot down a South African Air Force plane with a SAM-7 missile. A search of his Meadowland home turned up 27 hand grenades, 3 AK-47 assault rifles, 12 AK-47 magazines, 10 limpet mines, a Makarov pistol, 10 demolition charges, and timing devices.

Ahmed Khalifa Niasse: Senegalese fundamentalist Muslim known as the Ayatollah of Kaolack and a former opposition member arrested with two Libyans on the night of February 19, 1988, by Senegalese security officials as the men were attempting to illegally enter the country with explosives and weapons at Dakar-Yoff Airport. They had come from Cotonou via Abidjan. They were turned over to the State Security Court on April 8, 1988, and faced three to five years in prison for "acts and maneuvers likely to threaten public security." On May 25, 1988, Niasse was temporarily released by the government.

Prof. Hameedullah Khan Niazi: Faisalabad leader of the banned Lashkar-i-Taiba (Holy Army) arrested March 27, 2002, in Pakistan.

Carl Niehaus: white student and member of the African National Congress (ANC) who, on November 24, 1983, was sentenced to 15 years for his ANC connections. He had photographed the Johannesburg municipal gasworks in a plan to sabotage the plant. He was the fiancé of Johanna Lourens, who was sentenced to four years.

Balwinder Singh Nigah: arrested December 2, 1991, by Delhi police the day after a remote-controlled incendiary bomb was found in an Air India B747 bound for London and New York shortly before takeoff from New Delhi. An anonymous caller claimed credit for the Muslim Janbaz Force, a militant secessionist group from Jammu and Kashmir. Nigah was the duty officer of the flight catering unit of Air India and was believed to have planted the device.

Tomomitsu Nimii: variant Niimi. Home affairs minister of Aum Shin Rikyo arrested by Japanese police on April 13, 1995, on suspicion of kidnapping a nurse who had tried to leave the cult. On July 7, 1995, he said that he and other Aum members had parked a remodeled “sarin releasing” car in a nearby supermarket parking lot while on a scouting mission. They then moved the car and released the gas. The Tokyo District Public Prosecutor’s Office filed charges against Nimii on October 13, 1995, for the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto and his family. Nimii was handed a warrant on December 2, 1995, for his involvement in the December 12, 1994, VX gas murder of Osaka businessman Tadahito Hamaguchi.

Jun Nishikawa: one of three Japanese Red Army (JRA) members who burst into the French Embassy in The Hague and took 11 hostages on September 13, 1974. The siege lasted for 101 hours. The terrorists demanded the release of JRA member Yoshiaki Yamada plus one million dollars, which the French refused to pay. The Dutch provided $300,000. The terrorists took off from Schipol Airport, but Lebanon refused permission to land. The plane refueled in Aden, Yemen, but was denied safe haven. The plane landed in Damascus, where the government agreed to grant the terrorists safe conduct in return for surrendering their weapons and the ransom money. Some reports indicated the terrorists were handed over to an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Nishikawa was arrested in Stockholm on March 5, 1975, while taking photographs and making sketches of a building housing the embassies of Lebanon, Austria, and four other countries.

He was deported from Sweden on March 13, 1975, and was arrested by Japanese police at Tokyo International Airport and indicted April 3, 1975, on charges of forging and using official documents. He confessed to Japanese police his involvement in a plot to kidnap Japanese businessmen in Europe. He was indicted May 2, 1975, on charges of attempted murder and unlawful arrest and confinement. Nishikawa, along with other terrorists in Japanese jails, were freed as a result of demands made in the JRA takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, on August 4, 1975. They were flown to Libya. On August 26, 1975, the Japanese decided to request extradition, but the Libyans denied it.

On October 27, 1977, the Japanese government said Nishikawa might have been one of the JRA Hidaka Commando Unit members who hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh, on September 28, 1977. (See also Kunio Bando.) On June 13, 1988, the Philippine Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member.

Nixon: aliases Sugan, Charles. Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) member arrested August 30, 1993, as a major accomplice to the LTTE suicide bomber who, on May 1, 1993, rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May Day parade in Colombo, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others.

James Mnuri Nnanda: Christian hotel manager who was arrested on August 18, 1998, by 15 FBI agents and 6 Kenyan detectives who raided the seedy Hilltop Hotel, a mile from the U.S. Embassy, and carried away several cartons of evidence. They were acting on information provided by Mohammed Saddiq Odeh, who had been arrested in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Dr. Takako Nobuhara: on December 18, 1989, the Tokyo District Court ruled against the Foreign Ministry’s 1983 refusal to issue a passport to the alleged informer to Japanese Red Army (JRA) members in Lebanon. From 1971 to 1987, Nobuhara served as a medical volunteer in Beirut and Syria at hospitals of the Palestine Red Crescent and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. She admitted that she had visited the Beirut apartment of JRA leader Fusako Shigenobu but denied involvement in JRA activities.

Mzikhona Nofemela: sympathizer of the South African Pan Africanist Congress who, on October 26, 1994, was sentenced to 18 years in prison by Cape Town Supreme Court Judge Gerald Friedman for the August 25, 1993, stabbing murder of U.S. citizen Amy Biehl, a Fulbright exchange student studying at the University of the Western Cape.

Issaya Nombo: Tanzanian, age 44, whose name was found on a computer printout in a cave in Afghanistan. On April 15, 2002, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials charged him with an immigration violation after U.S. intelligence reported the discovery. He had been living in North Carolina on an expired visa. His name was on a public Web site for Voyager Aviation of Titusville, Florida, where he received a commercial pilot's license. The home page said, "Congratulations Issaya Nombo on completing your ATP" (airline transport pilot license).

Kazumi Nomura: hijacker of a Japan Airlines DC10 flying from Osaka to Tokyo on November 23, 1979, and diverted to Narita International Airport in Tokyo for refueling. Nomura wanted to go to the USSR. He was overpowered by the crew.

Ka Nonoy: alias of Noel Etabag.

Noval: alias of Dulmatin.

Vusumzi Ntamo: sympathizer of the South African Pan Africanist Congress who, on October 26, 1994, was sentenced to 18 years in prison by Cape Town Supreme Court Judge Gerald Friedman for the August 25, 1993, stabbing murder of U.S. citizen Amy Biehl, a Fulbright exchange student studying at the University of the Western Cape.

Lungisa Ntintili: South African Pan Africanist Congress member linked by South African police with the July 25, 1993, attack by five black gunmen who burst into the St. James Church of England in Kenilworth, a Cape Town suburb, firing AK-47 and R5 rifles and throwing two hand grenades at the congregation, killing 12 and wounding 56. He was also wanted for questioning in an attack on the King William's Town Golf Club.

Ntjela: alias of Gilbert Sithela Ngwenya.

Genito Nueva: one of two factory workers who were carrying a bagful of dynamite when arrested by Philippine police on September 26, 1990, after a bomb exploded in a deep well at the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company's warehouse on Aurora Boulevard in Quezon City. Another bomb went off a few minutes later inside the Coca Cola Bottling Company plant on Otis Street in Pandacan, Manila. The men were from Samar and worked in a wire factory. They said they were to be paid 200 pesos each to deliver the dynamite to a man who would be waiting for them at the Del Monte Bakery. Police believed the attacks were conducted by rightist rebels or the Reform the Armed Forces Movement.

Abdel Nur: Guyanese citizen of Pakistani descent, age 57, who remained at large after the June 2, 2007, announcement of the foiling of a terrorist plot to bomb aviation fuel tanks and a small segment of the 40-mile Buckeye Partners petroleum pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. The FBI had monitored the plotters for 18 months. The group was linked to the Sunni-oriented Jamaat al Muslimeen (JAM).

Nur was born Compton Eversley on March 24, 1960, and stood five feet seven inches tall, with salt and pepper hair. He had been deported from the United States in the late 1980s following a drug violation.

The press reported that Nur, Kareem Ibrahim, and Abdul Kadir were associates of former police officer and JAM leader Yasin Abu Bakr and had met with him in May to discuss the plot. Authorities also believed JAM had contacts with al Qaeda and Hizballah but no operational relationship. Although Abu Bakr denied knowing the trio, Guyana's acting police chief told the press that Kadir, a Shi'ite cleric, and Abu Bakr had a lumber business together.

Nur surrendered to police in Trinidad on June 5.

On June 29, 2007, four suspects fighting extradition in Trinidad were indicted on five counts of conspiracy to "cause death, serious bodily injury and extensive destruction" at the airport.

He became one of three suspects whose extradition appeal was rejected by an appeals court in Trinidad. The trio was placed on an FBI plane on June 24, 2008. On June 26, they pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in New York on charges of conspiring to plant explosives to blow up JFK International Airport's major jet-fuel supply tankers and pipeline. The judge denied bond. A status hearing was scheduled for August 7, 2008.

Amrozi bin Nurhasyim: known as Amrozi.

Gregoire Nyaminami: one of three Hutu-led Army for the Liberation of Rwanda rebels charged on March 3, 2003, by U.S. Attorney Roscoe Hoard of the District of Columbia with bludgeoning to death U.S. tourists Rob Haubner and his wife, Susan Miller, in Uganda in 1999. The terrorists also killed four British and two New Zealand tourists on a trip to see mountain gorillas in an attempt to weaken U.S. and U.K. support for the new Rwandan government. They were charged with murder, conspiracy, and other counts.

Blaise Nzaladanda: colonel in the People's National Army who received a five-year suspended sentence by the Congolese Revolutionary Court on August 17, 1986, in the March 20, 1982, detonation of two bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Henriques Tiago Nzita: leader of the Front for the Liberation of the Enclave of Cabinda, which, on April 27, 1990, kidnapped 23 individuals, including 13 Frenchmen and 10 Congolese, near Pointe-Noire, Congo. The hostages were quickly released.

O

---

O Hyon-kyo: Seoul National University senior and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Mohinder Singh Oberoi: one of three men charged with a bombing campaign in mid-May 1985 that left 84 people dead and 100 injured throughout India.

Saturnino Ocampo: secretary general of the banned National Democratic Front in the Philippines in the 1980s. His release was demanded on December 29, 1981, by the New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of Tomas Manotoc, athlete celebrity and purported son-in-law of Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos. NPA denied involvement, saying it was a put-up job by Marcos.

In a November 3, 1987, press release, Ocampo declared war on U.S. personnel in the Philippines. On July 27, 1989, members of the paramilitary Philippine Constabulary arrested Ocampo, a member of the politburo of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), and his wife, Carolina "Bobby" Malay, a CPP central committee member. The arrest came four days after the military offered rewards of $50,000 each for the arrest of 35 CPP members. Some observers suggested that the couple, leaders of the pragmatic faction of the CPP, were turned in by rivals. Ocampo had misgivings about the campaign of assassinations by CPP sparrow hit men controlled by NPA chief of staff Romulo Kintanar.

Hezekiah Ochuka: Kenya Air Force private who participated in a failed coup and joined a fellow coup participant in hijacking an Air Force plane to Tanzania, where they were granted political asylum on August 1, 1982. Tanzania rejected Kenya's extradition request.

Mohammed Sadiq Odeh: variants Mohammed Saddiq Odeh, Howeida. Pakistani (or Jordanian-born Palestinian) engineer arrested August 7, 1998, at Karachi Airport in connection with the al Qaeda bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Kenya on August 7, 1998. He was returned to Kenya on August 14 for traveling on a false Yemeni passport with a fake visa under the name Abdull Bast Awadah. An immigration official noted that the photograph in his passport was not of him. He had flown to Pakistan on August 6 on Pakistan International Airways Flight 943, departing Nairobi at 10 p.m. and arriving in Karachi at 8:25 a.m., on the day of the blast. He said his spiritual guide was Osama bin Laden and that he was attempting to seek refuge with him in Afghanistan. He claimed that the bomb from the U.S. Embassy bombing contained 1,760 pounds of TNT and had been assembled over several days at a hotel under his direction. Police held three others in connection with the attack. Two were identified as Mohammed Saleh and Abdullah. Odeh also claimed his group had taken part in the October 3–4, 1993, attack on U.S. forces in Mogadishu, Somalia, which killed 18 Americans. Former ambassador Robert Oakley and several journalists who had covered the attack said they were unaware of any foreign involvement in the Somalia killings. Islamabad's The News claimed Odeh had confessed to conducting other missions for bin Laden in the Philippines, Cairo, and Jordan.

Odeh's Yemeni passport was stamped for entry into Mombasa, Kenya, on August 3. He apparently took a 10-hour bus ride to the capital.

On August 27, 1998, Odeh was brought out of Nairobi and arrived in New York City the next day to be arraigned. In the affidavit, federal prosecutors accused bin Laden's al Qaeda group of bombing the embassy in Kenya. On October 7, Odeh was indicted on 238 counts by a federal grand jury in New York. He was charged with 224 counts of murder and with training the Somalis. On October 8, he pleaded not guilty.

He was convicted for conspiracy on May 29, 2001, in the bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and was sentenced to life in prison.

Oh Young-Sik: imprisoned student militant leader charged with violating national security laws by organizing anti-government protests. On September 30, 1988, student militants threatened to disrupt Seoul Olympic events unless Young-Sik was released.

Henry Okah: member of the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND) in Nigeria arrested in 2008 on terrorism charges. MEND kidnapped two British oil workers in September 2008 and demanded his release. Okah requested the release of ill British hostage Robin Barry Hughes on compassionate grounds; Hughes was freed on April 19, 2009.

Kozo Okamoto: one of three members of the Japanese Red Army (JRA) on contract for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at passengers arriving on Air France Flight 132 in Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, killing 28 and wounding 76. Among those killed were 16 Puerto Rican Catholic pilgrims on a visit to the Holy Land. Okamoto was the only terrorist to survive. He ran onto the tarmac outside the terminal in an attempt to blow up a Scandinavian Airlines (SAS) plane parked outside and was tackled with two grenades in his hands.

Okamoto's passport said he was Daisuke Namba, who had been executed for the attempted assassination of Crown Prince Hirohito in 1923.

He was charged with the military offense of political terrorism, which carried a death penalty under the 1945 British Emergency Regulations. Max Kritzman, a Chicago-born attorney, was appointed to be his lawyer. Okamoto was sentenced to life in prison. His release was demanded in the September 5, 1972, Olympics massacre; the December 28, 1972, takeover of the Israeli Embassy in Bangkok; the July 20, 1973, Japan Airlines hijacking; the April 11, 1974, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)-General Command massacre of 18 people at Kiryat Shmona, Israel; the May 15, 1974, PFLP attack in Ma'alot, Israel; the June 13, 1974, PFLP-GC attack on Israel's Shamir village; the June 27, 1976, PFLP hijacking of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe; and the September 4, 1976, hijacking of a Royal Dutch Airlines (KLM) DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam. The Fatah terrorists of Operation Martyr Kamal Adwan—who entered Israel on March 11, 1978, seized a tour bus, and left 46 dead and 85 wounded—planned to demand his release. His release was demanded by four PFLP hijackers of an Egged Bus in Tel Aviv on April 12, 1984.

On May 20, 1985, Israel released Okamoto and 1,149 other prisoners for three Israeli soldiers held by Ahmad Jibril's organization. He was flown to Libya for asylum. The Public Security Division of the Tokyo Metropolitan Police issued a warrant for his arrest on murder charges.

On February 15, 1997, Okamoto was one of six JRA members arrested by Lebanese authorities in the Bekaa Valley and West Beirut. (See also Masao Adachi.)

On March 1, 2000, Lebanon refused Japan's request for extradition. Okamoto was granted asylum on health grounds.

Takeshi Okamoto: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Kazuaki Okazaki: Aum Shin Rikyo member arrested by Japanese police on suspicion of the November 4, 1989, strangulation murders of Yokohama attorney Tsutsumi Sakamoto and his family. The Tokyo District Public Prosecutor's Office filed charges on October 13, 1995. On October 23, 1998, Okazaki was convicted of the killings and sentenced to death. He was also blamed for involvement in the March 20, 1995, sarin attack on the Tokyo subway.

Takeshi Okidoro: variant of Takeshi Okudeira; alias Jiro Sugisaki. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army on contract for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at passengers arriving on Air France Flight 132 in Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, killing 28 and wounding 76.

Junzo Okudaira: one of three Japanese Red Army (JRA) members who burst into the French Embassy in The Hague and took 11 hostages on September 13, 1974. The siege lasted for 101 hours. The terrorists demanded the release of JRA member Yoshiaki Yamada plus one million dollars, which the French refused to pay. The Dutch provided $300,000. The terrorists took off from Schipol Airport, but Lebanon refused permission to land. The plane refueled in Aden, Yemen, but was denied safe haven. The plane finally landed in Damascus, where the government agreed to grant the terrorists safe conduct in return for surrendering their weapons and the ransom money.

Okudaira was arrested in Jordan in 1976 for possessing a forged Japanese passport and was sent back to Japan, but he was released from prison with Yukiko Ekita and four other JRA members to meet the demands of the hijackers of a Japan Airlines plane in Dhaka in 1977.

He was suspected of setting off a car bomb in a street next to the U.S. Embassy and firing four rocket-propelled grenades onto the embassy compound in Rome on June 9, 1987. Fingerprints found on documents pertaining to the rented Ford used in the car bombing matched his Interpol prints. On December 4, 1987, an international arrest warrant was issued for him.

He was believed to have been involved in the April 14, 1988, car bombing at the USO building in Naples, Italy, that killed four Italians and a U.S. petty officer. He had rented the Fiat used as the car bomb using a passport stolen from Taiwanese citizen Liao Willy Liew. On April 9, 1993, a U.S. federal grand jury handed down a 10-count indictment against him for the attack.

In 1992, he was sentenced in absentia in Italy to life in prison.

Takeshi Okudeira: variants Takeshi Okidoro, Kinosi; alias Jiro Sugisaki. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army on contract for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at passengers arriving on Air France Flight 132 in Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, killing 28 and wounding 76. Among those killed were 16 Puerto Rican Catholic pilgrims on a visit to the Holy Land. Okudeira was blown up by a grenade.

Pankras Oteyo Okumu: Kenya Air Force senior sergeant who participated in a failed coup and joined a fellow coup participant in hijacking an Air Force plane to Tanzania, where they were granted political asylum on August 1, 1982. Tanzania rejected Kenya's extradition request.

Yoko Okuyama: alias of Kazuo Yoshimura.

Abu Omar: alias of Isnilon Totoni Hapilon.

Amah Hi Omar: alias of Isnilon Totoni Hapilon.

Fazal Omar: Sudanese student at Peshawar's University of Engineering and Technology and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf who were arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. He was held under the 14 Foreigners Act.

Yasin Hassan Omar: Somali, age 24, who immigrated to the United Kingdom in 1992. From then until his 2005 arrest, he had been collecting $500 monthly welfare payments. He was seen on a British surveillance photo running from the Warren Street station in an abortive copycat attack on the British subway system on July 21, 2005. On July 27, 2005, Birmingham police arrested him. On August 6, 2005, he was charged with conspiracy to murder and possession of explosives. On August 8, a London court charged Muktar Said Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, Hussain Osman, Manfo Asiedu, Adel Yahya, and Yasin Hassan Omar. They were ordered held until a November 14 hearing, when they would enter pleas on conspiracy and explosives offenses. His trial began on January 15, 2007. Omar, Yahya, and Ibrahim attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, who was convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred.

On July 9, 2007, the jury convicted him of conspiracy to murder by plotting to bomb London's public transport system. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He will be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Ahmed Ibechi Omer: Somali youth sentenced to death for political activities whose release was demanded by three Somali Salvation Democratic Front hijackers of a Somali Airlines B707 en route from Mogadishu, Somalia, to Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on November 24, 1984, and diverted to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Katsuhisa Omori: Japanese anarchist sentenced to death in 1983 for the March 1976 bombing in Hokkaido that killed two persons. His release was demanded in a letter to Agence France-Presse after anarchists bombed the Sony laboratory in the Paris suburb of Clichy and the Sonauto building in the Paris suburb of Levallois on April 22, 1984.

The group threatened further attacks on Japanese interests.

Toshio Omuru: jailed in Japan for detonating a bomb in a government office in 1969, his release was demanded on September 28, 1977, by the Japanese Red Army Hidaka Commando Unit hijackers of a Japan Airlines DC8. Omuru refused to go, saying he disagreed with their ideology.

Mario Onaindia: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for the shooting death of Meliton Manzanás, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, Spain, in 1968. The death sentence was commuted, possibly due to an agreement between president Francisco Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the honorary West German consul in San Sebastian, who was kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term. Onaindia was ordered to pay an indemnity to Manzanás's widow.

Ronnie Oseo: Red Scorpion Group intelligence and operations officer of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade killed in a February 1, 1993, shootout during a raid by Philippine National Police. He was involved in killing U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe on April 21, 1989.

H. Oshima: hijacker of an All Nippon Airways Lockheed Tristar L1011 flying from Tokyo to Hokkaido and Sapporo on July 28, 1975. The Japanese high school student claimed he had a knife and wanted to go to Hawaii or Okinawa. The pilot persuaded him to land in Tokyo, where everyone deplaned. Police overpowered the unarmed Oshima, who said he just wanted to get as far as possible from home.

Kazuo Oshima: would-be hijacker of a Japan Airlines B747 flying from Sapporo to Tokyo on April 9, 1975. He demanded two parachutes and 30 million yen ($100,000). The plane taxied to a parking area at Haneda Airport, where the passengers deplaned. Police entered the plane through a rear door and arrested the hijacker.

Leal Oskiki: alias of A.R.M.

Haniffa Bin Osman: Singaporean, age 55, arrested September 29, 2006, by the FBI for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorney's Office announced charges of conspiracy to export weapons and munitions and conspiracy to launder money with others with LTTE links.

Sergio Osmena Jr.: former senator and Philippine presidential candidate accused on February 11, 1977, of masterminding a plot to kill Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government.

Sergio Osmena III: accused on February 11, 1977, of plotting to kill Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos and take over the government. His father was accused of masterminding the plot.

Keiji Ota: member, age 51, of the Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult who was arrested February 20, 1996, by Bangkok police. Police believed he was involved in a plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting. Japan was considering an extradition request.

Jean-Tony A. Oulai: Ivory Coast pilot stopped at Jacksonville International Airport in Florida on September 14, 2001, after an airline employee found a stun gun and old flight manuals in his checked luggage. Oulai was held in federal custody in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks and released in November 2002.

Mansour Oumrane: one of two Libyans arrested the night of February 19, 1988, by Senegalese security officials as the men were attempting to illegally enter the country with explosives and weapons at Dakar-Yoff Airport. They were turned over to the State Security Court on April 8, 1988, and faced three to five years in prison for "acts and maneuvers likely to threaten public security." On June 15, 1988, they were to be released without charges and were to leave the country the next day.

Katsuhito Owaki: hijacker of a Japan Airlines B747 flying between Tokyo and Naha, Okinawa, on March 12, 1974. Upon landing in Naha, he demanded $55 million, 200 million yen, 15 parachutes, and mountain-climbing gear. After letting the passengers leave and requesting food, he was overpowered by police.

Mohamed Rashed Daoud al-Owhali: alias Khalid Salim Saleh bin Rashed. Yemeni who traveled from Lahore, Pakistan, to Nairobi, Kenya, on July 31, 1998; rode on the truck in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi; and threw a grenade at an embassy guard. He expected to die but was hospitalized with injuries to his hands, face, and back. He was questioned by Kenyan police two days later. On August 12, he initially told the FBI that he had been standing in a bank near the embassy when the bomb went off and claimed he was wearing the same clothing as on August 7. The affidavit doubted this claim because "his clothes bore no traces of blood." He later admitted lying. On August 20, al-Owhali confessed to the FBI that he had been trained in explosives, hijacking, and kidnapping in Afghan camps. Some were affiliated with al Qaeda, which, according to the affidavit, was "an international terrorist group led by Osama bin Laden, dedicated to opposing non-Islamic governments with force and violence." He was aware that bin Laden had issued a fatwa calling for the killing of Americans. Nairobi hospital staff found padlock keys and bullets connected with the bombing that al-Owhali had discarded. He was arrested, flown to the United States on August 26, 1998, and arraigned the next day in a Manhattan courthouse on 12 counts of murder, 1 count of conspiracy, and 1 count of using weapons of mass destruction. He was ordered held without bail pending a September 28 court appearance. Al-Owhali, age 21 in 1998, applied for free legal services on the basis that he was single, unemployed, and had received $12,000 from his father in the past year. His only asset was a 1992 Chevrolet Caprice. On May 29, 2001, the jury found the defendants guilty on all 302 counts. He was found guilty of conspiracy and murder and faced the death penalty. He was sentenced to life in prison by a federal court in New York for his role in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Kenya on August 7, 1998.

P

---

Padma: mother of Nalini, a Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam woman suspected of involvement in the murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister, on May 22, 1991. Padma was arrested by Indian authorities on June 11, 1991.

K. Padmanabhu: in early 1984, Padmanabhu was general secretary of the Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front in Sri Lanka. He publicly supported the May 10, 1984, Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam separatists who kidnapped two Americans.

First Lieutenant Renato Padua: captured member of the Young Officers Union (YOU) of the Philippines who, on October 16, 1990, was identified by three Mandarin employees as one of the two people who conducted the September 23, 1990, bombing of the Nikko Manila Garden Hotel in Makati District and the nearby Mandarin Oriental Hotel. The employees said he entered the hotel with YOU official Captain Diosdado Valeroso before the explosion. Padua was a member of the Philippine Military Academy class of 1987 and was alleged to have been involved in the failed December 1989 coup.

Robert Paes: variant Payas. Arrested by Indian police on June 19, 1991, for sheltering a prime suspect in the bombing that killed former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. Paes was related to Jaikumar, who was arrested a few days later. Paes was in charge of passing messages between rebel leaders.

General Nuon Paet: leader of a 70-member Khmer Rouge "regiment" that, on March 31, 1994, kidnapped Melissa Himes, an American working for the Christian relief organization Food for the Hungry International. He was also behind the July 26, 1994, kidnapping of three Westerners from a train in southeast Cambodia near Phnom Voar; the hostages were killed on September 28, 2004. He was sentenced to life in December 2002.

Pak Chong-mi: arrested April 8, 1982, by South Cholla Province, South Korea, police for being one of the arsonists who attacked the U.S. International Communications Agency office in Pusan on March 18, 1982, killing a Korean student and injuring three others.

Pak Chong-yong: one of three radical students charged with attempting to break into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) American Cultural Center in Taegu, Samdok-dong, South Korea, after they threw three firebombs and two tear gas grenades at the facility on June 13, 1988. On June 8, he and two others formed a secret society called the Shock Brigade of Students in Taegu Regions for Saving the Nation. He had graduated earlier in 1988 with a degree in political science and was chairman of the student body at Kyongbuk University.

Pak Kil-man: fifty-nine-year-old passenger who, on January 23, 1993, threatened to blow up a Korean Air plane that had left Mokpo for Seoul. The plane made an emergency landing at Kwangju Airport. He was caught by the crewmen and was handed over to the Kwangsan police station in Kwangju. He lives in Chegi 1-tong, Tongdaemun-ku, Seoul.

Pak Kyu-song: junior at Chonnam National University and one of 11 radical students arrested on October 18, 1990, as they tried to seize the U.S. Embassy in South Korea to protest against the Uruguay Round negotiations. The National Council of Student Representatives (Chondaehyop) members were armed with 4 homemade bombs, 20 firebombs, and 7 metal clubs. He said the group had been ordered to seize the embassy the previous month by Chondaehyop chairman Song Kap-sok.

Pak No-chan: international trade senior at Kunsan University and one of five college students arrested November 15, 1989, after throwing firebombs into the U.S. Air Base in Kunsan, Chollabuk-to, during the morning's anti-U.S. demonstration. On February 2, 1990, Judge Pang Kuk-song of the Kunsan Branch of the Chonju District Court convicted him of throwing firebombs at the base and staging illegal rallies to demand the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Korea. His one-year jail term was suspended for two years.

Pak Se-su: one of three radical students charged with attempting to break into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) American Cultural Center in Taegu, Samdok-dong, South Korea, after they threw three firebombs and two tear gas grenades at the facility on June 13, 1988. He was a junior law student at Yongnam University. On June 8, he and two others had formed a secret society called the Shock Brigade of Students in Taegu Regions for Saving the Nation.

Pak Si-paek: senior at Korea University and one of five students charged by Seoul police on February 25, 1988, with breaking into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul, smashing three large glass windows, and illegally using explosives in an attack on February 24, 1988, in which they used 30 Molotov cocktails. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths, who were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day.

Pak Yong-ik: Kyung Hee University History Department junior and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Pak Yong-un: one of six South Korean college students who failed to seize the U.S. Information Service (USIS) building in Seoul on July 24, 1989. The Trade Department senior was seriously injured while climbing the building. He was arrested by police on July 26 for violating the National Security Law.

Aurora Pamintuan: spokesperson for the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade in March 1992.

Hutomo Pamungkas: alias Mubarak. On March 11, 2003, the Indonesian government announced that the August 1, 2000, car bombing of Philippine ambassador Leonides Caday's home in Jakarta was carried out by the same Jemaah Islamiyah terrorists accused in the October 12, 2002, Bali blasts. Mubarak distributed the money that financed the attacks and helped assemble the Jakarta bomb.

Bhola Nath Pandey: one of two members of the youth wing of Indira Gandhi's Congress Party who hijacked an Indian Airlines B737 flying from Calcutta to New Delhi via Ranchi, Patna, and Lucknow on December 21, 1978. They demanded the release from jail of former prime minister Indira Gandhi, the withdrawal of criminal charges against her son Sanjay Gandhi, and the resignation of the government of the Bharatiya Janata Party. The hijackers demanded a press conference. They were arrested.

Satish Pandey: resident of Sultanpur, India, who, on January 22, 1993, hijacked the evening Indian Airlines Flight 810 from Patna to Delhi, claiming he was carrying a bomb. He demanded a meeting with Atal Behari Vajpayee, the Bharatiya Janata Party leader. The plane returned to Lucknow, where the hijacker surrendered.

Virenda Pandey: one of two members of the youth wing of Indira Gandhi's Congress Party who hijacked an Indian Airlines B737 flying from Calcutta to New Delhi via Ranchi, Patna, and Lucknow on December 21, 1978. They demanded the release from jail of former prime minister Indira Gandhi, the withdrawal of criminal charges against her son Sanjay Gandhi, and the resignation of the government of the Bharatiya Janata Party. The hijackers demanded a press conference. They were arrested.

Noli Panesa: head of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines central district committee in Pampanga who, on May 20, 1990, was named by police as a planner of the May 13, 1990, NPA murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. He was charged with double murder and illegal possession of firearms.

Noli Paniza: alias Ka Jerome. Member of the Mariano Garcia Brigade and one of two New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines sparrow assassins sent to China for training in 1988. On September 28, 1989, he was named the leader of the six NPA gunmen who shot to death two retired U.S. Air Force officers as they drove from Camp O'Donnell in Tarlac Province near Clark Air Force Base on September 26, 1989.

Max Papilaya: leader of nine South Moluccan gunmen who took over a commuter train in the Netherlands between Assen and Groningen on May 23, 1977. They demanded the release of fellow South Moluccans arrested following attacks in December 1975 and the group that had conspired to kidnap Queen Juliana in July 1975. On June 11, commandos raided the train and a schoolhouse that had been simultaneously taken over by four South Moluccan terrorists. Six of the trainjackers were shot dead. Papilaya's release was demanded on March 13, 1978, by three South Moluccan gunmen who seized an Assen, Netherlands, government building and held 71 employees hostage.

Saifullah Paracha: father of Uzair Paracha. Saifullah was held at the Guantánamo Bay prison. He owns a New York clothing import firm and a Pakistani textile company that shipped large containers of clothes and other goods into Newark. Investigators suspected the family business was used to smuggle al Qaeda terrorists and weapons into the United States.

Uzair Paracha: Pakistani, age 23, detained on March 31, 2003, by federal authorities as a material witness in the New York clothing import firm offices owned by his father, Saifullah Paracha. He had ties to the shipping industry and senior al Qaeda leaders. Investigators suspected the family business was used to smuggle al Qaeda terrorists and weapons into the United States. Saifullah owns a Pakistani textile company that shipped large containers of clothes and other goods into Newark. Uzair was arrested by Karachi police while trying to board an airplane in Karachi in July; he was held incommunicado. Uzair was identified by jailed al Qaeda leader Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and was linked to Ohio truck driver Iyman Faris, who pleaded guilty on May 1 to providing material support to a terrorist organization.

On August 8, federal authorities in Manhattan filed terrorism charges against Uzair, including conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, a 15-year sentence. The indictment said that for a $200,000 business investment, the younger Paracha agreed to pose as an unnamed al Qaeda associate (later revealed to be Majid Khan) while in the United States to secure immigration documents for him. Khan planned a series of bombings at gas stations. During a March interview with the FBI and the New York Police Department, Paracha admitted to possession of a Maryland driver's license, an ATM card, a key to a post office box, and documents linked to the al Qaeda member. Prosecutors had earlier said that he could also be charged with helping obtain weapons of mass destruction and conspiracy. His attorney, Anthony Ricco of New York, denied the allegations.

On November 7, 2005, U.S. District Judge Sidney H. Stein ruled that Uzair Paracha could present statements made by captive al Qaeda operatives Majid Khan and Ammar Baluchi in his defense. The judge ruled that he could not use information from Khalid Sheik Mohammed or from Paracha's father, who was held in Guantánamo Bay prison.

The trial began on November 8. On November 23, a federal jury in New York convicted Paracha on five counts of conspiracy and providing material and financial support to al Qaeda. He faced 75 years in prison.

Hazaifa Parhat: variant of Hozaifa Parhat.

Hozaifa Parhat: variants Huzaifa, Hazaifa. Chinese national held for six years on terrorism charges at the U.S. military prison in Guantánamo Bay as of February 2008. The Muslim of Uighur descent was accused of attending a terrorist training camp in Afghanistan during the 9/11 attacks. The apparent affiliate of the East Turkistan Islamic Movement was captured in Afghanistan. On June 20, 2008, a Federal Court of Appeals in Washington ruled that he was improperly labeled an "enemy combatant" by the Pentagon, the first time a Guantánamo Bay detainee was given an opportunity to seek his release via a civilian court hearing. The court ordered military officials to either "release or transfer Parhat, or to expeditiously hold a new {military} tribunal." He was represented by attorney Susan Baker Manning.

Huzaifa Parhat: variant of Hozaifa Parhat.

Pa'tek: variant of Umar Patek.

Umar Patek: variants Umar, Pa'tek, Pak Taek; aliases Umar Kecil, Abu Syekh, Zacky. Assistant to the Jemaah Islamiyah field coordinator in 2002, Patek participated in the Bali, Indonesia, bombings that killed 202 people. He is a Javanese Indonesian Arabic man born in 1970; stands five feet five inches tall; and weighs 133 pounds. The United States offered a one-million-dollar reward for information leading to his arrest.

Selvarasa Pathmanathan: chief of international relations of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam at the time of the group's dissolution on May 18, 2009.

Dominique Marie Paul: French woman deported by South Korean immigration police on August 31, 1988, shortly after her arrival in Seoul's Kimpo International Airport from an undisclosed country. She identified herself as a reporter from a French monthly magazine but was suspected of links with Black September.

Mangeshkar Gajanand Pawar: charged by Indian police on March 15, 1993, of direct involvement in planting several bombs in Bombay that killed 317 people and wounded 1,250 on March 12, 1993. He and fellow defendant Piloo Khan had been arrested or convicted 18 times on charges of murder, attempted murder, kidnapping, extortion, and narcotics trafficking and were linked to some of Bombay's many crime networks. The duo escaped the afternoon of March 15 in north Bombay during a shootout with police who were attempting to arrest them.

Narong Penanam: Thai, age 47, arrested June 13, 2003, while attempting to smuggle 66 pounds of radioactive cesium-137 from Laos in a Bangkok hotel parking lot. Police believed the cesium originated in Russia and was destined for use in Muslim militant attacks. He was charged with illegal possession of a radioactive substance. As of November 2003, authorities were still searching for accomplices and additional caches of cesium.

Ntombeko Peni: sentenced to 18 years in prison on June 6, 1995, by Supreme Court Judge Braam Lategan for the August 25, 1993, stabbing murder of U.S. citizen Amy Biehl, a U.S. Fulbright exchange student studying at the University of the Western Cape.

Jolito Pepito: arrested April 5, 1987, by Philippine authorities as the driver of a car parked near the Tacloban stage where president Corazon Aquino addressed a rally. The car contained an M-16 rifle and a pistol.

R.S. Perera: name given by an individual claiming to represent the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (People's Liberation Front), who took credit for setting off a large bomb in a phone booth of the main office of the Sri Lankan Telecommunications Department on May 7, 1986, killing 12 and injuring 113.

Nu Pet: variant Nuon Pet; alias Ta Pet. Khmer Rouge commander believed involved with the July 26, 1994, attack on a train in Cambodia. Nine were killed and 200 abducted.

Nuon Pet: variant of Nu Pet.

Ta Pet: meaning old man or grandfather; alias of Nu Pet.

Prasong Pholthiphet: worked with Japanese United Red Army member Yoshimi Tanaka counterfeiting U.S. $100 bills in 1996, according to East Asian police.

Daeng Phommala: one of four Laotians arrested during the March 8, 1989, rescue of Yoshiaki Asao, the Japanese branch manager of Mitsui kidnapped March 1 from his home in Vientiane, Laos, and taken into Thailand. Laotian police said the kidnappers were exiled Lao reactionaries from the Thonglit Chokbengboun (name of a former rightist general) group. Phommala was from Saybouri Province.

Siddhartha Phukan: central publicity secretary of the United Assam Liberation Front in India, which, on July 1, 1991, kidnapped a Soviet engineer and 14 Indian employees in India.

Robert Pincus: Jericho, New York, resident accused by the Philippine government of assisting three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos; on February 11, 1977, the Filipinos admitted to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government.

Pitono: alias of Dulmatin.

Joko Pitono: alias of Dulmatin.

Joko Pitoyo: alias of Dulmatin.

Ka Popoy: alias of Jaime Fuentes.

Pottuamman: intelligence chief of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam included on the May 20, 1992, Madras Court charge sheet as connected with the murder of former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991.

Velupillai Prabhakaran: leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) in Sri Lanka from 1987 into the 2000s and included on the May 20, 1992, Madras Court charge sheet as connected with the murder of former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. On November 27, 2000, he said he was ready for unconditional peace talks with the government and offered a pre-talks ceasefire.

Often referred to as Sri Lanka's Osama bin Laden, Prabhakaran died on May 18, 2009, on a tiny spit of land formerly held by the group. The circumstances of his death were unclear, and the government issued several accounts. His death, at age 54, ended the decades-long terrorist campaign by the group. His group had pioneered the terrorist tactic of suicide bombing and had invented the suicide belt, which LTTE women often used to assassinate government leaders. He had created a rebel state that ruled hundreds of thousands of people in the north; the state had its own flag, police force, and courts. At its height, the group made $300 million annually on drug and arms smuggling, fake charities, and donations from Tamils. In January 1984, he met and married college student and hunger striker Mathivathani Erambu. They had a daughter and a son; the latter died in LTTE's last battle with government troops. LTTE Web sites insist Prabhakaran has not died.

Prachanda: alias of Pushpa Kamal Dahal.

Ricardo Prestosa: aliases Ka (Comrade) Josel, Ka Bukol. New People's Army (NPA) guerrilla arrested May 11, 1989, by Philippine paramilitary constabulary forces at his mother's house in the town of Dinalupihan in Barangay Magsaysay, Bataan Province, in connection with NPA's sparrow hit team that assassinated U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe on April 21, 1989, as he drove to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Authorities believed Prestosa was one of the planners but not a hit man. He was a political officer of the Communist Party of the NPA North-west Revolutionary Committee in Pampanga. He joined the NPA in August 1982. He was first arrested in October 1983, but the subversion charges against him were dropped two months later. He was caught and detained at Camp Tolentino until August 1987, when he was released from military custody. He proceeded to Balay, a rehabilitation center for ex-political detainees in Quezon City, for treatment of a cyst on his head. He was arrested in December 1988 but was again freed. During his arrest, he admitted NPA membership but denied a role in the Rowe killing. He said he had been working as a truck helper in Angadanan, Isabela, since April 1, 1989. On May 12, 1989, Col. Victor Tiangco, chief of Task Force Rowe, identified Prestosa as a principal suspect. The next day, Prestosa admitted involvement in the killing, saying he was one of five rebels in the car.

Mrs. Melba Principe: nurse and Philippine New People's Army (NPA) medical officer identified on August 27, 1989, by the self-proclaimed shooter, Juanito Itaas, as involved in NPA's April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe. She was arrested September 1, 1989.

Jeremiah Puren: South African member of the Wild Geese of the Congo Wars of the 1960s who participated in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government on November 15, 1981, and, with 44 other mercenaries, took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. Puren was released unconditionally. After Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982. On July 5, 1982, the Seychelles sentenced him to death. He was released on July 23, 1982.

Dr. Agus Purwanto: arrested April 2008 in Malaysia and sent to Indonesia to investigate possible involvement in fomenting Jemaah Islamiyah violence in Poso.

Puryanto: convicted of involvement in the October 12, 2002, bombing of two nightclubs in Bali.

Pyon Kyong-pom: sophomore in the Public Administration Department of Kyung Hee University and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Q

---

Hashim Qadeer: arrested July 27, 2005, in a bus terminal in Gujranwala. He had set up Daniel Pearl's January 23, 2002, meeting with the terrorists who kidnapped and later murdered him. Qadeer had been under surveillance for three days. On August 6, 2005, Qadeer confessed to working with two al Qaeda-linked operatives. Police charged Qadeer on August 17, 2005, for setting up the meeting.

Ahmad Sayyid Qadir: Al-Musawwar reported on March 29, 1996, that the Canadian government had asked the Pakistanis to release Qadir, a Canadian of Egyptian descent believed involved in the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80.

Ahmed Abdul Qadus: senior al Qaeda operative captured with Khalid Sheikh Mohammed on March 1, 2003, in Pakistan.

Jabir Hasan al Qahtani: Saudi taken prisoner in Pakistan or Afghanistan and held in the U.S. Navy's prison in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, as of January 2004. It is unclear if this is the same Guantánamo Bay-held Qahtani refused U.S. entry in August 2001 by U.S. Customs officials in Orlando. He may have intended to meet 9/11 leader Muhammad Atta, who was in Orlando at the time. He said he planned to visit friends but could not name any.

Ibrahim Qasim: his release from a Kenyan jail was demanded June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and diverted to Entebbe.

Musa Ja'far Qasir: Lebanese Shi'ite associate of the hijacker of Air Afrique RK-056 on July 24, 1987. He was arrested August 24 by Central African Republic police in Bangui.

Abdul Qayyum: one of six Denver-area residents indicted March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five on bail. The FBI said three had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Qayyum was freed on $10,000 bail.

Sunny Ahmed Qazi: alias Burger. Pakistani identified by India as one of five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport.

Hashim Quershi: one of two Kashmiri Liberation Front hijackers of an Indian Airlines Fokker Friendship F27 flying from Srinagar to Jammu on January 30, 1971, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. The duo demanded asylum and freedom from prosecution by the Pakistani government, plus the release of 36 prisoners in Kashmir jails by the Indian government. The Pakistanis granted asylum. India refused their demands and, on February 3, the hijackers blew up the plane with hand grenades, remaining on board to ensure the fire consumed the plane and to prevent Pakistani firefighters from stopping the blaze. The hijackers were injured when they jumped from the plane. They were charged with conspiracy and subversive activities. On May 17, 1973, a special tribunal found Quershi guilty of being an Indian agent who had received his orders from Delhi intelligence officers. The court found he had acted as an intelligence agent rather than as a member of the Liberation Front and sentenced him to stiff jail terms under the Pakistani Penal Code and the Official Secrets Act.

Jawig Quibo: linked to the December 2, 1982, bombing of the Iraqi Consulate in Thailand by the Mujabbar Bakr Commando Group.

Aldemar Quintari: Afghan explosives expert identified in December 1995 by the World, a Philippine newspaper, as replacing the terrorist Shah for carrying out terrorist activities in Manila.

Eduardo Quitoriano: arrested in 1994 by the Philippine military, Quitoriano, then age 41, served as the Communist Party of the Philippines international liaison officer to the Japanese Red Army. He was suspected of involvement in a $1.6 million counterfeiting case wrapped up in Switzerland in 1990.

Manuel V. Quizon: one of two Philippine New People's Army rebels arrested May 2, 1992, in a posh subdivision in Angeles City. Quizon, the secretary of the Philippine Communist Party's provincial committee in Pampanga, had a 250,000-peso reward on his head. Police seized two .45 caliber pistols, four fragmentation grenades, communications equipment, computer disks, a personal computer, and Communist Party documents. Charges of illegal possession of firearms and explosives were filed. Police said they had planned the attacks on U.S. servicemen in Pampanga and Tarlac during the past few years. The two rebels were linked to the killing of four Americans, including two servicemen in Dau, Mabalacat, on May 13, 1990. They were also linked to the grenade attack on the Voice of America complex in Tarlac on September 18, 1990, and in January 1992.

Sohail Anjum Qureshi: originally of Pakistan, Qureshi, age 30, was arrested at Heathrow Airport in October 2006 as he boarded a plane for Islamabad. He carried what he called gifts for the mujaheddin in Pakistan, including a night-vision optical device, backpacks, police-style Armament Systems and Procedures (ASP) batons, sleeping bags, and camping gear. He was also carrying a computer hard drive with several combat manuals in its files, 9,000 British pounds (worth $16,800), and an eight-page al-wida (farewell message) in which he said, "If I am to become a Shaheed [martyr] then cry not and celebrate that day as if you celebrate a happy occasion." He told an Internet contact that he had trained at an al Qaeda camp in Pakistan in 1996 and led another in 1998. He had contacted Samina Malik, the "lyrical terrorist," who worked in a Heathrow Airport store and told him about airport security measures. Malik was sentenced to nine months in prison in November 2007 for possession of articles useful for terrorist purposes. Qureshi claimed he was a terrorism financier and fundraiser, observing that "bullets cost money." He said he wanted to "kill many" in an overseas operation. On January 8, 2008, a British court sentenced him to four years six months in prison.

Saleh Quuwaye: one of two Saudis among the nine suspected terrorists arrested December 29, 1995, by Philippine police, who also seized explosives, 50 Philippine passports, and maps of Metro Manila.

R

---

Hamza Rabia: served as external operations chief for Osama bin Laden before Rabia and four other al Qaeda terrorists were killed by a missile from a Predator drone on December 1, 2005, in a tribal area along the Afghan border of Pakistan. The Egyptian citizen was a top operational planner against U.S. and European targets. He had replaced Abu Faraj Libbi, the third-ranking leader of al Qaeda. Local authorities said the men, including two Arabs, died while making bombs at 1:45 A.M.

M. Rabuya: one of four hijackers of a Philippine Airlines Fokker flying from Aub to Manila on November 6, 1968. The group killed one passenger, wounded another, and robbed everyone. The hijackers escaped upon landing in Manila. Rabuya received a death sentence and was electrocuted.

Rafaqat: one of two individuals arrested February 7, 2008, by Pakistani authorities in connection with the December 27, 2007, assassination of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. One was a brother of the suicide bomber.

Mrs. Rafiq: arrested January 6, 1989, by Indian airport security at Srinagar Airport before she boarded a New Delhi-bound plane. Police seized arms and ammunition from her bag. She and her traveling companion, Nazir Ahmad, confessed to planning to hijack the aircraft and forcing it to fly out of India. They had entered India from the Pakistan-held part of Jammu and Kashmir after receiving training in hijacking and sabotage from the Pakistan Army.

Shiv Kumar Raghavan: member of the Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers (probably the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam) arrested May 19, 1982, by Indian police while attacking two fellow Sri Lankans.

Kandiah Ragunathan: alleged Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam assassin of Lalith Athulathmudali, who was shot to death on April 23, 1993, in Sri Lanka. The killer's bullet-riddled body was found the day of the murder near where the politician was killed. The killer lived in Chavakachcheri and worked at a radio shop in Colombo Central.

Arthur Rahaman: Bangladeshi wanted for questioning in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok. Rahaman escaped in the Rajshahi District on June 26 when Thai police arrested three others following a brief gun battle and seized 9 M-16s, 36 AK-47 assault rifles, 10 rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs), 5 RPG launchers, 10 hand grenades, 10 sticks of TNT, 33 AK-47 magazines, 8 M-16 magazines, a .38 caliber revolver, and a sack of M-16 ammunition from a house in Soi Pracha-uthit 61 in Bang Mod.

Khalil Hussain Rahayyal: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced Rahayyal to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, “would hijack a U.S. airliner once again.” The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore’s High Court.

Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem: one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, 42-count federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, claiming that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. Seifullah Chapman, Hammad Abdur-Raheem, Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem (no relation; represented by Christopher Amolsch), and Masoud Ahmad Khan were scheduled for a February 9 bench trial in front of Judge Brinkema.

In February, Judge Brinkema threw out the case against Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem, saying prosecutors failed to present evidence that he was involved in a conspiracy to train for jihadist combat abroad. She noted he had fallen asleep at one of the meetings of the alleged coconspirators. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Hammad Abdur-Raheem: Gulf War veteran who was one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, 42-count federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, claiming that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. Seifullah Chapman, Hammad Abdur-Raheem (represented by William B. Cummings), Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem (no relation), and Masoud Ahmad Khan were scheduled for a February 9 bench trial in front of Judge Brinkema.

On March 4, Judge Brinkema found Hammad Abdur-Raheem guilty of weapons charges and supporting Lashkar-i-Taiba. He did not attend the training camp but was accused of helping train his friends in the United States. On June 15, Judge Brinkema imposed a 97-month sentence on Hammad Abdur-Raheem. On July 29, 2005, she reduced the sentence to 52 months. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Rahil: one of three initial suspects in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Saeed Abdul Rahim: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi’s Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Lebanese to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, “would hijack a U.S. airliner once again.” The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore’s High Court.

Saleem Abdel Rahim: Syrian-born director of the Islamic Relief Agency, a Kuwaiti-financed organization in Peshawar, and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf who were arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. Rahim was charged under the Maintenance of Public Order Act.

Abdul Rahman: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Rahman, in his twenties, was from Arifwala, Pakistan.

Abdur Rahman: leader of the banned Jamaat ul-Mujaheddin Bangladesh, which wants to establish sharia law and claims to have 10,000 members.

He is also the older brother of Ataur Rahman, the group's military commander.

Aseraf Abdul Alzouri Rahman: United Arab Emirates citizen and one of six Arabs arrested April 1, 1995, by Philippine authorities in Caloocan (or Kalookan) for being members of the little-known Islamic Saturday Meeting. The group had ties to Ramzi Yusuf. Documents taken from the six detainees indicated they planned to attack U.S. and Saudi citizens in the Philippines. They were charged with illegal possession of firearms and explosives. Police had seized several M-16 Armalite rifles, dynamite, and detonators. Police said they were preparing for a series of bombings to disrupt the May 8 elections. In December 1995, they were tried before the Caloocan City Regional Trial Court for illegal possession of firearms and explosives.

Ataur Rahman: alias Sunny. Military commander of the banned Jamaat ul-Mujaheddin Bangladesh, which wants to establish sharia law and claims to have 10,000 members. He is the younger brother of Abdur Rahman, the group's leader. Ataur was arrested in a December 13, 2005, raid on Tejgaon Polytechnic College in Dhaka, Bangladesh.

Sharif 'Abd-al-Rahman: member of the Egyptian Islamic Group killed on July 1, 1995, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. He had fled Egypt for Afghanistan a few years earlier. He then moved to Peshawar, Pakistan, before moving on. He was a prominent member of the group's military wing in Qina. He was identified by the Ethiopian government as the leader of the nine gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Shayek Abdur Rahman: Bangladesh's top Islamic militant leader, Rahman was captured by authorities on March 2, 2006.

Anton Rajah: London-based spokesperson for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in May 1991, Rajah said his group was not responsible for the May 22, 1991, murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister.

Raju: one of three Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam gunmen who set off a truck bomb on January 31, 1996, at the Central Bank of Sri Lanka building in Colombo, killing 90 and wounding 1,400. The trio crashed an Isuzu truck into the security barricade at the front of the bank. Two gunmen fired automatic weapons at the guards, some of whom returned fire while others fled. One terrorist fired a grenade in front of a nearby office building. Raju, the driver, spent several minutes attempting to crash the truck through the security barriers and finally rammed his vehicle into the building, causing the first two floors to collapse. The terrorists were grabbed by local citizens upon fleeing a bakery after dropping off grenades, a suicide kit, two bombs, and two walkie-talkies.

Ghulam Rama: Pakistani, age 67, sentenced on June 16, 2005, by presiding judge Jacqueline Rebejotte to five years in prison and expulsion from France after serving his term for conspiracy to assist Richard Reid in his attempt to shoe-bomb an American airliner over the Atlantic on December 22, 2001. Rama had spent three years in prison awaiting trial. French intelligence indicated Rama had organized terrorist attacks during trips to the United Kingdom, New York, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia between 2001 and 2002. Reid had used an Internet café in Paris to contact Pakistan; the trail led to Rama, the president of Straight Path, a Muslim charity. Rama told police he had seen two other defendants with Reid.

Pratap Ramchandani: Baroda deputy mayor arrested in connection with the April 14, 1980, assassination attempt against prime minister Indira Gandhi. On April 24, eight days after his arrest, he was granted bail.

Asif Ramzi: Pakistani militant who named himself after noted terrorist Ramzi Yousef. Pakistani authorities wanted him for questioning in the June 14, 2002, car bombing outside the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 Pakistanis and injured 51 others. On June 29, 2002, Pakistan offered a $50,000 bounty for him. He sent e-mails from the banned Lashkar-i-Jhangvi to a local news agency and a major daily newspaper in Karachi claiming credit for three parcel bombings on October 18, 2002, that injured nine people in Karachi. One e-mail said the group was warning police who were hunting members of banned Islamic groups, the Taliban, and al Qaeda. Ramzi claimed that 35 packages, each containing five ounces of explosives, had been mailed from three post offices. They threatened future attacks against “anti-Islam police officers and other infidels.” All parcels included a tag that said “a gift from the MMA”—the initials of the Muttahida Majlis-i-Amal (the United Action Front), a coalition of anti-U.S. religious parties that had made major gains in the previous week’s national elections. An MMA leader denied involvement.

Baljit Singh Rana: one of two Sikh activists arrested in February 1984 who admitted to carrying out a grenade attack against the Soviet Embassy in New Delhi in August 1983.

Tariq Rana: Pakistani businessman who was arrested by Philippine authorities on March 31, 1995, in the Makati financial district on fraud charges and for connections with Ramzi Yusuf.

Abdul Rashid: Pakistani taxi driver arrested in February 2008 in connection with the December 27, 2007, assassination of former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. Rashid’s cousin, Husnain Gul, was also held.

Haroon Rashid: one of six Denver-area residents indicted in March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. U.S. Magistrate Michael Watanabe released five of them on bail but ordered Rashid held without bail on an immigration charge. On March 31, FBI agent Michael Castro told a U.S. magistrate at a bail hearing that Rashid had been trained at a terrorist camp in Pakistan shortly after 9/11 and wanted to take part in a jihad against the United States. A pawn shop owner said Rashid had shopped for a rifle with a scope equipped for night firing. Rashid had been convicted of murder in Pakistan but was free on appeal. The FBI said three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Rashid was represented by attorney Anthony Joseph.

Mohammed Rashid: identified by confessed bomber Asif Zaheer as accepting the car bomb that, on May 8, 2002, exploded next to a pink and white 46-seat Pakistani Navy Mercedes Marco Polo bus outside the upscale Karachi Sheraton Hotel and Towers on Club Road, killing 16 people—including 11 French citizens working for a technical company on a submarine project, 2 Pakistani beggars, and the driver of unidentified nationality—and wounding 22 others, including 12 French citizens and 8 Pakistanis. On January 7, 2003, police arrested but did not immediately charge two others as a result of Zaheer’s information. On June 30, the Pakistani antiterrorism court sentenced three Islamic militants to death for the bombing.

Rasu: variant Raghu. One of three Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam gunmen who set off a truck bomb on January 31, 1996, at the Central Bank of Sri Lanka building in Colombo, killing 90 and wounding 1,400. The trio crashed an Isuzu truck into the security barricade at the front of the bank. Two gunmen fired automatic weapons at the guards, some of whom returned fire while others fled. One terrorist fired a grenade in front of a nearby office building. For several minutes, the driver attempted to crash the truck through the security barriers and finally rammed his vehicle into the building, causing the first two floors to collapse. The terrorists were grabbed by local citizens upon fleeing a bakery after dropping off grenades, a suicide kit, two bombs, and two walkie-talkies.

Ibrahim Rasul: variant Rasool; alias Abdul Shakkor. Iranian displaced person holding a United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) card and one of six accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested March 11, 1995, by Pakistani police. Rasul was arrested at the Cantt Railway Station while carrying explosives and was charged with plotting to kill prime minister Benazir Bhutto under the Maintenance of Public Order Act. He implicated Yusuf in the June 20, 1994, bombing of the Imam Reza mausoleum in Mashhad, Iran, that left 25 dead and 70 injured. Rasul had settled in Peshawar in the 1980s to join the Afghan War against the Russians. On April 3, 1995, he was brought from Peshawar to Karachi for investigation into the alleged attempt against Prime Minister Bhutto. He alleged that three million rupees remained in the vaults of a foreign bank in Karachi to be paid to them for the attempt. On August 20, he was remanded for five days to the physical custody of the Crimes Investigation Department. He was a resident of Askari Lane, Mohalla Juman Shah, near the Smani Mosque. He was a member of a terrorist group based in Karachi. He was suspected of involvement in the murder of several leaders of the Sipah-e-Sahaba Pakistan, including Haq Nawaz Jhangvi.

Abdur Rauf: associate of Mohammad Rashid Khan, gambling kingpin and Muslim owner of a three-story residential building in which a bomb exploded on March 17, 1993, at Bow Bazaar Street in central Calcutta's Muslim district, killing 86 people and wounding 125. Police believed the blast was caused by carelessly handled explosives stockpiled for bomb making. Police found 25 live bombs at the blast site. Rauf was arrested.

Rashid Rauf: dual U.K.-Pakistani citizen involved in an al Qaeda plot to blow up 10 British planes in 2006. He was killed in a missile strike in Ali Khel in North Waziristan on November 22, 2008. He had earlier lived in Birmingham, United Kingdom. He was arrested in Bahawalpur, Pakistan, in August 2006, but a Pakistani court dropped charges against him later that year. Pakistan offered to extradite him to the United Kingdom. He escaped custody in Pakistan in December 2007, slipping out of his handcuffs after police permitted him to visit an Islamabad mosque. He was believed linked to Jaish-i-Muhammad. He married a close relative of Maulana Masood Azhar, founder of Jaish-i-Muhammad.

Tayib Rauf: arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Rauf, age 22, is from Birmingham, United Kingdom, and is the brother of Rashid Rauf, who was also arrested. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. Tayib Rauf was later released.

Ravi: alias of Sivakumaraswamy Raviraj.

Paritala Ravi: former People's War Group Maoist separatist guerrilla leader who was an Indian film producer in November 1997. He was injured on November 19, 1997, when a remotely detonated car bomb exploded outside D. Rama Naidu film studio in Hyderabad during a gathering of actors, fans, and journalists for the filming of a movie, killing 23 people and injuring 20 others, including actor Mohan Babu. No one claimed credit. Police suspected rivals of Ravi.

Sivakumaraswamy Raviraj: alias Ravi. One of the 10 most wanted Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) operatives in 1993, Raviraj was wanted for a spate of killings in Colombo. He was a close associate of the LTTE suicide bomber who rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May Day parade in Colombo on May 1, 1993, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others.

Zaldy Realubit: alias Ka (Comrade) Irene. One of eight members of the New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines who died in a four-hour gun battle in Barangay Duquit, Mabalacat, Pampanga, on July 2, 1989, when the Angeles Metropolitan District Command foiled the NPA's plan to attack the July 4 celebration at Clark Air Base. All belonged to General Guerrilla Unit One operating in eastern Pampanga towns.

Ashique Rehman: one of three Pakistani sailors arrested May 2, 1995, in Rosario, Argentina, while taking photos of the Argentine Zionist Union building at 2555 Salta Street in the old Pichincha District. They were placed at the disposal of Federal Judge Galeano. The trio worked on the Cypriot ship Mastrogiorgis B, moored in Rosario. Police were investigating whether they were involved with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israel Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 96 and wounded 231.

Attaur Rehman: member of Lashkar-i-Jhangvi arrested June 4, 2007, by Pakistani police on suspicion of involvement in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl.

Khidr Abu Abdur Rehman: alias of Ahmad Saeed.

Matiur Rehman: Pakistani who is not an al Qaeda member but who is believed to have a link to Osama bin Laden. Police were investigating his links to those arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day.

Omar Rehman: arrested along with two of his relatives on August 29, 2004, in his village home in the North West Frontier Province in connection with the two failed assassination attempts against Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf in December 2003.

Tauseef Rehman: arrested on December 5, 2008, in Calcutta and charged with fraud and conspiracy. Rehman, a 28-year-old from Calcutta, used a false ID card to buy 22 SIM (subscriber identity) cards that were used by the terrorists during the November 26, 2008, Mumbai attacks.

J. Rodrigues Reis: one of two deserters from the Portuguese Army who hijacked an Angolan Air Taxi general aviation craft scheduled to fly from Luanda, Angola, to Cabinda on June 12, 1971, and diverted it to Pointe Noire in the Republic of the Congo.

Inderjit Singh Reyat: Canadian citizen and Sikh bomb maker arrested February 5, 1988, by police in Coventry, United Kingdom, on a Canadian warrant. Canada requested extradition. He was charged with manslaughter in the deaths of two baggage handlers and with six weapons charges, including the manufacture and acquisition of explosive substances. On May 10, 1991, he was convicted on two counts of manslaughter and four explosives offenses. On June 10, 1991, Justice Raymond Paris of Canada's British Columbia Supreme Court sentenced the former auto electrician to 10 years in prison. He was a devout Sikh who aided members of the militant Babbar Khalsa, a Sikh nationalist organization.

He was charged in Canada on June 6, 2001, with involvement in the June 23, 1985, Air India Flight 182 bombing that killed 2 workers in Japan and all 329 people on the B747 when it crashed off the Atlantic coast of Ireland. Reyat was jailed in Japan. On February 10, 2003, he pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the Air India bombing and as part of a plea bargain was sentenced to five years for helping acquire the materials used to make the bomb. Prosecutors said he did not know who made the bomb and thought the material would be used for bombs in India. The surprise plea came two months before he and two others were to stand trial on murder charges.

Ali Reza: Iranian refugee detained for 24 hours at Karachi Airport on September 24, 1989, in connection with a possible attempt to hijack Saudi Airlines Flight SV-353 from Karachi to Jeddah. He was released after close interrogation. He had come to Karachi as a refugee in February 1989 and had been living in a slum behind the airport. He was planning to migrate to the United States.

Roger Riga: one of three young Filipino hijackers of a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Davao to Manila and Bacolod on October 11, 1973. The plane landed in Hong Kong. President Ferdinand Marcos granted them amnesty in the Philippines. The hijackers agreed and surrendered their weapons.

Chhouk Rin: former Khmer Rouge commander arrested in Cambodia on January 17, 2000, for the September 28, 2004, murders of three backpackers—an Australian, a Briton, and a Frenchman—who were kidnapped on July 25, 1994, when guerrillas ambushed their train en route from Phnom Penh to Sihanoukville. Rin was the first senior ex-rebel to be jailed after defecting. He was taken into custody in southern Cambodia and was held at Phnom Penh's T3 prison. He was sentenced to life in December 2002.

Commander Robot: alias of Ghalib Andang.

Muktar Robow: spokesperson in May 2008 for the Somali al-Shabab, the military arm of the Islamic Courts movement that had been designated a terrorist group by the United States in February 2008.

Maria Odete Rodrigues: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement's December 6, 1982, sabotage of a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

R. Rodrigues de Sousa: one of two deserters from the Portuguese Army who hijacked an Angolan Air Taxi general aviation craft scheduled to fly from Luanda, Angola, to Cabinda on June 12, 1971, and diverted it to Pointe Noire in the Republic of the Congo.

Jimmy Rodriguez: commanding officer of the Red Scorpion Group south command of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade killed in a February 1, 1993, shootout during a raid by Philippine National Police. He was involved in killing U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe on April 21, 1989.

Abdur Rohim: arrested in April 2008 in Malaysia, which sent him to Indonesia, where he was being investigated for his involvement in violence in Poso. He was believed to have succeeded Zarkasih as the leader of Jemaah Islamiyah in June 2007.

Rohmat: alias Zaki. Indonesian martial arts specialist, age 26, arrested in March 2005 in the Philippines on suspicion of being a Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) operative. He told investigators that he had trained 23 Indonesian bomb specialists at the Jabal Qubah camp in southern Mindanao. He said he had worked with the al Qaeda-linked Abu Sayyaf Group. He claimed that the southern Philippines had become a haven for Indonesians involved in major terrorist attacks, including the 2002 Bali bombings. He said the JI group was planning more bombings and kidnappings. He said he had entered the southern Philippines to obtain training with other Indonesians in January 2000 and in two years had worked his way up to instructor on Islam and the martial arts; military officials said he had also been teaching bomb making. He claimed that in 2002, Zulkifli, then the Indonesian head of JI in the Philippines, had named him the JI contact with the Abu Sayyaf.

Commander Rolly: alias of Omar Usman.

Michael Romero: believed to be one of 10 members of the New People's Army of the Philippines who, on March 4, 1990, shot to death Stewart Frank Raab, age 76, an American rancher who refused to pay revolutionary taxes of $34,000.

Sergio Romero: member of the Philippines New People's Army (NPA) Alex Boncayao Brigade, a Manila sparrow assassination unit. He joined the NPA in 1979 and was their spokesperson on March 2, 1992.

Ka Rommel: alias of Alfredo de Leon.

Gary Ipa Romriell: Los Angeles, California, resident who Philippine police believed was a U.S. assassin who entered the country to kill president Corazon Aquino May 15–20, 1990.

Glen Rosauro: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Randall Todd Royer: Falls Church, Virginia, resident, age 30, and one of 11 members of a "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, 42-count federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Royer and another defendant were alleged to have fired at Indian positions in Kashmir after training at a Lashkar-i-Taiba camp in Pakistan.

On July 11, Judge Brinkema ruled that Royer should remain in jail, saying she was not satisfied with his explanation of why he had an AK-47-style rifle and 200 rounds of ammunition in his car two weeks after 9/11.

On September 25, a new indictment was issued against seven defendants. Royer was charged with conspiracy to provide material support to al Qaeda and the Taliban.

On January 16, 2004, Royer pleaded guilty to one count of using and discharging a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence and to carrying an explosive during the commission of a felony, but he denied he intended to harm Americans. He said he and his colleagues intended to fight in Muslim causes abroad. The government dropped charges that he conspired to provide material support to the Taliban and al Qaeda. On April 9, Royer was sentenced to 20 years in prison. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Piet "Skiet" Rudolph: leader of the Order of the Boer People (Orde Boerevolk) of South Africa on December 5, 1990, during his bail application in the Johannesburg Magistrate's Court, Rudolph admitted that his group had attacked the U.K. Embassy in Pretoria in January 1990.

Abu Rusdan: temporary leader of Indonesia's Jemaah Islamiyah arrested April 23, 2003.

Reinhald Rusli: suspected Indonesian arms broker, age 34, arrested September 29, 2006, and held in federal custody in Guam in connection with an attempt to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

S

---

S.: alias of T.Z.

Sabah Saddiq Saad: Iraqi diplomat denied accreditation in Manila by the Philippine government because of his involvement with two terrorists who tried to plant a 200-pound bomb at the U.S. Information Service (USIS) Thomas Jefferson Library. The bomb exploded prematurely on January 19, 1991.

Abu Munder al-Saadi: spiritual leader of a Libyan militant group arrested in the Hong Kong Airport in the early 2000s, according to Noman Benotman, a former group member.

Esmael Saafar: alias Kumander Tigre. Vice chairman of the Raja Buayan Revolutionary Committee and leader of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front terrorists who, on October 18, 1993, threatened U.S. engineers working for the Morrison Knudsen Corporation constructing a United States Agency for International Development (USAID) and Philippine Aid Plan road project in Cotabato, Sarangani Province.

Sahilal Sabaratnam: one of four Sri Lankan immigrants who were charged in a New York court on January 26, 2009, with providing material support to terrorists for trying to supply hundreds of thousands of dollars of surface-to-air missiles and assault weapons to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. Two defendants pleaded guilty. Charges against Sabaratnam were expected to go forward.

Sri Sabaratnam: head of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam group's Mahattaya faction in the organization's Paris office.

Sabauddin: Indian charged on February 25, 2009, by Indian prosecutors with providing maps used in the November 26–28, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks that killed 170 people.

Abu Sabaya: alias of Aldam Tilao.

Abu Sabaya: spokesperson for the Abu Sayyaf rebels who kidnapped Jeffrey Craig Edwards Schilling, an American from Oakland, California, in Jolo, Philippines, on August 29, 2000.

Osmar Saleh Sabbe: variant Sabbi. Leader of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF), a splinter faction of the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF), who served as spokesperson in Beirut during the July 14, 1975, kidnapping of two American civilians and four Ethiopians from the U.S. Navy's Kagnew Station transmitter site near Asmara by the ELF-Revolutionary Council. He also served as the ELF's spokesperson during the December 22, 1975, kidnapping of Ronald Michalke, a U.S. citizen employed by the Collins International Service Company at the Kagnew Station communications base in Asmara.

S.S. Sabhapathy: arrested by Indian police on July 5, 1991, in a Delhi hotel in connection with the bombing that killed former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. Sabhapathy, age 70, had direct links with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). He was remanded to police custody for 30 days. Police found documents suggesting a plot to smuggle two other suspects in the bombing—Sivarasan and Subha—to Nepal and then a Southeast Asian country where LTTE has sympathizers.

Mufti Mohammed Sabir: following a shootout on September 8, 2005, Karachi, Pakistan, police arrested the Islamist wanted for the May 2002 bomb attack that killed 11 French engineers and 4 others.

Ahmed Sadek: South African operative of Osama bin Laden arrested in Bangladesh on January 30, 1999, and charged with attacking the country's leading poet, Shamsur Rahman.

Abdallah al-Sadeq: Libyan apprehended in Thailand in spring 2004, according to Noman Benotman, a former member of the Libyan militant network.

Ehsanul Islam Sadequee: Bangladeshi American, age 19, based in Atlanta who joined Syed Haris Ahmed, 21, a Pakistani-born naturalized American, at a meeting with Canadian extremists in Toronto in March 2005 to explore attacks on military bases and oil refineries. The April 2005 U.S. indictment said they drove Ahmed's pickup to Washington, D.C., where they videotaped the U.S. Capitol building, World Bank headquarters, a Metro station, a hazardous materials vehicle, and fuel storage tanks. They gave the videos to al Qaeda Internet leader Younis Tsouli and Abid Hussain Khan, who faced terrorism charges in the United Kingdom. Sadequee lied to FBI investigators about the Canada trips and faced 60 years in prison.

Hamad Ameen Sadiq: Pakistani identified on February 13, 2009, by the Pakistani interior minister as the main conspirator in the November attack in Mumbai, India. Sadiq allegedly made money transfers from Italy and Spain to support the attack. After his arrest, Sadiq identified the safe houses of two other suspects.

Mamet Sadyk: member of the East Turkistan Islamic Movement deported by Kyrgyzstan to China in May 2002 for planning terrorist attacks against embassies, markets, and public gathering places in Bishkek.

Ahmad Saeed: variants Sa'id, Ahmad Saeed Khadr; alias Khidr Abu Abdur Rehman (variant 'Abd-al-Rahman). Director of Human Concern International Peshawar arrested by Pakistani authorities on the Afghanistan frontier December 3, 1995, on suspicion of financing the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded 80. He surrendered to police and by December 20, 1995, was on day 17 of a hunger strike. The Egyptian with Canadian citizenship was moved to the Pakistan Institute of Medical Sciences. His son-in-law, Khalid, was also suspected and fled to Afghanistan.

Ahmed Saeed: sentenced to death at age 29 by a special antiterrorist court on August 21, 1999, for the November 12, 1997, murder of four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan. He also was sentenced to seven years in prison for possession of illegal weapons. He belonged to the Muttahida Qaumi Movement, which represents Urdu-speaking people who migrated from India in 1947.

Muhammad Saeed: overall leader of the Pakistan-based Lashkar-i-Taiba. On May 27, 2008, the United States imposed financial sanctions against him.

Sheik Omar Saeed: alias Ahmad Omar Saeed Sheik. Named on February 6, 2002, by Pakistani police as a key suspect in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl. Saeed, age 27, was born in London and has U.K. citizenship. He attended the London School of Economics and Political Science. He went to Bosnia on a charity mission in 1993 and then received military training in Khost, Afghanistan. He has ties to the banned Islamic radical groups Harkat ul-Mujaheddin and Jaish-i-Muhammad. In 1994, he kidnapped four Western tourists in Indian Kashmir but was captured after being wounded in a shootout. The police also linked Saeed to Farhad Naseem, who was connected to the Pearl case, through e-mail found on Naseem's laptop. He was freed from an Indian prison in 1999 during the hijacking of an Indian Airlines flight to Afghanistan.

On February 5, Saeed's aunt called him and said she was in police custody and asked him to turn himself in. She and one of her three sons were later released.

Saeed surrendered to Lahore, Pakistan, police on February 12 (or February 5). He admitted his involvement, said Pearl was alive, and insisted he did not know Pearl's whereabouts as another group had provided the safe house. He soon backed away from saying Pearl was alive and then told a Karachi court that Pearl was dead, shot while trying to escape around January 31. He had called his accomplices to tell them to release Pearl on February 5, saying "shift the patient to the doctor," but was told, "Dad has expired." Saeed said his partner was Hyder—known to Pearl as Imtiaz Siddique and to police as Mansur Hasnain—who was involved in the Indian Air hijacking.

A federal grand jury in U.S. District Court in Trenton, New Jersey, indicted Saeed on March 14 with conspiracy to commit hostage taking that resulted in Pearl's death and hostage taking that resulted in Pearl's death. The indictment said Saeed used the alias Chaudrey Bashir to send e-mails to Pearl offering the meeting with the cleric. Prosecutors also unsealed a secret indictment filed in November 2001 in a Washington, D.C., federal court that said he had participated in the 11-day 1994 kidnapping of U.S. tourist Bela J. Nuss in India.

On March 22, Pakistan charged him with murder, kidnapping for ransom, and terrorism in the Pearl case. On July 15, he was convicted and sentenced to hang.

On February 24, 2005, a Karachi court began hearing the appeals of four terrorists, including Saeed.

Abdul Rehman Al Safani: Saudi of Yemeni descent with ties to Osama bin Laden. On June 14, 2001, a detainee identified him to Indian police as the man behind a plot to bomb the U.S. Embassy in India. He fled India in mid-August. U.S. and Yemeni officials said he had played a central role in organizing the October 12, 2000, USS Cole bombing using the name Mohammed Omar Al Harazi. They also said he was involved in the August 7, 1998, bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Zayd Hassan Abd al-Latif Masud al-Safarini: Kuwaiti-born Jordanian, age 39, arrested September 28, 2001, after his release from a Pakistani prison where he had served 14 years for membership in the Abu Nidal Organization and for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of Pan American Flight 73 on the ground in Karachi in which 22 passengers were killed. He shot U.S. passenger Rajesh N. Kumar in the head. He was rendered to justice in September 2001. On October 1, 2001, the United States charged him with murder. He was arraigned in a U.S. district court on charges contained in a 126-count indictment issued in 1991. On July 31, 2002, he appeared in federal court in Washington, D.C., for serving as the ringleader of the hijackers. Charges included murder, conspiracy, and air piracy. Prosecutors sought the death penalty. On November 12, 2003, Safarini pleaded guilty to 95 counts of murder, air piracy, and terrorism to avoid a death penalty. On December 16, 2003, U.S. District Judge Emmet G. Sullivan sentenced him to life in prison. On May 13, 2004, Safarini was given three consecutive life sentences plus 25 years as part of a plea agreement approved by the judge, who said he would recommend that Safarini never be paroled and be sent to a super-maximum security prison in Florence, Colorado.

Abu Safian: Pakistani associate of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested May 5, 1995, by Pakistani police on charges of selling Yusuf's property in Quetta. He worked at the United Arab Emirates's Red Crescent mission in Quetta.

Safullah: one of seven people sentenced to life in prison on March 13, 1991, by a special antiterrorism court in Lahore, Pakistan, for the December 19, 1990, murder of Sadiq Ganji, an Iranian diplomat who headed the Iranian cultural center in Lahore.

Said Saggat: on June 27, 2005, Nairobi chief magistrate Aggrey Muchelule said that the evidence was not strong enough to connect Kubwa Mohammed Seif, Said Saggat, Ahmed, and Salmin Mohammed Khamis to the November 2002 Kenya hotel bombing or the attempt to shoot down a chartered Israeli plane. In summer 2003, three of the four were charged with murder in the hotel bombing, but in November, the charges were reduced to conspiracy. On May 10, the prosecution dropped two other counts linking the suspects to the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy and the 2003 plot to destroy the new U.S. Embassy.

Radulan Sahiron: Abu Sayyaf chief of staff captured by Philippine security forces on November 5, 2005. He was linked to several kidnappings, including the April 2000 kidnapping of 21 Western tourists and Asian workers from Malaysia.

Mohammad Said: one of three Bangladeshi arm smugglers arrested in the Rajshahi District on June 26, 1990, by Thai police, who seized 9 M-16s, 36 AK-47 assault rifles, 10 rocket-propelled grenades (RPGs), 5 RPG launchers, 10 hand grenades, 10 sticks of TNT, 33 AK-47 magazines, 8 M-16 magazines, a .38 caliber revolver, and a sack of M-16 ammunition from a house in Soi Prachathit 61 in Bang Mod following a brief gun battle.

They were wanted for questioning in the February 1, 1990, killing of three Saudi Arabia Embassy employees in Bangkok.

Saima Saima: wife of Haroon Rashid; both were indicted with four others in March 2003 for harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. The FBI said three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Saima was freed on $10,000 bail.

Chattar Singh Saini: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. Each suspect was charged with conspiracy to possess explosives with intent to injure. Charges against Saini were dropped.

Lal Singh Saini: named by the Hindustan Times as a Punjabi terrorist involved in a 1993 meeting to plan a campaign by underworld boss Dawood Ibrahim to undertake stabbings, killings, arson, and looting in Bombay and other parts of Gujarat.

Abdul Latif Sairfani: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Syrian to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court.

Mohammed Sajid: Pakistani operative of Osama bin Laden arrested in Bangladesh on January 30, 1999. He was charged with attacking the country's leading poet, Shamsur Rahman.

Sajjad: one of four members of the al-Zulfikar organization arrested August 5, 1991, by Pakistani authorities for planning to assassinate the president, the prime minister, the Sindh chief minister, the leader of the Muhajir Qaumi Movement, and other VIPs. Police seized 4 Kalashnikovs, 36 Soviet-made bombs, 2 pistols, 2 rifles, 3 revolvers, a Mauser, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Hiroshi Sakaguchi: his release was demanded during the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, when five Japanese Red Army (JRA) members held 53 hostages in a 79-hour siege. He refused to go, saying he considered the JRA not revolutionary enough.

Salah: alias bestowed by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine to the Japanese Red Army terrorists who machine-gunned passengers at Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, killing 28 people.

Fahid Muhammad 'Alim Salam: variant Fahim Mohammed Ally Msalam; aliases Fahid Mohammed Ally, Fahid Mohammed Ali Musalaam, Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam, Fahid Muhamad Ali Salem, Mohammed Ally Msalam, Usama al-Kini, Fahad Ally Msalam. Kenyan citizen indicted December 16, 1998, in the Southern District of New York for his involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiring to kill U.S. nationals, the murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He claims a February 19, 1976, birth date in Mombasa, Kenya, and is circa five feet seven inches tall; he weighs circa 165 pounds and has worked as a clothing vendor.

Yahya Abdus Salam: Libyan commercial pilot trainee detained on October 1, 1986, by Pakistan's Federal Investigation Agency. He was suspected of being an associate of Salman Tariki, a Libyan arrested September 10, 1986, in Pakistan in connection with the hijacking by the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, the Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986. The hijackers threw grenades and fired machine guns at the passengers, killing 22 and injuring 100. Police believed Tariki was the mastermind of the attack and met with the Palestinians and arranged for weapons after casing the airport.

Hashim Salamat: chairman in early 2003 of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in the Philippines. On March 9, 2003, he was charged with the March 4, 2003, bombing by a MILF member at the main terminal of Davao Airport in which 21 people were killed and 149 were injured.

Angelito Salanio: member of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade arrested by Philippine authorities in March 1992 in connection with the kidnapping of U.S. citizen Michael Barnes on January 17, 1992.

Mohammed Saleh: arrested by Pakistani authorities on August 7, 1998, in connection with the bombings that day of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

Barahama Sali: variant of Barhama Sali.

Barhama Sali: variant Barahama Sali; alias Amir. Abu Sayyaf leader in the Philippines believed responsible for the June 1994 kidnapping and murder of 15 civilians. He was killed by the military during a two-month pursuit operation.

Hamsiraji Sali: leader of the Balik Islam faction of the Abu Sayyaf Group in the Philippines who was in contact with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front in March 2003. On May 29, 2002, the United States announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture in connection with the May 27 Abu Sayyaf kidnapping of three Americans in the Philippines. On July 23, he was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in a May 27, 2001, attack in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, hostage taking, and three counts of hostage taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition when they were apprehended. On April 8, 2004, Sali was killed by Philippine troops in a gun battle on Basilan Island.

Janinal Antel Sali Jr.: alias Abu Sulaiman. Abu Sayyaf commander who, on July 23, 2002, was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for killing U.S. hostages taken on May 27, 2001, in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, hostage taking, and three counts of hostage taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition when they were apprehended. Sali was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006. On January 16, 2007, he died in a gun battle with Philippine Army Special Forces during a raid on Jolo Island.

Ati Hadj Salik: one of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988.

Ali Mohfoudh Salim: on February 8, 1999, Kenyan police and FBI agents questioned Salim in connection with the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi. Salim owns a commercial garage in Mombasa and may have worked on the Toyota Dyna truck that was used to transport the bomb. While not implicated, he was taken into custody after denying knowing Owhali and Odeh, two men arrested in the case, despite evidence to the contrary; he was later released.

'Ali Qasim Sayf Salim: on August 7, 1995, the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution identified Salim as one of five terrorists who had confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Mohammed Salim: on August 21, 1999, Salim was sentenced to death at age 39 by a special anti-terrorist court for the November 12, 1997, murder of four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan. He also was sentenced to seven years in prison for possession of illegal weapons. He belonged to the Muttahida Qaumi Movement, which represents Urdu-speaking people who migrated from India in 1947.

Mujarod bin Salim: convicted of hiding two of the bombers in the October 12, 2002, bombing of two restaurants in Bali. On October 24, 2006, the government reduced about 45 days from his 5-year sentence.

Suleiman Abdalla Salim: suspected of involvement in the August 7, 1988, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He was arrested March 25, 2003, in Somalia.

Mohamed Abdou Saloum: one of two Libyans arrested the night of February 19, 1988, by Senegalese security officials as the men attempted to illegally enter the country with explosives and weapons at Dakar-Yoff Airport. They came from Cotonou via Abidjan. They were turned over to the State Security Court on April 8, 1988, and faced three to five years in prison for "acts and maneuvers likely to threaten public security." On June 15, 1988, they were to be released without charges being brought and were to leave the country the next day.

Sals: his release from a Kenyan jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Hammad Riaz Samana: Pakistani, age 21, living in Los Angeles who was arrested August 15, 2005, in connection with an investigation of a series of 10 gas station holdups. Police found contacts to a possible terrorist plot and connections to the radical Islamic group Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh (Assembly of Authentic Islam), which has a presence in the state prison where one of the suspects had been recently held. A search of the suspect's home yielded jihadist literature, documents referring to 9/11, bulletproof vests, and an address list of area synagogues, the Israeli Consulate, National Guard centers, and the ticket counter for El Al Israel Airlines at L.A. International Airport. The former college student had attended a suburban mosque with another suspect and had researched the Israeli Consulate and military recruiting offices.

Samana was later found unfit to stand trial and was remanded to psychiatric care at a federal prison facility. On September 6, Samana pleaded not guilty to terrorism charges.

Javier Sambajon: aliases Basil, Billy, Martin. New People's Army of the Philippines rebel captured in early 1991 who told police he was ordered by the Communist Party of the Philippines to conduct Operation Black Label—killing U.S. nationals and attacking U.S. facilities and selected personalities, including government and military officials.

Luis Queba Sambu: Armed Forces captain and security officer for the Guinean Embassy in Portugal arrested November 6, 1987, by the Portugal police antiterrorism department after explosives were found at the embassy and his residence. He was suspected of having links with the Popular Forces of April 25 and the French Direct Action. He had studied military strategy in the Soviet Union and Libya. He initially said the explosives were to be used against Guinean exiles. He later requested political asylum.

Thong Samien: member of the California-based anticommunist Cambodian Freedom Fighters, who, on November 24, 2000, claimed credit for a midnight shootout at a police station and government buildings in Phnom Penh in which seven died and a dozen were wounded. On June 22, 2001, a Cambodian court convicted the 60-year-old Long Beach, California, travel agent of handling logistics for the attack.

Imam Samudra: alias Hudama. The West Java computer engineer, age 35, was the ringleader of the October 12, 2002, bombings of two Bali nightclubs. Bomber Amrozi told police that Samudra asked him to buy the chemicals to make the bomb. The radical intellectual and Jemaah Islamiyah member received arms training in Afghanistan and helped build the bomb. In an August 8 meeting, he decided to target the Sari Club in hopes of killing Americans. He was arrested by Indonesian police on November 21. On November 22, police reported that Samudra confessed to the Bali bombings and admitted involvement in the Christmas Eve 2000 church bombings. On September 10, 2003, a court in Bali sentenced Samudra to death by firing squad. He denied involvement during the trial, but after sentencing he said he wanted to die a martyr. He said the bombing was revenge for U.S. tyranny. Prosecutors said he chose the recruits and financed the attack.

On November 8, 2008, the Indonesian government executed Islamic militants Imam Samudra, Amrozi Nurhasyim, and Ali Ghufron for helping plan and conduct the October 12, 2002, Bali bombing. None of them had expressed remorse, instead taunting relatives of the victims during their trials. The terrorists told the media they hoped their executions would spawn revenge attacks in the country.

Daya Singh Sandhu: alleged Indian leader of the Khalistan Liberation Force arrested by Immigration and Naturalization Service officials shortly after he landed at the Minneapolis–St. Paul International Airport on August 3, 1995. He was wanted in India for several terrorist attacks. He faced deportation as an illegal alien.

Jasbir Sandhu: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four of them were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, chief minister of the Indian state of Haryana, and to blow up a nuclear plant in India and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges. The judge refused bail.

Preces Mehmood Sandhu: Pakistani arrested September 20, 2007, in Madrid on suspicion of financing international terrorism and belonging to a terrorist organization.

Singa Sandhu: general secretary of the outlawed All-India Sikh Student Federation whose release from prison was demanded July 5, 1984, by the hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Arnel Sandoval: spokesperson of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade, a Manila-based hit squad, who, on May 24, 1988, threatened to assassinate U.S. diplomats and civilians in Manila.

Kim Sang-tae: South Korean would-be hijacker of a Korean Airlines F27 flying from Kangnung to Seoul on January 23, 1971. He wanted to go to North Korea. He had four hand grenades and a kitchen knife. He used two grenades to blast his way into the cockpit. The pilot landed on a beach near the border. A sky marshal fired twice at the hijacker, who dropped his grenades; the grenades exploded, killing the hijacker and copilot and injuring 16 others.

Asnar Latin Sani: Jemaah Islamiyah suicide bomber, age 28, who, on August 5, 2003, set off a bomb in what various witnesses described as either a metallic blue Toyota Kijang minivan, a taxi, or a truck, at the entrance of Jakarta's Marriott Hotel, killing 16 people (no guests but several taxi drivers) and injuring 149. He had bought the van for $3,000. He had graduated in 1994 from the Muslim school founded by Abubaker Baaysir.

Foday Sankoh: leader of the Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front rebels in 1999. His terrorists specialized in cutting off the hands, legs, ears, and lips of their victims. He had been indicted by the UN Special Court for Sierra Leone on charges of mass murder, rape, abduction, use of child soldiers, and sexual slavery. He died on July 29, 2003, in a Freetown hospital following a stroke.

Mohammed Sansui: former cabinet minister arrested for plotting the October 4, 1984, bombing of two Bank Central Asia facilities and a Chinese-owned grocery in Jakarta, Indonesia, killing 2 and injuring 16. Sansui meant to destabilize the Suharto government. On May 15, 1985, he was found guilty of supplying detonators to seven Islamic militants whom he paid $500 to carry out the bombings. He was sentenced to 19 years in prison.

Kones Santana: new leader of the Fretilin, the East Timorese independence movement, as of the April 3, 1993, arrest of his predecessor, Antonio Gomes da Costa.

Nder Ako Santen: one of 16 Middle Eastern terrorists who were planning to attack Saudi diplomats and officials overseas, the Saudi Arabia Embassy told Thai officials on March 20, 1990. Santen carried a Swedish passport.

Hilarion del Rosario Santos III: alias Ahmed Santos. Muslim convert who led the radical Rajah Solaiman Movement, Santos was captured on October 26, 2005, along with his wife and five other suspected Islamic militants after a gun battle with authorities in Zamboanga City. Santos's group was linked to a series of attacks, including the bombing of a ferry in Manila Bay in 2004 that killed 116 people. Police seized a rifle, anti-tank ammunition, and other weapons. In 2000, Santos trained with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front before establishing a training camp for converts on his family farm in Pangasinan Province. In March 2005, Santos's brother was arrested in a raid in Manila in which police found 600 kilograms of explosives to be used in an attack against the U.S. Embassy.

Salman Saqib: on March 22, 2002, charged in absentia by a Pakistani court with capital murder, kidnapping for ransom, and terrorism. He was accused of purchasing the scanner and digital camera used for the e-mail in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl. On July 15, 2002, he was convicted and sentenced to 25 years.

Sathajhan Sarachandran: one of two Sri Lankan immigrants who, on January 26, 2009, pleaded guilty in a New York court to providing material support to terrorists for trying to supply hundreds of thousands of dollars of surface-to-air missiles and assault weapons to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

P.R. Sarkar: imprisoned leader of the Ananda Marg whose release was demanded in the last quarter of 1977 through threatening letters and the attempted kidnapping of the Indian High Commission's military attaché Col. Iqbal Singh.

Shameem Sarwar: Indian arrested in India on June 15, 2001, for plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi under Osama bin Laden's orders.

Assad Ali Sarwar: Pakistani, age 26, arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Sarwar lived with his family in a High Wycombe two-story brick duplex. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. Sarwar was charged August 21 with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism and was ordered held without bail. On April 3, 2008, he was tried, along with seven others, as one of the group's leaders for conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006, and conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. He had traveled to Pakistan in June–July 2006. In his house, police found a videotape with five martyrdom messages and two computer memory sticks with information on potential targets. He planned to carry out several attacks rather than commit suicide.

Mohammed Shamim Sarwar: accomplice of indeterminate nationality arrested with Abdel Raouf Hawas on June 14, 2001, in India on suspicion of planning to bomb the U.S. Embassy. They were charged with possession of 13 pounds of explosives, detonators, and timers.

Norio Sasaki: chief of the Wolf bombers, which victimized Japanese businesses. He was freed during the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur in which five Japanese Red Army (JRA) members held 53 hostages in a 79-hour siege. He was flown with other terrorists to Libya, where they surrendered. On August 26, 1975, the Japanese decided to request extradition, but the Libyans denied it on October 29, 1975. Sasaki was one of the JRA Hidaka Commando Unit members who hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh, on September 28, 1977. (See also Kunio Bando.)

Sasaki was believed to be in contact with Hiroshi Sensui in Manila in 1987. Philippine authorities said Sasaki was involved in the November 15, 1986, JRA kidnapping of Mitsui executive Nobuyuki Wakaoji near Manila.

Masayushi Sasha: alleged member of the Japanese Red Army. On February 28, 1981, Cairo media reported that police had foiled his plan to hijack an Egyptian passenger plane for the Libyans.

Hiroshi Sato: Japanese Red Army terrorist alleged by Seoul newsmen on September 12, 1988, to have entered South Korea traveling under altered Japanese passports stolen from Japanese tourists in Spain. The Seoul Olympics were approaching.

Hisham Hikmat Abdul Sattar: Iraqi political science student and leader of the National Union of Iraqi Students and Youth in Manila arrested by Philippine authorities on January 22, 1991, for his involvement with two terrorists trying to plant a 200-pound bomb at the U.S. Information Service (USIS) Thomas Jefferson Library. It exploded prematurely January 19. Sattar's brother, Husham, was later arrested. Police found bomb-making chemicals in their apartment. Their father was an Iraqi diplomat posted to Somalia who had earlier served in Manila. Sattar was active in organizing anti-U.S. demonstrations and had traveled to North Korea. On January 24, Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo ordered the brothers' deportation.

Husham Sattar: arrested by Philippine authorities for his involvement with two terrorists trying to plant a 200-pound bomb at the U.S. Information Service (USIS) Thomas Jefferson Library. It exploded prematurely January 19, 1991. Sattar's brother, Hisham, was arrested earlier. Police found bomb-making chemicals in their apartment. Their father was an Iraqi diplomat posted to Somalia who had earlier served in Manila. On January 24, Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo ordered the brothers' deportation.

Farog al-Sayed: one of 16 Middle Eastern terrorists who were planning to attack Saudi diplomats and officials overseas, the Saudi Arabia Embassy told Thai officials on March 20, 1990. He carried an Egyptian passport.

Mohammed Sayed: one of three Eritrean Liberation Front hijackers of an Ethiopian Airlines DC6 flying from Addis Ababa to Djibouti, French Somaliland, on September 13, 1969, and diverted to Aden, Yemen. A gunfight broke out between the hijackers and an Ethiopian secret police agent who was a passenger. The agent fired six bullets into the stomach and arms of Sayed, age 18. The other two hijackers were captured.

Shahid Akhtar Sayed: alias Doctor. Pakistani identified by India as one of five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight that was diverted to Kandahar Airport on December 24, 1999.

Hafiz Mohammad Sayeed: former professor of Islamic studies and founder of Jamaat-ud-Dawa—a charity the United Nations said was a front for Lashkar-i-Taiba—Sayeed was placed under house arrest in Pakistan on October 31, 2002, after being held without charges for months. He became the head of the new hard-line Islamic group Jamaat al-Dawaa. On November 18, a Pakistani court said his detention was illegal and ordered his release.

In August 2006, Pakistani authorities arrested him in connection with Lashkar train bombings in India. He was released but was placed under two months of house arrest. India, claiming Sayeed was the head of Lashkar-i-Taiba, requested his extradition from Pakistan after the November 26–28, 2008, attacks on Mumbai,. On December 11, 2008, Pakistan put Sayeed under house arrest.

Sebhatu: one of four Eritrean Liberation Front hijackers of an Ethiopian Airlines DC3 flying from Bahr Dar to Gondar, Ethiopia, on January 22, 1971. The plane refueled in Khartoum, then flew on to Benghazi, Libya.

Sebuviiri: one of two former soldiers of the Federal Democratic Movement (FEDEMO) of Uganda arrested January 13, 1988, by the National Resistance Army in connection with the January 11 incident in which grenades were thrown into the hall and down a stairway of a building that houses the French chancery and the Libya, West Germany, and Sudan embassies. A Libyan diplomat and two Ugandans were killed and a French diplomat and three Ugandans were injured in the attack, which was carried out by the Uganda Federal Army and the Uganda Democratic Alliance.

Kubwa Mohammed Seif: on June 27, 2005, Nairobi chief magistrate Aggrey Muchelule said evidence was not strong enough to connect Seif, Said Saggat Ahmed, and Salmin Mohammed Khamis to the November 2002 Kenya hotel bombing or the attempt to shoot down a chartered Israeli plane. In May, the prosecution had dropped two counts linking the suspects to the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy and the 2003 plot to destroy the new embassy. In 2003, they were charged with murder in the hotel bombing, but later the charges were reduced to conspiracy.

Malek Mohammed Seif: on October 25, 2001, Phoenix police arrested Seif, age 36, a Djibouti (or French) citizen who trained at two Arizona flight schools in the 1990s but failed instrument tests for a commuter pilot's license. He remained in Arizona trying to change his immigration status. He left the country for a new home in France before 9/11 but was asked to return to the United States voluntarily for questioning. He said investigators claimed they would not arrest him. But an indictment was filed under seal the day before he returned, and he was detained by the FBI when he arrived in Arizona and was arrested shortly thereafter. He began a hunger strike in the Maricopa County Jail on October 28 and by December 7 had lost 35 pounds. He dropped the hunger strike on December 10. He told the FBI that he met 9/11 hijacker Hani Hanjour at a Tucson dinner party and saw him at a local mosque. Seif faced 41 counts of using a false ID to obtain a Social Security number, which he used to apply for jobs, bank accounts, credit cards, and a driver's license. California prosecutors planned to file additional charges for lying on an asylum application. He was represented by attorney Thomas Hoidal. Seif was to undergo a psychiatric exam to determine whether he was competent to stand trial in January 2002.

Selassie: one of four Eritrean Liberation Front hijackers of an Ethiopian Airlines DC3 flying from Bahr Dar to Gondar, Ethiopia, on January 22, 1971. The plane refueled in Khartoum, then flew on to Benghazi, Libya.

Musa Sedar Selibi: allegedly one of four Turks who entered the Philippines disguised as priests to murder the pope. On January 9, 1995, Philippine police announced they were searching for Selibi.

Markandu Selvarasa: Ponnawattai, Karavedi, Jaffna, cashier and one of two Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) intelligence operatives who directed the LTTE suicide bomber who rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May 1, 1993, May Day parade in Colombo, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others.

Muslimen Sema: in March 1991, he was the regional chief of the Philippine secessionist Moro National Liberation Front.

Sattanand Sembhoo: officiated at the 61st anniversary of the founding of the religious society Arya Samaj in Rose Hill, Mauritius, on November 6, 1988, and pointed his revolver at Sir Anerood Jugnauth, Mauritian prime minister. Sembhoo, age 68, was overpowered by guards. On June 13, 1989, he was charged with attempted murder. Sembhoo said he did not intend to harm the prime minister, whom he admired, but was trying to get his attention in his conflict with the religious society, which had fired him as chairman. However, a handwritten note found in his possession indicated he was plotting a coup that would entail taking Jugnauth hostage. Sembhoo wanted to become prime minister with a 20-year mandate.

Hiroshi Sensui: Japanese Red Army (JRA) member and convicted murderer released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977, and recaptured on June 7, 1988, at the Makati Medical Center in the Philippines after undergoing plastic surgery. Sensui had established two registered import-export firms based in Sucat, Parañaque, Philippines, as fronts to help the JRA. One firm had business deals in Japan, Singapore, Taiwan, and the United States.

Iwan Setiawan: arrested at a traffic light on September 21, 2000, in Jakarta, Indonesia, and found carrying a hand grenade. The detainee admitted involvement in the explosion at the Malaysian Embassy and the September 13 bombing of the stock exchange. He said the next targets were the U.S. Embassy and a nearby Sarinah department store. Police arrested two dozen people.

Commander Seyfullah: Uighur speaker whose name means “Sword of God,” Seyfullah claimed credit for the Turkistan Islamic Party for the July 2008 bus bombings in China. His video “Our Blessed Jihad in Yunnan” was released on July 26, 2008. He said the group planned “to target the most critical points related to the Olympics. We will try to attack Chinese central cities severely, using the tactics that have never been employed.” Observers believed the group is a cover for the East Turkistan Islamic Movement. Seyfullah also claimed credit for a Shanghai bus explosion; a July 17, 2008, attack with an explosives-carrying tractor in Wenzhou; and a July 17, 2008, bombing of a plastics factory in Guangzhou. Observers noted inaccuracies in his statements, including that the Guangzhou explosion was on March 13 in a vehicle repair plant and residential building, killing 7 and wounding 30, and that the Wenzhou explosion on May 17 involved a man who rammed his tractor into a gambling establishment, killing 19.

Sayyid Hasan Sha’: Pakistani tourist arrested July 5, 1994, by Philippine immigration agents as he was heading for Labuan, Sulu, having just arrived in Zamboanga. The military believed he was a financial courier for the Abu Sayyaf Group.

James Johannes Shabangu: African National Congress (ANC) member convicted of throwing a hand grenade at a black policeman’s home and possessing a “death list” of seven anti-ANC blacks. Shabangu had received military training in Angola. On August 19, 1981, a Johannesburg judge sentenced him to death. On June 9, 1983, his sentence was commuted to life in prison by state president Marais Viljoen.

Shadullah: name given by one of the terrorists who attacked Mumbai, India, on November 26–28, 2008. He phoned Indian television from room 1856 of the Oberoi Trident hotel to say, “We demand the release of all mujaheddin put in jails. Then will we release these people. Otherwise, we will destroy this place . . . You must have seen what’s happening here . . . Release them, and we, the Muslims who live in India, should not be harassed . . . Things like demolition of Babri Masjid and killings should stop.”

Aitazaz Shah: backup suicide bomber, age 15, for the December 27, 2007, assassination of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto, Shah was arrested January 17, 2008, in the North West Frontier Province of Pakistan. Shah was from Mansehra and had studied at a Karachi madrassa. He was arrested with Sher Zaman, his handler, in the city of Dera Ismail Khan. On March 1, he was formally charged in court with aiding the assassination plot.

Mohammad Yusuf Shah: alias Sayeed Jalaluddin. Lone hijacker of an Indian Airlines B737 flying from New Delhi to Srinagar and diverted to Amritsar on April 25, 1993. He demanded to go to Kabul, Afghanistan. He claimed to be a senior member of the Hezbul Mujaheddin group fighting to join Indian-controlled Kashmir to the third of Kashmir ruled by Pakistan. The group denied involvement. Commandos rushed the plane after seven hours, killing the hijacker.

Syed Maaz Shah: Pakistani engineering student at the University of Texas at Dallas, age 20, who, on May 24, 2007, was convicted in federal court of illegally firing an assault rifle during two camping trips in 2006. The charges were connected to paramilitary training that prepared Muslim men to fight American troops overseas.

Syed Mustajab Shah: one of three people arrested by Hong Kong authorities while attempting to buy four Stinger missiles from undercover FBI agents during a September 20, 2002, meeting in a Hong Kong hotel. (See also Muhammed Abid Afridi.)

Wali Khan Amin Shah: alias Osama Azmiry. Saudi who accompanied Osama bin Laden to Afghanistan in 1980 and fought with him in the 1989 Jalalabad battles. He was involved in plots to assassinate Pope John Paul II and president Bill Clinton in Manila and the Bojinka plot to blow up 11 aircraft flying to the United States from the Philippines. He was captured in Malaysia on December 9, 1994, and was flown to New York, where he was charged with six counts of conspiracy to bomb airliners, which carries a life sentence without parole. On February 23, 1996, he was indicted for the December 1, 1994, bombing of the Greenbelt Theater in Manila, Philippines, that injured several moviegoers. On September 5, 1996, he was found guilty on all seven counts in the conspiracy to set off the airplane bombs and a prison escape attempt.

Zarar Shah: according to Pakistani authorities on December 31, 2008, the Lashkar-i-Taiba detainee had confessed to involvement in planning the November 26–28, 2008, attacks in Mumbai, India.

Abbas Mohammed ‘Ali Shahadi: on March 24, 1988, suspected Lebanese (or Iranian) Abu Nidal group member threw two hand grenades—which failed to explode—and fired four shots at a van taking a 12-man flight crew to a hotel at Bombay’s Sahar International Airport, seriously wounding the Italian pilot. Police arrested Shahadi and seized his automatic pistol and two magazines of ammunition. He said he shot the pilot to avenge the death of his parents, who had been killed 18 months earlier in an Alitalia crash in Rome. Indian police did not believe the story. The Cells of the Arab Fighters claimed credit.

Faisal Shaikh: Lashkar-i-Taiba leader, age 30, arrested with his brother Muzamil in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Muzamil Shaikh: a software engineer who had recently applied for a job at the U.S. software firm Oracle, Shaikh was arrested with his brother Faisal in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Sohail Shaikh: arrested as a suspect in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Zameer Shaikh: key maker, age 31, arrested as a suspect in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Mohammed Shakil: Gee Gee Cab Company driver, age 30, arrested with Sadeer Saleem and Waheed Ali on March 22, 2007, by British police “on suspicion of the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism” in the July 7, 2005, bombings of the London subway system. On July 5, 2007, British authorities charged the trio with handling the reconnaissance and planning. On August 10, 2007, they pleaded not guilty.

Radi al-Shammari: one of two Jordanian terrorists arrested January 21, 1991, in Bangkok, Thailand, as part of an international terrorist network financed and armed via Iraqi diplomatic pouches. He was deported on January 28, 1991, but ultimately flew to Nepal on January 31. He was not charged in Thailand, but he was arrested by Nepalese police. Nepal deported him back to Bangkok on February 3, 1991. On February 7, he was deported to Athens.

Hoseini Shamsodin: Iranian native of Tehran detained by Philippine police on July 6, 1994, for questioning in connection with Abu Sayyaf.

Anar Muhammad Shan: Pakistani arrested September 20, 2007, in Madrid on suspicion of financing international terrorism and belonging to a terrorist organization.

N.V. Shanmugam: alias Jayarajan. Arrested by Indian police on July 17, 1991, and believed to be the principal Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam collaborator of Sivarasan and Subha, two suspects in the May 22, 1991, murder of former Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi. On July 20, 1991, his body was found hanging from a tree in Vedaranyam in Thanjavur District. Police did not rule out homicide. Parliamentarians claimed he had surrendered to police and died in custody.

Shaqir: alias Shankar. Pakistani from Sukkur identified by India as one of five Kashmiri hijackers who took over an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, and diverted it to Kandahar Airport.

Wigwer Shara: one of two Bangladeshis prevented by Philippine immigration authorities from entering the country on April 8, 1995, via an Ethiopian flight from Bangkok. They were suspected of being foreign terrorists.

Raju Sharma: deported by the United Arab Emirates on February 9, 2002, to India, where he was wanted on weapons charges. He was an accomplice of Aftab Ansari, who took credit for the January 22, 2002, 6:30 A.M. incident in which four gunmen on two motorcycles fired AK-47 automatic weapons at the guard post of the American Center, a U.S. cultural center in downtown Calcutta, killing 5 policemen and wounding 20 people.

Al-Haj Abdu Ali Sharqawi: Yemeni arrested in Karachi in February 2002 on suspicion of involvement with al Qaeda. The Washington Post reported in December 2007 that he was held in Jordan for 19 months before being moved to Guantánamo Bay.

Ahmed Darwish Al-Sheihhi: name used by one of three men carrying Omani passports who left the Philippines in haste on September 9, 2001, bound for Bangkok, after police questioned them about twice videotaping the U.S. Embassy. Traces of TNT found in their Manila Bayview Park Hotel room led police to suspect they might have been making a bomb. Philippine authorities said their surnames were similar to three 9/11 hijackers' names.

Bader Darwis Homahhed Al-Sheihhi: name used by one of three men carrying Omani passports who left the Philippines in haste on September 9, 2001, bound for Bangkok, after police questioned them about twice videotaping the U.S. Embassy. Traces of TNT found in their Manila Bayview Park Hotel room led police to suspect they might have been making a bomb. Philippine authorities said their surnames were similar to three 9/11 hijackers' names.

Khaled Abdulla Mohammed Al-Sheihhi: name used by one of three men carrying Omani passports who left the Philippines in haste on September 9, 2001, bound for Bangkok, after police questioned them about twice videotaping the U.S. Embassy. Traces of TNT found in their Manila Bayview Park Hotel room led police to suspect they might have been making a bomb. Philippine authorities said their surnames were similar to three 9/11 hijackers' names.

Mukhtar Ahmed Sheik: charged in December 2008 with fraud and conspiracy. Sheik, a 35-year-old from Jammu and Kashmir, used a false ID to buy 22 SIM (subscriber identity) cards that were used by the terrorists during the November 26–28, 2008, Mumbai attacks. Sheik allegedly was a member of an irregular Jammu and Kashmir police force who was working undercover to penetrate Lashkar-i-Taiba.

Abbas Hussain Sheikh: Indian arrested as an accomplice to two men who were arrested by Indian police on June 14, 2001, for plotting to bomb the U.S. Embassy.

Ghulam Rasool Sheikh: alias Commando. Leader of a northern Sindh bandit gang that, on March 16, 1991, kidnapped two Tokyo Waseda University students, a third student, and their Pakistani guide while canoeing down the River Indus in Pakistan. The group demanded a $500,000 ransom and the release of jailed comrades.

Jelani Abu Sheikh: sold a car to Saleh Ali Saleh Nabhan, who then traded it in for the green Mitsubishi SUV used in the November 28, 2002, suicide attack on the Israeli-owned Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured.

Khaleel Aziz Sheikh: arrested July 20, 2006, in Bihar State as a suspect in the July 11 incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800. He had links with terrorists in Nepal and Bangladesh and unspecified links to Pakistan.

Omar Sheikh: Briton whose release was demanded by five Kashmiri hijackers of an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport. He was freed by India on December 31.

Pervez Nasir Sheikh: one of three Indians sentenced to death on July 18, 2007, by an Indian antiterrorism court for planting several of the 13 bombs that exploded in 1993, killing 257 people in Mumbai, India's financial center.

Victoria Sheppard: Maryland resident sentenced to 10 to 17 years in prison on May 25, 1978, on charges of attempted murder. The Ananda Margi was ordered to pay $13,333 to Jyoti Sarup Vaid, personal secretary to the Indian Embassy chargé d'affaires, who was stabbed by Sheppard on February 7, 1978, in the Philippines.

Shi Yue-bo: hijacked a CAAC B767 flying the Beijing–Xiamen–Jakarta route on August 10, 1993, and diverted it to Taiwan's Taoyuan Airport, where he surrendered. Yue-bo, age 30, was a street vendor of wool from Jungcheng County in Hebei Province; he said he would rather die in a free country than live under communism. Xinhua said he was in debt. On January 31, 1994, he was sentenced in Taiwan to nine years for air piracy.

Rida Shiban: Lebanese national detained for questioning for his involvement with two terrorists who tried to plant a 200-pound bomb at the U.S. Information Service (USIS) Thomas Jefferson Library. The bomb exploded prematurely on January 19, 1991. Shibani had been staying at the Travelers Inn.

Abdesslam Issa Shibani: Libyan intelligence officer linked to the September 19, 1989, bombing of a United Transit Airlines DC10 aircraft over Chad. On March 10, 1999, a French antiterrorism court imposed life in prison on Shibani and five other Libyans in absentia.

Yasuhiro Shibata: Japanese Red Army (JRA) member indicted for hijacking a Japan Airlines plane to North Korea on March 31, 1970. He was arrested May 6, 1988, at his Tokyo apartment after secretly returning to Japan using a false passport. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JRA member was at large.

Fusako Shigenobu: Japanese Red Army (JRA) founder married to hijacker Osamu Maruoka. Shigenobu studied at Meiji University in Tokyo and left for Lebanon with Kinoshita Okudaira in 1971 to set up an international JRA base. Following the September 13, 1974, JRA takeover of the French Embassy in The Hague, she was placed on an international wanted list as an accomplice. In 1975, fellow JRA member Jun Nishikawa told police that Shigenobu's political committee handled relations with Venezuelan terrorist Carlos and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Shigenobu was credited for planning the August 4, 1975, takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, during which five JRA members held 53 hostages during a 79-hour siege. Italian police issued an arrest warrant for Shigenobu as an accomplice of Junzo Okudaira, suspected of setting off a car bomb on April 14, 1988, at a USO building in Naples that killed five people. Japanese police arrested Shigenobu, age 55, on November 8, 2000, as she was leaving an Osaka hotel. On May 30, 2001, she announced the JRA's dissolution and regrouping as a legal organization.

Kyoichi Shimada: Japanese Red Army member associated with Junzo Okudaira. He was deported by Sweden to Japan on September 3, 1975, under Sweden's Anti-Terrorism Act and was arrested at Tokyo Airport. He was charged with forging and using personal documents.

Takaya Shiomi: imprisoned Japanese Red Army (JRA) leader whose freedom was demanded by the JRA hijacker of a Japan Airlines DC8 flying from Osaka to Tokyo on July 15, 1974.

Tsutomu Shirosaki: Japanese Red Army member sentenced to 30 years on February 20, 1998, for an attack on the U.S. Embassy in Indonesia.

A. Shiro: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Tsutomu Shirosaki: freed from jail in response to Japanese Red Army demands during a September 1977 hijacking of a Japan Airlines jet diverted to Bangladesh, Shirosaki fired homemade rockets at the U.S. and Japanese embassies in Jakarta from room 827 in the President Hotel on May 14, 1986. He claimed credit for the Anti-Imperialist International Brigade for the June 9, 1987, car bomb next to the U.S. Embassy and rocket-propelled grenades fired into the embassy compound in Rome. On December 4, 1987, an international arrest warrant was issued. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1990 for attempting to kill U.S. Embassy employees in Jakarta on May 14, 1986, by firing two mortar rounds.

On September 23, 1996, the United States announced the rendering of Shirosaki from Nepal to U.S. shores. His trial opened on October 23, 1997. The prosecution said he was linked to attacks on the U.S., Japanese, and Canadian embassies in Jakarta that occurred within an hour of each other. Shirosaki fired the mortars at the U.S. Embassy from an Indonesian national park 400 yards away. Thirty minutes later, he fired two more rounds at the Japanese Embassy from his hotel room across the street. Shortly thereafter, a car he had rented exploded in front of the Canadian Embassy, slightly injuring several people. On November 14, 1997, a federal jury convicted him on four counts of assault with intent to murder, attempted murder of diplomatic personnel, and attacking embassies. He faced a sentence of 70 years in prison.

Hiroyuki Shiyama: arrested February 22, 1996, by immigration police in Khao San, Thailand, in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting. He reportedly worked for Keijiro Ota, an Aum member who was arrested February 20, 1996.

Shoaib: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Shoaib, in his twenties, was from Narowal, Pakistan.

Mohamed Shoaib: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. He was believed to be a would-be suicide bomber who came to Barcelona from Pakistan between October 2007 and mid-January 2008.

Shobha: Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam woman wanted by Indian police; she was suspected of involvement in the murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister, on May 22, 1991.

Muhammad 'Ali 'Ali al-Shraqawi: according to the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution on August 7, 1995, Shraqawi was one of five terrorists who confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Husayn Ahmad 'Ali Shumayt: member of the Egyptian Islamic Group killed in July 1995 in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. He had fled Egypt for Afghanistan a few years earlier; had moved to Peshawar, Pakistan; and then moved on. He was a prominent member of the group's military wing in Qina. According to the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution on August 7, 1995, he trained in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum and was one of nine gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Imtiaz Siddique: alias of Mansur Hasnain.

Aafia Siddiqui: suspected senior al Qaeda operative wanted for questioning by the FBI regarding terrorism; Siddiqui claimed a March 2, 1972, birth date in Pakistan, studied at Brandeis, and married Mohammed Khan. The Pakistani American earned a doctorate in neuroscience at MIT and worked in the United States before disappearing in Pakistan in 2003. She is five feet four inches tall and weighs 110 pounds. The FBI issued a request on May 25, 2004, for the public's help in finding her, citing reports that al Qaeda had operatives in the United States planning to conduct a major attack during the summer. She is considered armed and dangerous.

Zeeshan Hyder Siddiqui: Briton, age 25, trained in bomb making by al Qaeda and arrested in Pakistan in May 2005. He claimed to have lived in west London and studied economics at London University. British authorities wanted to question him in connection with the multiple bombings of the London subway system on July 7, 2005.

Kader "Tiger" Sidiqui: leader of 15 Bengali guerrillas who took over a Catholic mission and hospital on the northern border of Bangladesh on November 5, 1975, and held an elderly priest hostage into mid-December. Some 35 patients were forced to leave the hospital. Siddiqui was a popular guerrilla leader and warlord in the central Tangail District during the 1971 Bangladesh struggle for independence from Pakistan.

Surinder Sikh: remanded for eight days on January 24, 1990, after Larnaca police discovered a Walther pistol concealed inside a tape recorder in his suitcase during an x-ray check for an Iraqi Airlines flight bound for New Delhi via Baghdad. His passport indicated a Chak Mander, Jalandhar, address.

Alfredo Simbulan: New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines member identified by a detained NPA member in February 1991 as planning to undertake, in cooperation with the Japanese Red Army, the kidnapping of five Japanese executives for ransom.

Sin U-sik: senior student of the Konguk University Philosophy Department and one of seven student members of the Patriotic Youth Commando arrested on May 20, 1988, after jumping the U.S. Embassy fence and throwing six homemade noise bombs. (See also Cho Chong-Chu.)

Abdul Rehman Sindhi: associate of Saud Memon, the Pakistani who owned the property where Daniel Pearl was held, killed, and buried in January 2002. Pakistan included Sindhi on a wanted poster on June 29, 2002.

Amarjit Singh: Sikh priest arrested October 7, 1986, as involved with a gunman who, on October 2, 1986, fired shotgun pellets from a Katta pistol at prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, slightly injuring six persons at Raj Ghat, the site of the cremation of Mahatma Gandhi.

Annand Singh: one of two Sikh extremists who remained at large with his brother after five of their colleagues were arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four of them also planned to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian; blow up an Indian nuclear plant; and destroy other infrastructure. On February 26, 1986, a judicial inquiry in New Delhi concluded that the brothers were involved in planting a suitcase bomb that exploded on June 23, 1985, on Air India Flight 182, a B747 en route from Toronto to Bombay with intermediate stops in Montreal, London, and New Delhi, killing 329 people. He and his brother Lal Singh had booked tickets on the flight and checked luggage but did not board. The brothers were also implicated in the June 20, 1985, explosion when a bomb intended for Air India Flight 301 went off prematurely at Tokyo's Narita International Airport, killing two baggage handlers and injuring four other airport employees. The Singh brothers had attended a mercenary training camp in Birmingham, Alabama, in early 1985.

Atinder Pal Singh: Sikh militant who ran a training camp in Lahore, Pakistan, attended by the four men who assassinated Harchand Singh Longowal in India on August 20, 1985. On August 19, 1989, Singh was charged by the chief metropolitan magistrate in Delhi with conspiracy to kill prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, and wage a war against the state.

Bachittar Singh: terrorist arrested in Punjab, India, on June 27, 1986.

Balbir Singh: bodyguard who had sworn an oath with Kehar Singh at a Sikh temple to assassinate prime minister Indira Gandhi in retribution for her handling of the Golden Temple assault, which left up to 1,000 Sikhs dead in June 1984. She was shot to death by his colleagues on October 31, 1984, in New Delhi. His trial began on May 17, 1985. He was convicted and sentenced to death on January 22, 1986. The conviction was upheld by a higher court on December 3. On April 14, 1987, the Supreme Court granted a stay of execution. On August 3, 1988, India's Supreme Court review panel freed him, saying the evidence was "defective as well as deficient."

Baldev Singh: arrested October 7, 1986, as involved with a gunman who, on October 2, 1986, fired shotgun pellets from a Katta pistol at prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, slightly injuring six people at Raj Ghat, the site of the cremation of Mahatma Gandhi.

Balvinder Singh: terrorist arrested in Punjab, India, on June 27, 1986.

Beant Singh: one of two bodyguards who fatally wounded prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, in New Delhi. Singh was killed by shots fired by Indo-Tibetan border police who held him in a guardroom. The police claimed he had tried to grab weapons.

Daleep Singh: one of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. On January 20, 1986, Singh was sentenced to death in Lahore but was given a stay of execution. He was identified as a member of the outlawed All-India Sikh Student Federation and had trained in Pakistani commando camps.

Dara Singh: Hindu militant arrested February 1, 2000, while negotiating to buy a gun. He was suspected in the January 23, 1999, torching of a car in the remote Kheonjar District, killing an Australian-born Baptist missionary and his two sons.

Darshan Singh: one of four assassins of Harchand Singh Longowal, leader of the moderate Akali Dal party, during an August 20, 1985, political rally in Sherpur village in Punjab, India. Singh was arrested two days later. Jarnail Khalsa took credit.

Dilip Singh: professor charged on August 19, 1989, by the chief metropolitan magistrate in Delhi with conspiracy to kill prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, and wage war against the state.

Gajendra Singh: one of five Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. Pakistani authorities raided the plane and freed the passengers. India requested extradition. On April 24, 1985, the accused pleaded not guilty in Lahore.

Ganesh Duth Singh: one of two youths from the Bihar township of Hajipur, India, arrested September 21, 1981, for participating in an Ananda Marg plot to assassinate prime minister Indira Gandhi with hand grenades and small arms ammunition.

Gian Singh: one of four assassins of Harchand Singh Longowal, leader of the moderate Akali Dal party, during an August 20, 1985, political rally in Sherpur village in Punjab, India. Singh was captured at the scene. Jarnail Khalsa took credit.

Gurdeep Singh: one of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. On January 20, 1986, Singh was convicted and given life in prison in Lahore.

Hari Singh: son of Ganeshlal of Jhajhar in Haryana, India, and a lone Hindu who, on March 27, 1993, hijacked Indian Airlines Flight IC-439 as it was taking off on the Delhi-Hyderabad-Madras route. He was protesting against communal violence and corrupt politics in India and wanted to go to Lahore, Pakistan. The flight was denied landing permission so went on to Amritsar, India, where he demanded 40 days of political asylum in Pakistan and permission to hold a news conference in Islamabad. He surrendered at the airport.

Harjinder Singh: one of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. On January 20, 1986, Singh was sentenced to death in Lahore but was given a stay of execution. He was identified as a member of the outlawed All-India Sikh Student Federation and had trained in Pakistan commando camps. On June 12, the Press Trust of India reported police and security forces in New Delhi were on alert for a six-member Sikh terrorist squad led by Harjinder and Mathura Singh.

Harminder Singh: one of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. He was identified as a member of the outlawed All-India Sikh Student Federation and trained in Pakistan commando camps. He apparently was acquitted.

Harvinder Singh: one of four assassins of Harchand Singh Longowal, leader of the moderate Akali Dal party, during an August 20, 1985, political rally in Sherpur village in Punjab, India. Singh was injured and died from his wounds. Jarnail Khalsa took credit.

Joginder Singh: alias of Mehmud Ali Agca

Kameshwar Prasad Singh: one of two youths from the Bihar township of Hajipur, India, arrested September 21, 1981, for participating in an Ananda Marg plot to assassinate prime minister Indira Gandhi with hand grenades and small arms ammunition.

Karamjit Singh: alias Manmohan Desai. Fired shotgun pellets from a Katta pistol at prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on October 2, 1986, slightly injuring six people at Raj Ghat, the site of the cremation of Mahatma Gandhi.

Karan Singh: one of five Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. Pakistani authorities raided the plane and freed the passengers. India requested extradition. On April 24, 1985, the accused pleaded not guilty in Lahore.

Kehar Singh: uncle of Beant Singh who assassinated prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, in New Delhi. Kehar had sworn an oath with Balbir Singh at a Sikh temple to assassinate Gandhi in retribution for her handling of the Golden Temple assault, which left 1,000 Sikhs dead in June 1984. He was convicted and sentenced to death on January 22, 1986. He was given three stays of execution during higher court reviews. On January 6, 1989, he was hanged in Tihar Central Jail in Delhi.

Lal Singh: one of two Sikh extremists who remained at large with his brother after five Indian Sikh extremists were arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. (See also Annand Singh.)

Mathura Singh: on June 12, 1986, the Press Trust of India reported police and security forces in New Delhi were on alert for a six-member Sikh terrorist squad led by Mathura and Harjinder Singh.

Museebad Singh: Sikh who hijacked an Air India B737 flying from Bombay to New Delhi on August 20, 1982, and demanded to go to Lahore, Pakistan, where it was denied landing permission. The plane landed at Amritsar, India. Singh demanded $85,000 in West German marks, direct negotiations in Amritsar with prime minister Indira Gandhi, installation of a radio transmitter at the Golden Temple, and release of imprisoned Sikh militants. Police shot and killed him.

Nirmal Singh: one of four assassins of Harchand Singh Longowal, leader of the moderate Akali Dal party, during an August 20, 1985, political rally in Sherpur village in Punjab, India. Singh was arrested two days later. Jarnail Khalsa took credit.

Prem Singh: arrested October 7, 1986, as involved with a gunman who, on October 2, 1986, fired shotgun pellets from a Katta pistol at prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, slightly injuring six people at Raj Ghat, the site of the cremation of Mahatma Gandhi.

Rajinder Singh: one of five Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. Pakistani authorities raided the plane and freed the passengers. India requested extradition. On April 24, 1985, the accused pleaded not guilty in Lahore.

Ramraja Prasad Singh: leader of the Janawadi Morcha (United Front), a left-wing Nepalese group that in 1985 maintained a guerrilla training camp in Gorakhpur, India, 49 miles from the Nepalese border. He was a former legislator accused of orchestrating a June 1985 bombing campaign in Katmandu.

Ravinder Singh: one of the July 5, 1984, hijackers of an Indian Airlines Airbus A300 en route from Srinagar, Kashmir, to New Delhi and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. India requested extradition. On January 20, 1986, Singh was convicted and given life in prison in Lahore.

Satwant Singh: one of two bodyguards who shot to death prime minister Indira Gandhi in New Delhi on October 31, 1984. Satwant was critically wounded by four shots fired by Indo-Tibetan border police who held him in a guardroom. The guards said the detainees tried to grab some weapons. Satwant was paralyzed from the waist down and later confessed. He was convicted and sentenced to death on January 22, 1986. He was given three stays of execution during higher court reviews. On January 6, 1989, he was hanged in Tihar Central Jail in Delhi.

Sukhdeo Singh: terrorist arrested in Punjab, India, on June 27, 1986.

Sukhminder Singh: Sikh arrested by the FBI at a gas station in Aberdeen, New Jersey, on May 11, 1987, in connection with the August 10, 1986, assassination in Pune, India, of Gen. A. S. Vaidya, retired commander of the Indian Army, who had been commander in chief when the Indian Army stormed the Golden Temple in Armtisar in June 1984. Singh was wanted by the Indian government on conspiracy charges regarding the murder.

Sukhvinder Singh: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four also planned to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian; blow up an Indian nuclear plant; and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges. The judge refused bail.

Talwinder Singh: self-proclaimed terrorist released from a West German prison on July 26, 1984. More than 75 members of the Indian Parliament protested the release.

Tasbin Singh: one of five Dal Khala hijackers of an Air India B737 flying from Delhi to Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan. Pakistani authorities raided the plane and freed the passengers. India requested extradition. On April 24, 1985, the accused pleaded not guilty in Lahore.

Virender Singh: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 1985 visit to the United States. Four also planned to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian; blow up an Indian nuclear plant; and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges. The judge refused bail.

Rajesh Singhal: arrested April 9, 1980, for carrying a loaded pistol in his pants in an attempt to hijack the New Delhi–Bombay Indian Airlines flight to Karachi.

Parlindungan Siregar: Indonesian living in Spain who helped arrange for several hundred al Qaeda operatives from Europe to travel to Indonesia for training, according to Spanish authorities. He was linked in March 2002 to Agus Dwikarna. He was mentioned in a Spanish court indictment. Siregar left Indonesia in early 1989 to study aeronautical engineering at Madrid Polytechnic. He was affiliated with the Laskar Jihad, the Muslim militia conducting operations in the Moluccas to evict Christians. Siregar's phone number was in the address books of two of the eight al Qaeda suspects arrested in Spain in November 2001. In early August 2005, Indonesian authorities detained him. He was connected with Imad Edin Barakat Yarkas, who was indicted with Siregar in September 2003 by a Spanish judge for providing logistic support to al Qaeda in Europe and for providing false documents, stolen credit cards, and bank transfers. The United States listed him as a Specially Designated Global Terrorist along with nine other Jemaah Islamiyah members.

Jose Maria Sison: imprisoned communist leader whose release was demanded by the New People's Army (NPA) kidnappers of Tomas Manotoc, a professional basketball coach, top amateur golfer, and purported son-in-law of Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, on December 29, 1981. NPA denied involvement, saying it was a put-up job by Marcos.

Sison was identified in April 1989 as the exiled chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines in Denmark. On April 3, 1993, the Dutch rejected the request for asylum by the founder of the Philippine Communist Party. Sison had been arrested in 1977 by the Marcos government but was released in 1986 after Corazon Aquino's election.

Walter Sisulu: former general secretary of the African National Congress of South Africa sentenced to life in prison in 1964. On October 15, 1989, South African president Frederik W. de Klerk gave Sisulu unconditional release from Soweto's Diepkloof Prison.

Sivarasan: leader of the intelligence wing of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in 1991. On June 16, 1991, Indian police announced that he had manufactured the bomb belt that killed former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi on May 22, 1991. Police announced a $50,000 reward for his capture. On August 20, 1991, during a police raid on his hideout in Konanakunte village, he committed suicide.

Michael Siyolo: one of two senior members of the South African Western Cape Pan Africanist Congress arrested by South African police on January 4, 1994, and held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act in connection with the December 30, 1993, attack on the Heidelberg Pub and Restaurant Tavern in Station Road, Observatory, Cape Town. The attack killed four and injured seven.

Mohamedou Ould Slahi: Mauritanian citizen reportedly a brother-in-law of a lieutenant of Osama bin Laden—Khaled Shanquiti, alias “The Mauritanian”—Slahi was involved in the bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Slahi is also related through marriage to bin Laden associate Mahfouz Ould Walid, aka Abu Hafs, whose assets were ordered frozen by President Bush. Investigators thought Slahi may have been directly involved in the 9/11 attack.

Slahi was arrested January 26, 2000, after leaving Senegal by the Bureau of Mauritanian Security in conjunction with the Algerian terrorist bomb plot against the United States. Despite Slahi's name on an Interpol international watch list, Senegal appeared unwilling to hold him without specific charges. Slahi had regular communication with a construction company in Khartoum, Sudan, that was owned by bin Laden and used as a front for al Qaeda. Slahi worked closely with Mokhtar Harouari, an Algerian charged with involvement in the logistics of the plot. Authorities were not sure whether he was the mastermind or a messenger in the plot. The United States was preparing an extradition request when Mauritania freed Slahi on February 20.

On September 29, Mauritanian police arrested the former student of electrical engineering at Gerhard-Mercator University in Duisburg, Germany. He had lived in Germany from the mid-1990s to September 1999, during which time he twice visited bin Laden camps in Afghanistan. In 1999, Slahi moved to Canada, where he visited a Montreal mosque frequented by Islamic radicals plotting the millennium attacks in the United States. They included Ahmed Ressam. Slahi may have activated the Canadian cell.

Slahi was rearrested in Nouakchott, Mauritania, on November 2001 on suspicion of involvement with al Qaeda. The Washington Post said he was held for eight months in Jordan. The Post claimed that as of December 2007, he was free in Mauritania.

Joe Slovo: general secretary of the South African Communist Party who, on April 21, 1987, resigned in Zambia as chief of staff of the Umkhonto We Sizwe, the military wing of the African National Congress of South Africa.

Anthony Michael Smith: arrested in connection with the January 11, 1988, car bombing of the home of three members of the African National Congress of South Africa in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo.

Andrew Smulian: arrested March 6, 2008, with Russian arms trafficker Viktor Bout in a sting in Bangkok, Thailand. They were charged in the United States with conspiracy to provide material support to a foreign terrorist organization. Federal prosecutors requested extradition. The duo was picked up in a sting in which Drug Enforcement Administration undercover agents posed as Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia rebels.

Helmi Soedirdja: Indonesian, age 33, arrested September 29, 2006, and held in federal custody in Guam in connection with an attempt to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. He was believed to be an arms broker looking to buy night goggles and holographic weapons for resale.

Hirofumi Sogame: one of three Chukaku-ha (Middle Core Faction) radicals arrested October 13, 1987, for firing five handmade rockets at the Akasaka Palace during the opening ceremonies for the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo on May 4, 1986. He was already on trial for making bombs in Iwate Prefecture during October 1986.

Mohammed Sohail: arrested by Pakistani police on March 2, 2005, Sohail was wanted in the January 23, 2002, kidnapping and murder of Daniel Pearl and had already been sentenced to death in absentia for a 2002 hotel bombing that killed 11 French engineers and others. During his arrest, he and five others fired on police at a checkpoint. The five others escaped; Sohail fell off a motorcycle and was captured. Police believe he shot the video of Pearl's death.

Abu Solaiman: variant of Abu Suleiman.

Mateias Solomon: one of three Ethiopians who, on November 23, 1996, hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Flight ET961, a B767 carrying 163 passengers and 12 crew, after takeoff from Addis Ababa. The plane crashed into the Indian Ocean, killing 127 people, most of them Africans and Asians. Authorities were unable to determine the motives of Alamayhu Bekele, Mateias Solomon, and Sultan Hussein, who did not belong to any political party. (See also Alamayhu Bekele.)

Song Kap-Sok: chairman of the National Alliance of Student Representatives alleged to have ordered the radical students who were arrested on October 18, 1990, as they tried to seize the U.S. Embassy in South Korea to protest against the Uruguay Round negotiations. They were armed with 4 homemade bombs, 20 firebombs, and 7 metal clubs.

Adinan Songkoewala: alias Mut. Thai Muslim arrested June 28, 1989, outside the Thai Education Ministry and charged with shooting to death Salah al-Maliki, the third secretary at the Saudi Embassy in Bangkok, on January 4, 1989. Songkoewala admitted he was going to attack an official of the ministry when arrested but denied killing al-Maliki. He was found with a paper-wrapped steel pipe he had intended to use. Prosecution witnesses identified him as the gunman. On May 27, 1994, the Thai Supreme Court acquitted him, saying that the witnesses could not remember sufficient details to justify a conviction.

Sonny: name used by a spokesperson for the New People's Army (NPA) operational command for the Manila-Rizal provincial region who, on December 17, 1987, warned that the NPA had targeted for assassination United States Agency for International Development (USAID) officials, U.S. corporate executives, U.S. Embassy military attachés, and 28 American officers and enlisted men detailed with the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group for Manila.

Soosai: head of the "Sea Tiger" naval wing of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam at the time of the group's dissolution on May 18, 2009, when he was killed in a gun battle with government troops.

Christiaan Dewet Spies: South African living in New York arrested in Manhattan on March 14, 2005, after finalizing plans to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian Republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The smuggling ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, and Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; 5 were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices; 13 were charged with weapons trafficking. Spies faced 30 years in prison.

Barend Hendrik Strydom: former policeman who shot to death 3 blacks and injured 17 others in central Pretoria on November 15, 1988. Police were investigating whether Strydom was the Afrikaans speaker who the previous day had claimed to be the leader of the White Wolves and who had threatened to assassinate state president P.W. Botha if he released Nelson Mandela.

James Stubbs: alias Jamil Daud Mujahid. Arrested with his brother Michael Ray Stubbs in the Philippines on December 13, 2003, for possible links to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and Abu Sayyaf. James is on a U.S. watch list for al Qaeda links. Despite tourist visas, documents indicated the brothers were soliciting funds for the construction of mosques and Muslim schools. James had left his job as a teacher in California to study Arabic in Sudan. In May, he had met with charity groups believed to be al Qaeda fronts. On December 30, the government said it would deport the brothers to the United States.

Michael Ray Stubbs: alias Jamil Daud Mujahid. Arrested with his brother James Stubbs in the Philippines on December 13, 2003, for possible links to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and Abu Sayyaf. Until 2000, Michael had worked as a heating and air conditioning technician for 10 years at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory near San Francisco. The laboratory is a state-run, high-security nuclear and biological research facility. Despite tourist visas, documents indicated the brothers were soliciting funds for the construction of mosques and Muslim schools. On December 30, the government said it would deport the brothers to the United States.

Fernando Suangco: New People's Army of the Philippines member detained at a local military camp in 1988.

Jahi Subanidi: Indonesian, age 69, arrested September 29, 2006, by the FBI for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorney's Office announced charges of conspiracy to export weapons and munitions and conspiracy to launder money with others with LTTE links.

Prasad Subedi: one of three hijackers led by a leader of a Nepalese student organization connected with the Nepalese Communist Party who took over a Royal Nepalese Airlines Twin Otter on a domestic flight from Biratnagar to Katmandu on June 10, 1973, and diverted it to Forbesganj, India. The plane was carrying a Nepal State Bank shipment of three million Indian rupees ($400,000), which the group seized. The trio escaped into the jungle on a waiting jeep.

Subha: suspect, age 22, in the May 22, 1991, murder of former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). On August 20, during a police raid on a hideout in Konanakunte village, she committed suicide by swallowing a cyanide capsule. The Sri Lankan was an accomplice of LTTE intelligence chief Sivarasan.

Montasher Sudang: Moro Islamic Liberation Front member, age 23, from North Cotabato who, on March 4, 2003, planted a backpack bomb 50 yards from the main terminal of Davao Airport. The bomb exploded prematurely, killing him, an American missionary—Reverend William P. Hyde, a Davao resident—and 19 others and wounding 149. The bomb had been placed in an open-air shelter where a crowd was welcoming arriving passengers from a Cebu Pacific Air flight from Manila.

Abu Taha al-Sudani: explosives expert believed killed on January 8, 2007, when the United States conducted an air strike against al Qaeda terrorists on Badmadow Island off southern Somalia.

Yazid Sufaat: retired Malaysian ex-army captain and scientist known as the "CEO of anthrax," Sufaat was believed to have provided support to the 9/11 hijackers. Sufaat was arrested in Malaysia in 2001. He was believed to have met 9/11 hijackers Khalid Almihdar and Nawaf Alhamzi in January 2000. On March 20, 2003, Malaysian police broke up a plot by an al Qaeda-affiliated group when the police confiscated four tons of ammonium nitrate (a fertilizer that can be used in explosives) that Jemaah Islamiyah planned to use to target U.S. and other Western embassies in Singapore. The cache was found buried at a plantation near Muar. Sufaat had purchased the chemical in 2000.

Taketoshi Suga: one of three Chukaku-ha (Middle Core Faction) radicals arrested October 13, 1987, for firing five handmade rockets at the Akasaka Palace during the opening ceremonies for the seven-nation economic summit in Tokyo on May 4, 1986. He was already on trial for making bombs in Iwate Prefecture during October 1986.

Sugan: alias of Nixon.

Muhammad Abdallah Slih Sughayr: one of three Saudis suspected of financing Abu Sayyaf whose U.S. assets were blocked on October 10, 2007, by the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

Subur Sugiarto: henchman of Noordin Top, believed to be a senior Malaysian member of the al Qaeda–linked Jemaah Islamiyah. Sugiarto was arrested by Indonesian police on January 19, 2006.

Shigeo Sugimoto: chauffeur of Aum Shin Rikyo leader Shoko Asahara.

Jiro Sugisaki: alias of Takeshi Okudeira; variant Takeshi Okidoro.

Tommy Suharto: alias Hutomo Mandala Putra. Youngest son of former president Suharto, Tommy was ordered arrested on September 15, 2000, at age 38, by Indonesian president Abdurrahman Wahid in connection with a recent bombing campaign. On September 13, 2000, a car bomb had exploded in a garage under the Jakarta stock exchange, killing 15 and injuring 30.

K. Saman Sujeeva: arrested May 4, 1993, by Sri Lankan police on suspicion of being an associate of the suicide bomber who rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May 1, 1993, May Day parade in Colombo, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others. The bomber was believed to have been running a grocery store for Sujeeva.

Goda Sukpa: lieutenant in the Nationalist and Integrationist Front in the Ituri region of the Congo who was placed under house arrest in Kinshasa's Grand Hotel on February 27, 2005, in connection with the February 24, 2005, shooting death of nine Bangladeshi soldiers serving as part of the UN peacekeeping force near Kafe in the northeast.

Abu Sulaiman: alias Jainal Antel Sali Jr. Mastermind, age 42, of the May 27, 2001, Abu Sayyaf kidnapping of missionaries Martin and Garcia Burnham from Wichita, Kansas; tourist Guillermo Sobero of Corona, California; and 17 Filipinos. On January 16, 2007, he died in a gun battle with Philippine Army Special Forces during a raid on Jolo Island. He had also claimed credit for the 2004 bombing of a ferry that killed 116 people. The United States had offered five million dollars for his capture. The Zamboanga native was a civil engineer.

Abu Suleiman: variant Abu Solaiman. Leader of the Abu Sayyaf gunmen who, on May 27, 2001, overran a resort at Honda Bay in Palawan, Philippines, and took 20 tourists hostage. On May 29, 2002, the United States announced a five-million-dollar reward for his capture. He was killed in January 2007.

Aris Sumarsono: true name of Zulkarnaen.

Shahid Hussain Sumro: one of four Pakistani members of the Pakistan People's Party who, on March 26, 1991, hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur–Singapore route. After nine hours of negotiations, the Singapore Army stormed the plane and killed the hijackers, who had threatened violence against the passengers if their demands were not met in five minutes.

Sun Zhiping: one of five mainland Chinese criminals who, on July 25, 1982, tried to hijack a China Civil Aviation airliner but were foiled by the passengers and crew. One of the criminals was killed and the other four arrested.

Alfredo Sunga: alias Comrade Joel. Philippine New People's Army (NPA) Edilberto Canoy Brigade commander identified by the self-proclaimed shooter, Juanito Itaas, as involved in the April 21, 1989, NPA sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Sunga was arrested September 1, 1989.

Donald Thomas Surratt: one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a 42-count federal indictment on June 25, 2003, for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Surratt was accused of instructing the others in combat tactics based upon his U.S. military experience. On August 22, Surratt pleaded guilty to conspiracy and illegal transportation of a firearm in interstate commerce. By August 25, he had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and gun charges. On November 7, 2003, he received less than four years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Mujib Susukan: Abu Sayyaf faction leader who, on February 18, 2003, died of his wounds following a gun battle with government troops on Jolo Island. His capture or death carried a $92,500 bounty.

Shaykh Ahmad Salim Suwaydan: variant Sheikh Ahmed Salim Swedan; aliases Sheikh Ahmad Salem Suweidan, Sheikh Ahmed Salem Swedan, Sheikh Swedan, Sheikh Bahamadi, Ahmed Ally, Bahamad, Sheikh Bahamad, Ahmed the Tall, Admadal-Tawil. Kenyan indicted December 16, 1998, in the Southern District of New York for his involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania; conspiring to kill U.S. nationals; murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States; conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside of the United States; and an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. He was believed to have brought the vehicles, including the 1987 Nissan Atlas truck that carried the bomb, as well as the oxygen and acetylene tanks used in the Dar es Salaam attack. The Rewards for Justice Program offers five million dollars for his apprehension. He is between five feet eight inches and six feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He claims April 9, 1960, or April 9, 1969, birth dates in Mombasa, Kenya.

Fariduzzaman Swapan: accountant of the banned Jamaat ul-Mujaheddin Bangladesh, which wants to establish sharia law and claims to have 10,000 members. He was arrested in Dhaka, Bangladesh, in December 2005.

Sheikh Ahmed Salim Swedan: killed by a U.S. Predator Hellfire missile strike on January 1, 2009, against a building being used for explosives training near Karikot, South Waziristan Province. He was the deputy of Fahid Mohammed Ally Msalam (alias Usama al-Kini), al Qaeda’s chief of operations in Pakistan, who died in the same missile attack. Swedan was believed to have purchased a truck used in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He was indicted in U.S. federal court in 1998. There had been a five-million-dollar bounty for his capture.

Ahmed Sy: confessed during preliminary investigations to the December 8, 1988, Liberation Front of the Senegalese People bombing of a car belonging to the Ministry of Industrial Development but denied the charges before the investigating judge. On January 10, 1989, he was ordered detained.

T

---

T.T.: alias Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto; variant Dogwer Wilfredo Reiz Fukumoto. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army alleged by La Mañana on April 1, 1995, to have entered Uruguay using false passports. The paper speculated that they planned to carry out a bombing in neighboring Brazil or Argentina. T.T. was arrested June 12, 1995, in Ciudad del Este, the capital of Alto Parafía Department, Paraguay. The Japanese Embassy said his true name was Kazuo Toshira. He traveled on a Peruvian passport.

Roberto D. Tacbad: aliases Roy, Nikki, Kim. One of two Philippine New People's Army rebels arrested May 2, 1992, in a posh subdivision in Angeles City. Tacbad, chief of the Central Luzon regional committee and chief of its regional military department, had a 500,000-peso reward for his capture. Tacbad was responsible for the expansion of the communist movement in Central Luzon, particularly the massive recruitment of rebels from peasant groups in the early 1980s. (See also Manuel V. Quizon.)

Misrak Tachyibelu: one of three former Ethiopian security agents and the only woman among the November 25, 1991, hijackers of Ethiopian Airlines Flight 616, a B737 flying from Addis Ababa to Dire Dawa and diverted to Djibouti. The three were taken into custody by the Djibouti government. They had worked for the security and investigation agency of the former government. Ethiopia called the trio criminals who should be brought to justice.

Jaime Tadeo: diskettes and documents seized from Tadeo's office on July 9, 1989, led the military to begin a manhunt for nine new suspects in connection with the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) April 21, 1989, sparrow assassination of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters. Several NPA officers frequented Tadeo's office. He was the chairman of the Farmers Movement of the Philippines (KMP).

Abraham Tafesse: one of two leaders in December 1986 of the Sudan-based Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Army, which had kidnapped foreigners that year.

Tafsir: arrested November 10, 2002, by Indonesian police who said he had driven bomber Amrozi in his Mitsubishi L-300 van to Bali, where Amrozi set off two bombs at nightclubs on October 12, 2002, killing 202.

Taha Tagapaitedi: alias Commander Taha. One of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988.

Raja Tahir: suicide bomber, age 23, from Karachi who, on March 2, 2006, crashed a stolen 2005 Toyota Corolla car bomb into a vehicle carrying U.S. diplomat David Foy near the U.S. Consulate in Karachi, killing Foy, his Pakistani driver, a Pakistani paramilitary guard, and an unidentified Pakistani woman. Another 52 people were injured. The bomb went off in the parking lot of the Marriott Hotel, 20 yards from the consulate gate, destroying 10 cars. Police believe the terrorist was killed, although his body was not recovered. He was linked with the banned Pakistani Jaish-i-Muhammad group.

Tai Hua-kuang: one of three members of the People's Liberation Front arrested in Taiwan November 5, 1977, for sending threatening letters to foreign-owned factories and businesses in January, saying the group would take violent measures unless they withdrew by June. Tai Hua-kuang was from Tsanghsien, Hebei Province.

Sami Hussin Taiman: one of two hijackers of a British Airways flight from Bombay to London on March 3, 1974. The duo diverted the plane after its Beirut stopover and demanded to fly to Athens, where they intended to demand the release of Black September terrorists in the Athens Airport attack on August 5. Greece denied landing permission, so the plane flew to Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport. The terrorists allowed everyone to leave before torching the plane. The two were captured by police. They had claimed membership in the Palestine Liberation army, but later the Organization of Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine claimed credit. On June 6, a Dutch court convicted them on charges of air piracy and arms violations and sentenced them to five years. They were released on November 24 and were flown to Tunis as part of an agreement reached with four hijackers of a British Airways plane in Dubai on November 22. On December 7, the two terrorists went to Libya with the four hijackers who had demanded their release and five other terrorists released from Egypt. Taiman apparently was given his freedom in Libya.

Arif Tajjak: one of two accomplices of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf arrested in March 1995 by Karachi, Pakistan, police. He was implicated by Yusuf associate Ibrahim Rasul in terrorist activities in Karachi.

Katsuya Takahashi: a warrant was issued on December 2, 1995, for his involvement in the VX gas murder of Osaka businessman Tadahito Hamaguchi on December 12, 1994. Takahashi remained at large. He was also wanted for the March 20, 1995, sarin nerve agent attack on the Tokyo subway system. On February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for him in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

K. Takahiro: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka and diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

O. Takeshi: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka and diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Takahashi Taketomo: former assistant professor at Tokyo's Rikkyo University who headed the Japanese Red Army (JRA) in Paris in 1974. On July 20, 1977, he was arrested by Japanese police in Tokyo after being deported by Sweden, where he was arrested while carrying an Indonesian passport in Stockholm. He was charged with using a forged passport. He was believed to be in charge of JRA research and arms procurement.

Mohamad Talao: named on March 21, 1994, as one of four suspects in the March 5, 1994, discovery of a truck loaded with a ton of explosives in Thailand. Police believed the suspects planned assassination attempts against senior members of the U.S., Israeli, Pakistani, and other embassies and that the truck bomb was to be used against the Israeli Embassy.

Commander Usman Kaliko Talicob: one of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988.

Mohammad Tamhidi: one of three suspected members of an Iranian hit squad who were released on April 6, 1984, by the Philippine Commission on Immigration and Deportation in spite of internal protests that the trio represented a threat to security. There were charges of a pay-off. Some suspected them of involvement in the disappearance of nine pro-Shah Iranian students on August 16, 1983.

S. P. Tamilselvan: Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) political chief as of August 2005, he was killed on November 2, 2007, in a government air strike of a secret LTTE communications center.

Sami Houssin Tamimah: variant Sami Hussin Taiman. Participant in the March 3, 1974, hijacking of a British Airways flight from Bombay to London. His release was demanded on October 26, 1974, when two Arab terrorists and two Dutch criminals took 22 hostages at the prison chapel at Scheveningen, Netherlands. Authorities promised a reduced sentence if he refused the terrorists' demands. He subsequently aided in the negotiations, talking four times with his former compatriot, Adnan Ahmed Nuri. Tamimah was released as a result of demands made by Arab Nationalist Youth Organization for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers who seized a British Airways VC10 in Dubai on November 21, 1974.

Takamaro Tamiya: leader, age 27, of a group of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. Tamiya was wanted on explosives charges. On September 12, 1980, he told Motofumi Makieda, chairman of the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan, that the hijackers wished to return to Japan. On October 8, 1980, the nine hijackers said they would like to return to Japan if they would not be imprisoned. The government refused to offer such a deal and conservative Japanese Dietmen considered requesting extradition. In an interview with Kyodo, Tamiya apologized to the Japanese people. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JURA member was at large. He died in 1995.

In 2002, the Washington Post reported that he had been involved in efforts to lure Japanese, particularly women, to North Korea.

Le Duc Tan: South Vietnamese Army major, age 34, who hijacked an Air Vietnam B727 flying from Da Nang to Saigon on September 14, 1974. He demanded to be flown to North Vietnam. The pilot tried to land at Phan Rang to refuel but the hijacker pulled the pins on his two hand grenades. The plane crashed, killing all 71 on board.

Yoshimi Tanaka: aliases Shoji Hayashi, Hayashi Kasinori, Kim Il Su. One of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JURA member was at large. On March 24, 1996, Cambodian police arrested Tanaka on the border for possession of several million dollars (face value) of counterfeit U.S. currency. Authorities handed him over to Thai police in Phattaya. He had attempted to cross the border from Vietnam in a North Korean Embassy Mercedes and was carrying a North Korean diplomatic passport. Three other North Korean diplomats attempted to bribe a policeman with $50,000 to let them pass through the checkpoints. Warrants had been issued on January 2, 1996, for Tanaka and four Thai men after they used five counterfeit U.S. $100 bills to buy film from a photo shop in Nong Preu village in North Phattaya. Thai police had earlier arrested the four Thais and seized sophisticated counterfeiting equipment from a home in Ang Thong Province. They claimed Tanaka had hired them to produce the counterfeit notes.

He was believed to have worked with Somchai Nanthasan and Prasong Pholthiphet to forge the $100 bills. Police believed Tanaka was aided in laundering the bills by Kodama International Trading, which was run by Tang Cheang Tong (alias Shogo Kodama), a Japanese citizen of Khmer-Chinese origin.

The United States, South Korea, and Japan requested extradition from Thailand. Tanaka was extradited on March 26, 1996, to face forgery charges. He was indicted April 11, 1996, and denied involvement. He was scheduled for trial in June 1996.

Yoshizo Tanaka: member, age 25, of a group of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Bienvenido Tantoco: Philippines ambassador to the Vatican during the Marcos regime arrested August 22, 1986, by Italian antiterrorist police who found an arms cache in his residence. On September 26, 1986, he was sentenced to three years.

Shahzad Tanweer: placed a bomb on the floor of a Circle Line Underground train in London carrying 700 passengers; the bomb went off on July 7, 2005, at 8:51 A.M., 100 yards from the Liverpool Street Station, killing 7 and wounding 100. The bomber, age 22, was the son of the Pakistani owner of a Leeds fish-and-chips shop and a good friend of fellow bomber Hasib Hussain. Tanweer was a student of physical education at Leeds Metropolitan University and lived in Leeds' Beeston District. Pakistani authorities said Tanweer had visited Pakistan in 2004 and had met with Osama Nazir, who was later arrested and charged with a 2002 grenade attack on an Islamabad church in which five people, including two Americans, were killed. Tanweer also spent several days at a madrassa near Lahore that had ties to Lashkar-i-Taiba.

Mustaq Tarani: one of three Indians sentenced to death on July 18, 2007, by an Indian antiterrorism court for planting several of the 13 bombs that exploded in 1993, killing 257 people in Mumbai, India's financial center.

Mohamed Tarik: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Salman Tariki: variant Sulman Taraqi. Libyan arrested September 10, 1986, in Pakistan in connection with the hijacking by the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God, Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi Airport on September 5, 1986. The hijackers threw grenades and fired machine guns at the passengers, killing 22 and injuring 100. Police believed Tariki was the mastermind of the attack. He led authorities to a cache of East European weapons on the coast near Karachi.

Azam Tariq: former leader of the outlawed Sunni group Sipah-e-Sahaba (Guardians of the Friends of the Prophet) and a member of Pakistan's Parliament who, on October 6, 2003, was shot to death by gunmen. Tariq's driver and three bodyguards also died as they drove on the outskirts of Islamabad. His group had strong ties to the Taliban.

Seiji Tashita: member, age 25, of Aum Shin Rikyo arrested by Japanese police on March 31, 1995, for possessing illegal explosives—a 500-cc bottle of inflammable solid sodium—in a van stationed in Fujinomiya, Shizuoka Prefecture.

Ka Tatay: alias of Noel Etabag.

Charles Taylor: leader of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia, which kidnapped four American missionaries of the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Kakata and several foreign doctors near the border in May 1990. The missionaries were taken to the Ivory Coast border and released June 1990. Taylor went on to become head of Liberia.

Vuyo Tekani: arrested July 29, 1993, by South African police in connection with the July 25, 1993, attack by five black gunmen who burst into the St. James Church of England in Kenilworth, a Cape Town suburb, firing AK-47 and R5 rifles and throwing two hand grenades at the congregation, killing 12 and wounding 56. Tekani was held under Section 29 of the Internal Security Act. His twin brother said he was a member of the Pan Africanist Congress. He was arrested at Mchunu Primary School in Gugulethu. He had not reported to work the day after the massacre and had not shown up for classes for two weeks prior to the shooting.

Silvester Tendean: store owner accused of selling the chemicals used in the bombing of two Bali nightclubs on October 12, 2002, that killed 202. His trial began February 21, 2003.

Eugene Terreblanche: leader of the 1990's South African neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement suspected of numerous terrorist attacks.

Lulseged Tesfa: Ethiopian who was one of two would-be hijackers of National Airlines 496, a B727 flying from Philadelphia to New York City on July 12, 1972. The two used a pistol and a sawed-off shotgun to force the pilot to return to Philadelphia, where they demanded $600,000 and three parachutes. They released the passengers. National Airlines paid $501,600. The plane flew on to Lake Jackson, Texas, where the pilots swerved the plane, blowing the tires. The hijackers surrendered. Tesfa was sentenced to 60 years for air piracy on December 2, 1974.

Hagos Tesfai: Eritrean student who died when a bomb he was preparing in his room in Rome exploded on June 18, 1969. Leaflets found in the room announced an impending attack by the Eritrean Liberation Front.

Jafar Umar Thalib: commander of Lashkar-i-Taiba arrested by Indonesian police on May 4, 2002, in the East Java capital of Surabaya. He was wanted for questioning concerning the previous weekend's violence in Ambon that had killed a dozen people. Lashkar wants to evict Christians and establish sharia Islamic law in the Moluccas, formerly the Spice Islands. Thalib acknowledged meeting Osama bin Laden in 1987. On July 25, he was released from custody to await trial on charges of inciting religious violence by calling on his followers to ignore a February peace deal between Muslims and Christians. Two days after a March speech, masked men attacked a Christian village in Ambon, killing 13 people. While in prison, he was visited by vice president Hamzah Haz and other senior officials.

S.P. Thamilselvan: chief negotiator for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) in Sri Lanka killed in a November 2, 2007, government air strike. He was head of LTTE's political wing and replaced Anton Balasingham as their public spokesperson. Thamilselvan led a delegation to the 2006 Geneva peace talks.

Haji Daoh Thanam: southern Thai terrorist and leader of a new faction of the Pattani United Liberation Organization in August 1994.

Thiruthanikan Thanigasalam: one of four Sri Lankan immigrants who, on January 26, 2009, were charged in a New York court with providing material support to terrorists by trying to supply hundreds of thousands of dollars of surface-to-air missiles and assault weapons to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. Two defendants pleaded guilty. Charges against Thanigasalam were expected to go forward.

Lawrence Thilagar: Paris spokesperson for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in 1993.

Jack Terrence Thomas: Australian, age 29, with al Qaeda ties arrested January 4, 2003, at Karachi Airport. The Melbourne taxi driver visited Pakistan for Islamic study in 2001 but trained in Afghanistan.

Thongchai: alias of Thong Chankhunthong.

K. Thyagarajan: man arrested by Nepalese police on July 5, 1991, on suspicion of trying to smuggle Sivarasan and Subha, two suspects in the May 22, 1991, murder of former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi, into Nepal. He was flown to New Delhi two days later. He was believed to be a Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam who had been living in a rented house in Kathmandu's Baneswore District.

Jean-Pierre Thystere-Tchicaya: received a five-year suspended sentence on August 17, 1986, from the Congolese Revolutionary Court in the March 20, 1982, detonation of two bombs that killed 9 and wounded 92 in a Brazzaville movie theater in the Poto-Poto suburb.

Benito and Wilma Tiamzon: chairman and senior official, respectively, of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) whose hideout was raided by the army on October 8, 1989. Benito escaped during the raid, but police arrested his wife, Wilma, and five other CPP members. The military found documents indicating that the New People's Army planned to kidnap U.S. officials and diplomats to obtain the release of detained CPP secretary general Rafael Baylossi and seven other CPP officials imprisoned at Camp Crame.

Kumander Tigre: alias of Esmael Saafar.

Edgardo Tigolo: one of six Filipino members of Kabataang Makabayan, a Philippine leftist student organization, who hijacked a Philippine Air Lines BAC111 flying from Manila to Davao City on March 30, 1971, and diverted it to China. One of the hijackers told a passenger that they were to receive training in China and would eventually return to the Philippines, possibly to hijack again. Two of the hijackers returned to Manila in June 1977 and were taken into military custody. They were charged in August 1977 before a military court.

Aldam Tilao: alias Abu Sabaya (Bearer of Captives). Member of the Moro National Liberation Front/Abu Sayyaf kidnappers who attacked Americans in the Philippines on May 27, 2001. He studied criminology at and was expelled from Zamboanga College in Mindanao. He trained at an al Qaeda camp in the 1990s and nicknamed himself DJ as he was often on Mindanao radio. The Philippine government offered a $100,000 reward for his capture; the United States offered five million dollars after Tilao beheaded an American hostage. Tilao escaped the Philippine military's June 7, 2002, rescue operation. He is believed to have died in an ocean gun battle with Philippine Marines on June 20.

Jean-Marie Tjibao: leader of the Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front in New Caledonia in 1984.

Tohir: purported Jemaah Islamiyah field commander detained on October 28, 2003, by Indonesian police in connection with the August 5, 2003, suicide bombing at Jakarta's Marriott Hotel that killed 16 and injured 149.

Kazuo Tohira: Japanese Red Army (JRA) member, age 22, arrested in Stockholm on March 5, 1975, while taking photographs and making sketches of a building housing the embassies of Lebanon, Austria, and four other countries. He was deported from Sweden on March 13 and was arrested by the Japanese police at Tokyo International Airport on charges of forging and using official documents. He was indicted April 3 before being freed along with other terrorists in Japanese jails to meet demands made in the August 4 JRA takeover of the U.S. Consulate in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. The freed terrorists flew to Libya. On August 26, the Japanese decided to request extradition, but Libya denied it on October 29.

Tohira was one of the JRA Hidaka Commando Unit members who hijacked a Japan Airlines DC8 flying out of Bombay Airport and diverted it to Dacca, Bangladesh, on September 28, 1977. (See also Kunio Bando.)

On June 13, 1988, the Philippine Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member.

On February 15, 1997, Tohira was one of six JRA members arrested by Lebanese authorities in Bekaa Valley and West Beirut. (See also Masao Adachi.)

Efren Lacson Tolentino: name on a U.S. passport held by one of two suspected pro-Iraqi terrorists detained on February 17, 1991, by Philippine immigration police as the terrorists were about to board a Philippine Air Lines flight to Tokyo's Narita International Airport. They were put under "custodial investigation" in Cebu on suspicion of planning to link up with the Japanese Red Army.

Ateke Tom: leader in January 2008 of the Niger Delta Vigilante Movement, which attacks oil facilities in Nigeria. His group attacked a hotel in Port Harcourt on January 1, 2008.

Masahiro Tominaga: Aum Shin Rikyo member arrested by Japanese police in connection with the May 16, 1995, parcel bomb attack on Tokyo governor Yukio Aoshima.

Government Tompolo: leader of a faction of the Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND). On May 21, 2009, the Nigerian Army said it wanted him dead or alive and continued an offensive in the Niger Delta against his rebel group near Warri.

Ly Tong: hijacked Vietnam Airlines Flight VN 810 flying from Bangkok on September 4, 1992, and forced it to fly low over Ho Chi Minh City so he could dump anticommunist pamphlets for 30 minutes. The Airbus 310 nearly crashed before he parachuted out. He was captured two hours later. On November 14, the official Vietnam news agency retracted a story saying he was to be tried that week, giving no date for the trial. Vietnamese sources told AFP that Tong was a former South Vietnamese Air Force pilot who had escaped to the United States in the 1980s. On December 25, 2003, Judge Pairath Noonprade of the Rayong Provincial Court in Rayong, Thailand, reduced the sentence of the Vietnamese American pilot from 11 years to 7 years and 4 months. The judge said he was rewarding the cooperation of the former bomber pilot. On April 3, 2007, a Thai appeals court freed Tong, age 59, a naturalized U.S. citizen, who had served five-plus years in a Thai prison. The court overturned a decision to extradite him to Vietnam to be tried for invading Vietnamese air space. The court ruled that the hijacking did not constitute a threat to Vietnamese national security.

Tang Cheang Tong: alias Shogo Kodama. Japanese citizen of Khmer-Chinese origin who ran Kodama International Trading and was believed by East Asian police to have assisted Japanese United Red Army member Yoshimi Tanaka in laundering counterfeit $100 bills in 1996.

Jagmohan Singh Tony: professor who, on August 19, 1989, was charged by the chief metropolitan magistrate in Delhi with conspiracy to kill prime minister Indira Gandhi on October 31, 1984, and wage a war against the state. The trial was to begin on September 2, 1989.

Noordin Mohammed Top: variants Noordin Muh Top, Noordin Mat Top, Noordin Din Moch Top. Senior leader of the Indonesian Jemaah Islamiyah (JI). He was born on August 11, 1968, in Johor, Malaysia. He is wanted in connection with many of the suicide attacks in Indonesia, including the October 2005 bombings in Bali that injured several Americans. He is believed to have been involved in the October 12, 2002, bombing in Bali that killed 202 people and injured 209; the August 5, 2003, Jakarta Marriott Hotel bombing; and the bombing of the Australian Embassy in Jakarta on September 9, 2004, that killed several people and injured 140. He ordered JI members to surveil a large foreign-owned power plant southeast of Surabaya. He reportedly had been detained by Indonesian officials in mid-2005. In January 2006, he announced the formation of Tanzim Qaedat al-Jihad. He had been designated by the U.S. Department of the Treasury and the UN Security Council as a terrorist financier. He was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006.

Commander Tora Tora: leader of a group that kidnapped a French Catholic priest, Yves Caroff, in Cotabato, Philippines, on March 27, 1991.

Ken Torio: alias of Yasuyuki Yasuda; variant Yasuiki Yasuda.

Roger de la Torre: suspected leader of an urban guerrilla unit of the Philippine New People's Army (NPA) in the central province of Iloilo arrested May 19, 1993. He was believed to have been the driver in the NPA killing of U.S. Army Lt. Col. James Nicholas Rowe as he was driving to work at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters on April 21, 1989. He was also a "ransom negotiator" during the February 1992 kidnapping of U.S. business executive Michael Barnes. He was also involved in the assassination of two local labor leaders in 1990 and in a "commando sabotage attack" of a government building in 1989. He had a $220,000 price on his head.

Eduardo Torres: Philippine police officer suspected of involvement in the Red Scorpion Group of the New People's Army kidnapping of Michael Lynn Barnes, an American, on January 17, 1992. Torres voluntarily surrendered on January 21, 1992. He was the owner of the backup car used in the kidnapping.

Tatsuya Toyama: Aum Shin Rikyo sergeant arrested May 25, 1995, by Japanese police on charges of trespassing at a research facility operated by Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, Japan's largest defense contractor. He told police that he and several other Aum members had broken into a Mitsubishi lab several times since December 28, 1994, and had removed several boxes of documents. He could be charged with stealing sensitive military weapons data.

Toru Toyoda: Aum Shin Rikyo member arrested by Japanese police in connection with the May 16, 1995, parcel bomb attack on Tokyo governor Yukio Aoshima. On December 11, he pleaded guilty to releasing sarin into the Tokyo subway system on March 30 and begged forgiveness. He was charged with murder and attempted murder.

Larry Tractman: California businessman accused by the Philippine government of providing equipment to three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos; on February 11, 1977, the Filipinos admitted to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government.

Bruce Kohl Trayer: hijacker of a Northwest Orient B747 flying from Tokyo to Honolulu on May 8, 1977. He held a razor to the throat of a stewardess and demanded to go to Moscow. The purser overpowered the hijacker, injuring him with a fire ax. Trayer's father had told him that Russia did not use food additives. Trayer was arrested and hospitalized.

Usman Tremene: confessed during preliminary investigations to the December 8, 1988, Liberation Front of the Senegalese People bombing of a car belonging to the Ministry of Industrial Development but denied the charges before the investigating judge. On January 10, 1989, he was ordered detained.

Emil Trinidad: member in 1987 of the Philippine New People's Army Alex Boncayao Brigade, a Manila sparrow unit assassination squad.

Antony Bobby Tsotsobe: African National Congress member convicted of firing a rocket and a Soviet rifle at the Booyens Police Station in Johannesburg on April 14, 1980; planting bombs on a Soweto railway line; and attempting to burn down a Soweto hall. Tsotsobe had received military training in Angola. On August 19, 1981, Johannesburg judge Charl Theron sentenced him to death. On June 9, 1983, his sentence was commuted to life in prison by state president Marais Viljoen.

Masami Tsuchiya: chief chemist of Aum Shin Rikyo who told Japanese police he had produced sarin nerve agent after his April 26, 1995, arrest. He was also suspected of involvement in the December 1994 VX gas murder of Osaka businessman Tadahito Hamaguchi.

Shirosaki Tsutomu: Japanese Red Army member released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977.

Lam Van Tu: alias Lam Van Chat. One of four hijackers of Air Vietnam 509, a DC3 flying from Ho Chi Minh City to Phuquoc Island on October 29, 1977. The group shot and killed the flight engineer and radio operator and seriously injured a steward. On December 15, the four were sentenced to 14 years for possession of arms. Lam Van Tu was also sentenced to 12 strokes of the cane for possession of a .38 Smith and Wesson revolver and 22 bullets. (See also Tran Van Hai.)

Tran Van Tu: one of four hijackers of Air Vietnam 509, a DC3 flying from Ho Chi Minh City to Phu Quoc Island on October 29, 1977. The group shot and killed the flight engineer and radio operator and seriously injured a steward. On December 15, the four were sentenced to 14 years for possession of arms. He was also sentenced to six strokes of the cane for being in the company of Lam Van Tu during the offense. (See also Tran Van Hai.)

Bradley Richard Tuffy: alias George Hodges. South African who pleaded guilty in the Tanzanian High Court on May 31, 1989, to the May 18, 1989, Angola hijacking attempt of an Aeroflot Ilyushin airliner flying 174 African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa members from Luanda to Moscow. The plane was diverted to Tanzania after two passengers began fighting. The hijackers were overpowered by Soviet security guards, who discovered a hand grenade. The press reported that the hijackers were white South African agents or ANC dissidents who wanted to divert the plane to South Africa. On June 1, 1989, Tuffy was sentenced to 15 years on two counts of endangering the safety of an aircraft and its passengers. The court said he had placed dangerous equipment on the flight and wounded an officer on the aircraft.

Tufu: Karachi Central Prison detainee and gangster who admitted in 1997 that he was in the backup vehicle for the March 8, 1995, murders of U.S. diplomats in Pakistan. As of November 1997, he had not been charged.

Tung Kuei-sen: one of two bicyclists who, on October 15, 1984, assassinated Henry Liu in his Daly City, California, garage. Liu was a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. On September 26, 1985, at the request of the United States, Brazilian authorities arrested Tung and extradited him to the United States. He was convicted April 1988 after confessing. On May 11, a Redwood City, California, court sentenced the Taiwanese member of the United Bamboo Gang to 27 years to life for the murder. He claimed the assassination was ordered by senior Taiwanese military officials. He said he was duped by Taiwan into believing it was a patriotic act.

Al-Turki: alias of Mustafa 'Abd-al-Aziz Muhammad.

Abdul Hamid Turki: leader of the al-Faran kidnappers who, on July 4, 1995, took several Western hostages. He was killed in a December 4 Indian military ambush that killed four of the original hostage takers.

Hassan Turki: listed by the U.S. Department of State in 2004 as having links to al Qaeda and running military training camps in Somalia. On March 3, 2008, a U.S. Navy Tomahawk missile was fired at a location he was believed to be visiting in Dhobley, Somalia.

Sulayman al-Turki: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced him to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. Al-Turki, the hijacker mastermind, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court. Al-Turki reportedly had executed his sister for disloyalty.

Abdul Gani Ismail Turq: one of three Indians sentenced to death on July 18, 2007, by an Indian antiterrorism court for planting several of the 13 bombs that exploded in 1993, killing 257 people in Mumbai, India's financial center.

Arif Tutu: on September 18, 1999, Pakistani judge Javed Alam said the Islamic Muthidda (or perhaps Muhajir) Qaumi Movement member would be acquitted and the case dismissed for lack of evidence in the March 8, 1995, murders of U.S. diplomats in Pakistan. However, Tutu was not to be released because he was wanted in other criminal cases.

U

---

Abu Ubaydah: lieutenant of Osama bin Laden who led attacks against government forces in Eritrea, Uganda, and the Ogaden region of Ethiopia from 1992 to 1996.

Fahad Ullah: one of the terrorists who died in the November 26, 2008, Mumbai, India, attacks. Ullah, in his twenties, was from Depalpur Taluka, Pakistan.

Umar: two same-named brothers of Imam Samudra who remained at large after Samudra was arrested in Indonesia on November 21, 2002. The brothers were wanted for questioning in the October 12, 2002, bombing of two Bali nightclubs that killed 202.

Abu Umar: Egyptian who was one of three al Qaeda suspects arrested by Pakistani authorities on January 9, 2003, after a gun battle in Karachi in which one of the terrorists threw a grenade. Police seized rifles; grenades; street maps of Karachi, Hyderabad, and Lahore; a satellite telephone; a laptop computer; suspicious documents; literature calling for a holy war; and $30,000 in cash from the terrorists' house. Two of the detainees claimed to be Abu Hamza of Yemen and Abu Umar of Egypt. Abu Umar's wife and three children were also detained. Seven other suspects were later released. They were all family members of Sabiha Shahid, a leader of the Jamaat-e-Islami party, who lived on the first floor. Police said the two detainees appeared to have entered Pakistan from Afghanistan in 2002.

Islam al-'Umari: identified by the Ethiopian Supreme State Security Prosecution in August 1995 as a fugitive from Sudan who helped five terrorists who confessed to training in the al-Kamp and Kangu camps in Khartoum. They trained with two of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Maulana Mussain Umarji: Muslim cleric from Godhra, India, who, by February 19, 2003, was in detention on charges of organizing the February 27, 2002, attack in which a Muslim mob threw firebombs and acid at the Sabarmati Express train as it was pulling away from a rail station in the Muslim neighborhood of Godhra in western India, killing 57 people and injuring another 43. The Vishwa Hindu Parishad (World Hindu Council) activists on the train had been shouting provocative slogans while the train was in the rail station. They were returning from Ayodhya, where they wanted to construct a temple to replace the sixteenth-century Babri Mosque destroyed in 1992 by a Hindu mob. Many Hindus believe the site was the birthplace of Lord Ram, a Hindu god. The 131 suspects were charged under the Prevention of Terrorism Act.

Mohammed Umer: Pakistani religious student questioned regarding the June 14, 2002, car bombing outside the U.S. Consulate in Karachi that killed 14 Pakistanis and injured 51 others. He had ties to Lashkar-i-Jhangvi, was already in custody, and had provided information about a militant group trained in explosives. He had been arrested after the May 8, 2002, suicide bombing that killed 11 French engineers.

Tsuneo Umeuchi: medical student wanted in Japan on explosives charges. He was one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Tahome Urong: alias Sermin Tohami. Alleged Filipino accomplice in the April 2, 2003, bombing of a row of food stands at a ferry terminal in Davao, Philippines, that killed 16 and wounded 55. He was arrested April 8. Authorities said he was also involved in the March bombing of Davao Airport that killed 22 people. He belonged to the Special Operations Group of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front. The ammonium nitrate explosive used in the attack was similar to that purchased by Jemaah Islamiyah Indonesian operative Fathur Rohman Ghazi and seized by police in January 2002 following his arrest.

Lieutenant Colonel Vs. Urputhan: Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam bomb maker who died on February 23, 1987, when a bomb he was setting exploded prematurely in the water bowser at the Sri Lanka security forces camp at Navatkuli, Jaffna, killing 60 people, including 46 villagers and 14 terrorists.

Amar Usman: alias of Dulmatin.

Commander Rolly Usman: alias of Omar Usman. One of four Moro Islamic Liberation Front rebels who kidnapped three passengers from a Ford bound for Malabang, Lanao del Sur, Philippines, on July 30, 1988.

Omar Usman: true name of Commander Rolly Usman.

Mohammed Uzair: suspect in the March 8, 1995, lethal shooting of two U.S. Consulate officials and the wounding of a third in a morning ambush on a white Toyota Hiace minivan taking the diplomats to the consulate in Karachi, Pakistan. Uzair was killed April 1995 by unidentified gunmen.

V

---

Captain Diosdado Valeroso: captured leader and spokesperson of the Young Officers' Union (YOU) of the Philippines who, on October 16, 1990, was identified by three Mandarin employees as one of the two people who had conducted the September 23, 1990, bombing of the Nikko Manila Garden Hotel in the Makati District and the nearby Mandarin Oriental Hotel. The employees said he entered the hotel with a YOU official, 1st Lt. Renato Padua, before the explosion. Valeroso is a member of the Philippine Military Academy Class of 1982 and was involved in attempted coups August 1987 and December 1989. Valeroso denied involvement in the bombings and claimed he was talking to his sister-in-law at the time.

Nguyen Minh Van: one of four hijackers of Air Vietnam 509, a DC3 flying from Ho Chi Minh City to Phu Quoc Island on October 29, 1977. The group shot and killed the flight engineer and radio operator and seriously injured a steward. On December 15, the four were sentenced to 14 years for possession of arms. He was also sentenced to six strokes of the cane for being in the company of Lam Van Tu during the offense. (See also Tran Van Hai.)

Guido Luciaan van Hecken: Belgian named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress's firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. He fled to the Motlana Institute in Maputo, Mozambique, where he was a lecturer.

Dion van Rensburg: South African captured with a time bomb shortly after he entered Mozambique on his way to Maputo on August 23, 1983.

Thirunavukarasu Varatharasa: Sri Lankan, age 35, arrested by the FBI on September 29, 2006, for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorney's Office announced charges of conspiracy to export weapons and munitions and conspiracy to launder money with others with LTTE links.

Vasanthi: prostitute taken into custody in Cuddalore, 100 miles south of Madras, India, on May 27, 1991, in connection with the May 22, 1991, murder of former prime minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Captain Ideas Vasu': Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam bomb maker who died on February 23, 1987, when a bomb he was setting exploded prematurely in the water bowser at the Sri Lanka security forces camp at Navatkuli, Jaffna, killing 60 people, including 46 villagers and 14 terrorists.

Kulaveerasingham Veerakumar: alias Babu. Jaffna Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam suicide bomber, age 14, who rammed his bicycle into the presidential party during a May 1, 1993, May Day parade in Colombo, killing president Ranasinghe Premadasa and 23 others.

Ka (Comrade) Victor: alias of Eleazar Corpus.

Nguyen Cuu Viet: South Vietnamese youth who hijacked an Air Vietnam DC4 flying from Da Lat and Qui Nhon to Da Nang on February 20, 1974. He demanded to go to Hanoi or Dong Hoi, North Vietnam. The pilot landed the plane at Phu Bai Airport in Hue, South Vietnam. Two passengers attempted to subdue the hijacker, who set off a grenade, killing all three and injuring six others.

Dr. Paul Vijay: alias of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

W

---

Mohammed Waheed: thought responsible for planting the December 2, 1982, bomb in the former Iraqi Consulate in Thailand that killed Thailand's top bomb disposal expert and injured 17 others. Mujabbar Bakr Commando Group claimed credit.

Amossa Waina: one of 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who, on April 22, 1988, conducted a gun and machete attack on a French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvea Island in New Caledonia, killing 3 policemen and injuring 5 before taking 15 hostages. Waina was killed in a French rescue operation on May 7, 1988. Melanesian separatists said he was merely delivering food.

Moriaki Wakabayashi: variant of Seiryō Wakabayashi. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the Japanese Red Army member was at large.

Seiryō Wakabayashi: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka and diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. On October 8, 1980, the nine hijackers said they would like to return to Japan if they would not be imprisoned. The government refused, and conservative Japanese Dietmen considered requesting extradition. Wakabayashi was part of a 30-minute interview with Kyodo on May 6, 1988, claiming that the remaining seven hijackers were in North Korea. In the interview, he apologized to the Japanese people. He claimed in a September 12 interview that he had visited Libya in 1984 to attend a Pan-African youth festival.

Danianus Waker: suspected in the August 31, 2002, attack in which 15 gunmen carrying M-16 rifles shot to death 3 people and wounded 14 others in a raid on a convoy near a gold and copper mine in Papua Province operated by Freeport Indonesia, a subsidiary of U.S.-owned Freeport-McMoran Copper and Gold of New Orleans. Waker, age 25, was shot to death on September 1 by government forces.

Haruo Wako: one of two Japanese Red Army (JRA) members who joined two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who attempted to set fire to three storage tanks belonging to a Royal Dutch Shell Oil Company refinery on the Pulau Bukom island of Singapore on January 31, 1974. They then took eight hostages to a ferryboat to escape but were intercepted by Singapore police. Five hostages jumped overboard. The terrorists demanded free passage to an Arab country. Singapore refused but offered them sanctuary on February 4 in any of the 42 embassies in Singapore. On February 6, five PFLP members seized the Japanese Embassy in Kuwait, holding 12 hostages and demanding that their ferryboat colleagues be flown to Kuwait by the Japanese government. A Japan Airlines plane picked up the four terrorists and flew to Kuwait to pick up the five PFLP members, who released the hostages. They arrived in Aden, Yemen, on February 8. The nine were released by the government two days later.

Wako later surfaced on September 13, 1974, as one of three JRA members who burst into the French Embassy in The Hague and took 11 hostages. (See also Jun Nishikawa.)

On June 13, 1988, the Philippines Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member. On June 22, 1993, Tokyo police obtained an arrest warrant for him. On February 15, 1997, he was one of six JRA members arrested by Lebanese authorities in Bekaa Valley and West Beirut. (See also Masao Adachi.)

Walid: on July 6, 1988, Pakistani District Court Judge Zafar Ahmed Babar ended an eight-month trial in a special court in Rawalpindi's Adiyala maximum security prison and sentenced the Lebanese to death by hanging for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan American 747 and for killing 11 passengers at Karachi Airport. The hijacker mastermind, Sulayman al-Turki, said the group would appeal the sentences and, if they were freed, "would hijack a U.S. airliner once again." The court also sentenced each to 257 years for murder, conspiracy to hijack, possession of illegal arms, and confinement of the passengers. The terrorists had 30 days to appeal the verdict and sentence in Lahore's High Court.

Janusz Jakub "Koba" Walus: Polish immigrant, age 40, arrested in a Boksburg, South Africa, shopping center 30 minutes after the April 10, 1993, assassination of South African Communist Party General Secretary Chris Hani. Walus was the suspected triggerman and had two guns with him. He was a member of the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement (AWB). On October 14, he was convicted of murder and was sentenced to death the next day. On December 1, 1994, the Conservative Party expressed shock that the appeals court affirmed the death sentence.

Anthonius Wamang: variant Antonius. Indonesian member, age 32, of the National Freedom Force, the military branch of the Free Papua Movement, indicted June 16, 2004, in the August 31, 2002, attack in which 15 gunmen carrying M-16 rifles shot to death 2 Americans and an Indonesian and wounded 14 others in a raid on a convoy near a Papua Province gold and copper mine. The mine was operated by Freeport Indonesia, a subsidiary of U.S.-owned Freeport-McMoran Copper and Gold of New Orleans. A federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., charged the commander of the separatists' military wing with two counts of murder, eight counts of attempted murder, and nine other charges. On January 11, 2006, Indonesian police arrested Wamang and 11 others in a small mining town near where the ambush of the teachers had taken place. Indonesian armed forces spokesmen denied rumors of military involvement in the murders. Wamang acknowledged firing at the teachers' vehicle but claimed he thought he was shooting at Indonesian soldiers. On November 7, Judge Adriani Nurdin sentenced Antonius Wamang to life in prison.

Antonius Wamang: variant of Anthonius Wamang.

Wang Bing-Zhang: U.S. green card holder and New York resident, age 55, who, on February 10, 2003, was jailed for life by a Chinese court for "organizing and leading a terrorist group." China said the democracy activist had ordered an assassination in 1999, planned to bomb the Chinese Embassy in Bangkok during visits in 2001, planned to bomb Chinese mainland roads and bridges, and made preparations to build a terrorist training base in northern Thailand. Rights activists said Chinese security agents had kidnapped Wang in June 2002 from Hanoi, Vietnam, after he met with Chinese labor activists. Chinese police said he was arrested July 3 when he was found in a temple in southern China while they were investigating a kidnapping. The Guangdong Provincial High People's Court upheld the life term on February 27, 2003.

Wang I-yin: joined her husband, Luo Changhua, a trading company manager, on December 28, 1993, in hijacking Fujian Airlines Flight FC-518, flying from Ganzhou to Xiamen, and diverting it to Taiwan, where they requested asylum. She was a worker at an electronics plant. On February 24, 1994, the Taoyuan District Prosecutor's Office indicted her for violations of the Civil Aviation Law and recommended a 12-year sentence.

Wang Xijue: Taiwanese pilot who forcibly diverted his China Airlines B747 cargo plane, en route between Bangkok and Hong Kong, to Guangzhou, China, where he defected on May 3, 1986.

Wang Yen-da: Chinese environmental agency official and one of six hijackers of Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai on May 5, 1983. His five-year sentence was later commuted. (See also An Chien-wei.)

Wang Zhihua: clerk of a pharmaceutical plant who hijacked Zhejiang Airlines Flight C-3353 en route from Hangzhou to Fuzhou and diverted it to Chiang Kai-Shek International Airport, where he was arrested, on November 8, 1993. Taiwan radio said he was born in Harbin in 1957, was married, and had a child. China demanded extradition. On August 31, 1994, the Taiwanese Supreme Court upheld his 10-year sentence, originally handed down by the Taipei District Court.

Aliyah Wani: Islamic militant, age 22, who conducted several coordinated attacks against 11 police posts in three Thai provinces, leaving 112 people dead on April 28, 2004; 107 of the dead were militants. Wani was the only one of six attackers to get out alive from their raid in Yupo. He was shot in the leg. He said a stranger had persuaded his group to attack the police station to obtain weapons.

Wudera Wankuwa: named on March 21, 1994, as one of four suspects in the March 5, 1994, discovery of a truck loaded with a ton of explosives in Thailand. Police believed the suspects planned assassination attempts against senior members of U.S., Israeli, Pakistani, and other embassies and that the truck bomb was to be used against the Israeli Embassy.

Raja Waqar: Pakistani policeman assigned to the office of Punjab Province's top politician and arrested August 2, 2004, for passing information on the whereabouts of senior officials to al Qaeda.

Yetum Warke: one of four Ethiopians who hijacked an Ethiopian Airlines plane flying from Addis Ababa to Bahr Dar on April 12, 1992, and diverted it to Nairobi, Kenya, where they surrendered. Ethiopia requested extradition, saying they were former security members of the deposed regime. They were brought before a Nairobi chief magistrate on April 14. The magistrate declined to release them on bond. The case was due for review on April 28.

Gabriel Warner: alias Comrade Mess. Named by police on May 20, 1990, as a planner of the May 13, 1990, New People's Army (NPA) of the Philippines murder of two U.S. airmen, John Raven and James Green, outside Clark Air Base. Warner was charged with illegal possession of firearms. He was wounded in a shootout with police and was found inside the house of Camelita Gamboa and Francisco Hipolito, who were charged with harboring a criminal. NPA denied that he was involved in the murders.

Chris Marie Warren: one of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail. The FBI said three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Warren was freed on $10,000 bail.

Mohammed Abdullah Warsame: alias Abu Maryam. Canadian citizen of Somali descent, age 30, detained in Minneapolis on December 9, 2003, as a material witness. He said he knew Zacarias Moussaoui, the 20th 9/11 hijacker. Warsame was under investigation for other possible links to al Qaeda. He had attended an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan with Moussaoui and had lived with him. Warsame was studying computer programming at Minneapolis Community Technical College.

A similar name—Mohamed Warsama—was on a Kenyan business card seized in 1997 from Wadil el-Hage, a Lebanese and naturalized U.S. citizen who worked for several years as Osama bin Laden's private secretary. El-Hage was convicted in 2001 in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings of U.S. embassies in Kenya and Nairobi.

Warsame was scheduled to have a hearing on December 16 regarding an extradition request from the Southern District of New York. The Warsame case has been sealed.

In a January 21, 2004, unsealed federal indictment in Minnesota, Warsame was accused of one count of conspiring to provide material support to al Qaeda from March 2000 until his arrest. He was represented by the public defender's office. On February 9, he was ordered held without bail after prosecutors said he was a flight risk. He pleaded not guilty. An FBI affidavit said he trained in martial arts and with weapons and taught English to al Qaeda members.

Harji Wasani: construction worker armed with a knife who, on September 9, 2002, attempted to hijack an Air Seychelles B737 bound from Bombay to Male, Maldives, with 70 passengers. A crewman was injured when Wasani tried to get into the cockpit. An Indian police official said Wasani was drunk and became angry when a stewardess deflected his pass. The hijacker, who carried an Indian passport, was turned over to Maldives police.

Moses Weror: chairman of the Revolutionary Council of the Free Papua Movement (OPM), which, on January 8, 1996, sent 200 members to kidnap 26 people, including 13 wildlife researchers in the 1995–1996 Lorentz expedition, in Mapenduma village in Irian Jaya, Indonesia. Seven of the hostages were Europeans. Weror demanded that the government open talks on the future political status of Irian Jaya.

Dr. Edward Wertlee: variant Dr. Edward Wethli. Former South African named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress's firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981.

Craig Williamson: on September 27, 1996, fellow South African police agent Eugene de Kock alleged Williamson, who earlier was an undercover agent, was involved in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme. Williamson denied the charges. He had returned home to South Africa in 1980 after his cover was blown and became deputy chief of the foreign section of South Africa's security police, which handled covert operations. De Kock claimed that Williamson had directed the 1982 bombing of the African National Congress European headquarters. Williamson had earlier confessed to the 1982 letter bomb killing of anti-apartheid leader Ruth First in Maputo, Mozambique, and the 1984 letter bomb murders of Jeannette Schoon and her daughter, Katryn, age 6, in Lubango, Angola.

Tin Maunt Win: general secretary of the Democratic Alliance of Burma, a group of 20 ethnic insurgent groups and dissident political parties, who, on October 15, 1989, warned that more bombings and airline hijackings would be aimed at the Burmese government unless the military ended its political repression.

Dr. Taye Woldesmayat: leader of the Ethiopian Unity Patriot Front, later named the Ethiopian National Patriot Front. On June 21, 1996, Ethiopian police investigated reports that the group planned to throw grenades at the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) office near Bole Road. The group was believed responsible for the 1993 murder attempt against an American working for AID.

Jane and Kevin Woods: former wife and husband arrested in connection with the January 11, 1988, car bombing of the home of three members of the African National Congress of South Africa in Trenance on the northern outskirts of Bulawayo. On February 6, 1988, Kevin appeared before Isaac Chiwara, a Harare magistrate, on charges of murder, sabotage, espionage, and failure to report the presence of dissidents to the police under the Law and Order Maintenance Act.

Erick Wotulo: Indonesian, age 60, arrested by the FBI on September 29, 2006, for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorney's Office announced charges of conspiracy to export weapons and munitions and conspiracy to launder money with others with LTTE links.

Wu Tun: one of two bicyclists who, on October 15, 1984, assassinated Henry Liu in his Daly City, California, garage. Liu was a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. Wu was the leader of the United Bamboo Gang, one of the largest criminal operations in Taiwan. He escaped to Taiwan but was arrested there on November 30, 1984. The Taiwanese Justice Ministry found him guilty on April 9, 1985, and sentenced him to life in prison. On June 4, the Taiwanese Supreme Court upheld the conviction.

Wu Yuan-fei: Chinese procurement official at the Kwantung Provincial foreign trade office and one of six hijackers of Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai on May 5, 1983. His four-year sentence was later commuted. (See also An Chien-wei.)

X

---

Xia Tao: hijacked a bus with 10 Australian tourists on March 5, 2008, in Xi'an, in the northwest Shaanxi Province, China. He carried explosives. He released nine hostages but kept a woman, age 48, from New South Wales and the group's Chinese translator. He demanded free passage to the airport on another bus. He negotiated for three hours before police shot him to death at a toll plaza at the airport. No hostages were harmed.

Y

---

Atamnia Yacine: Algerian, age 33, arrested by Bangkok police on August 24, 2005, on charges of possessing 180 fake French and Spanish passports and overstaying his visa. Thai police believed he supplied the fake IDs used in the July 7, 2005, bombings of the London subway system.

A. J. Yaghi: one of two male Lebanese hijackers of a South African Airways B727 flying from Salisbury, Rhodesia, to Johannesburg, South Africa, on May 24, 1972. The duo threatened to blow up the plane. At a refueling stop in Salisbury, they let some of the passengers deplane. In Blantyre, Malawi, they demanded money from the Anglo-American Mining Company. The next day, all passengers and crew escaped. Troops fired on the jet, and the hijackers were captured. On September 18, they were sentenced to 11 years. They were released in Malawi in 1974. Some reports claim they then went to Cairo; others said they were deported to Zambia on May 21, 1974.

Adel Yahya: North Londoner, age 23, from the Tottenham area arrested by British police on December 20, 2005, at 5 A.M. as he arrived at Gatwick Airport on a flight from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in connection with the abortive plot to set off bombs in the London subway system on July 21, 2005. He had been out of the country since June. He was held on suspicion of the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. His trial began on January 15, 2007. Defendants Yassin Hassan Omar, Yahya, and Muktar Said Ibrahim attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, who was convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred.

On July 10, 2007, the jury convicted Omar, Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, and Hussain Osman but was unable to reach a verdict on Manfo Asiedu and Yahya. On November 5, 2007, a British court sentenced Yahya to 6 plus years in prison. He had admitted to a charge of possessing terrorist information.

Zonji Yakisawa: on February 20, 1996, Thai police said they were searching for Yakisawa in connection with a Japanese Aum Shin Rikyo cult plot to attack leaders of the March 1–2 Asia-Europe Meeting.

Edwin Yal: name used by Toronto-born individual who resembled Junzo Okudaira, a leader of the Japanese Red Army.

Yoshiaki Yamada: aliases Suzuki Furuya, Furuya Yutaka. One of two Japanese Red Army (JRA) members who joined two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who attempted to set fire to three storage tanks belonging to a Royal Dutch Shell Oil Company refinery on the Pulau Bukum island of Singapore on January 31, 1974. They then took eight hostages to a ferryboat in an attempt to escape but were intercepted by Singapore police. Five hostages jumped overboard. The terrorists demanded free passage to an Arab country. Singapore refused but offered them sanctuary on February 4 in any of the 42 embassies in Singapore. On February 6, five PFLP members seized the Japanese embassy in Kuwait, holding 12 hostages and demanding that their ferryboat colleagues be flown to Kuwait by the Japanese government. A Japan Airlines plane picked up the four terrorists and flew to Kuwait to pick up the five PFLP members, who released the hostages. They arrived in Aden, Yemen, on February 8. The nine were released by the government two days later.

Yamada next surfaced in July 26, 1974, when a French customs inspector arrested him after he had arrived at Orly from Beirut. It appeared he was a courier for JRA leader Fusako Shigenobu and her PFLP colleagues and that he was to deliver $10,000 in counterfeit bills and messages to the JRA network in Europe. His briefcase contained three forged passports from Taiwan, Japan, and the United States. He was charged with issuing false passports. A JRA cell took over the French Embassy on September 13, 1974, to obtain his release. He initially refused to join them, worried about possible reprisals for erring in his mission. A Dutch psychiatrist said that French guards were ordered to kill him if any hostages were murdered, an option supported by an overwhelming majority in a French poll.

On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JRA member was at large.

Akira Yamagata: named by Japanese police for his involvement in the December 12, 1994, VX gas murder of Osaka businessman Tadahito Hamaguchi. Yamagata injected a VX solution into the victim's head.

Noboru Yamaguchi: alias used by Hiroshi Sensui.

Mariko Yamamoto: alias Maria. Japanese Red Army (JRA) contact point, age 33, in Paris in 1974. She ran a Japanese shop in Avenue de l'Opera. Her place was raided in 1974. She possessed a coded notebook with the addresses of 50 safe houses throughout Europe. She was also part of the 10-member VZ58 group, which was named after the type of assault rifle used in the Lod Airport attack. On June 13, 1988, the Philippines Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member. On February 15, 1997, she was one of six JRA members arrested by Lebanese authorities in Bekaa Valley and West Beirut. (See also Masao Adachi.)

Arif Yamin: suspected car thief, age 24, who, on August 16, 1997, admitted that he had provided cover for the gunmen during the March 8, 1995, murders of U.S. diplomats in Pakistan.

Imtiaz Yamin: one of 35 suspected foreign terrorists arrested by Philippine government agents on December 20, 1995, in Ermita, Manila. On January 11, 1996, the chief of the Bureau of Immigration ordered the Pakistani's release, along with three other Pakistanis, as there was no basis for filing criminal charges.

Yang Mingde: on September 30, 1993, the taxi driver from Harbin, China, hijacked Sichuan Airlines Flight 2625, a TU-154 flying from Jinan to Guangzhou, and diverted it to Taiwan's Taoyuan Airport, where he requested political asylum for himself, his wife, and his son, who accompanied him. He said he would rather die than return to the mainland and claimed to have defected to seek freedom and not for a better living. Xinhua said he had resigned from a forestry farm in the northeast. He had taken his family to Shandong's Dongying City to set up a family-run business but due to poor management was in debt for 10,000 yuan. On November 9, 1993, he and his wife, Han Fengying, were indicted on charges of violating Taiwan's Civil Aviation Law. The prosecution suggested a 12-year sentence. On January 5, 1994, he was sentenced by the Taoyuan District Court to nine years in prison. Their child was placed in an orphanage. The couple was to be repatriated after serving their sentences.

Bernard Yanga: reported by Paris AFP on August 25, 1990, as arrested by Congolese police in connection with the United Transit Airlines Flight 772 bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171. He was a friend of Apollinaire Mangani, the prime suspect in the bombing, and was with him the last time he was seen alive. Yanga showed up at the French Embassy in Kinshasa, Zaire, on March 18, 1992, saying he was ready to help with inquiries. He later accused Abdallah Elazragh, the Libyan chargé d'affaires in Brazzaville, of giving him explosives that were then made into a parcel and handed to a passenger thought to have left the plane during a stop in Chad.

Charles Stephen Yanover: charged with conspiracy to kill South Korean president Chun Doo-Hwan as part of a North Korean-backed plot in February 1982. He was also charged with conspiracy to defraud and illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He reportedly had connections with a criminal organization engaged in narcotics trafficking, arms smuggling, and contract killings. On February 17, 1984, he admitted in a county court trial that he had plotted to kill Chun. He was tried for defrauding the North Koreans who had hired them and pleaded guilty to the charge. A murder charge was dismissed due to the absence of defendant Choe Chung-hwa. Yanover tipped off the South Korean government to the plot. He was sentenced to two years. He was already serving a nine-year term for bombing a Toronto disco. Earlier in the week, Yanover was sentenced to six months for his part in a failed 1981 attempt to overthrow the government of Dominica.

Izat Yasin: identified by the Ethiopian government as the foreign deputy coordinator of the nine Egyptian Islamic Group gunmen who, on June 25, 1995, fired on the armored limousine of Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak in Addis Ababa.

Chhun Yasith: tax accountant from Long Beach, California, charged by a Cambodian court in absentia with terrorism and forming an illegal armed group. He was the leader of the California-based anticommunist Cambodian Freedom Fighters, who, on November 24, 2000, claimed credit for a midnight shootout at a police station and government buildings in Phnom Penh in which seven died and a dozen were wounded. On June 22, 2001, a Cambodian court convicted Yasith, age 43, as being the mastermind of the violence.

Yasuiki Yasuda: variant of Yasuyuki Yasuda.

Yasuyuki Yasuda: variant Yasuiki Yasuda; alias Ken Torio. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army on contract for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at passengers arriving on Air France Flight 132 in Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, killing 28 and wounding 76. Among those killed were 16 Puerto Rican Catholic pilgrims on a visit to the Holy Land. Yasuda was killed accidentally by bullets from the rifle of Takeshi Okudeira.

Hideaki Yasudi: Aum Shin Rikyo member who strangled to death Kotaro Ochida, a pharmacist in a cult hospital, at the orders of cult leader Shoko Asahara in January 1994. Yasudi told police that Asahara and 10 other senior cult members witnessed the strangling at the commune in Kamikuishiki.

S. Yasumiro: one of nine Japanese United Red Army hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970.

Mamet Yasyn: member of the East Turkistan Islamic Movement deported by Kyrgyzstan to China in May 2002 for planning terrorist attacks against embassies, markets, and public gathering places in Bishkek.

Ye Marn: one of two Burmese students who, on November 10, 1990, hijacked Thai International Airways Flight TG304, an Airbus 300 flying from Bangkok to Yangon, and diverted it to Calcutta's Dum Dum Airport, where they surrendered and requested political asylum. (See also Ye Think Yaw.)

Ye Thi Ha: possible alias meaning “lion” given by one of two Burmese students demanding democracy in their military-ruled nation who, on October 6, 1989, hijacked Myanmar Airways XY-ADW, a Burmese Airways Fokker 28 on a domestic flight from Mergui to Yangon, and diverted it to U-Tapao Naval Air Base in Thailand. The hijackers called for the release of political prisoners, including opposition leader Aung Sang Suu Kyi; withdrawal of soldiers in Yangon to their barracks; abrogation of martial law; governing of the people leniently; freedom of the press; formation of an interim government with persons nominated by the United Nations; and the end of curfew. The duo surrendered after 10 hours of negotiations. Reports said Ye Thi Ha was a 25-year-old high school student. On October 14, 1989, the Thai government said they might help the duo obtain asylum in a third country, possibly Sweden, if asked. On January 5, 1990, the duo was charged in the Bangkok Criminal Court with illegal seizure of an aircraft under Article 5 of the 1978 Aviation Act, threatening to blow up the plane, and illegal possession of firearms. The charges carried a maximum sentence of death and a minimum penalty of 10 years in prison. The prosecutor said he believed they had no intention of harming the passengers or crew and would not be extradited to Burma. On March 21, 1990, Ye Thi Ha was sentenced to six years.

Ye Think Yaw: one of two Burmese students who, on November 10, 1990, hijacked Thai International Airways Flight TG304, an Airbus 300 flying from Bangkok to Yangon, and diverted it to Calcutta's Dum Dum Airport, where they surrendered and requested political asylum. They claimed to be students at Yangon University who were calling attention to human rights and democracy concerns. They called themselves the Justice and Liberation Warriors. India rejected an extradition request. The duo said they would be sent before a firing squad if extradited to Burma. They were held under India's Anti-Hijacking Act of 1982 and the Indian Penal Code Act. They appeared on November 12 before a subdivision magistrate in Barrackpore. Judge N. C. Chakraborty refused bail.

Ye Yanaung: student who was unable to join two Burmese students who, on November 10, 1990, hijacked Thai International Airways Flight TG304, flying from Bangkok to Yangon, because he could not afford a ticket. (See also Ye Thi Ha.)

Ye Yint: possible alias meaning “brave” given by one of two Burmese students demanding democracy in their military-ruled nation who, on October 6, 1989, hijacked Myanmar Airways XY-ADW, a Burmese Airways Fokker 28 on a domestic flight from Mergui to Yangon, and diverted it to U-Tapao Naval Air Base in Thailand. Ye Yint was an electrical engineering student at the Rangoon Institute of Technology. On March 21, 1990, Ye Yint was sentenced to six years. (See also Ye Thi Ha.)

Mohammed Yesudas: Durban, South African, age 28, who threatened to blow up a vehicle near the U.S. Embassy in Harare, Zimbabwe, on December 24, 1999. The Muslim cleric was arrested January 1, 2000, and charged with threatening to commit acts of terrorism. Police said he went to the embassy and told a security guard he was a commando trained in Afghanistan and planned to set off explosives in a vehicle.

Yi Chan-u: demonstrator from Chosun University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea.

Yi Chol: North Korean agent accused on October 13, 1989, by So Yong-chol, a North Korean intelligence defector, of planting a bomb in the U.S. Cultural Center in Taegu on September 22, 1983, killing a high school boy and wounding five others.

Yi Chong-sik: South Korean arrested as one of two people who fired 10 revolver shots into the Tokyo office of the pro-Pyongyang General Association of Korean Residents in Japan on November 18, 1983, to protest the October 9, 1983, bomb explosion in Rangoon (now Yangon) that was blamed on the North Korean government.

Yi Chu-hwa: demonstrator from Chosun University arrested October 14, 1988, after 100 students threw firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea.

Yi Chung-hun: one of 72 demonstrators who attacked the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul on May 23, 1985. On October 2, 1985, he was sentenced to five years in prison.

Yi Kang-pyo: member of the struggle department of the Seoul Council of University Student Representatives and instructor of six South Korean students who, on October 13, 1989, forced their way into the residence of U.S. ambassador Donald Gregg and set off explosives. Yi also provided the rental car and a 100,000-won action fund. The six students threw homemade bombs and Molotov cocktails at local guards, demanding that Washington stop pressuring Seoul to open its markets to U.S. agricultural and fishery products. The group was arrested while staging a sit-in at the residence's reception room. They claimed to be members of an anti-U.S. national salvation shock brigade struggling to attain national sovereignty. Police took homemade bombs, a tear gas canister, Molotov cocktails, and six steel pipes from the students. The six were charged with violating the anti-firebomb law and the law governing assault and battery. On November 10, 1989, prosecutors indicted the six students and ordered a nationwide manhunt for four others.

Yi Kil-yong: president of the Kunsan University Student Council and one of five college students arrested November 15, 1989, after throwing firebombs into a U.S. air base in Kunsan, Chollabuk-to, during the morning's anti-U.S. demonstration. On February 2, 1990, Judge Pang Kuk-song of the Kunsan Branch of the Chonju District Court sentenced Yi to 18 months in jail for throwing firebombs at the base and staging illegal rallies to demand the withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Korea. The judge said Yi must be punished since he had illegally organized several violent rallies over the past two years in violation of the law governing assemblies and demonstrations.

Yi Sung-kyu: senior in the Economics Department of Korea University who, on September 17, 1986, was one of five radical students who briefly took over the Japanese Information Office in Seoul, South Korea, to protest the Tenth Asian Games and Japanese prime minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's planned visit. Police confiscated a Molotov cocktail and four knives.

Yi Tae-chung: senior at Hankuk Theological University and one of several South Korean students who, on October 13, 1989, forced their way into the residence of U.S. ambassador Donald Gregg and set off explosives. The six students threw homemade bombs and Molotov cocktails at local guards, demanding that Washington stop pressuring Seoul to open its markets to U.S. agricultural and fishery products. The group was arrested while staging a sit-in at the residence's reception room. They claimed to be members of an anti-U.S. national salvation shock brigade struggling to attain national sovereignty. Police took homemade bombs, a tear gas canister, Molotov cocktails, and six steel pipes from the students. The six were charged with violating the anti-firebomb law and the law governing assault and battery. On November 10, 1989, prosecutors indicted the six students and ordered a nationwide manhunt for four others.

Yi Wang-kyun: freshman in the Education Department of Chonnam University arrested February 16, 1989, after 100 university students threw 50 firebombs at the U.S. Cultural Center in Kwangju, South Korea.

Yi Won-pyo: freshman at Kookmin University and one of five students charged on February 25, 1988, by Seoul police with breaking into the U.S. Information Service (USIS) library in Seoul, smashing three large glass windows, and illegally using explosives in a February 24, 1988, attack in which they used 30 Molotov cocktails. The group claimed membership in the National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youths, who were protesting the inauguration of president No Tae-U the next day.

Nadarasa Yogarasa: one of two Sri Lankan immigrants who, on January 26, 2009, pleaded guilty in a New York court to providing material support to terrorists for trying to supply hundreds of thousands of dollars of surface-to-air missiles and assault weapons to the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

Yohannes: one of four Eritrean Liberation Front hijackers of an Ethiopian Airlines DC3 flying from Bahr Dar to Gondar, Ethiopia, on January 22, 1971. The plane refueled in Khartoum, then flew on to Benghazi, Libya.

Masato Yokoyama: one of the five members of Aum Shin Rikyo who released sarin gas into the Tokyo subway on March 20, 1995. Yokoyama, age 39, was found guilty on September 30, 1999, and was sentenced to death.

Yong Ki Kwon: one of 11 members of a “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, 42-count federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. On August 25, Yong, age 27, pleaded guilty to conspiracy, transfer of a firearm for use in a crime of violence, and discharge of a firearm in relation to a crime of violence. He admitted to training with firearms in northern Virginia to prepare for a jihad abroad and to training in Pakistan at a Lashkar-i-Taiba camp. He said he had fired machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades. On November 7, 2003, he was sentenced to 11 years and 6 months for his larger role in the conspiracy.

On February 24, 2006, U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema reduced the sentences of two members of the Virginia jihad network—Khwaja Mahmood Hasan and Yong Ki Kwon—who had cooperated in the investigation. Prosecutors asked her to cut Yong’s sentence to 41 months. Brinkema gave him 38 months. With time served and good behavior, Yong was due to be released shortly after the new sentence was announced. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Kintaro Yoshida: one of nine Japanese United Red Army (JURA) hijackers of a Japan Airlines B727 flying from Tokyo to Fukuoka that was diverted to North Korea on March 31, 1970. On June 13, 1988, the Japanese Embassy in Manila said the JURA member, age 42, was at large.

Kazue Yoshihara: alias of Kazuo Yoshimura.

Kazue Yoshimura: variant of Kazuo Yoshimura.

Kazuo Yoshimura: variant Kazue Yoshimura; aliases Kazue Yoshihara, Yoko Okuyama. Following the September 13, 1974, Japanese Red Army (JRA) takeover of the French Embassy in The Hague, Yoshimura was placed on an international wanted list as an accomplice. She was also believed involved in the bombing of a Shell gas station in Singapore. On June 13, 1988, the Philippine Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member. On May 15, 1996, Peruvian police arrested Yoshimura, age 47, in Lima. They found three identification cards—for Kazuo Yoshihara, Yoko Okuyama, and Kazue Yoshimura—along with propaganda of the International Revolutionary Movement, which groups terrorists, including the Peruvian Shining Path, from various countries. She was expelled from Peru on June 6, 1996, for violation of immigration laws. She was escorted by two Japanese police agents on a commercial plane bound for Amsterdam. There she was met by another group of Japanese policemen, who joined their colleagues in taking her to Tokyo. Peru also deported a boy taken into protective custody who was with her at the time of her arrest.

Saeed son of Yousaf: one of five Libyans arrested March 27, 1993, by police in Peshawar, Pakistan, at a checkpoint near the Gulbahar crossing. Police found in their vehicle two .30 pistols and 30 cartridges, fake passport stamps, U.S. dollars, and Pakistani currency.

Ramzi Ahmed Yousef: variant of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

David Yu: allegedly drove the getaway car for two bicyclists who, on October 15, 1984, assassinated Henry Liu in his Daly City, California, garage. Liu was a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. Yu was arrested in San Gabriel, California, shortly after the murder but was released because of insufficient evidence.

Ekita Yukiko: female Japanese Red Army member released by the Japanese government during the Japan Airlines hijacking of September 28, 1977.

Muhammad Amin bin Mohamed Yunos: al Ghuraba member, age 21, arrested in October 2003 by Singapore. He had received military training in Afghanistan or with a Pakistani militant group. Al Ghuraba had been established in 1999 by Hambali. Yunos was one of 11 detainees who were being groomed as the next leaders of Jemaah Islamiyah.

Muklis Yunos: alias of Saifullah Yunos.

Saifullah Mokhlis Yunos: alias Muklis Yunos; variant Mokhlis Yunos. Special operations chief of the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front arrested in May 15, 2003, by Philippine security forces. Police were alerted that he would be flying Philippine Airlines Flight 182 from Cagayan de Oro in the southern Philippines to Manila. Yunos was disguised in head-to-toe bandages; his traveling companion, Dia Mahmoud Gabri, a Middle Eastern-looking man, said "Alex Soriano" had been in a car accident. Yunos was accused of bombing electric power stations in Mindanao in 2003 and of collaboration with Jemaah Islamiyah (JI). He had trained with Hambali, JI operations chief, in the artillery division of the al Qaeda camp in Saddah, Afghanistan, from 1987 to 1989. Police believed he assisted Hambali and JI operative Fathur Rahman Ghazi carry out a December 30, 2002, bombing of a Manila commuter train that killed 22 and injured 100. During his arraignment in July 2003, he entered a guilty plea for his involvement in the bombing.

Mohamed Sheikh Ibrahim Yusuf: Somali lieutenant colonel who, while serving as the pilot of a Somali AN-26 military aircraft from Mogadishu to Hargeysa on May 29, 1990, diverted it to Djibouti and requested political asylum. The Somalis requested extradition or that Djibouti prosecute him. Djibouti asked the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to resettle him. The UNHCR said it would resettle him "in a country far from their own, where he can find sanctuary."

Mohammad Yusuf: one of four Pakistani members of the Pakistan People's Party who, on March 26, 1991, hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur-Singapore route. After nine hours of negotiations, the Singapore Army stormed the plane and killed the hijackers, who had threatened violence against the passengers if their demands were not met in five minutes.

Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf: variant Yousef; aliases Abdul Basit, Naji Oweida Haddad, Abdul Basit Mahmood, Abdul Karim, Dr. Richard Smith, Dr. Paul Vijay, Adam Ali Qasim, Amaldo Forlani, and 13 others. Kuwaiti-born planner of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) who also plotted to set off bombs in a dozen U.S.-destined planes. He planned to crash a hijacked plane into the McLean, Virginia, headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency. On March 31, 1993, federal prosecutors in Manhattan indicted him. He was believed to have escaped to Egypt. He had resided at the same Jersey City address once occupied by Mohammed A. Salameh, who had rented the truck used in the WTC bombing. In August 1993, the U.S. offered a two-million-dollar reward for his arrest. Yusuf was arrested in the Sokawa rest house in Islamabad, Pakistan, on February 7, 1995, and was extradited to the United States that same month. He had been identified by Ishtiaque (variant Istiyaak) Parker, a South African Muslim who lived across from his rooming house. Yusuf pleaded not guilty to 11 felony charges in the WTC bombing.

The Islamabad-based Pakistan paper claimed he had planned to set off bombs at the Israeli Consulate in Bombay and the Israeli Embassy in New Delhi. It said he was involved in the bombings of the Israeli embassies in London and Buenos Aires and had contacts with the Afghan mujaheddin and Kashmiri nationalists. A Pakistani, Abdul Shakoor, implicated him in a June 20, 1994, bombing in Mashad, Iran, in which 25 died and 70 were injured. Pakistani police said he had intended to kill prime minister Benazir Bhutto on December 24, 1993, when she was in the nursery area in Karachi. Bhutto had earlier claimed that Yusuf had tried to kill her in September 1993 when he drove a car with explosives toward the Bilawal House in Karachi. He accidentally detonated the bomb he intended to place under a manhole cover near her home and was treated for injuries to his hands and released.

Yusuf escaped from his Manila apartment on January 6, 1995, when fire broke out while he and associate Said Ahmed were mixing explosive chemicals in the kitchen sink as part of a plot to assassinate the pope.

On April 1, 1995, Philippine authorities indicted Yusuf on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope and bombing the Philippine Airlines B747 in December.

On April 2, 1995, Pakistani authorities charged him with illegal possession of explosives. The next day, Abdul Shakur claimed that Yusuf had been involved in a plot against Prime Minister Bhutto but that the bomb had exploded in Yusuf's hands. Yusuf had been taken to the Civil Hospital under the name Khalid Ali and then moved to Aga Khan Hospital under the name Adam Baluch.

In an interview with London's al Hayat on April 11, 1995, he said his real name was Abdul Basit Balouchi and that he had been born and raised in Kuwait. He had used the name Abdel Basit Abdel Karim when he obtained a Pakistani passport in New York in 1992. He had used 20 other aliases. When he arrived at JFK International Airport on September 1, 1992, his airline ticket was for Azam Mohammed, and his picture ID card was for Kharram Kahn. He said his father was from Pakistan and his mother was Palestinian. His grandmother lived in Haifa, Israel. He claimed he had graduated from the Swansea Institute in the United Kingdom in 1989 with a degree in electrical engineering.

On April 13, 1995, U.S. prosecutors indicted him with the December 11, 1994, bombing of an airliner that killed Japanese passenger Haruki Ikegami and injured 10 people and of planning to bomb other U.S. airliners in the Bojinka plot. The bombing charge carried the death penalty. He was believed to have boarded the plane in Manila, placed a bomb under a seat in a life-vest holder, and then deplaned at Cebu before the plane left for Tokyo.

In a prison interview with London's al-Majallah, he claimed that he had used the aliases Ahmad Rashid, Ibrahim Kamal, 'Abd-al-Basit 'Abd-al-Karim, and Abd-al-Basit-al-Balushi. He had been reported as being Kuwaiti, Pakistani, Iraqi, and Palestinian. He claimed to speak Arabic, English, Urdu, and Baluchi.

On October 5, 1995, the United States in New York City charged that he possessed a letter threatening to kill Philippine president Fidel Ramos and poison the Philippine water supply. The letter demanded the release of his colleague, Abdal Hakim Murad, who had been arrested in January in a raid in Manila, from a Philippine jail.

Yusuf's release was demanded on November 13, 1995, by the group that set off a car bomb in a parking lot of a building belonging to the Saudi National Guard in Riyadh, killing 5 American military trainers and wounding 60 others.

On February 23, 1996, Yusuf was indicted for the December 1, 1994, bombing of the Greenbelt Theater in Manila, Philippines, that injured several moviegoers.

On September 5, 1996, he was found guilty on all seven counts in the conspiracy to set off the airplane bombs. He was sentenced to life in prison in 1997.

His release was demanded on March 20, 2000, by the Abu Sayyaf rebels who took 70 hostages, many of them children from two Philippine schools.

On April 4, 2003, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit upheld his convictions in the 1993 World Trade Center and the Bojinka plot.

Furuya Yutaka: alias of Japanese Red Army member Yoshiaki Yamada, alias Suzuki Furuya.

Z

---

T.Z.: alias S. Commander of the Darul Islam Holy War Command tried by Indonesia on January 19, 1978, for planning to hijack an airplane outside Indonesia to release detained Muslims and obtain a ransom.

Sayyad Zabiuddin: one of three initial suspects in the July 11, 2006, incident in which terrorists set off eight bombs in first-class rail cars at the Mahim rail station in Mumbai, killing 207 people and wounding 800.

Qari Mohammed Zafar: al Qaeda operative hiding in the tribal area of Pakistan and the local leader of Lashkar-i-Jhangvi, an outlawed militant group with ties to al Qaeda. His religious title of Qari means he had memorized the Koran. He was linked to a group of three men arrested in Karachi in late February 2007 carrying a suicide vest. He was believed to have recruited the team that killed several people in a suicide bombing against the U.S. Consulate on March 2, 2006. The United States offered five million dollars for information leading to his arrest.

Asif Zaheer: detained on December 13–14, 2002, for planning an attack on U.S. diplomats. On December 28, Zaheer, age 24, told police that he had prepared the May 8 car bomb that exploded next to a pink and white 46-seat Pakistani Navy Mercedes Marco Polo bus outside the upscale Karachi Sheraton Hotel and Towers on Club Road, killing 16 people—including 11 French citizens working for a technical company on a submarine project, 2 Pakistani beggars, and the bus driver—and wounding 22 others. A judge ordered him held for a fortnight so police could investigate his claim. He had been arrested in December as one of three men planning an attack on U.S. diplomats in Karachi; authorities seized 250 sacks of ammonium nitrate, which can be used in explosives. Zaheer was also a suspect in the murder of a television producer in Islamabad in 2002. Police arrested but did not immediately charge two others on January 7, 2003, as a result of Zaheer's information. In a January 8 update of his confession, Zaheer said that after packing the car with explosives, he turned the car over to Bashir Ahmed and Mohammed Rashid shortly before the attack. On June 30, the Pakistani anti-terrorism court sentenced three Islamic militants to death for the bombing.

Mohammad Zaid: one of five Pakistanis from Karachi arrested by Pakistani police on December 16, 1995, in a dawn raid in San Juan del Monte, Bulacan Province, Philippines. The Pakistanis were charged with illegal possession of firearms and were believed to be part of a terrorist group. They faced life in prison. Police seized a fragmentation grenade, a dynamite stick, two C-4 plastic explosives, and several pieces of detonation cord. Police said the terrorists planned to attack November 1995 Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Conference delegates and to assassinate Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto. They were sent by the Pakistani Muhajir Qaumi Movement.

Zaini Zakaria: the 9/11 Commission said Zakaria was initially scheduled to be a 9/11 hijacker. In February 2006, Malaysian and Southeast Asian security officials told the media that Zakaria, age 38, a Malaysian engineer who was to participate as a pilot in a second wave of al Qaeda 9/11-style hijackings on the U.S. West Coast, had been in Malaysian custody since December 2002. He got cold feet after seeing the carnage of 9/11 and did not want to become an Islamic martyr. Two other men in the plot who remained at large were Zacarias Moussaoui and Tunisian-born naturalized Canadian citizen Aberraouf Jdey, according to the Associated Press. Zakaria had been in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan in 1999; while there, he had met Riduan Isamuddin, alias Hambali. Upon his return to Malaysia in 1999, Zakaria enrolled in flight school and earned a license to fly a small plane. He looked into Australian jet pilot licenses. On 9/11, it dawned on him what al Qaeda had in mind for him, and he backed out. Zakaria had been represented by attorney Saiful Izham Ramli; his new attorney was Edmund Bon.

Sher Zaman: arrested January 17, 2008, in the North West Frontier Province of Pakistan in the December 27, 2007, assassination of former prime minister Benazir Bhutto. He was the handler of Aitzaz Shah, age 15, who was arrested with him. Shah said he had been trained as a suicide bomber to kill Benazir Bhutto if the first group did not kill her. The duo was picked up in Dera Ismail Khan while driving on a rural road near the border. Police found explosives in the car. Three other men were later detained. On March 1, 2008, Zaman was formally charged in court with aiding the assassination plot.

Zaman was raised in a conservative religious family and had studied finance in South Waziristan, Pakistan. He had worked for the government phone company and had started a car dealership. He had also worked for a government office that administered South Waziristan.

Commander Zapata: true name Pendatun Domiangca. Leader of six Moro National Liberation Front hijackers of a PAL BAC111 flying from Davao to Manila on May 21, 1976.

Asif Ali Zardari: husband of former Pakistani prime minister Benazir Bhutto and leader of the Pakistan People's Party (PPP). In 1991, he and other PPP members faced trial on charges of being involved in the August 22, 1990, killings of 28 members of a rival party. His release was demanded on March 26, 1991, when four PPP members hijacked a Singapore Airlines B747 on the Kuala Lumpur–Singapore route. He had been in prison since October 1990, when he was first charged in the kidnapping and extortion of a Pakistan-born U.K. citizen who wanted to set up a hospital in Karachi. Zardari had been charged with murder in February.

Mushtaq Zargat: alias Mustaq Ahmad Zarzar. Indian Kashmiri whose release was demanded by five Kashmiri hijackers of an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar Airport. He was freed by India on December 31, 1999. He was the commander of the militant pro-Pakistan al Umar Mujaheddin. He was arrested in 1991 and was charged with murder and other crimes.

Zarkasih: leader of the Jemaah Islamiyah captured on Java Island by Indonesian authorities on June 9, 2007. On April 21, 2008, he was sentenced to 15 years in prison for conspiracy to commit terrorist attacks, harboring fugitives, and stockpiling illegal arms.

Dr. Ayman Muhammad Rabi al-Zawahiri: aliases Abu Muhammad, Abu Fatima, Muhammad Ibrahim, Abu Abdallah, Abu al-Mu'iz, The Doctor, The Teacher, Nur, Ustaz, Abu Mohammed, Abu Mohammed Nur al-Deen, Abdel Muaz. Deputy to Osama bin Laden of al Qaeda. A physician and religious and ideological leader of al Qaeda, al-Zawahiri founded the Egyptian Gamaat Islamiyah. His military trial in absentia in Haekstep, Egypt, began on February 1, 1999. The military court sentenced him to death on April 18. He earlier had spent time in Egyptian jails for radical fundamentalist activities. He issued frequent audio- and videotapes to the Internet and al Jazeera following bin Laden and al-Zawahiri's fleeing Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks in the United States. He was born in Egypt on June 19, 1951. He was named as an unindicted coconspirator on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya. He was also charged with the murder of Americans outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. The State Department's Rewards for Justice Program offers $25 million for his apprehension. As of July 2008, he was believed hiding in either Afghanistan or Pakistan.

Khalid al-Zawahiri: reportedly Ayman al-Zawahiri's son, he was arrested February 24, 2004, in Pakistan.

Imron bin Mohammed Zein: believed to be a member of Komando Jihad, an Islamic fundamentalist group involved in the March 11, 1981, attack on a police station in Bandung, West Java, Indonesia. He was the only surviving hijacker who took over Garuda Airlines GA206, a DC9 flying from Palembang to Medan on March 28, 1981, and diverted to Penang, Malaysia. Police later said the hijackers were members of the Indonesian Islamic Revolution Board.

Zhang Hai: driver for the city government in the northern Chinese city of Tangshan who hijacked Xiamen Airlines Flight 2592, a B737 flying from Guangzhou to Xiamen, and diverted it to Taiwan's Taoyuan Airport, where he surrendered, on November 5, 1993. Taiwan rejected China's request for extradition and detained him on air piracy charges. Zhang said he "wanted to seek freedom" and did not intend to harm anyone. He was divorced and had a son. He said he hoped to meet with his maternal grandfather who resides in Taipei. He was indicted January 4, 1994, for violating Taiwan's aviation law.

Zhang Qingguo: variant Chang Hsin-Kuo. One of two Chinese citizens who, on May 12, 1988, hijacked a Xiamen Civil Aviation Administration B737 passenger plane from Amoy to Qingquangang Air Force Base in central Taiwan. The duo was sentenced to three years six months in prison. The mainland press claimed that their sentences were reduced on two occasions, that they were later released after little more than a year, and that they were permitted to settle in Taiwan.

Zhang Wenlong: former Chinese People's Liberation Army soldier who, on June 4, 1993, hijacked a Xiamen Airlines B737 flying from Changzhou to Xiamen and diverted it to Taiwan. The college-educated hijacker from Jiangsu Province in eastern China sought political asylum. On January 4, 1994, the Taoyuan District Court sentenced him to nine years in prison. He was given a lighter sentence than the 12 years called for by prosecutors because he surrendered himself to police upon landing. He said he would appeal the verdict. He was to be repatriated back to the mainland after serving his sentence.

Zhang Zhenhai: Chinese citizen who, on December 16, 1989, hijacked Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 981, a B747 flying from Beijing to New York via San Francisco, and demanded to fly to Seoul. The plane landed at Japan's Fukuoka Airport, where the pilot pushed him out of the plane. Zhang sustained a broken pelvis when he hit the concrete and was taken to a local hospital. His wife, age 35, and son, age 13, were detained.

Zhang was born in Handan City, Hebei, on January 16, 1954. He was the head of a textile machinery plant in Hebei Province. He said he wanted to flee to Taiwan with his family and had tired of China following the military crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in Beijing in early June. He had been arrested in October for participating in the demonstrations.

China requested extradition, which Deputy Chief Cabinet Secretary Nobuo Ishihara agreed to. However, Japan cannot automatically deport hijackers if they express a wish for political asylum. The next day, prime minister Toshiki Kaifu authorized extradition.

Zhang underwent surgery before being imprisoned on December 31, 1989. On January 11, 1990, he was transferred from a Fukuoka detention house to Tokyo for a court hearing on extradition. On February 14, he formally requested political asylum. On February 22, China formally requested extradition. On February 24, the Tokyo Immigration Bureau rejected Zhang's request to be recognized as a refugee. On March 23, trial proceedings opened at the Tokyo High Court. On April 20, the court rejected the asylum request and said there was no legal reason why the justice minister should not make an extradition order. On April 23, 1990, Zhang applied for permanent Canadian residence. On April 24, the Supreme Court upheld the Tokyo High Court's decision approving extradition. On April 28, Zhang was handed over to Chinese security officials at the Tokyo detention house. On July 18, Japan's prime minister refused to comment on Zhang's eight-year sentence. Zhang's civic rights were also suspended for two years. On January 4, 1994, he received a nine-year sentence.

On April 26, 1993, his lawyers said that they believed he was forced to sign a statement asking them to drop a suit they were pursuing on his behalf against the Japanese government. They were seeking five million yen in damages for extraditing him to China in 1990.

Zhou Gang: sentenced to 14 years in prison in 1982 for robbery, Zhou was released after serving his sentence in July 1993. Chinese police issued a wanted circular for the Chengdu resident who, on December 13, 1994, threw a hand grenade into a crowd at the Chengdu Railway Station, killing or injuring 15 people.

Zhuo Changren: supply official of the Liaoning Provincial Government in China and leader of the six hijackers of Civil Aviation Administration of China Flight 296, flying domestically from Shenyang to Shanghai on May 5, 1983. His six-year sentence was later commuted. In December 1992, Taiwan sentenced Zhuo to death for kidnapping and killing a kidnap victim. (See also An Chien-wei.)

Mohammad Zubair: member of the Punjabi Taliban, a splinter of Lashkar-i-Jhangvi, arrested by Pakistani police on June 17, 2009, in connection with the March 3, 2009, attack on the Sri Lanka cricket team.

Mohammed Farik bin Amin Zubair: Thai Malaysian Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) and al Qaeda member suspected of laundering al Qaeda funds through front companies, nonprofit organizations, and orphanages. He was one of four JI terrorists—one Singaporean and three Thais—arrested June 10, 2003, by Thai authorities, who announced the suspects were planning attacks on five Western embassies, including those of the United States, Singapore, United Kingdom, and Australia, and Thai beach resorts popular with Western tourists, including Pattaya and Phuket. The Thais were arrested in Narathiwat Province near the Malaysian border.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

During hearings on March 13 and 17, 2007, the U.S. military accused Zubair of transporting $50,000 used in the Jakarta Marriott Hotel bombing.

Mohammed Abu Zubayda: variant of Abu Zubaydah.

Abu Zubaydah: alias Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn; variants Mohammed Abu Zubayda, Mohammed Hussein Zein-al-Abideen, Zayn Abidin Muhammed Hussein Abu Zubaida. Head of al Qaeda logistics and smuggling operations. He was linked to a host of al Qaeda terrorists, including Khalil Deek, with whom he had a $3,000 joint bank account. On February 29, 2000, Jordanian officials told the press that they believed he was a key member of a plot to attack Israelis, Americans, and other Christian tourists. He was among 14 plotters who remained at large.

Zubaydah was born in 1973 and went to Afghanistan as a teen, where he met Osama bin Laden. The Gaza Strip resident was believed to be a member of bin Laden's inner circle. He fled to Afghanistan after directing the plot from Pakistan. He was believed to be in contact with the Algerians charged in a separate attempt to bomb targets in the United States. Some believed he was the communications chief and coordinator of al Qaeda operations outside Afghanistan. He also served as a gatekeeper for bin Laden's Afghanistan training camps.

On September 24, 2001, President Bush ordered his U.S. assets frozen.

He was arrested in Pakistan on March 27, 2002.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On March 27, 2007, during Zubaydah's hearing before the Combatant Status Review Tribunal at Guantánamo Bay, he denied membership in al Qaeda and said he differed with its approach to jihad. The Pentagon charged that he was the administrative director of the Khaldan training camp in Afghanistan and that he had forged documents and was the travel facilitator for al Qaeda. He had helped Abu Musab al-Zarqawi sneak into Iraq from Afghanistan in November 2001.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared him an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

Zulkarnaen: alias Daud; true name Aris Sumarsono. Probable highest-ranked Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) leader with direct contact with Osama bin Laden's network. Zulkarnaen was born in 1963 in central Java, Indonesia, and went to an Indonesian university, where he earned a degree in biology. He traveled to Afghanistan for sabotage training in the 1980s, one of the first Indonesian militants to do so. He is believed to have become JI operations chief after the arrest of his predecessor, Riduan Isamuddin, alias Hambali. He heads the Laskar Khos (special force), whose members were recruited from 300 Indonesians trained in Afghanistan and the Philippines. He is believed to have been behind the attacks against Christians in the Maluku Islands in the 1990s. He is also wanted for questioning in connection with the October 1, 2005, triple suicide bombings in Bali restaurants that killed 25 people and injured 100. On May 12, 2005, the U.S. Department of the Treasury declared his assets frozen by executive order.

SELECTED READINGS

---

- For incident descriptions, see chronology references in the Introduction, and for a more thorough bibliographical treatment, see Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons, Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology, 3 vols. (Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2006).
- Alexander, Yonah, and Michael S. Swetnam, eds. Usama bin Laden's al-Qaida: Profile of a Terrorist Network. Ardsley, NY: Transnational, 2001.
- Atkins, Stephen E. Encyclopedia of Modern Worldwide Extremists and Extremist Groups. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2004.
- Bergen, Peter L. Holy War, Inc.: Inside the Secret World of Osama bin Laden. New York: Free Press, 2001.
- Bergen, Peter L. The Osama bin Laden I Know: An Oral History of al Qaeda's Leader. New York: Free Press, 2006.
- Bodansky, Yossef. Bin Laden: The Man Who Declared War on America. New York: Forum, 2001.
- Bowden, Mark. "Jihadists in Paradise." Atlantic 299, no. 2 (March 2007).
- Brackett, D. W. Holy Terror: Armageddon in Tokyo. Trumble, CT: Weatherhill, 1996.
- Coll, Steve. The Bin Ladens: An Arabian Family in the American Century. New York: Penguin, 2008.
- Coll, Steve. Ghost Wars: The Secret History of the CIA, Afghanistan, and bin Laden, from the Soviet Invasion to September 11, 2001. New York: Penguin, 2004.
- Coll, Steve. "Young Osama: How He Learned Radicalism and May Have Seen America." New Yorker, December 12, 2005.
- Dennis, Anthony J. Osama bin Laden: A Psychological and Political Portrait. Bristol, IN: Wyndham, 2002.
- Dobson, Christopher, and Ronald Payne. The Terrorists: Their Weapons, Leaders, and Tactics. New York: Facts on File, 1982.
- Farrell, William R. Blood and Rage: The Story of the Japanese Red Army. Lexington, MA: Lexington Books, 1990.
- Fouda, Yosri, and Nick Fielding. Masterminds of Terror: The Truth behind the Most Devastating Terrorist Attack the World Has Ever Seen. New York: Arcade and Mainstream, 2005.
- Gunaratna, Rohan. Inside al Qaeda: Global Network of Terror. New York: Columbia University Press, 2002.
- Hoffman, Bruce. Inside Terrorism. New York: Columbia University Press, 1998.
- Kim, Hyun Hee. The Tears of My Soul. New York: Morrow, 1994.
- Mansfield, Laura. In His Own Words: A Translation of the Writings of Dr. Ayman al-Zawahiri. Old Tappan, NJ: TLG, 2006.
- McDermott, Terry. Perfect Soldiers: The Hijackers—Who They Were, Why They Did It. New York: HarperCollins, 2006.
- Messages to the World: The Statements of Osama bin Laden*. London: Verso, 2005.

- Mickolus, Edward F. International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events, 1968–1977, ITERATE 2 Data Codebook. Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, 1982.
- Mickolus, Edward F. The Literature of Terrorism: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1980.
- Mickolus, Edward F. “Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography.” Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.
- Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 1988–1991: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Bibliographies and Indexes in Military Studies, No. 6. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993.
- Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2008.
- Mickolus, Edward F., with Peter Flemming. Terrorism, 1980–1987: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: A Chronology. Vol. 1, 1980–1983. Ames, IA: Iowa State University Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: A Chronology. Vol. 2, 1984–1987. Ames, IA: Iowa State University Press, 1989.
- Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1992–1995: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997.
- Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1996–2001: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. 2 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology. 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2005.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2008–2010: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, in press.
- Nash, Jay Robert. Terrorism in the 20th Century: A Narrative Encyclopedia from the Anarchists, through the Weathermen, to the Unabomber. New York: Evans, 1998.
- Randal, Jonathan. Osama: The Making of a Terrorist. New York: Knopf, 2004.
- Rashid, Ahmed. Jihad: The Rise of Militant Islam in Central Asia. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press, 2002.
- Reeve, Simon. The New Jackals: Ramzi Yousef, Osama bin Laden, and the Future of Terrorism. Boston: Northeastern University Press, 1999.
- Ressa, Maris A. Seeds of Terror: An Eyewitness Account of al Qaeda’s Newest Center of Operations in Southeast Asia. New York: Free Press, 2003.
- Robinson, Adam. Bin Laden: Behind the Mask of the Terrorist. Edinburgh, Scotland: Mainstream, 2001.
- Samudra, Imam. Me against the Terrorist. Indonesia: Sipress, 2004.
- [Scheuer, Michael]. Through Our Enemies’ Eyes: Osama bin Laden, Radical Islam, and the Future of America. Washington, DC: Brassey’s, 2002.
- Shanty, Frank, and Raymond Picquet, eds. Encyclopedia of World Terrorism. Santa Barbara, CA: M. E. Sharpe, 2003.
- Steinhoff, Patricia G. “Portrait of a Terrorist: An Interview with Kozo Okamoto.” Asian Survey 16 (September 1976): 830–45.
- Temple-Raston, Dina, and Marguerite Gavin. The Jihad Next Door: The Lackawanna Six and Rough Justice in the Age of Terror. New York: Public Affairs, 2007.
- Tenet, George J., with Bill Harlow. At the Center of the Storm: My Years at the CIA. New York: HarperCollins, 2007.

- U.S. Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General. Follow-Up Audit of the Terrorist Screening Center. Audit Report 07-41. September 2007. <http://www.usdoj.gov/oig/reports/FBI/a0741/final.pdf>.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2003 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2002.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2004 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2003.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2005 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2004.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2006 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2005.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2007 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2006.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC). Counterterrorism Calendar 2008: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2007.
- Victor, Barbara. Army of Roses: Inside the World of Women Suicide Bombers. Emmaus, PA: Rodale Books, 2003.
- Zahab, Mariam Abou, and Olivier Roy. Islamist Networks: The Afghan-Pakistan Connection. New York: Columbia University Press, 2004.

INDEX

---

- Abu Faraj Libbi, 71
Abu Khubayb, 9
Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, 53
Abu Nidal Organization, 204
Abu Sayyaf, 8, 24, 47, 50, 62, 67,
102–3, 109–11, 113, 146, 148,
165–66, 201–2, 205–7, 213, 215,
227–28
Aceh Security Disturbance Movement, 65, 133, 135
Advice and Reform Committee, 72
Afghan intelligence service, 5
African National Congress (ANC),
64–65, 93, 96, 113, 115, 128, 135,
138–39, 142, 146, 153–54, 156,
159–61, 166, 176, 213, 224, 237,
246–47
Afrikaner Resistance Movement
(AWB), 233, 244
AHAI. See Al-Harkat-al-Islamia
Akali Dal party, 222
Albanian National Liberation Army,
102
Alex Boncayao Brigade (New People's Army), 58–59, 62, 137, 139, 187,
200–201, 206, 209
All Burma Students Democratic
Front, 135
All-India Sikh Student Federation,
87, 154, 209, 221
Amal, 62
Ananda Marg, 66
ANC. See African National Congress
Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam), 53
Anti-Imperialist International Brigade, 217
Anti-U.S. Youth Group, 56–57
April 6 Liberation Movement, 39,
49
Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, 230
Army for the Liberation of Rwanda,
47, 134, 179, 236
Asia Corps, 147
Asif Reza Commandoes. See Reza
Commando Force
Aso Red Army, 119
Assembly of Authentic Islam. See
Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh
Aum Divine Wizard Association, 27
Aum Shin Rikyo, 26–27, 85, 91, 95,
106–7, 114, 129, 132, 135, 153,
167, 177, 182, 184, 218, 227, 230,
232, 235–37, 249, 251
Aum Supreme Truth, 27
AWB. See Afrikaner Resistance
Movement
Ayr, 33
Ayud, 33
Azad Hind Sena, 63
Azanian National Liberation Army,
156
Azanian People's Liberation Army,
155–56
Balik Islam, 206
Bamboo Gang, 54, 237
Al Barakaat, 113
Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), 46
Black Consciousness Movement, 156
Black Liberation Front, 61
Black Panthers, 138
Black September, 189, 230
Cambodian Freedom Fighters, 131
Canary Islands Intelligence Service against Antonio Cubillo, 75
Carlos Group, 20
Cells of the Arab Fighters, 214
Central African National Liberation
Movement, 73, 138
Chondachyop. See National Council of Student Representatives Chosen Soren, 130
Chukaku-ha (Middle Core Faction),
106, 224, 226
Communist Party of the Philippines
(CPP), 44, 67–69, 147, 180, 193,
208, 223
Congoles Liberation Front, 57
Cotabato, 75
CPP. See Communist Party of the Philippines
Dalit Panthers, 138
Dal Khala, 46, 220, 222
Dawood Ibrahim, 71
Democratic Alliance of Burma, 246
Direct Action, 208
Dural Islam Holy War Command, 258
Eastern Turkistan Islamic Movement
(ETIM), 146
East Turkistan Islamic Movement,
213, 251
Eelam People's Revolutionary Liberation Front, 186
Egyptian Islamic Group, 8, 15, 90,
121, 162, 165, 168, 174, 196, 218,
239, 251
Egyptian Islamic Jihad (EIJ), 5, 116
EIJ. See Egyptian Islamic Jihad
Elite Paratroops Unit of the Ground
Self-Defense Force (SDF), 27
EPLF. See Eritrean People's Liberation
Front
EPRP. See Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Army
Eritrean Liberation Army, 165
Eritrean Liberation Forces, 155
Eritrean Liberation Front, 14, 101,
112, 162, 165, 211–12, 233, 254

- Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF), 202
- ETA. See Basque Nation and Liberty
- Ethiopian National Patriot Front. See Ethiopian Unity Patriot Front
- Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Army (EPRP), 109, 112, 229
- Ethiopian Unity Patriot Front (Ethiopian National Patriot Front), 46, 246
- ETIM. See Eastern Turkistan Islamic Movement
- Euskadi Ta Askatasuna (ETA), 46
- Al-Faran (Jungle Warriors), 6, 34, 84, 137–38
- FARC. See Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia
- Farmers Movement of the Philippines (KMP), 67
- Fatah, 14, 181
- FEDEMO. See Federal Democratic Movement
- Federal Democratic Movement (FEDEMO), 168, 212
- FLNKS. See Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front
- Free India Army, 63
- Free Papua Movement (OPM), 133, 246
- Friends of Mayumi Hachiya, 82
- Gamaat Islamiyah, 259
- Al Ghuraba, 80, 171
- God's Army, 96
- Guardians of the Friends of the Prophet. See Sipah-e-Sahaba
- Hakturyon, 55
- Hamas, 16, 40, 50, 68, 121
- Al-Harkat-al-Islamia (AHAI), 171
- Harkat-e-Jihad-e-Islami (Harkat-ul-Jihad-i-Islami), 117, 127
- Harkat-ul-Ansar (Movement of Friends), 6, 34, 37, 138
- Harkat-ul-Jihad, 11, 99
- Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, 3, 10, 47, 85, 117, 126, 138, 154, 204
- Harkat ul-Mujaheddin al-Almi, 28, 103
- Hawalas*, 137
- Heavenly Bliss Association, 27
- Hezbollah. See Islamic Preaching Group
- Hezbollah Mujaheddin, 214
- Hidaka Commando Unit (Japanese Red Army), 60
- Hizb al-Dawa al-Islamiah, 19
- Hizballah, 16, 62, 179
- Hizbul-Mujaheddin, 60
- Hizbul Shabbab, 33
- Holy Army. See Lashkar-i-Taiba
- Horizon of Arabic Knowledge. See Matla-ul-Uloom-ul-Arabiyya
- Human Concern International, 3, 116, 120, 203
- IJ. See Islamic Jihad
- India Army, 222
- Indian Independent Forces, 63
- Indonesian Mujaheddin Council, 66
- International Islamic Relief Organization, 121
- International Mollah Force, 148
- International Muslim Brotherhood, 159
- International Revolutionary Movement, 254
- Islamic Army in Iraq, 37
- Islamic Coordination Council, 114
- Islamic Inquilab Mahaz (Front for Islamic Uprising), 77
- Islamic International Relief Organization, 105
- Islamic Jihad (IJ), 14, 30
- Islamic Muhajir Quami Movement, 83
- Islamic mujaheddin militia, 9
- Islamic Muthidda Quami Movement, 238
- Islamic Preaching Group (Hezbollah Dawah al-Islamiah), 82
- Islamic Resistance Movement, 16. See also Hamas
- Islamic Saturday Meeting, 17, 62, 115
- Islamic Zakat Fund Trust, 106
- al-Ittihad al-Islami, 12
- Jaish-i-Muhammad, 7, 34, 77, 83, 87, 175, 198, 204, 230
- JAM. See Jamaat al Muslimeen
- Jamaat al Muslimeen (JAM), 178–79
- Jamaat-e-Islami, 85, 122, 239
- Jamaat ul-Fuqra, 78
- Jamaat ul-Mujaheddin, 105, 196, 228
- Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh (Assembly of Authentic Islam), 208
- Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, 123
- Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna (People's Liberation Front), 190
- Janawadi Mocha (United Front), 222
- Japanese Red Army (JRA), 3, 5, 14, 16, 33, 40–41, 50, 55, 60, 68, 70–71, 81, 94–95, 97, 104, 106, 117, 129, 132, 134, 144, 151–53, 155, 171, 177–78, 181–83, 206, 210–11, 213, 217, 229–30, 234–35, 237, 243–44, 249–51, 254–55, 257
- Japanese United Red Army (JURA), 132, 134, 150, 182, 190, 217, 230–32, 235, 240, 251, 254
- Jehad Force, 12
- Jemaah Islamiyah (JI), 1, 3, 5, 7, 18, 22, 34, 36–39, 65–66, 68, 75, 77–78, 84, 88, 95, 104, 109, 118, 125, 138, 144–45, 150, 153, 156, 165, 171, 187, 191, 200–201, 208–9, 227, 234–35, 240, 255, 259, 261–62
- Jewish Defense League, 83
- JI. See Jemaah Islamiyah
- Joint Relief Committee for Kosovo, 114
- JRA. See Japanese Red Army
- Jungle Warriors. See Al-Faran
- JURA. See Japanese United Red Army
- Justice and Liberation Warriors, 252
- Kabataang Makabayan, 57, 142
- al-Kamp training camp, 121, 168, 174, 207, 218, 239
- Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front (FLNKS), 60, 63–64, 114, 139, 234, 243
- Kangu training camp, 121, 168, 174, 207, 218, 239
- Karen National Union, 96
- Kashmiri Liberation Front, 28, 192–93
- Kashmir Liberation Army (KLA), 51, 119
- Kashmir National Liberation Front, 51
- Khalidan training camp, 140, 165, 262
- Khalistan Liberation Force, 209
- Khmer Rouge, 46, 49, 55, 154, 186, 200
- KLA. See Kashmir Liberation Army
- KMP. See Farmers Movement of the Philippines
- Komando Jihad, 260

- Kosovo Liberation Army, 93
 Kumpulun Mujahidin Malaysia, 95
- Lashkar-i-Jhangvi, 46, 51, 199, 239, 261
 Lashkar-i-Taiba (Holy Army), 1, 7, 25, 28, 53–54, 61, 76–77, 93, 99, 117, 137, 168, 176, 195, 201, 203, 211, 214, 216, 232–33, 254
 Lashkar Jundullah, 65
 Laskar Khos, 262
 Lendu tribe, 57
 Liberation Front of the Senegalese People, 228, 236
 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), 21, 25, 39–40, 46, 57, 63, 102, 104, 109, 133–34, 145, 168, 170, 172, 177, 184, 186, 189, 194, 196, 198, 201–3, 210, 212, 215, 223–26, 231, 233, 234, 240–41, 247, 254
 Libyan Revolutionary Cells, 17, 97–98, 121, 206, 232
 LTTE. See Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam
- Malaysian Mujaheddin Group, 66
 Mariano Garcia Brigade (New People's Army), 26, 58–59, 188
 Masjid Al-Huda mosque, 8
 Matla-ul-Uloom-ul-Arabiyya (Horizon of Arabic Knowledge), 122
 MDJT. See Movement for Democracy and Justice in Chad MEND. See Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta Middle Core Faction. See Chukaku-ha
 MILF. See Moro Islamic Liberation Front
 MNLF. See Moro National Liberation Front
 Mohammed's Army, 121
 Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), 5, 7, 24, 36, 46, 66, 75, 80, 84, 88, 104, 108–9, 115, 125, 144, 149–50, 167, 170, 202, 206–7, 210, 226, 229–30, 240, 255
 Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF), 4, 17, 20, 24, 27, 29, 46, 49, 67, 80–81, 108–9, 113, 138, 143, 150, 156, 161, 168, 172, 212, 234, 259
 Mount Carmel Martyrs, 151
- Movement for Democracy and Justice in Chad (MDJT), 62 Movement for Islamic Reform in Arabia, 17
 Movement for Self-Determination and Independence of the Canary Islands, 75
 Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND), 64, 75, 181, 235
 Movement of Friends. See Harkat-ul-Ansar
 Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO), 20, 23, 63–64, 73, 85, 139, 151, 175, 200
 Muhajir Quami Movement, 9, 19, 29, 125–26, 168, 170–71, 206, 258
 Muhammad's Army, 95
 Mujabbar Bakr Commando Group, 112, 193, 243
 Al Mur Honey, 172–73
 Muslim Brotherhood, 136, 163
 Muslim Janbaz Force, 126
 Muttahida Majlis-e-Amal (the United Action Front), 122, 197
 Muttahida Quami Movement, 207
- National Alliance of Student Representatives, 129, 225
 National Committee against Independence, 63
 National Council of Student Representatives (Chondaehyop), 187
 National Democratic Front, 180
 National Freedom Force, 244
 Nationalist and Integrationist Front, 175, 227
 National Patriotic Front of Liberia, 232
 National Resistance Army, 129, 162, 168
 National Salvation Death Band of Students and Youth, 23, 85, 116, 254
 National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, 79
 National Union of Iraqi Students and Youth, 211
 Negros Regional Rebel Chapter, 73
 Nepalese Communist Party, 46, 64, 226
 New People's Army (NPA), 3–4, 7, 17, 20, 24, 26, 41, 43, 49–51, 53, 57–59, 61–62, 67, 69, 73–74, 80, 95, 106, 109, 113–14, 130, 132, 136–37, 139, 142, 144–45, 149–50, 154–55, 160, 172, 174, 180, 187–88, 191, 198–99, 200–201, 206, 208–9, 219, 223, 225, 227, 229, 236, 245
 Nigerian Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta, 17
 Northwest Revolutionary Committee, 191
 NPA. See New People's Army
- Operation Martyr Kamal Adwan, 181
 OPM. See Free Papua Movement
 Orde Boerevolk. See Order of the Boer People
 Order of the Boer People (Orde Boerevolk), 201
 Organization of Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, 230–31
 Organization of Sons of Occupied Territories, 151
 Organization of the Soldiers of God–Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, 17, 97–98, 121, 206, 232
- Pakistan intelligence service, 34, 139
 Pakistan People's Party (PPP), 18, 111, 133, 162, 227, 255, 259
 Palestine Liberation Army, 230
 Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), 6, 9, 144, 152, 177
 Palestinian Islamic Jihad, 16
 Pasdaran-e Inqilab-e Islami, 61
 Patriotic Youth Commando (PYC), 55, 131, 180, 191, 219
 Patriotic Youth Suicide Squad, 55
 Pattani United Liberation Organization (PULO), 134, 145, 152, 233
 People of Palestine, 151
 People's Army, 47
 People's Liberation Army, 260
 People's Liberation Front. See Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna
 People's National Army, 179
 People's War Group, 198
 Peruvian Shining Path, 254
 PFLP. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
 Pillar. See Sandigan
 PLO. See Palestine Liberation Organization
 Popular Forces, 208

- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), 10, 88, 148, 151, 167, 181–82, 192, 206, 208, 217, 243, 249, 251
- Popular Liberation Forces, 14, 112
- Portuguese Army, 199–200
- PPP. See Pakistan People's Party
- PULO. See Pattani United Liberation Organization
- PYC. See Patriotic Youth Commando
- Al-Qadir Traders, 7
- al Qaeda, 2–3, 5–7, 9–10, 12–18, 21, 26, 28, 30, 32–38, 40–43, 47–48, 65–68, 70–72, 75–77, 78, 84, 89, 91–95, 105–6, 108, 110, 112, 120, 122–24, 126, 128, 137, 140, 145, 147, 150, 152–54, 156, 159, 163, 168, 173, 179–80, 184, 188–89, 192–94, 197–98, 200–201, 210, 215, 218, 223–25, 227, 233–34, 238–39, 245–46, 258–59, 261–62
- Rabita, 114
- Raja Buayan Revolutionary Committee, 202
- Rajah Solaiman Movement, 210
- Red Scorpion Group, 7, 62, 144, 183, 200, 236
- Reform the Armed Forces Movement, 95, 178
- Registered Trustees of the Prince Sultan Bin Abdul Aziz Special Committee on Relief, 39
- RENAMO. See Mozambique National Resistance Movement
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia (FARC), 224
- Revolutionary Council, 202
- Revolutionary Organization of People in Arms in Guatemala, 169
- Revolutionary United Front, 76
- Reza Commando Force (Asif Reza Commandoes), 147
- RUF. See Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front
- SACP. See South African Communist Party
- Sandigan (Pillar), 49
- SDF. See Elite Paratroops Unit of the Ground Self-Defense Force
- Seventh Day Adventist Church, 232
- Seychelles Resistance Movement, 28, 62
- Shock Brigade of Students in Taegu Regions for Saving the Nation, 186
- Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front (RUF), 209
- Sikh Akali Dal, 32, 63
- Sipah-e-Sahaba (Guardians of the Friends of the Prophet), 232
- Somali al-Shabab, 200
- Somali Coast Liberation Front, 71
- Somali Salvation Democratic Front, 2, 6, 51, 104, 158
- South African Communist Party (SACP), 62–63, 86, 224
- South African Pan Africanist Congress, 149, 155, 178, 223
- Spear of the Nation (Umkhonto we Sizwe), 146
- Sri Lankan Liberation Tigers, 194, 218
- Student Islamic Movement of India, 43
- Student Struggle League, 55
- Tabligh Jamaat, 12, 15, 19, 33, 54, 120, 148, 155, 218, 232
- Taliban, 6, 9, 18, 34, 87, 93–94, 105, 136, 154, 156, 158, 197, 201
- Tandzim al Qoidah Indonesia Wilayah Serambi Makkah, 65
- Tanzim Qaedat al-Jihad, 236
- Tawheed Mosque, 21
- Tehrik-e-Taliban, 105
- Thonglit Chokbengboun, 54, 190
- TPLA. See Turkish People's Liberation Army
- Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA), 13
- Turkistan Islamic Party, 149, 213
- Uganda Democratic Alliance, 169, 212
- Uganda Federal Army, 169, 212
- Ugandan Lord's Resistance Army, 134
- al Umar Mujaheddin, 259
- Umkhonto we Sizwe. See Spear of the Nation
- Union of the Seoul District Students General Association, 55
- United Action Front. See Muttahida Majlis-e-Amal
- United Bamboo Gang, 54, 237
- Vigorous Burmese Student Warriors, 96
- Vishwa Hindu Parishad (World Hindu Council), 239
- Warriors of Jhangvi, 43
- West Side Boys, 49
- World Hindu Council. See Vishwa Hindu Parishad
- World Islamic Front for Fighting Jews and Crusaders, 72
- www.azzam.com, 8
- www.qoqaz.net, 8
- Yamaguchi-gumi, 171
- YOU. See Young Officers Union
- Young Officers Union (YOU), 186, 241
- Zairian Socialist Party, 46
- ZAPU. See Zimbabwe African People's Union
- Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU), 65, 161

About the Authors

DR. EDWARD F. MICKOLUS wrote the first doctoral dissertation on international terrorism while earning a PhD from Yale University. He then served in analytical, operational, management, and staff positions in the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years, where he was CIA's first full-time analyst on international terrorism; analyzed African political, economic, social, military, and leadership issues; wrote political-psychological assessments of world leaders; and managed collection, counterintelligence, and covert action programs against terrorists, drug traffickers, weapons proliferators, and hostile espionage services. He founded Vinyard Software, Inc., whose products include ITERATE (International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events) text and numeric datasets and DOTS (Data on Terrorist Suspects). Clients include 150 universities in 21 countries. His 20 books include a series of multivolume chronologies and annotated bibliographies on international terrorism; 12 book chapters; 100 articles and reviews in refereed scholarly journals and newspapers and presentations to professional societies; and 14 humorous publications. Recent publications include Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology; Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.); The Terrorist List: The Middle East; and International Terrorism in the 1980's: A Chronology of Events, Volumes 1 and 2.

SUSAN L. SIMMONS is an independent writer, editor, and writing coach. She works with faculty to publish and achieve tenure; graduate students to complete dissertations; new fiction and nonfiction writers to complete manuscripts, prepare proposals, and find venues and agents; and businesses to prepare sensitive letters and documents and to research and write reports for venture capital firms. She specializes in the fields of international relations, art history, education, psychology, and business. Simmons holds a master's degree in English literature from the University of Minnesota and has worked in the field of terrorism since 1993. She coauthored Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.).

THE TERRORIST LIST

THE TERRORIST LIST

---

Volume 2

Western Europe

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

PRAEGER SECURITY INTERNATIONAL

AN IMPRINT OF ABC-CLIO, LLC
Santa Barbara, California • Denver, Colorado • Oxford, England

Copyright 2011 by Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, except for the inclusion of brief quotations in a review, without prior permission in writing from the publisher.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Mickolus, Edward F.

The terrorist list / Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons.

v. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Contents: v. 1. Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa — v. 2. Western Europe — v. 3. Eastern Europe — v. 4. North America — v. 5. South America.

ISBN 978-0-313-37471-5 (alk. paper) — ISBN 978-0-313-37472-2 (ebook)

1. Terrorists—Biography. 2. Terrorism. I. Simmons, Susan L. II. Title.

HV6430.A1M53 2011

363.325092'2—dc22 2010033700

ISBN: 978-0-313-37471-5

EISBN: 978-0-313-37472-2

15 14 13 12 11 1 2 3 4 5

This book is also available on the World Wide Web as an eBook.

Visit www.abc-clio.com for details.

Praeger

An Imprint of ABC-CLIO, LLC

ABC-CLIO, LLC

130 Cremona Drive, P.O. Box 1911

Santa Barbara, California 93116-1911

This book is printed on acid-free paper

Manufactured in the United States of America

Our endless gratitude to Susan, Ciana, and P.B.

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	ix
THE TERRORIST LIST	1
SELECTED READINGS	329
INDEX	331

INTRODUCTION

---

The following list includes the names of individuals who have appeared in my previous chronologies of international terrorism and individuals who have been named in open sources as somehow involved in terrorist attacks or organizations. The list is designed to serve as a directory of leaders, perpetrators, financiers, defendants, detainees, persons of interest, conspirators, and aliases in the region of Western Europe from 1950 to 2008. It includes individuals with a nationality of a country in the regions, whose operations were generally considered to have been conducted in the regions, who were detained in the regions, who were wanted for trial in the regions, against whom an arrest warrant had been issued in the regions, and/or whose cases were tried on the soil of the regions. Aliases, nicknames, and kunya, when known, are included.

This list does not purport to be globally comprehensive—it is limited solely to international incidents or other incidents of sufficient import to be included in previous chronologies. Then again, inclusion does not mean the individual is a terrorist. Many of the individuals listed were later determined by a court to be innocent of any involvement in the incidents or organizations or there was not sufficient evidence to proceed to trial. Others were prisoners who had their release demanded in hostage negotiations. Still others were involved in nonterrorist hijackings or nonpolitical criminal activities similar to attacks conducted for political motives and are included to give the flavor of the security environment that existed during this period. Some of those included acted in the prehistory of modern terrorism but served as models for those whose motivations in later years were more in line with terrorism as we now know it.

I have attempted to include major cases of domestic terrorism or cases that have been tried under national antiterrorism statutes. This should not be interpreted as indicating that I consider the individuals to be terrorists, nor does it indicate any position on the underlying motivations of the individuals named or the merits of their causes. In some cases, individuals so accused have gone on to become government leaders.

The list uses the same definitions as my earlier books. International terrorism is the use or threat of use of anxiety-inducing extranormal violence for political purposes by any individual or group, whether acting for or in opposition to established governmental authority, when such action is intended to influence the attitudes and behavior of a target group wider than the immediate victims and when—through the nationality or foreign ties of its perpetrators, its location, the nature of its institutional or human victims, or the mechanics of its resolution—its ramifications transcend national boundaries. I also included incidents that were initially treated by security authorities as terrorist or quasi-terrorist, such as hijackings later determined to be the work of mentally unstable individuals or individuals seeking non-traditional modes of transportation but who did not have terrorist motives.

Due to the criminal nature of terrorism, its perpetrators often use aliases and “also known as” names to mask their identities and increase the propaganda value of their actions. I have attempted to link aliases to the perpetrators’ principal names.

Names are listed alphabetically by surname but are shown with first name first to prevent confusion in reading Arabic names. Several transliteration systems are in use for Arabic names. I have tried to include the major variants, again keyed to the principal name. Arabic names are alphabetized without regard to name fragments such as al-, bin, and Abd-al. The last main element is used for alphabetization. For further thoughts on the difficulty of establishing consistency in transliterations, see my article on the topic.<sup>1</sup> Hispanic names are alphabetized according to the individual’s patronymic.

Date and place of birth are included when reported, except for nonpolitical, nonterrorist hijackers. Such information is often available in the chronologies.

This list, although including tens of thousands of names, is not intended to be used as a terrorist watch list or supplant those used by law enforcement, homeland security, and other authorities around the world. The Justice Department’s FBI Terrorist Screening Center’s database, for example, had 754,960 records per the Government Accountability Office’s May 2007 report and was adding 20,000 records each month. This list is not aimed at such exhaustive coverage. The intention behind this list is to give students of the discipline a starting point for understanding the phenomenon of terrorism, as well as to give the blognoscenti and members of the commentariat—who believe that merely “connecting the dots” is child’s play—some appreciation for the amount of dots that exist and the difficulty experienced daily by those attempting to protect us from the depredations of terrorists.

A popular sound bite for books such as this is a top 10 list of the worst terrorists of all time. Criteria for devising such a list could include the most events masterminded over a career, the most deaths perpetrated, or involvement in a single dramatic event. In no particular order, individuals who should be considered in the hall-of-shame conversation are the following:

- Osama bin Laden, leader of al Qaeda
- Wadi Haddad, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos the Jackal
- Fusako Shigenobu, leader of the Japanese Red Army
- Abimael Guzman, leader of the Peruvian Shining Path
- Khalid Sheikh Mohammad, architect of numerous al Qaeda attacks, including 9/11
- Velupillai Prabhakaran, leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka
- Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf, mastermind of numerous attacks around the world
- Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber
- Theodore Kaczynski, alias the Unabomber
- Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo
- Sabri al-Banna, alias Abu Nidal, leader of the Abu Nidal Group
- Muhammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 hijackers

- Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, leader of al Qaeda in Iraq
- FNU LNU (name unknown), mailer of anthrax envelopes

For more detailed information on the terrorist incidents themselves, please consult my chronologies of events and annotated bibliographies covering 1968 to the present and published by Greenwood Press and Iowa State University Press. Also helpful are the National Counterterrorism Center's annual Counterterrorism: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics, published since the mid-1990s, with an interactive online version since 2007. The Terrorist List: Western Europe is available as the Data on Terrorists (DOTS) database from Vinyard Software, Inc., 2305 Sandburg Street, Dunn Loring, VA 22027-1124 USA or vinyardsoftware@hotmail.com.

The fates of many terrorists go unreported by the media, but numerous perpetrators have been subject to the rule of law years, even decades, after their attacks. This list demonstrates that no matter how long it may take, terrorists can be tracked down and brought to justice by like-minded governments.

Edward Mickolus
President of Vinyard Software, Inc.

NOTE

1. Edward F. Mickolus, "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography," Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

The World. (No. 4170 Rev. 9. UN Cartographic Section.)

A

---

Mouhammed A.: one of 11 Muslim radicals, age 28, detained throughout Germany on April 23, 2002. They were members of the Palestinian group Al Tawhid and were planning attacks in Germany, as directed by Abu Musab Zarqawi, an al Qaeda operational leader. They were plotting to shoot people in a German city square and set off a hand grenade near a Jewish or Israeli target. Mohammed Abu Dhess heads the cell.

Othman Ben A.: variant of Outmar Ben A.

Outmar Ben A.: variant Othman Ben A. Translator, age 34, for the Dutch secret service arrested in October 2004 for allegedly leaking classified information, and who may have had links to the individuals arrested in the Theo Van Gogh murder of November 2, 2004, in Amsterdam.

Shahab A.A.: one of three Muslim men, age 26, arrested on September 27, 2001, by police in Wiesbaden, Germany, for planning terrorist attacks in the country. Searches of their apartments yielded a loaded weapon, large amounts of cash, and forged documents. Police seized computers, cell phones, and open-return airline tickets between London and Islamabad. The e-mail list of one individual included the address of Said Bahaji, age 26, who lived with three 9/11 hijackers.

Wadee Al A.: one of three Muslim men, age 24, arrested on September 27, 2001, by police in Wiesbaden, Germany, for planning terrorist attacks in the country. Searches of their apartments yielded a loaded weapon, large amounts of cash, and forged documents. Police seized computers, cell phones, and open-return airline tickets between London and Islamabad. The e-mail list of one individual included the address of Said Bahaji, age 26, who lived with three 9/11 hijackers.

Shaker Aamer: U.K. resident born in Saudi Arabia and held as of December 2007 at the Guantánamo Bay jail.

Michael Abbas-Yacoub: right-wing extremist who killed himself on March 8, 1985, during a police raid in Charlottenburg, West Berlin. Police uncovered a cache of weapons.

Massimo Abbatangelo: deputy for the neofascist MSI party who on March 28, 1991, was found guilty by a Florence criminal court of massacre, an act of terrorism, and illegal possession and transport of explosives for the December 23, 1984, bombing of an express train in Tuscany that killed 16 and injured 266. The prosecutor requested a life sentence. Abbatangelo delivered sticks of dynamite to Giuseppe Misso, Alfano Galeota, and Giulio Pirozzi in Naples in early December 1984. The explosives were used by alleged Mafia boss Pippo Calò and alleged gangster Guido Cercola in making the bomb. Abbatangelo, because he was initially protected from prosecution by parliamentary immunity, was tried separately.

Emile 'Abdallah: picked out of mug shots by two survivors as the drive-by bomber on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, in an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners. The Right and Liberty Organization claimed credit.

George Ibrahim Abdallah: aliases Abdelkader Saadi, Mohammed Kacem, Hamid el-Kattabi. Lebanese who was arrested by Lyons police on October 25, 1984, for the January 18, 1982, Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) assassination of Lt. Col. Charles R. Ray, U.S. Assistant Military Attaché in Paris. On July 2, 1985, a Paris court issued homicide charges against Abdallah, considered a LARF leader, after a Czech pistol found in his Paris hideout was determined to be the weapon that killed Ray and Israeli Embassy attaché Yacov Barsimantov on April 3, 1982, in Paris. On November 19, 1985, Abdallah was indicted in Paris for a failed assassination attempt against the U.S. consul general in Strasbourg, Robert Onan Homme, on March 26, 1984. Italian authorities considered requesting extradition for Abdallah's role in the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Gen. Leamon Hunt, the U.S. head of the multinational Sinai observation force. His trial in Lyons began on July 3, 1986, on charges of possessing guns, explosives, and false passports. On July 10, 1986, he was found guilty of associating with a banned group, using false documents, and possessing arms and explosives and was sentenced to four years in prison. The U.S. Embassy complained that the sentence was too light. Italy requested extradition on September 15, 1986. His trial there began on February 23, 1987, and it was learned that he was a former schoolteacher from the Maronite village of Qobayat, Lebanon. On February 28, 1987, he was sentenced to life in prison for the murders of Barsimantov and Ray and would be eligible for parole in 15 years. He was also ordered to pay one franc in symbolic damages to the United States and another franc to Homme. He was to pay 150,000 francs ($24,600) to Ray's widow, Sharon, and 100,000 francs ($16,400) to each of their two children. Groups frequently perpetrated terrorist acts and demanded his release.

Joseph 'Abdallah: on September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Maurice 'Abdallah: brother of George Ibrahim 'Abdallah and Robert 'Abdallah. On September 16, 1986, French police offered a 1 million franc ($150,000) reward for information about him and Robert. They were believed responsible for a recent wave of bombings in Paris. On September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing stores on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Rashid Sa'id Muhammad 'Abdallah: arrested on October 7, 1983, by French police on an Italian warrant for the June 11, 1980, killing of Mohamed Azavi Laderi in Milan's central train station. The dead Libyan was a wholesale industrial machinery dealer who lived in Bolzano. 'Abdallah allegedly headed Islamic courts that were behind the murders in Europe of several opponents of the Libyan government. On October 28, 1983, a French appeals court ordered his release. The French government claimed no Italian extradition request was made within the legal time limit; Rome officials said they had requested extradition on October 18. 'Abdallah was expected to board a flight to Tripoli.

Robert Ibrahim 'Abdallah: one of the Lebanese Christian brothers of George Ibrahim 'Abdallah, the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) leader. Robert was the principal suspect in the bombing by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners on September 12, 1986, of the crowded Casino cafeteria in the La Defense shopping center in Paris, which injured 41 people. On September 16, 1986, French police offered a 1 million franc ($150,000) reward for information. A few hours later, Robert told a Tripoli news conference that he had not been in France since 1984. On September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, which killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Shadi Abdallah: on November 26, 2003, a Dueseldorf state court found him guilty of membership in a terrorist organization and of falsifying passports, which normally carries a 10-year term. The court found that he had helped plan terrorist attacks in Germany. He was sentenced to four years in prison because he had given valuable testimony about al Qaeda during his five-month trial. He said al-Tawhid terrorists were planning to attack Berlin's Jewish Museum.

Shadi Abdallah: one of 11 Muslim radicals detained throughout Germany on April 23, 2002. They were members of the Palestinian group Al Tawhid and were planning attacks in Germany, as directed by Abu Musab Zarqawi, an al Qaeda operational leader. They were plotting to shoot people in a German city square and set off a hand grenade near a Jewish or Israeli target. Mohammed Abu Dhess heads the cell.

Reem Ibrahim Abdelhadi: Palestinian detained in 1995 in the United Kingdom for the July 26, 1994, car bombing of the Israeli Embassy in London that injured 14 people. Her husband, Mohammed Derbas, was also detained. She was an executive committee member of the U.K. National Union of Students in the early 1990s. Handling Middle Eastern affairs for the student union, she campaigned against Israel and its supporters and claimed to have been beaten by Israeli soldiers when she was a child in the West Bank.

She was freed on July 28, 1995, when a court found insufficient evidence to press charges.

Madid Abdallah: arrested on August 3, 1995, by Italian police in Trieste while he was carrying a false French ID card supposedly issued by the police headquarters in Seine-Saint-Denis. He was carrying a diskette that contained chemical formulas for explosives and other tips on methods for blowing things up. He told police that he had been given the diskette in Zagreb, Croatia, and was to pass it to an accomplice in Milan. He said he belonged to the Djamel Lounici network, run by a military head of Algerian Islamist forces in Europe.

Ali Abdolazadeh: arrested in September 1986 by French counterintelligence agents following a wave of bombings that left 13 dead. On April 24, 1988, Paris police jailed the Iranian anti-Khomeini leftist for possession of explosives he said would be used for attacks in Iran. He was sentenced to 30 months.

Josephine Abdu: member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction whose release from an Italian jail was demanded by the gunmen who kidnapped Giles Sidney Peyrolles, the director of the French Cultural Center and a consular official, near his Tripoli office on March 24, 1985.

Cesur Abdulkadir: Turk who on October 19, 2005, was arrested in Bosnia when Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy.

Hussein Mahamud Abdulkadir: resident of Florence, Italy, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a financier of terrorism.

Bilal Talal Abdul Samad Abdulla: Iraqi doctor born in the United Kingdom, age 27, who worked at the Glasgow hospital and on June 30, 2007, rammed a flaming Jeep Cherokee SUV into the entrance of the international arrivals terminal at Glasgow Airport in Scotland. The Jeep was filled with nails and gasoline canisters. He was arrested after the Jeep crashed into the Glasgow terminal. On July 4, NBC News reported that Abdulla had tapes of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi beheading a hostage. On July 6, he was charged with conspiracy to cause explosions.

Ferman Abdulla: Iraqi, age 25, sentenced to seven years on May 12, 2005, by a Stockholm court for collecting money at Swedish mosques to fund Ansar al-Islam terrorist attacks in Iraq.

Mohamed Abdullah: one of four Libyans who arrived in France on August 20, 1987, and were arrested by Paris police on September 2–3, 1987, and deported on September 4, 1987. The U.S. Embassy and French Interior Ministry said that the Libyans were plotting a series of attacks on French soil to mark the 18th anniversary of the September 1 takeover of Libya by Col. Muammar al-Qadhafi and to “punish France” for its support of the Chadian government.

Mustafa Abdullah: accused in a U.K. court on September 11, 2006, of possessing terrorism-related information.

Ismael Abdurahman: arrested on August 4, 2005, at age 23, and charged with withholding information from London police about one suspect in the abortive bombings of the London subway system on July 21, 2005. On February 5, 2008, he was convicted in a London court of 22 charges of failing to disclose information about terrorism and assisting an offender for the failed copycat bombing of the London transit system in July 2005. He was sentenced to 10 years. The five defendants provided safe houses, passports, clothing, and food for the would-be bombers after the failed attacks.

Jose Ramon Lopez de Abechuco Liquiniano: Spanish Basque member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) executive committee arrested by police in Hendaye, France, on April 24, 1989. He was believed to have arranged for refuge for ETA members in hiding in France after they carried out attacks in Spain.

Humberto Abella Lopez: on October 7, 1983, the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member surrendered to the Spanish ambassador in Costa Rica.

Fatima Aberkan: mother of seven, age 47, and one of seven women brought in for questioning by Belgian authorities in December 2007 on suspicion of plotting to free convicted terrorist Nizar Trabelsi from prison.

Muhammad ‘Abd al-Rahman ‘Abid: aliases Mu’tasim Qasim, Mu’tasim. Egyptian among three Abu Nidal members arrested by Peruvian police on July 16, 1988, for the EgyptAir hijacking of November 24, 1986, as well as the December 1986 Rome and Vienna airport attacks.

Sulayman Balal Zain-ul-Abidin: London chef, age 44, who on August 9, 2002, was acquitted by a London court under the Anti-Terrorism, Crime, and Security Act of 2001. He was charged with running a Web site offering to send would-be terrorists to a U.S.-based weapons training course called “The Ultimate Jihad Challenge.”

Michel Abraham: arrested in connection with two Spanish members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military by French police on December 19, 1987, for smuggling 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in the French Basque country. Police believed the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Sarkis Abrahamian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through Lisbon Airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Karen Abrinia: male Iranian doctoral candidate in engineering at the University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology and one of four Iranians detained on December 15, 1989, in Manchester's Stretford Police Station under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of planning to kill Salman Rushdie. He was deported on December 19, 1989.

Jesus Abrisketa: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Ali Farag Abulgasseem: one of four Libyans who arrived in France on August 20, 1987, and were arrested by Paris police on September 23, 1987, and deported on September 4, 1987. The U.S. Embassy and French Interior Ministry said that the Libyans were plotting a series of attacks on French soil to mark the 18th anniversary of the September 1 takeover of Libya by Col. Muammar al-Qadhafi and to "punish France" for its support of the Chadian government.

Mohamed Needl Acaid: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Mauro Acanfora: arrested on March 9, 1982, by Naples police. He was a professor and friend of Red Brigades ideologue Giovanni Senzani.

Mohamed Achraf: alias of Abderrahmane Tahiri.

Luc Van Acker: arrested in Belgium on January 17, 1986, on suspicion of being the bomb expert of the Proletarian Revolutionary Action Front (FRAP). His trial began on September 26, 1988. Six Belgians were accused of a wave of 28 terrorist attacks between October 1984 and December 1985. His group had launched three bombings, one of which failed, between April and June 1985. No one was hurt in those attacks, and he and a colleague were released on bail 12 months after their arrest. The duo faced terms of three years to life with hard labor.

Barin Acturk: Turkish woman arrested in Paris in 1973 for gun smuggling; she was released after six months and flown to Baghdad. Some observers believe she was one of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976, and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Johnny "Mad Dog" Adair: commander of the Ulster Defense Association in a Protestant neighborhood of Belfast who claimed to have killed scores of Catholic civilians. He was released from Maze Prison on September 14, 1999, having served 5 years of a 16-year sentence after being convicted of the unprecedented charge of "directing terrorism."

Abdirisak Aden: resident of Spanga, Sweden, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. The United States denied his lawyers' February 1, 2002, request that he be removed from the list. He was removed from the list on August 27, 2002.

Ainhoa Adin Jauregui: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member believed to be behind attacks in the 1990s that killed three people. He was arrested in Hendaye, France, on January 29, 2008.

Rachid Adli: one of two Moroccans jailed on April 7, 2004, for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Manfred Richard Adoneit: one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. On April 3, the Swedes turned over two of the West Germans, including Adoneit, to Bonn. He was prominent in West Berlin extreme left groups. Swedish police claimed that the Baader-Meinhof Group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson.

Hector Ila Adrono: associate of Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist Illich Ramirez, popularly known as Carlos, whose body was found in Hatoray, Spain, on September 6, 1992.

Mohamed Afalah: Moroccan wanted in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. In June 2005, forensic experts suggested that he conducted a suicide attack in Iraq between May 12 and 19, 2005. They were searching for DNA evidence.

Marco Affatigato: Italian neofascist arrested on August 4, 1980, by French police and extradited to Italy on September 5, 1980. He had been wanted by Rome since 1978 and was sentenced in absentia by a Pisa court to three and one-half years for helping in a prison escape. He was also held for the "Italicus" massacre in which a bomb exploded on board a train in a tunnel between Florence and Bologna, killing 12 and injuring 15.

Abu Dujan al Afgani: claimed to be head of al Qaeda's European military wing while saying on March 13, 2004, that the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004, which killed 200 and injured 2,000, were to protest Spain's involvement in the coalition actions in Iraq. Police later believed him to be Rachid Oulad Akcha, a Moroccan immigrant.

Ahmed Hussein Agaiza: Egyptian, age 39, arrested on December 18, 2001, by Swedish police and sent to Egypt. He had fled Egypt in the early 1990s, living in Pakistan, Syria, and Iran before entering Stockholm on a faked passport with his wife and children in 2000. He requested asylum. He had been sentenced in absentia in Egypt to 25 years of hard labor for taking part in the armed attack on the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan in 1995 that killed 17 people. He was an early member of Egyptian Islamic Jihad.

Mehmet Alia Agca: Turkish Grey Wolves right-wing terrorist who escaped from prison on November 25, 1979, and threatened to assassinate Pope John Paul II during his three-day visit to Turkey. He was accused of murdering journalist Abdi Ipekci, the editor of Milliyet, a major newspaper, in 1979. He later injured the pope in an attack on May 13, 1981, in St. Peter's Square in the Vatican. On July 19, 1981, Turkey requested extradition. On July 22, 1981, after a three-day trial and a one-day hunger strike, he was sentenced to life in prison in Rome. On January 8, 2006, Turkish authorities released him. He was jailed again when on January 20, 2006, Turkey's Supreme Court overturned the lower court's decision.

Omar Agnaoui: one of two Moroccans arrested on April 24, 1987, by the Direction de la Surveillance du Territoire (DST) counterespionage agents for the September 1986 bombing campaign in Paris. The duo admitted possessing the same kind of explosives as those used in the December 1985 to September 1986 bombing campaign in Paris that killed 13 people and maimed 303. They said they were asked to hide explosives before the 1986 attacks by Fouad Ali Saleh, a Tunisian arrested in March who was linked to Iranian-financed Shi'ite Muslim extremists in Lebanon. Agnaoui was indicted on May 19, 1987, for the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners. On January 20, 1988, the Moroccan math student was charged by Gilles Boulouque, Paris's examining magistrate, with four attacks carried out by the Committee of Solidarity with the Arab and Middle Eastern Prisoners. On April 13, 1992, he was found guilty of transporting and placing the explosives and was jailed for life.

Patrick Agnew: imprisoned IRA hunger striker who on June 13, 1981, easily won one of the four Parliamentary seats from Lough, Ireland. He was serving 16 years on a weapons conviction.

Agop Agopyan: alias of Hagop Hagopian.

Pierre Aguerre: member of the French Basque separatist group Iparretarrak who was arrested on February 20, 1988, by French gendarmes from the Groupement de l'Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale along with four associates after a shootout in front of the terrorists' Boucau apartment. He was hit in the arm.

Gervasio Aguirre: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized six machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Harriet Aguirre: second in command of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) military wing and one of the most-wanted terrorists in France and Spain. She was arrested on October 3, 2005, by police in Clermont-Ferrand, France.

Ignacio Aguirre Saenz: Spanish Basque resident in France and suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who escaped on April 25, 1988, during a shootout in Bayonne's Saint Leon quarter.

Jose Angel Aguirre: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military member jailed on June 13, 1986, for the murder of Joseph Couchot on November 23, 1984, on the Franco-Spanish border at Irun. Couchot was a Spanish policeman who ETA believed was a member of the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Joseba Aguirre Erostarbe: alias Fitipaldi. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military explosives expert arrested by French police on March 29, 1992, and sentenced to eight years on June 18, 1993, by a Paris court for criminal association with terrorist ends. The sentence was added to the 10 he was already serving for transporting 1.5 tons of explosive ammonal in France in 1987.

Juan Luis Aguirre Lete: believed by Spanish police in April 1995 to be a member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Madrid Commando.

Miren Agutzane: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who were arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Spain protested his nonextradition on November 27, 1993.

Babar Ahmad: computer expert, age 30, who worked at Imperial College London and was accused of running two "pro-jihad" U.S.-based Web sites calling for support to terrorism and of trying to set up a terrorist training camp in Arizona. The Briton of Pakistani descent was arrested by Scotland Yard on August 5, 2004, on a U.S. extradition request. He was accused of soliciting funds and property via the Internet for “acts of terrorism in Chechnya and Afghanistan,” including political murder between 1998 and the end of 2003. New Jersey imam Mazen Mokhtar helped operate the Web sites (www.azzam.com and www.qoqaz.net), deemed “more operational” than scholarly by the Justice Department. Authorities also said Ahmad was the cousin of Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan and part of an al Qaeda branch linked to Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. He ran the militant organization Abu Khubayb and was arrested and released by British police in December 2003 on suspicion of terrorism.

At Ahmad’s court appearance on August 6, 2004, U.S. government attorney Rosemary Fernandes said Ahmad had three-year-old documents outlining the specific assignments of each USS Constellation Navy battle-group ship, a sketch of its formations, and details of movements and vulnerabilities.

Ahmad was indicted on October 6 by the U.S. attorney in Connecticut for conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, laundering money for their cause, and conspiracy to kill or injure people in a foreign country, including purchasing bomb-making material and camouflage suits.

On January 5, 2006, a British court ruled that Ahmad could be extradited to the United States. His family appealed. On November 16, 2005, Charles Clarke, the U.K. senior-most law enforcement official, ordered Ahmad’s extradition to the United States. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws approved the extradition.

Najumuddin Faraj Ahmad: alias Mullah Krekar. Oslo-based radical Islamist in the 2000s and leader of Ansar al-Islam, a violent Iraqi separatist movement. Ahmad fled northern Iraq in 1990, receiving Norwegian asylum after claiming persecution by Saddam Hussein. In 2001, he founded Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam). The group is believed to have sheltered al Qaeda fugitives after the United States invaded Afghanistan in 2001. Iran sent Ahmad to Amsterdam in September 2002. On September 13, he was arrested for extradition to Jordan on drug charges, but Jordan did not follow through, and in January 2003 he was released.

Ahmad tried to settle in Oslo, but in 2003 Norway ordered his deportation. On January 2, 2004, Norwegian police arrested him on charges of aiding a plot to murder his Iraqi rivals from December 2000 to April 2001.

On January 5, 2004, a Norwegian court cleared him of suspected terrorist activities but ordered him kept in custody pending the government’s appeal. He was to be charged for attempted murder, conspiracy, and inciting criminal activity. On February 17, he was released; the media reported that rival Kurds had forced witnesses to testify against him. On June 15, 2004, all charges were dismissed because of lack of evidence and the possibility of coerced testimony. On May 12, 2005, the Norwegian government announced it would expel him but put off the order until October at the earliest, to ensure he would not face the death penalty. As of early December 2006, he remained in Oslo. He is fluent in four languages. Counter-terrorist authorities believe he has ties to radicals in Germany, Sweden, Italy, and Spain, although none of those governments had charged him as of December 2006. He published an autobiography, My Own Words, and claims to have quit as the group’s leader in 2002. In a June 2006 interview with a Kurdish newspaper, he called Osama bin Laden “a good Muslim” and wished him a long life. He noted the “bad news” of the death of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, head of al Qaeda in Iraq, but observed, “But I am not sad, because he went to paradise.” He is represented by Norwegian attorneys Arvid Sjoedin and Brynjar Meling.

Mustafa Ahmad: alleged on May 7, 1991, by the German magazine Stern to have been responsible for setting off a West German Red Army Faction bomb at the Maison de France on August 25, 1983.

Jamil Ahmadi: Palestinian arrested for the April 26, 1985, bombing of the Geneva office of Libyan Arab Airlines; the bombing on the same date of the car of Ahmad Saqr, the Syrian chargé d'affaires to the United Nations; and the placement of a bomb in the car of 'Abd al'Wahab Barakat, a Syrian diplomat and a nephew of president Hafiz al-Asad. On March 19, 1985, he was convicted of carrying out the bombings and sentenced to nine years in prison. He admitted membership in the Martyrs of Tal Za'Tar Organization.

Khalid Ahmed: variant Kafeel Ahmed. Individual burned when he doused himself with gasoline after crashing his flaming SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow airport in Scotland on June 30, 2007. He died from his burns on August 2, 2007.

Rabei Osman el-Sayed Ahmed: aliases Mohamed the Egyptian, Mohamed Abdul Hadi Fayad. On June 8, 2004, police in Belgium and Italy arrested 17 individuals, including Ahmed, age 33, with suspected links to al Qaeda, who were believed involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. An Italian prosecutor said he provided the United States with transcripts of phone calls, including one in which Ahmed mentioned a woman ready to carry out a chemical attack in the United States. Ahmed was arrested with the Palestinian man he was staying with, Yahia Payumi. They were represented by defense attorney Viviana Bossi. Milan's Corriere della Sera said that they were planning an attack against a NATO base in Belgium. An intercepted phone conversation between Ahmed and one of the Belgian detainees included Ahmed asking about the Paris Metro and security.

Ahmed was traced to Italy via intercepted phone calls, and Spain requested his extradition. Ahmed was an explosives trainer at the al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan and had recruited Sarhane Ben Abdelmajid Faket—the ringleader who blew himself up in a Leganes apartment. Both were explosives experts, and both were in the house in Morata de Tájuna where the bombs were made. A Palestinian and a Jordanian arrested in Belgium were known lieutenants of Ahmed and were also believed to be involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings. On December 1, 2004, Italy approved extradition to Spain.

On April 7, 2006, an Italian investigator said Ahmed also indoctrinated young people in Spain and advocated martyrdom. The defendant denied a connection with the attacks.

He was indicted on April 11, 2006, by Spanish judge Juan del Olmo for membership in a terrorist group, murder, and attempted murder.

On November 6, 2006, a court in Milan found Ahmed guilty of conspiracy to participate in international terrorist activities and sentenced him to 10 years in prison. Yahya Ragheh, age 23, whom Ahmed was training to become a suicide bomber, received 5 years. Ahmed was represented by Italian attorney Luca D'Auria. On November 17, 2006, Ahmed was extradited to Madrid for a trial to begin in March 2007. A Spanish court cleared him of all 3/11 charges on October 31, 2007, but he remained in an Italian jail, serving 8 years on charges of membership in a terrorist organization. He was represented in Madrid by attorney Endika Zulueta.

Ruhal Ahmed: one of five U.K. citizens held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban and deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. The United Kingdom arrested him on suspicion of terrorism, questioned him, and released him the next day.

Sabeel Ahmed: doctor, age 26, at two northwest England hospitals. He was arrested in Liverpool for the June 29, 2007, bombing of a London disco and the June 30, 2007, ramming of a flaming Jeep SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow airport in Scotland. The Indian citizen is from Bangalore. He earned his medical credentials from Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences in Bangalore. He is the brother of Kafeel Ahmed, the driver of the flaming SUV, and a cousin of Mohammed Haneef. On July 14, U.K. authorities charged him with having information that could have prevented an act of terrorism.

Atilla Ahmet: aide of radical British cleric Abu Hamza al-Masri. On October 10, 2007, he pleaded guilty in London to soliciting murder in a plot to organize terrorist training camps in the United Kingdom.

Hamed Ahmidam: Moroccan charged on March 29, 2004, with collaborating with a terrorist organization in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Jamal Ahmidan: alias The Chinese. Suspected Moroccan operational commander of the al Qaeda terrorists who on March 11, 2004, bombed several commuter trains in Madrid, killing 200 and wounding 2,000. Possibly the same individual as Hamed Ahmidam. He died on April 3, 2004, when Madrid police cornered him and six other terrorist suspects in their safe house. After a two-hour gun battle, the terrorists set off bombs in their apartment. Police said on April 7 that the dead terrorists had planned another major attack in Madrid, possibly during Easter, and possibly against Jewish sites. Police found 200 copper detonators, 22 pounds of Goma 2 Eco explosives, money, and other evidence of plans in the apartment debris. One document mentioned a Jewish cemetery and cultural center in a mountain town near Madrid. The body of one terrorist was found near a swimming pool with two kilograms of explosives strapped around his mutilated body. The next day, police cordoned off the area and evacuated a nearby building after finding a backpack filled with explosives and a detonator.

Syed Talha Ahsan: owner of the defunct jihadi Web site www.azzam.com who faced extradition to the United States from the United Kingdom as of early March 2007.

Mulud Aissud: suspected member of Direct Action and accomplice of Renaud Laigle, arrested by the police of Lyons, France, on July 22, 1987.

Jose Domingo Aizpurura Aizpuru: alias Pitxas. Member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) roving commando who on June 18, 1993, was acquitted by a Paris court but remained in preventive detention because of another trial pending for criminal association. On June 2, 1994, France extradited him to Spain. He left Fleury prison on the outskirts of Paris, where he had completed a sentence for criminal association.

Sayyid 'Ajami: one of seven fundamentalists with terrorist connections who were arrested on September 27, 1998, in London under the immigration law.

Strak Onnik Ajamian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through Lisbon Airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Zuhair Akache: variant Zuhair Yousof Akasha; alias Captain Mamoud. Fired into a car near Hyde Park in London on April 10, 1977, and killed Qadi Abdullah Ali Hajri, deputy chief of the North Yemen Supreme Court, who had served as his nation's prime minister from 1972 to 1974; his wife, Fatimah; and Abdullah Ali Hammami, a minister in the North Yemeni Embassy. Akache escaped into a subway station. He reportedly took an Iraqi Airways jet to Baghdad within five hours. He next surfaced as the leader of the October 13, 1977, Lufthansa hijacking, when he died in a shootout with the German rescue squad. The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)–Special Operations (SO) said that he was the hijack leader, although other reports credited a Dutch citizen. Akache's fingerprints matched those of Hajri's killer. The PFLP-SO said that he was a Palestinian refugee born in 1954 in a Lebanese camp. He had received aviation engineering training in London. His false Iranian passport was made out to Ali Hyderi.

Jawad Akbar: one of seven British men who had received explosives training at a Pakistani terrorist camp and who were arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police found 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, which can be used to create bombs. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants, including Akbar, age 23, of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. They were given life sentences by Judge Michael Astill. Prosecutors said after the trial that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group was trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Rachid Oulad Akcha: Moroccan immigrant believed to have used the alias Abu Dujan al Afgani in claiming credit on behalf of al Qaeda for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Ali Abdollahzadeh Kosh Akhlagh: Iranian arrested by the French Directorate of National Security counterintelligence service on September 22, 1986, while he was carrying 15 kilograms of explosives, 30 detonators, and a gun in a forest near Chalons-sur-Marne. He was charged with associating with criminal elements and explosives violations. The explosives might have been stolen from a Swedish Army depot.

Ismail Akhnikh: one of two individuals arrested on November 10, 2004, in a raid on a Hague apartment after a 14-hour standoff during which the duo threw a grenade that wounded three police officers. The duo was born to an African American serviceman from South Carolina and his Dutch wife; the children converted to Islam. He trained to be a terrorist in 2003 in a Pakistani camp, according to investigators. The duo was suspected of plotting to murder with a "terrorist intent"; they were also held for the attempted murder of policemen. Police later determined that the cell planned to kill Dutch leaders.

Yacine Akhnouche: French citizen of Algerian origin, age 27, and one of three Islamic militants arrested on February 4, 2002, in Paris for plotting to attack a Strasbourg cathedral. He said he visited al Qaeda camps during three trips to Afghanistan. In 2000 in Afghanistan, he met Zacarias Moussaoui and Richard C. Reid. In 1998's Afghan visit, he met Ahmed Ressay. He implicated Abu Doha, jailed in the United Kingdom, for the Strasbourg cathedral plot. He also mentioned Abu Zubaydah, military operations chief of al Qaeda, and Abu Jafar, possibly Abu Jafar al-Jaziri, the late al Qaeda financier and logistics chief.

Sheikh Saeed Akhtar: shop worker, age 52, and one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell who were arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. He was soon released.

Musa Akmet: charged on September 11, 2006, in the United Kingdom with illegal possession of a 16-mm mini-flare launcher. Akmet, age 47, and Mustafa Abdullah were accused of possessing terrorism-related information.

Allal Alaeddin: on October 31, 1990, the Paris Appeals Court reduced his prison sentence from eight to five years for being an accomplice in a bombing wave in Paris in September 1986. The court added a 10-year ban on entering France.

Samar Alami: female Lebanese engineer detained on March 22, 1995, in the United Kingdom under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of the July 26, 1994, car bombing of the Israeli Embassy in London that injured 14 people. She posted cash bail and property pledges of $800,000. She was rearrested after police found weapons hidden in a London apartment she sometimes occupied.

Musbah al-Albani: Libyan undercover as a diplomatic courier who on March 25, 1986, took seven hand grenades, three pistols, and two sub-machine guns to West Berlin in a Libyan People's Bureau official car. He lived in East Berlin. The weapons were stowed in the apartment of Imad Salim Mahmud, a Lebanese resident in West Berlin.

Francisco Javier Alberdi Beristan: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by France to Togo on September 23–26, 1984. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike and was treated in a Togo hospital upon arrival.

Itziar Alberdi Uranga: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Juan Jose Alberdi Puy: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by French police to Spain on February 27, 1987. He was born in Pasajes de San Juan.

Jackie Albertine: one of two Corsican nationalist activists who were held on November 12, 1987, for questioning in Bastia regarding the murder of gendarme Guy Aznar.

Miguel Albisu Iriarte: variant Albizu; alias Mikel Antza. One of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). On October 3, 2004, police in France and Spain detained 21 suspected ETA members, including ETA chief Albisu, age 43, and his female colleague Maria Soledad “Anboto” Iparraguirre Guenechea, also age 43. French antiterrorist police arrested 20 suspects in seven raids in France near the Spanish border; Spanish Civil Guard police picked up the other suspect in Spain. Police seized a cache of explosives, weapons, bomb components, and computers.

Spanish authorities said Albisu had been the top leader of ETA since 1993. His colleague was described as the senior-most ETA female and “in charge of the revolutionary tax”—extortions from companies and other institutions—and was wanted for at least 14 murders. The duo was caught with their son in a house in Salies de Bearn, France, where they had settled in 1985 after Albisu helped break two ETA members out of prison.

Miguel Albizu Iriarte: variant of Miguel Albisu Iriarte.

Susan Albrecht: daughter of friends of the Pontos. She was wanted for questioning in the Red Morning killing of Juergen Ponto, head of the Dresden Bank, during an attempted kidnapping on July 30, 1977. On October 19, 1977, she was wanted as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the September 5, 1977, Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, West Germany's most famous industrialist; Schleyer was president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On June 3, 1991, a Stuttgart upper state court convicted Albrecht of involvement in the Ponto murder and of helping in the June 1977 bombing attack on General Haig. She was sentenced to 12 years in prison and eligible for parole in 6 years. She was also found guilty on three other attempted murder charges. She said she had left RAF in 1980 and had hidden in East Germany under an assumed name until June 6, 1990, when she and eight other terrorists were caught. She married in East Germany and had a son in 1984. On July 4, 1990, her attorney, Wolfgang Vogel, reported that she had agreed to extradition, having distanced herself from the RAF.

Rosa Alcorta: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Luis Manuel Aldea Dominguez: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Vizcaya Command member arrested on March 30, 1992, by Spanish police in the Txurdinaga District of Bilbao. His wife, Ana Isabel Iriarte Santa Colomba, was arrested with him.

Miguel Angel Aldana Barrena: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who was in Venezuela after being deported. His wife, Ana Maria Petralanda, was arrested in the French Basque country on May 4, 1992.

Francisca Aleman Abaurrea: arrested in Pamplona, Spain, in connection with arrests of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members on November 18, 1990.

Paul Alfred: West German doctor arrested on October 2, 1986, when Turkish police at Kayseri Airport found a detonator in a bag he and his nurse were about to take onto a Turkish Airlines flight to Istanbul.

Abdi Abdulaziz Ali: resident of Spanga, Sweden, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. The United States denied the February 1, 2002, request by his lawyers that he be removed from the list. He was removed from the list on August 27, 2002.

Ahmed Abdullah Ali: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism in a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. He was ordered held without bail until a September 18 court appearance, when 10 other suspects were to appear in court. Prosecutors said the trials might not begin until March 2008.

Cossar Ali: variant of Cossor Ali.

Cossor Ali: variant Cossar Ali. U.K. citizen of Pakistani descent, age 23, charged on August 21, 2006, with withholding knowledge of her husband Ahmed Abdullah Ali's involvement in a plot to blow up 10 U.S. airliners in August 2006.

Hasan Ali: on April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Khalil Hasan al-Sayyid 'Ali: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Nasser Hassan Ali: Syrian Palestinian who paid Spanish citizen Isaias Jalafe $1,000 to transport a suitcase of what he claimed was narcotics to Tel Aviv from Madrid. However, the suitcase exploded at the El Al check-in counter in the Madrid airport on June 26, 1986, as Jalafe was trying to check in for flight 396. The three-kilogram homemade bomb had a timing device set to explode two hours into the flight of the B767. The device injured 13 people and caused $1 million damage. Ali was arrested nine hours later on the outskirts of Madrid. He was carrying a false Syrian passport and was allegedly an officer in Abu Musa's Al-Fatah faction. On July 4, 1986, he told a Madrid judge that he was responsible for the bomb and was a member of Fatah. On July 5, 1986, a Fatah spokesperson warned Spanish officials to release Ali. On September 21, 1987, the trial began in Madrid, with prosecutors seeking a 190-year sentence on charges of terrorism, membership in an armed group, attempted murder, possession of explosives, and possession of false identity papers.

Rafqat Ali: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell who were arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. The construction worker, age 27, was soon released.

Rouini Hedia Ben Ali: Tunisian expelled by France on April 5, 1986, for “participating in a network of logistical support” for alleged attacks against U.S. targets in Europe.

Sami Muhammed Ali: on May 12, 1980, the United Kingdom announced it was searching for him in connection with the six Iranian Khuzestanians who had taken over the Iranian Embassy in London on April 30, 1980. He gave a Baghdad address and telephone number when he rented a London apartment for the terrorists before the attack.

Waheed Ali: one of three individuals charged by British authorities on July 5, 2007, with conspiring with the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005) between November 1, 2004, and June 29, 2005; authorities said they handled reconnaissance and planning. On August 10, 2007, Mohammed Shakil, Sadeer Saleem, and Waheed Ali, age 24, pleaded not guilty of conspiracy to cause explosions that would endanger life.

Yusaf Ahmed Ali: resident of Spanga, Sweden, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. The United States denied the February 1, 2002, request by his lawyers that he be removed from the list.

Giovanni Alimonti: variant of Giuseppe Alimonti.

Giuseppe Alimonti: former Italian parliamentary employee sought for several violent attacks, including the April 16, 1988, assassination by the Fighting Communist Union Party of university professor and Christian Democratic senator Roberto Ruffilli in Forli. Paris police arrested him on September 23, 1988. Arrested and placed under house arrest, he had disappeared in 1986. He was charged on September 26, 1988, with possession and use of false documents by French magistrates. Italy requested extradition.

Baqer Alizadeh: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, for the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

Faisal Alluc: Moroccan jailed on March 26, 2004, pending further investigation by Judge Juan del Olmo for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Naji ‘Allush: alias Abu Ibrahim. Damascus-based secretary general of the Arab Popular Liberation Movement and later reputedly the head of the May 15 Organization. He denied charges of involvement in several bombings in 1983 and 1985 of stores in London and Paris. He moved to the Syrian zone in Lebanon after leaving Baghdad in the 1980s.

Giorgio Almirante: Italy announced on August 7, 1986, that the leader of the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement was to be tried for a May 31, 1973, car bombing in Sagrado di Peteano that killed three policemen. He allegedly confessed.

Fouda Almorabit: jailed in Spain on April 12, 2002, on charges of collaborating with a terrorist organization. Almorabit, age 28, had been arrested twice earlier in the investigation of the al Qaeda terrorists responsible for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. He admitting knowing some of the suspects but denied having a role.

Carlos Almorza Arrieta: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who operated in Navarra Province and was believed responsible for the November 24, 1989, kidnapping of Spanish industrialist Adolfo Villoslada Martin from his garage in Pamplona.

Tayssir Alouni: Spanish citizen, age 48, and Syrian-born al-Jazeera journalist who on September 5, 2003, was detained by Spanish authorities for questioning. He interviewed bin Laden shortly after 9/11. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged Alouni with membership in an armed group and ordered him jailed in Soto del Real prison. He was suspected of relaying messages and funds to al Qaeda cells in Europe. Al-Jazeera condemned the arrest and denied that Alouni was an al Qaeda member. Judge Garzon freed Alouni on $7,000 bail on October 23 after his lawyers complained that the reporter had heart trouble. On November 30, the Francisca Mateos Foundation awarded Alouni a peace prize for his coverage of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On April 21, 2005, the trial began of al Qaeda suspects in Spain linked to the 9/11 attacks. Alouni was accused of delivering cash to al Qaeda in Afghanistan and was sentenced to seven years in prison.

Claude Alphen: on June 13, 1987, the seven-judge Special Court of Assizes in Paris acquitted him in the murders of two policemen in a 1983 shootout. His brother, Direct Action leader Regis Schleicher, was sentenced to life in prison.

Jesus Maria Altable Echarte: variant Jesus Maria Altagle Echarte. Member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Nafarroa Commando arrested on November 17, 1994, by police in Toulon, France. The public prosecutor was considering extradition for a 1984 murder.

Jesus Maria Altagle Echarte: variant of Jesus Maria Altable Echarte.

Corrado Alunni: leader of the Red Brigades arrested in Milan on September 14, 1978, for the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome. On January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with Moro's death and the slaying of his five-man escort. On April 28, 1980, he and 15 other prisoners shot their way out of Milan's San Vittore jail, injuring 2 guards. Police immediately recaptured 9 escapees, including 5 wounded prisoners, Alunni among them. The investigating judge cleared him on January 15, 1981, of charges in the Moro case. Alunni had also led the Front Line group.

Conchita Alvarez: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested in France on February 2, 2000. She was a suspect in a 1995 plot to assassinate the King of Spain.

Jesus Adolfo Alvarez: arrested by Colombian police for allegedly planning the kidnapping and murder of Fidel Lillo Shifihnnno, an Italian executive of General American Pipe on June 2, 1988, and Jacobo Gambini, president of the Latin American division of General American Pipe, on June 3, 1988.

Jose Angel Alvarez Garcia: one of five suspected members of Aizkora, a Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) armed illegal commando, arrested on October 23, 1987, by Spanish police.

Jose Luis Alvarez Santacristina: alias Txelis. Possibly Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military's number two, arrested by French police on March 29, 1992.

Rifaat Alwan: alias Nabil. Iraqi arrested on September 18, 1990, at his home in Italy. Police found 50 grams of heroin, a pistol, 13 passports of various nationalities, and documents that led police to 2 apartments where they arrested 9 Tunisians in possession of 3 kilograms of heroin, an unspecified amount of gold, and subversive literature in Arabic and Italian. He had lived in Rome for six years, traveling throughout the country and contacting people with links to the Middle East and far left groups in Italy. Police suspected that the Tunisians had terrorist links.

Habib Amal: member of the May 15 group believed responsible for the February 1985 bombing of United Kingdom's Marks and Spencer.

Marinella Ambretti: one of three suspected members of the Italian Red Brigades arrested by Barcelona police on February 23, 1988, in raids on two rented apartments. The trio was wanted in Spain for using fake IDs. An international arrest warrant had been issued for their arrest for armed robbery of several Italian banks as well as the attack on a Mezzana di Prat post office in November 1983 that ended in a clash with police. The trial of the cell on charges of forming a group with terrorist aims started in May 1989 but adjourned pending extradition. On August 4, 1989, Spain extradited the trio to Italy.

Al-Amin 'Abdullah Al-Amin: Libyan diplomat posted in East Berlin and suspected by West German police of having organized the April 4, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque in the Berlin-Schoeneberg District of West Berlin that killed 4 people and wounded 231, including 62 Americans.

Salahuddin Amin: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs.

The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants, including Amin, age 31, of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. They were given life sentences from Judge Michael Astill. After the trial, prosecutors said that the group met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group was trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Youssef Amin: Lebanese asylum seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who on September 17, 1992, stood guard at the door while his colleague shot to death four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced him to 11 years.

Ali Amrous: an Algerian arrested on March 15, 2004, at age 29, in the Basque city of San Sebastian for making threatening remarks on January 15 about a coming massacre in Madrid's Atocha train station.

Ivan Andabak: Yugoslav émigré who escaped in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstanz, Germany, killing one and wounding two.

Martina Anderson: arrested in June 1985 in a police raid in Glasgow that uncovered a 16-bomb campaign planned by Anderson and four others for British resorts during the summer of 1985. On June 12, 1986, a London court found four defendants guilty of participating in the planning of the 1985 bombing campaign directed at London and 12 coastal resorts.

Marcello de Angelis: on May 15, 1989, the British government announced that it had no reason to expel the member of the Italian neofascist Third Position (Terza Posizione), who had been sentenced in absentia by an Italian court on charges of participating in an armed gang. He was also suspected of involvement in the August 2, 1980, bombing of a train in Bologna in which 85 were killed and 200 injured.

Vit Angetter: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Brno to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950.

Aldo Anghessa: Italian businessman who in the 1980s was linked with international arms trafficking to the Middle East. He was accused of being the middleman in an international arms ring that sold weapons to Iran, Syria, and Middle Eastern terrorist groups, including the Abu Nidal group.

Alfonso Angulo Diaz: alias Pirulo. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member handed over by France to Spain on June 25, 1993, at the La Junquera border crossing. He was once responsible for the contacts between ETA's Madrid Commando and ETA leaders in France. He was a former member of the National Committee of Herri Batasuna.

Ahmad Khalil al-Ani: member of the Iraqi intelligence service alleged to have met 9/11 hijacking leader Mohammed Atta in Prague in 2001, although the FBI and CIA doubted the reports, according to former Director of Central Intelligence Tenet.

Asri Rifaat Anouar: died on April 3, 2004, when Madrid police cornered him and six other terrorist suspects in their safe house. After a two-hour gun battle, the terrorists set off bombs in their apartment. Police said on April 7 that the dead terrorists had planned another major attack in Madrid, possibly during Easter, and possibly against Jewish sites. Police found 200 copper detonators, 22 pounds of Goma 2 Eco explosives, money, and other evidence of plans in the apartment debris. One document mentioned a Jewish cemetery and cultural center in a mountain town near Madrid. The body of one terrorist was found near a swimming pool with two kilograms of explosives strapped around his mutilated body. The next day, police cordoned off the area and evacuated a nearby building after finding a backpack filled with explosives and a detonator.

Soraya Ansari: variant of Soraya Ansary.

Soraya Ansary: variant Ansari; alias Souhaila Sami Andrawes. Iranian believed to be one of the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977.

Bert Ankier Ansen: Swiss arrested as an accomplice by Honduran police in the bombing on March 9, 1985, at Le Volcanic Discotheque on Morazan Boulevard in downtown Tegucigalpa.

Jose Luis Ansola Larranaga: alias Peio el Viejo. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military leader arrested by French police in a gunfight in St. Jean de Luz on November 9, 1982. A Madrid newspaper had reported that ETA planned to assassinate the pope during his visit to Spain. He was expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba. On May 4, 1992, he was arrested by police in Brest, Brittany, France.

Robert Richard Antoine-Pierre: aliases Lhaj, Abu Abderrahmane. Frenchman suspected of involvement in the five May 16, 2003, suicide bombings in Casablanca that killed 45 and wounded more than 100. He was arrested by Moroccan police on June 3, 2003, in Tangier.

Vittorio Antonini: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier. He was arrested on April 24, 1985, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Rome. Police uncovered grenades, three pistols, and Red Brigades documents and leaflets.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov: arrested on November 25, 1982, by Rome police for involvement in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was believed to have provided a hideout to Mehmud Ali Agca, the would-be assassin. Antonov was the Rome station chief for Balkan Airlines. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him for an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. He was permitted house arrest on November 25, 1982. On June 18, 1984, he received medical treatment for anorexia nervosa and circulatory and heart problems. On March 29, 1986, Judge Severino Santiapichi announced that the Rome jury had acquitted the Bulgarian on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope because of insufficient evidence. His lawyers said they would appeal the verdict in hopes of winning full acquittal by innocence. His life and health went downhill after the trial, and he was isolated in his last decades. His body was found in his Sofia apartment on August 1, 2007; he apparently had died two days earlier.

Antxon: alias of Eugenio Etxebeste.

Mikel Antza: alias of Miguel Albisu Iriarte.

Salem Abu Anzek: Jordanian arrested on November 7, 1979, after police found two SA-7 Strela missiles inside a van driven by three leftists as they were going from Rome to Ortona. The missiles were believed to have been smuggled to the Rome branch of the Autonomous Workers Movement on the Lebanese freighter Sidon.

Belgacem Mohamed Ben Aouadi: one of four Tunisians convicted by a Milan court on February 22, 2002, on terrorist charges, including criminal association with intent to transport arms, explosives, and chemicals and falsifying 235 work permits, 130 driver's licenses, several foreign passports, and various bank documents. They were acquitted of charges of possession of arms and chemicals. The guilty verdicts were the first in Europe against al Qaeda operatives since the 9/11 attacks. The four belonged to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, an Algerian wing of al Qaeda. He received four years.

Mahmoud Slimane Aoun: alias Gaby Eid Semaan. Arrested by Spanish police on July 28, 2004, while carrying documents identifying him as a 44-year-old Portuguese citizen. He admitted knowing Moroccan-born Abdelila Fouad, who had been accused of collaboration in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. On July 30, 2004, Investigating Magistrate Juan del Olmo identified the detainee as Mahmoud Slimane Aoun, alias Gaby Eid Semaan (a name he used in 1988), a Lebanese, and ordered him held without bail after a hearing. Aoun said he and Fouad had trafficked in hashish.

Youssef Aouni: on May 17, 2005, a Paris court sentenced him to two to seven years for association with a terrorist enterprise and for providing logistical support to the killers of Ahmed Shah Massoud, who on September 9, 2001, was assassinated in Afghanistan by al Qaeda terrorists posing as journalists.

Alfonso Aparicio: Spanish photographer arrested by Honduran police as an accomplice in the bombing on March 9, 1985, at Le Volcanic Discotheque on Morazan Boulevard in downtown Tegucigalpa.

Freddy Aponno: leader of seven members of the Free South Moluccan Youth Organization that seized a train in Beilen, Netherlands, killing the engineer and a passenger later in the takeover on December 2, 1975. They demanded that the Dutch government recognize the nonexistent Republic of South Molucca, that it release 25 terrorists held in Dutch jails (including several given prison sentences of up to five years in July 1975 for plotting to kidnap Queen Juliana and members of her royal family), that it initiate UN mediation on Moluccan independence, and that it provide a bus to take them to a plane that would fly to an undisclosed destination. The terrorists surrendered on December 14. On March 26, 1976, the seven terrorists were sentenced to 14 years in prison. Their release was demanded in attacks on a train and a school by South Moluccans on May 23, 1977.

Ibrahim 'Aqil: on April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for 'Aqil's arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Jose Luis Aracama Mendia: alias Marcario. One of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members identified by eyewitnesses as the assassins of Vice Admiral Colon de Carvajal and his driver, Miguel Trigo, in Madrid on February 6, 1986.

Ignacio Arakama Mendia: alias Macario. On March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members, including Arakama, on Algerian soil. On April 18, 1989, he was among the 6 of the 50 ETA members who had been living in Algeria who were expelled.

Coskun Aral: photographer for the Paris-based SIPA press agency arrested on suspicion of helping four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich to Istanbul and Ankara on October 13, 1980. He was released on October 17, 1980.

Luciano Arambarri Badiola: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested by French air and frontier police in Ciboure on March 11, 1988. Spain requested extradition in 1984.

Blanca Aramburu: arrested on January 17, 1987, in San Sebastian during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Pilar Aramburu Quinones: arrested on January 17, 1987, in Irun during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Maria Asuncion Arana Altuna: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Eugenio Aranburu: leader of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) political wing. He was found hanged at age 41 on February 10, 1997, at his family home in Spain hours before he was due to appear before the Supreme Court.

Amaya Araquistain Unamuno: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. A Uruguayan lower court denied extradition. The decision was upheld on March 16, 1994, and he was released; the charges remained.

Musbah Arbas: Libyan intelligence service member for whom an arrest warrant was issued on October 30, 1991, for the September 19, 1989, Union de Transport Ariens bombing that killed 171. He was charged with violations of French law by conspiring to commit murder, destroying property with explosives, and taking part in a terrorist enterprise. On June 12, 1998, France announced that it would try Arbas with five other Libyans in absentia. On March 10, 1999, a French anti-terrorism court imposed life in prison. If any of the six were to fall into French hands, they would automatically be given a retrial under French law. France never requested extradition. Libyan leader Muammar Qadhafi earlier had said he would turn the six over to France but also had said he would consider making the six serve any sentence imposed by a French court in Libyan prison.

Jesus Arcauz Aranaz: variant of Jose Arcauz.

Jose Arcauz: variant Jesus Arcauz Aranaz; alias Josu de Mondargon. Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) second in command, in charge of ETA's "illegal" commandos. On January 12, 1990, Paris-based Judge Vellemain ordered his arrest. He was arrested with four other ETA members in Biarritz, France, on March 18, 1991, following the March 16 car bombing in San Sebastian when a civil guard died and four people were injured. He was wanted by Spanish police, but first was to stand trial in France and serve whatever sentence might be imposed.

Fiora Pirri Ardizzoni: alias the Red Countess. Wife of Franco Piperno, leader of the ultra-left Workers' Autonomy movement in Italy. On June 9, 1985, president Sandro Pertini pardoned her; she was serving a nine-year sentence for participation in armed bands.

Argala: alias of Jose Maria Benaran Ordenana.

Dogan Arif: Iranian businessman charged in the United Kingdom in March 1983 with kidnapping six Iranians in London and Belgium.

Juan Jose Aristizabal Kortajarena: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member deported by Panama to France in 1984. His wife, Jone Idigoras Santana, was one of five ETA members arrested in Biarritz, France, on March 18, 1991.

Hector Aristy: former Dominican ambassador to the UN Education, Scientific, and Cultural Organization who on June 16, 1977, was charged in Paris with involvement in the kidnapping of Luchino Revelli-Beaumont. Revelli-Beaumont, president of the Fiat Subsidiary, had been seized by the Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity on April 13, 1977. They demanded a $30 million ransom by June 11. Aristy had been serving as an intermediary between the family and the kidnappers.

Jail el-Arja: France claimed he was a 39-year-old and was one of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976.

Jose Javier Arizcuren Ruiz: alias Kantaury. Native of Pamplona and one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members believed by police to be responsible for the September 7, 1987, assassination of Civil Guard 2nd Lt. Cristobal Martin Luengo in Bilbao, Spain. He was also blamed for setting off a car bomb on September 9, 1987, that killed two Spanish civil guards in Guernica. A French court sentenced him in January 2000 to eight years in prison. In September 2000, a Paris appeals court authorized extradition to Spain to stand trial for attempting to kill King Juan Carlos in 1995.

Pier Giorgio Armani: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Armani. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Angela Armstrong: associate of Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist. She was charged with arms possession and collusion with agents of a foreign power. On July 26, 1975, she was given provisional liberty in Paris.

Patrick Armstrong: one of the Guildford Four imprisoned for two alleged IRA pub bombings on October 5, 1974, in which 5 people died and 71 were injured. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and fabricated evidence. They spent 14 years in prison. The four were to receive compensation.

Luigi Aronica: member of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei who on May 2, 1985, was sentenced by a Rome court to 18 years and 2 months for a series of murders, attempted murders, bombings, and assaults between 1977 and 1981.

Hassan Aroua: on October 31, 1990, the Paris Appeals Court increased his prison sentence from five to six years for being an accomplice in a bombing wave in Paris in September 1986 that killed 13 and maimed 303. On April 13, 1992, a Paris court sentenced him to life for transporting and placing the explosives.

Mahir Arrar: detained on September 5, 2006, during raids on several homes in Vollsmose, Odense, before dawn, in which police detained a total of nine Muslim men for preparing explosives for a terrorist attack in Denmark. Seven were arraigned on preliminary charges of plotting a terrorist attack. Arrar, age 18, was released.

Jose Maria Arregui Erostarbe: alias Fiti. On January 12, 1990, Paris-based Judge Vellemain ordered his arrest. He was believed to be the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) fabricator of a parcel bomb that exploded in Seville, Spain, on April 19, 1990, seriously injuring Carmen de Felipe, an Expo 92 employee who lost her left hand.

Jesus Maria Arriaga Alvisu: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by French police to Spain on February 27, 1987. He was born in San Sebastian.

Nekane Arriets: owner of an apartment used by two suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in the Olivet District of the Guipuzcoa town of Renteria in Spain on November 18, 1990. The duo was preparing a possible escape to France. He was a member of the Pro-Amnesty Committee arrested later in San Sebastian.

Christina Arrizabalaga: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Santiago Arrospide Sarasola: alias Santi Potros. Spaniard arrested on September 30, 1987, in Anglet, France, and suspected of being one of the four main leaders of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. He was believed to be in charge of ETA “illegals” who lived clandestinely in France and traveled to Spain to conduct their attacks. Police believed he was part of a faction disposed toward negotiations with the government under certain circumstances. His refugee status was revoked in October 1988. On March 23, 1990, France approved extradition. Spain had requested extradition six times on charges of terrorist attacks, murder, attempted murder, and possession of explosives.

Garikoitz Arruarte: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) terrorists, age 24, arrested by Spanish police on December 24, 2003, as they were planning to set off two powerful bombs on a train at a Madrid station. The duo was arrested in towns in the Basque region. One was picked up in San Sebastian, carrying a 55-pound bomb in a suitcase. Police then found a second suspect who had placed another 55-pound bomb on a train traveling from San Sebastian to Madrid. The train was stopped in Burgos. After the train was evacuated, police defused the bomb, which was set to explode at 4:00 P.M., when Madrid's Chamartin Station would have been packed with travelers. On December 25, police said that the suspects also had planned to attack a rail line in Spain's Zaragoza Province on Christmas Eve. However, the explosion occurred a day too early and caused limited damage without disrupting rail traffic.

Jose Miguel Arrugaeta: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Francisco Luis Arrugiaga Perondo: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by French police to Spain on February 27, 1987. He was born in Renteria.

Adil Arslan: identified in Munich's Focus as a former member of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) charged with membership in a terrorist association and criminal acts connected with it. In 1992, the Higher Regional Court in Celle, Germany, sentenced him to four years and two months in prison for severe deprivation of liberty and dangerous bodily injury. He was released on probation. He was injured when an apparent PKK gunman shot him several times in the face.

Artapalo: alias of Jose Mugica Arregui.

Jobesa Arteché: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member extradited to Spain from Belgium on July 14, 1984. He had been arrested near Antwerp in October 1983 for transporting arms. In March 1984, he had been sentenced to one year in prison prior to extradition. On August 5, 1984, ETA bombed the Antwerp Palace of Justice in retaliation for the extradition.

Kevin Barry Artt: on December 27, 1995, bail was set in the United States at $500,000 for Artt, one of 38 prisoners who escaped from Northern Ireland's Maze Prison in 1983. He was convicted in Northern Ireland of murder. He and two other escapees were arrested in California between 1992 and 1994.

Eusebio Arzallus Tapia: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Jose Manuel Arzallus: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member implicated in the murder of forest ranger Ramirez Quintero in Lazarza. On May 23, 1980, Dutch police handed four ETA terrorists, including Arzallus, over to Spanish police. The foursome had arrived in Amsterdam from South Yemen, where they reportedly had received terrorist training with eight other ETA terrorists and several Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) dissidents.

Mohammed Ramsi Arzouni: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On February 8, 1985, an Italian examining magistrate released Arzouni; he had claimed to be only a casual acquaintance of five of the defendants.

Mohamed Zaher Asade: one of nine members of the Mujaheddin Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Mar'uf Ahmad al-As'adi: variant Mur'uf. One of four Palestine Liberation Front hijackers on October 7, 1985, of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, which set sail from Genoa, Italy, on a 12-day Mediterranean excursion with planned stops at Naples, Syracuse, Alexandria, Port Said, and Ashdod, Israel. The hijackers held 116 passengers and 331 crew members as hostages. They killed Leon Klinghoffer, age 69, an American confined to a wheelchair, and dumped his body overboard. The hijacking ended in Egypt. The United States requested extradition from the Egyptians, but president Hosni Mubarak told reporters that the hijackers had left for an unknown destination. However, U.S. fighters forced the getaway plane to land and took the four hijackers into custody. The four hijackers were formally arrested by Italian authorities; the United States planned to request extradition. On October 17, 1985, after the Craxi government resigned, murder warrants were issued in Genoa against the four hijackers. On October 23, 1985, he turned state's evidence, identifying Abu Abbas as the mastermind. His trial began on November 18, 1985, on charges of arms smuggling. He was found guilty and sentenced to four to five years. On June 18, 1986, his Genoa trial began for murder and kidnapping. On July 10, 1986, he was sentenced to 15 years and 2 months. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction.

'Ali Muhammad Asbibi: leader of the network of eight Hizballah terrorists who were arrested in Spain on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that they had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the ports of Valencia and Madrid.

Jacqueline Asbir: variant of Jacqueline Esbar.

Marwa Dana Asha: medical technician, age 27, arrested with her husband, Mohammed Jamail Abdelqader Asha, for the bombing on June 29, 2007, of a disco in London and the June 30, 2007, crashing of a fiery SUV into an airport entrance in Scotland. They have a son. She was released without charge on July 12.

Mohammed Jamil Abdelqader Asha: Palestinian physician, age 26, educated in Jordan and carrying a Jordanian passport, who was arrested for the bombing on June 29, 2007, of a disco in London and the June 30, 2007, fiery crashing of a SUV into a Scotland airport entrance. Asha had moved to the United Kingdom two years prior and worked as a neurologist at the North Staffordshire Hospital. He and his wife, age 27, were arrested by central England police.

Mike Asher: London-based South African-backed Seychelles exile who worked for Italy and was blown up by his own bomb on October 20, 1982, before he could launch a coup against the government of Seychelles president Albert France Rene. The Seychelles Resistance Movement claimed credit.

Bassam Ashqar: one of four Palestine Liberation Front hijackers on October 7, 1985, of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro. They held 116 passengers and 331 crew members hostage, and American passenger Leon Klinghoffer was murdered. Ashqar was found guilty of arms smuggling and sentenced to four to five years. Following the trial, he was found to be age 17, requiring retrial in juvenile court. On December 6, 1986, he was found guilty of complicity in Klinghoffer's murder and sentenced to 16 years and 3 months by a juvenile court. (See also Mar'uf Ahmad al-As'adi.)

Muhammad Abd Rahman Bilasi-Ashri: Egyptian sentenced in absentia to 15 years in prison for supporting Egyptian Islamic Jihad. He was arrested in October 2003 by Austria. A Vienna court ordered extradition. In 1999, his name came up during the investigation of London-based extremists possibly involved in the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Africa in 1998.

Muhsin al-'Ashur: Syrian student arrested for the August 29, 1981, attack on Vienna's Synagogue Seitenstetengasse by the Abu Nidal group, an attack in which 2 were killed and 20 injured. He was captured at 10 Gablenzgasse in Vienna-Ottakring, Austria.

Samet Aslan: alleged accomplice of Mehmet Ali Agca in his attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Yusef Aslan: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) members who were arrested for kidnapping three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. The kidnappers' release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972.

Joaquino Aspirrelez Lecona: one of four alleged members of Irrixi, a subgroup of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military, arrested on May 17, 1986, in the Inchaurrenondo neighborhood of San Sebastian, Spain, on suspicion of machine-gun attacks against French trucks. Police found an arms cache and wigs.

Kayed Assad: Jordanian-born Palestinian member of the Abu Nidal Organization released from a French jail on February 5, 1986, after serving 8 years of a 15-year sentence for the 1978 assassination of Izz al-Din al-Qalaq, the Palestine Liberation Organization representative in France. He was deported to an unnamed Arab country.

Shaker Assem: leader in Germany of the radical Islamic Hizb ut-Tahrir (Party of Liberation). The group fomented anti-Semitism and violence, focusing on university campuses and neo-Nazi groups. On January 15, 2003, German authorities banned the group, and police raided 25 sites, including the Duisburg home of the group's leader, Shaker Assem, seizing his computer and documents. Assem had lectured in the summer of 2001 at the Islamic study group founded by 9/11 hijack leader Muhammad Atta at the Technical University in Hamburg. The German Interior Ministry said, "The organization supports the use of violence as a means to realize political interests. Hizb ut-Tahrir denies the right of the state of Israel to exist and calls for its destruction. The organization also spreads extremely anti-Jewish hate propaganda and calls for the killing of Jews." The group was founded in Jordan in 1953 by a Palestinian. The group calls for the overthrow of Arab governments and creation of a single Islamic state. On March 25, 2004, 26 Islamic Hizb ut-Tahrir members were convicted in an Egyptian state security court for trying to revive the group. The group is banned in several Arab countries.

Pedro Astorquiza-Icazuriaga: alias Pottoka. Suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader arrested in Saint-Jean-de-Luz in 1983. Later, police discovered he was collecting "revolutionary tax" from Spanish industrialists in France and Spain. He was arrested on October 22, 1987, in Paris and expelled to Spain under emergency measures to combat terrorism.

Haroon Radhi Aswat: variant of Haroon Rashid Aswat.

Haroon Rashid Aswat: variant Haroon Radhi Aswat. Pakistani (or Indian), age 31, raised in Batley, United Kingdom, who was an aide to Abu Hamza Masri, the radical Muslim preacher in London. Zambian police arrested Aswat on July 20, 2005, as he was crossing into the country from Zimbabwe. Aswat had earlier traveled to the United States and was involved in a plot to set up a terrorist training camp in Oregon. He had also been in Pakistan, India, and other countries. His cell phone had received 20 calls from several of the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The last call was made the night of July 6 from London. He comes from the same general area of West Yorkshire as three of the bombers; Mohammed Sidique Khan lived closest to him. Aswat attended schools in Batley and Dewsbury and went to a technical college in Bradford. He was deported by Zambia to the United Kingdom on August 7, 2005, and arrested on U.S. warrants alleging that he had helped plan the terrorist training camp in Oregon. The United States requested his extradition. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws ruled that Aswat and Babar Ahmad could be extradited to stand nonmilitary trial.

Hasan Atab: Palestinian, age 16, carrying a Moroccan passport and arrested while running from the scene of a midmorning bombing of the British Airways office in the Via Bissolati in Rome on September 25, 1985. The bomb killed 1 person and injured 13. He admitted to planting the bomb. The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems (an Abu Nidal alias) claimed credit. On June 30, 1986, he was sentenced to 14 years in prison.

Hussein Hanis Atat: Lebanese arrested on November 18, 1984, by Swiss security personnel as he was about to board a plane for Rome while carrying 1.8 kilograms of explosives. On January 30, 1985, a Swiss court sentenced him to 18 months in prison and suspended the sentence on the condition that he stay out of Swiss territory for 15 years. He had spent 73 days in pretrial detention. In early January 1985, the third secretary at the Swiss Embassy in West Beirut was kidnapped and held for four days; some speculated that the kidnapping was motivated by Atat's detention. Switzerland denied Italy's extradition request.

Bedri Ates: alias of Oral Celik.

Menelaos Athimis: one of the EOKA-B bombers of three British military bases in Cyprus on December 1, 1977.

Muhammad Ali al-Ati: Libyan Airlines traffic officer at Heathrow Airport who on April 14, 1985, was deported to Libya after being detained under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of terrorist acts.

Hicham Atie: one of three Lebanese men arrested on August 20, 1986, in West Berlin on suspicion of preparing to bomb a U.S. military installation. The trio was supported by Libya. They were released on September 3, 1986, due to insufficient evidence. Two of the men were handed over to immigration police for possible deportation.

Karim Sa'id Atmani: extradited by Canada to France on charges that he participated in the 1995 Paris subway bombing that killed 4 and injured 86. He reportedly had lived with Ahmed Ressam in Canada. Ressam was arrested on the U.S.–Canadian border on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives. In April 2001, Atmani was arrested by Bosnia-Herzegovina authorities. He was extradited in July 2001 to France, where he was wanted on an Interpol warrant.

Mohamed Atris: on April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced him to five years and three months for involvement in the September 17, 1992, murder of four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians.

Sami Hanna Attalah: Iraqi second secretary who an Iraqi Kurd bomber claimed had given him a briefcase to take to the Iranian Embassy in Austria.

The bomb exploded on July 30, 1980, injuring eight people. The Kurd had second thoughts and decided to call the police, but the bomb exploded as soon as he put the briefcase down, slightly injuring him.

Aldy Attar: Egyptian surgeon, age 53, in Neu-Ulm, Bavaria, who met separately with 9/11 lead hijacker Muhammad Atta and bin Laden financier Mamdouh Mahmud Salim and was extradited to the United States in 1998 on charges of involvement in the U.S. embassy bombings in Africa. Attar traveled often in Europe and to Sudan. German police searched his apartment on October 6, 2001, and removed documents. But he left on September 20, 2001, for Sudan, where his German wife had lived for several years. Attar denied knowing the hijackers in an interview with German ZDF television. He said he met Salim via a mutual friend.

Joelle Aubron: aliases Simone Barnstein Deroy, Pascale de Bouikers, Dominique Bayer. Direct Action member arrested by French police on March 21, 1987, and charged with the January 25, 1985, assassination in Paris of Gen. Rene Audran, the defense ministry official in charge of France's arms exports. She had earlier been charged with the November 17, 1986, murder of Georges Besse, the Renault president. The police had announced a 1 million franc ($150,000) reward for information leading to her arrest. Aubron went on a hunger strike for several weeks to demand political prisoner status. On January 11, 1988, her trial began for the murder of Renault chief Georges Besse, illegal association, the January 1985 shooting of Army Gen. Rene Audran, and the murder of two policemen on May 31, 1983. On January 14, 1989, after only 105 minutes of deliberation by the jury, she was sentenced to life with a recommendation that she serve a minimum of 18 years.

Uchmed Daoud Mechamed Auda: aliases Abu Daoud, Youssef Raji Hanna. Black September leader and member of Fatah's Revolutionary Council since 1970. In 1972, he traveled to Sofia to buy arms for Fatah. He planned the September 1972 Munich Olympics massacre. He was arrested on February 15, 1973, with 16 other terrorists who were planning to assassinate King Hussein in Amman and overthrow his government. His release was demanded by five Palestinians who seized the Saudi Arabia Embassy in Paris on September 5, 1973.

French DST officials arrested him at a Paris hotel on January 7, 1977. His arrest caused him to figure prominently in a 1977 extradition squabble between Israel, West Germany, and France. He claimed he was promised immunity while staying with the Palestinian delegation attending the funeral of Mahmoud Saleh, who had been assassinated earlier in the month. He was arrested on an international warrant issued shortly after the Olympics. Israel asked the French to hold him for 60 days under provisional arrest, and the West Germans requested extradition. France released him on legal technicalities on January 11, 1977, and gave him a first-class seat on an Air Algeria flight to Algiers. On the evening of August 1, 1981, he was hit by five bullets fired in the Opera coffee-house of Warsaw's Victoria International Hotel.

On May 3, 1999, he was turned away at Paris's Orly Airport when he tried to enter France to promote his new autobiography, per a 1977 decree banning him from France. He was now a member of the Palestine National Council and a Ramallah attorney. He acknowledged in the book his role in the Munich attack. On June 13, 1999, Israel banned him from entering the West Bank. He said he would contest in Israeli courts the decision to prevent him from returning to Ramallah.

Ronald Augustin: Dutch citizen who was convicted of aiding West German terrorists and threatening to murder U.S. ambassador to West Germany Walter J. Stoessel. On August 11, 1978, the Justice Ministry in Hanover, West Germany, denied parole.

Karl Ausserer: carpenter convicted in Italy of Ein Tirol terrorist attacks in South Tirol who was taken into custody on November 7, 1988, by the Provincial Court of Innsbruck, Austria. He faced criminal charges of intentionally causing danger by using explosives in several attacks in the area in May 1988. In the 1960s, a Milan court sentenced him to 24 years in prison for participating in terrorist attacks, but he fled to Austria and lived in Innsbruck from then on. He was interrogated by an Innsbruck investigating judge on December 11, 1988.

Rasmi Awad: Jordanian doctor arrested by British police on September 22, 1985, on charges of plotting to throw hand grenades in a public place. He was detained at the Warren Street Underground station while collecting four hand grenades from a Libyan contact who had tipped off police. On September 29, 1986, he was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Youssef Awad: alias of Mohammed Hussein Rashid.

Mahmoud Awada: Lebanese who was one of five men loitering among passengers awaiting an Iberia flight for Malaga, Spain, across from the El Al counter at Paris's Orly Airport on May 20, 1978. They pulled out Beretta machine pistols and fired at French police. Two gunmen vanished in the confusion; the other three were killed. Police found plastique and grenades on the bodies of the dead terrorists, who had arrived earlier in the day from Tunis. The Organization of the Sons of Southern Lebanon claimed credit. Israel suggested that it was Black June working with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP).

Sadaq Ahmad Awan: one of three Libyans invited to leave Spain on December 20, 1985, when secret service agents uncovered the Libyans' plot to assassinate exile Libyan opposition leader Dr. al-Muqayrif. The trio had worked for the Libyan Embassy in Madrid but did not have diplomatic status. They left within three weeks.

Dahir Ubeidullahi Aweys: resident of Rome, Italy, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier.

Claudius Axel: alias of Wilfred Boese.

Amer Ay: variant Omer. Alleged Grey Wolves accomplice to Mehmud Ali Agca in St. Peter's Square during the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Omer Ay: variant of Amer Ay.

Atallah Ayad: Lebanese believed to have planned the September 17, 1992, Hizballah assassination of four Kurdish politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. He had been an Amal militiaman in Lebanon. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal acquitted him.

Mohamed Ayat: member of a Spanish al Qaeda cell broken up by arrests on May 14, 2004. The group, which reported to Abderrazak Mahjdoub and Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, provided financing to the rest of the European network.

Ghassan Ayaub: Palestinian living in West Berlin tasked by Yasir Chraydi to kill Mustafa Elashkek, an opponent of the Libyan regime. The murder occurred on July 30, 1984.

Ibrahim al-'Aydarus: one of seven fundamentalists with terrorist connections who were arrested on September 27, 1998, in London under the immigration law.

Habib Mahmud al-'Aydi: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Ignacio Ayerde Mugica: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Mahmud Khalid 'Aynatur: alias Abu-'Ali Majid. Head of the Special Operations group of the Abu Nidal-led Fatah Revolutionary Council. He was arrested on February 11, 1995, by Lebanese authorities in Sidon for the 1987 Silco yacht hijacking in the Mediterranean, during which seven Belgians were taken hostage. Authorities planned to question him about the murder of Jordanian First Secretary Naeb Umran Maaitah in Beirut on January 29, 1994.

Su'ad Ayssawi: mistress of Habib Maamar, a Tunisian arrested in Paris in May 1986 who confessed to the Orchard Street bombing in London on December 25, 1983, near Marks and Spencer and Selfridges. He claimed he was paid $3,000 per month by a pro-Iraqi faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) led by Abu Ibrahim to bomb Israeli targets. He also confessed to the February 23, 1985, bombing of Marks and Spencer in Paris that killed 1 and injured 14 and to the August 21, 1985, bombing of the Israeli Bank Leumi office in Paris. Large quantities of a plastic explosive, penthrate, were found in his Paris home. Their trial opened on December 13, 1989.

Mohammad Ayud: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. Ayud, age 63, was believed to be one of the group's ideological leaders.

Teodorov Ayyazov: variants Todor, Teodor, Aivazov. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him for an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. On March 29, 1986, Judge Severino Santiapichi announced that the Rome jury had acquitted the Bulgarian on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope because of insufficient evidence.

Ghassan Ayyub: on June 21, 1994, the Lebanese criminal court pronounced him not guilty in the 1984 murder of Mustafa al-'Ashiq, a Libyan dissident, in Germany. He came from the 'Ayn al-Hulwah Palestinian refugee camp near Sidon.

Mohammad Azadi: Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports, under the names Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas. On August 14, the People's Mujahedeen exile group said he was a member of the Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, a terrorist unit in the Iranian Revolutionary Guard. They said that Azadi was a senior member of the elite unit and led the hit team.

Jose Azcona Uriz: alias of Esteban Murillo Zubiri.

Antxon Azcue Aizpurua: alias Sastre. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on July 31, 1987, by the police of Biarritz, France, in the Guipuzcoa town of Getaria and expelled to Spain.

Mouri Azdachir: Syrian arrested on June 14, 1991, by Milan airport police as he was trying to board a New York-bound Pan American flight, on suspicion that he was carrying a detonator in his briefcase. He was held at Busto Arsizio jail on charges of possession of weapons components.

He had lived in Italy for two years and claimed he was going to Los Angeles where he said his brother lived.

Amer Azizi: alias Othman al-Andalusi. Moroccan al Qaeda operative, age 36, believed to be in contact with the leader of the 3/11 Madrid trains bombings in 2004, which killed 200 and injured 2,000.

On April 28, 2004, Azizi was indicted on charges of helping to plan the 9/11 attacks by organizing a meeting in Spain in July 2001 in which key plotters Mohamed Atta and Ramzi Binalshibh finalized details, according to Judge Baltasar Garzon. In a September 2003 indictment against bin Laden and 34 other terrorist suspects, Azizi was charged with multiple counts of murder on 9/11. Azizi was a close friend of Imad Eddin Baraket Yarkas, jailed in November 2001 for leading a Spanish al Qaeda cell that funded and provided logistics for the 9/11 attackers. Azizi fled Spain in November 2001. In late 2004, the U.S. Department of State offered a $5 million reward for information leading to the arrest of Azizi's handler, Spanish citizen Mustafa Setmariam Nasar, an al Qaeda operative who ran a training camp in Afghanistan.

Asghar 'Azizi: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

Jose Duarte Azpiroz: arrested in Pamplona, Spain, in connection with arrests of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members on November 18, 1990.

Fernando de Luis Aztarloa: suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in France in March 1986. On December 1, 1987, a Bordeaux court granted extradition to Spain, which had charged him with crimes against persons and property and membership in an armed group.

Lauro Azzolini: following an October 3, 1978, gun battle with police, he was arrested for the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome. On January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with the kidnapping and killing of Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Samir Azzouz: Muslim of Moroccan origin, age 18, who was among several individuals arrested in October 2003 but released by the Dutch for lack of evidence. Azzouz was again detained in June 2004 when police found bomb-making components and maps to critical Netherlands facilities. He was picked up based on communications with Naoufel, a Moroccan in Spain believed to be involved in the 2003 suicide bombings in Casablanca, Morocco, that killed 45 people. Azzouz was believed to be a friend of Mohammed Bouyeri, who killed Theo van Gogh. Azzouz, a Dutch Moroccan, was acquitted of terrorism charges in 2005. However, on October 14, 2005, he was among several people arrested in three Dutch cities as police stepped up security around Parliament and other government buildings to disrupt a plot to attack politicians and public buildings, including the headquarters of the Dutch General Intelligence and Security Service. Azzouz had prepared a suicide video designed to "strike terrible fear into the Dutch people."

On December 1, 2006, a court in Amsterdam convicted four Dutch Muslims, including Azzouz, of plotting terrorist attacks against political leaders and government buildings. Azzouz received eight years in prison.

B

---

Issam B.: one of two Syrian hijackers of a Lufthansa B727 en route from Frankfurt to deport them to Damascus on February 27, 1985.

Andreas Baader: one of the founders of the Baader-Meinhof group, also known as the Red Army Faction in West Germany. He was captured on June 1, 1972, after a gunfight with Frankfurt police. He was wounded in the hip when police surrounded his garage hideout. He was one of three RAF members sentenced to life in prison on April 28, 1977, by a five-man tribunal in Stuttgart. The counts included the murders of four U.S. soldiers in bombings of U.S. installations in Frankfurt and Heidelberg in May 1972. They were also found guilty of 34 attempted murders and were given 15-year sentences for the bombings of two police stations, a publishing house, and a judge's car and the attempted murder of policemen during a shootout when they were arrested. Their attorney, Otto Schilly, argued that their actions had been legitimate protests against the Vietnam War and that they should be treated as prisoners of war. Baader was in poor physical condition as a result of a hunger strike. His release was demanded on September 5, 1972, by the Black September terrorists who took the Israeli athletes hostage at the Munich Olympics; by the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975; and by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, who was president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. Baader's release was also demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. Baader committed suicide in Stammheim prison in Stuttgart on October 18, 1977, hours after the Lufthansa rescue in Somalia by the West German GSG9 team; he fired two bullets into his cell walls and shot himself in the back of the head.

The Baader Solidarity Group claimed credit in 1975 for attacking the Mercedes branch in Paris, the German television offices in Paris, and a German coach in France. The Andreas Baader Commando of the Red Army Faction claimed credit for the assassination attempt on June 25, 1979, against Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in Europe, in Belgium.

N. Bachalt: Algerian would-be hijacker of a Lufthansa B737 flying from Cologne to Munich on July 10, 1972.

Kassem Bachrouche: tried in absentia along with seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court convicted Bachrouche of forming an armed gang and sentenced him to four and one-half years.

Sajid Badat: student at the College of Islamic Knowledge and Guidance in Blackburn, United Kingdom, and one of 20-plus people arrested in November–December 2003 in a series of anti-terrorist raids in the United Kingdom. On December 3, 2003, Badat, age 24, was charged with conspiring with would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid and other explosives offenses. On October 4, 2004, a U.S. federal grand jury in Boston charged Badat with seven counts of attempted murder, trying to destroy an aircraft, and other crimes related to a conspiracy with Reid. The unsealed indictment said that when Badat was arrested in November, he “admitted that he was asked to conduct a shoe bombing like Reid” and that Badat aided Reid and planned his own attack. Badat received explosives training in Afghanistan and Pakistan and returned to the United Kingdom with his bomb on December 10, 2001. On December 14, 2001, he e-mailed his handlers saying he “might withdraw.” He was scheduled to fly from Manchester to Amsterdam for an onward flight to the United States, which was to be bombed. Instead he disassembled his bomb at home.

On February 28, 2005, Badat pleaded guilty in London’s Central Criminal Court to plotting to destroy a U.S. airliner with a bomb packed into his shoe. On April 22, 2005, Badat was sentenced to 13 years.

Abdel Hamid Badoui: one of two Moroccans arrested on April 24, 1987, by Direction de la Surveillance du Territoire (DST) counterespionage agents for the September 1986 bombing campaign in Paris. The duo admitted possessing the same kind of explosives as those used in the December 1985 to September 1986 bombing campaign in Paris that killed 13 people. They said they were asked to hide explosives before the 1986 attacks by Fouad Ali Saleh, a Tunisian arrested in March who was linked to Iranian-financed Shi’ite Muslim extremists in Lebanon.

Hasan Ilyas Badr: alias Mohammed Soltani. Name on his Bahraini passport. He took part in several fedayeen attacks against Israeli interests in European capitals. He died when a bomb exploded prematurely in his room in London’s Mount Royal Hotel on January 17, 1980. The May 15 Arab Organization claimed credit.

‘Izz al-Din Badrakkan: on May 11, 1988, Italy’s Supreme Court of Cassation confirmed an appeals court’s life sentence for him in the October 7, 1985, shipjacking of the Achille Lauro and murder of U.S. passenger Leon Klinghoffer.

Omar Bagci: variant of Omer Bagci.

Omer Bagci: variant Omar Bagci. Turkish terrorist believed to have given Mehmet Ali Agca the 9-mm pistol used in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was arrested a few days later by police in Solothurn, Switzerland, and extradited to Italy. On March 29, 1986, he was sentenced to three years and two months for bringing the weapon to Italy but was cleared of the principal charge of conspiracy on the grounds that there was no proof that he had knowledge of Agca’s intentions. On January 9, 1995, Philippine police announced that they were searching for him regarding a newly discovered plan to murder the pope during his visit to the Philippines. He allegedly was one of four Turks who had entered the country disguised as priests.

Said Bahaji: indicted by Germany in late 2001 as part of an al Qaeda cell in Hamburg that assisted the 9/11 hijackers. He was a German citizen whose father was Moroccan. Bahaji, 9/11 leader Muhammad Atta, and Ramzi Binalshibh rented an apartment on Marien Street, Hamburg, on December 1, 1998, that served as an al Qaeda cell. Hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi lived there; Pennsylvania hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah was a frequent visitor. Bahaji, the cell's logistics specialist, showed up in Karachi, Pakistan, on a Turkish Airlines flight in early September, accompanied by individuals claiming to be Abdullah Hussainy, a Belgian of Algerian origin, and Ammar Moula, a Frenchman. Investigators determined in mid-November that they were Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, age 24, a Moroccan who also lived on Marien Street. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked Bahaji's financial assets.

Henri El Bahri: one of four members of SOS France, a right-wing terrorist organization, who were killed when their car blew up on August 18, 1986, while transporting explosives intended for a racist-oriented attack in Toulon.

Rabah Chekat-Bais: one of three unemployed men arrested on November 16, 2002, by Scotland Yard and charged with terrorist activities. Local press said that they had planned to release cyanide gas in the underground rail system.

Basri Bajrami: Albanian with Yugoslav citizenship arrested for the kidnapping of former Belgian prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants on January 14, 1989. The Yugoslav press reported on June 15, 1989, that Belgian police had prevented the kidnapping of justice minister Melchior Wathelet, which was being prepared by the Albanian mafia in cooperation with Belgian and Turkish gangsters in a plan to secure Bajrami's release. He was arrested in February 1989 in Metz, France, with 198,000 Swiss francs in his pockets, part of the ransom for Vanden Boeynants.

His Belgian wife is Evelyne Braibant, released from jail in 1989.

Amir Bajric: Bosnian ex-convict with a tattoo of Osama bin Laden on his chest, arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest on Polygonska Street in Sarajevo. He was arrested after Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy.

Attila Bajtsy: named by Vienna's Kurier on August 22, 1982, as being involved in planned attacks against U.S. missions in Austria. He apparently trained in a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) camp.

David Baker: alias used in February 1990 by a man claiming to work for Kiwi Market Research in applying for mail and telephone facilities for a London firm. He was one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorists planning to murder Sir Charles Tidbury, former chairman of Whitbread.

Mujabbar Bakr: leader of the group that bombed the Iraqi mission in Rome in 1980. His name was used by the bombers of the Iraqi Consulate in Thailand on December 2, 1982.

Doris Bakta: wife of Swiss journalist Jean Bakta, and one of 24 people Egypt arrested on April 20, 1978, who belonged to the international terrorist consortium Correct Course of Fatah, which had been headed by Wadi Haddad and was now part of Black June. On May 20, 1978, Egyptian attorney general Ibrahim al-Qalyubi ordered them released.

Jean Bakta: Swiss journalist and husband of Doris Bakta and one of 24 people Egypt arrested on April 20, 1978, who belonged to the international terrorist consortium Correct Course of Fatah, which had been headed by Wadi Haddad and was now part of Black June. On May 20, 1978, Egyptian attorney general Ibrahim al-Qalyubi ordered them released.

Aldo Baldacci: clerk at the Public Works Ministry office in Bologna arrested on June 19, 1987, in a Red Brigades (RB) hideout in a suburban Rome garage that contained arms, munitions, documents, and two motorbikes, one of which was believed to be the getaway vehicle in the March 20, 1987, assassination of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement, by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group.

Baldo: alias of Zabaleta Elosequi.

Ian Ball: on March 20, 1974, he drove a white Ford and halted the car of Princess Anne and her husband, Capt. Mark Philips, as they were driving down London's Mall toward Buckingham Palace. His shots hit the royal bodyguard in the chest, arm, and shoulder and the chauffeur in the stomach. He was unable to open the car door and ran to the rear of the car. A reporter who jumped out of a taxi to stop him was wounded, and a policeman was shot in the stomach. Ball continued to fire, and one bullet missed the princess by inches. He fled into St. James' Park, where he was overpowered by a police officer. Inside the Ford was a ransom note demanding $4.6 million in "reparation" for blacks, workers, and victims of inflation and the Irish Troubles.

Marco Ballan: on July 19, 1990, the act of association for subversion did not exist for the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court, which thus cleared him of all charges.

Barbara Balzarani: variant of Barbara Balzerani.

Barbara Balzerani: variant Balzarani. On January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged her with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, she and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro. She was sentenced in absentia on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier. She was captured on June 19, 1985, in Rome; she was the sole remaining member of the Red Brigade's executive council still at large. On July 20, 1985, a Venice court sentenced her to life in prison for the 1981 kidnapping and murder of Giuseppe Taliercio, the 1978 kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro, the murder of Pino Amato, and the kidnapping of General Dozier. On October 14, 1985, a Verona court resented her to 26 years in prison. On June 3, 1986, a Naples court sentenced her to life for murder and kidnapping.

Jamil El Banna: Jordanian, age 45, detained but not arrested at Luton Airport, north of London, on December 19, 2007, one of three individuals who had been released from Guantánamo's prison after four years in captivity. He was ordered released on bail.

Marwa al-Banna: on January 26, 1983, the Jordanian pleaded not guilty to charges of shooting Israeli ambassador Shlomo Argov in London on June 4, 1982. On March 5, 1983, he was convicted in London's Central Criminal Court. He received a 30-year sentence for driving the getaway car.

Jean Baptiste: alias of Andre Haverman.

Abu-al-Bara': alias of an unnamed British member of al Qaeda in Iraq sent on a suicide mission in 2007. His phone number was 00441215531049.

Ingrid Ursula Barabass: variant Barabas. Member of the West German Red Army Faction arrested with four other women in the Latin Quarter of Paris on May 6, 1980. Police found gasoline bombs, guns, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, and false identity papers. She was rearrested on July 3, 1985, in a police raid on a Red Army Faction (RAF) hideout in Offenbach, where police found guns and false passports. She was charged on February 26, 1986, by the Frankfurt Higher Regional Court. On March 5, 1987, the State Protection Division of the Frankfurt Higher Regional Court sentenced the teacher to 4 years and 10 months for infringement of the arms law and for “participation as a member” of the RAF. She had provided a hideout for Eva Haule-Frimpong, who had since been arrested. She was also given five days’ detention for disrupting the trial.

Jose Antonio Barandiaran: former mayor of Andoain in the Spanish Basque region, he was arrested as a Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member on May 21, 2008.

Jean-Pascal Barbier: on October 3, 1987, as part of a police raid that netted 93 suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members, police found fuses, fuse wire, and explosives in Barbier’s Bayonne home.

Marco Barbone: leftist Italian terrorist who confessed to the murder of Walter Tobagi of the Corriere Della Sera newspaper. In late November 1983, he received a suspended sentence after cooperating with authorities in apprehending another 50 suspected terrorists.

Marlene Bardali: one of the three members of the Easter Commando of Europeans who were to smuggle detonators and timing devices into Israel with the objective of bombing nine tourist hotels during the 1971 Easter ceremonies. On April 11, 1971, the Israelis immediately arrested Moroccan sisters Nadia and Marlene Bardali, daughters of a rich Casablanca merchant. Their confessions led the police to three others, including Evelyne Barges, who was behind the March 15, 1971, sabotage of the Gulf Oil refinery in Rotterdam. The sisters said during their trial that they had acted out of love for their Arab boyfriends.

Nadia Bardali: one of the three members of the Easter Commando of Europeans who were to smuggle detonators and timing devices into Israel with the objective of bombing nine tourist hotels during the 1971 Easter ceremonies. On April 11, 1971, the Israelis immediately arrested Moroccan sisters Nadia and Marlene Bardali, daughters of a rich Casablanca merchant. Their confessions led the police to three others, including Evelyne Barges, who was behind the March 15, 1971, sabotage of the Gulf Oil refinery in Rotterdam. The sisters said during their trial that they had acted out of love for their Arab boyfriends.

Mariano Bardero Prieto: he was arrested on October 3, 1987, in a police sweep of southwestern France and expelled. Police found in his apartment 3,000 kilograms of Goma 2 explosives stolen by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) in Soto de la Marina, Cantabria.

Juan Miguel Bardezi: alias Juan Miguel Barbesi Torres. One of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989. He was accompanied by his four-month-old daughter, whose mother was Begona Trasvina (or Trevino), also expelled.

Milo Bareschic: variant of Miro Baresic.

Miro Baresic: variants Miro Baressich, Milo Bareschic. Croatian assassin of Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden Vladimir Rolovic on April 17, 1971. He was imprisoned in Sweden after pleading guilty to the assassination in April. His release was obtained by three Croatian hijackers of Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm on September 15, 1972. He was permitted to leave for Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 23, 1974. On May 28, 1980, he was extradited from the United States to Sweden, where he was imprisoned. He was believed by the Yugoslavs to have been involved in terrorist activities in the United States. On June 3, 1980, the Croatian Freedom Fighters bombed the Washington, D.C., home of acting Yugoslav ambassador Vladimir Sindjelic, calling for an investigation into the case of Baresic, who had worked for the Paraguayan Embassy in Washington, D.C., from 1977 to 1978 under an assumed name. The member of Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret (Croatian Nationalist Movement) was sentenced to life, but the sentence was commuted in 1986 to 18 years for good conduct. Sweden announced that it would parole and deport Baresic on December 10, 1987. (Miro Baresic is possibly the same person as Miro Barzico.)

Miro Baressich: variant of Miro Baresic.

Evelyne Barges: English teacher in the Paris suburbs who also worked as a cashier at a theater managed by Mohammed Boudia, a Palestinian terrorist leader in Europe. She was part of a group that cut through the protective fence surrounding the Gulf Oil refinery oil tanks in Rotterdam, set delayed-action bombs, and escaped across the French border. Barges was arrested on April 12, 1971, and sentenced to 14 years. She later gave the Israelis a list of French addresses and names. The Israelis claimed she was involved in the September 1970 Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine airline hijackings. Others said she was involved with Fatah.

‘Adil ‘Abd-al-Majid ‘Abd-al-Bari: senior Egyptian Islamic Jihad member arrested by British authorities on September 27, 1998. He was sentenced to death in absentia in Egypt for the Khan al-Khalili bombings. By May 2000, the United Kingdom had agreed to extradite him to the United States, and in late 2001, he had lost an appeal and was awaiting transport to the United States.

Hamed Hamman Ben Barka: Tunisian arrested by Rome police on October 15, 1985, while smuggling two 3.5-kg bombs in false-bottom suitcases in an airport shuttle bus at Fiumicino Airport. Each of the penthrate plastic explosive bombs was capable of destroying a building. On December 6, 1986, he was found guilty of arms smuggling and sentenced to eight years in prison. He admitted that he was a member of the May 15 Arab Organization for the Liberation of Palestine and that he intended to blow up the U.S. Embassy and the American Express offices.

Simone Barnstein: alias of Joelle Aubron.

Dhiren Barot: aliases Issa al-Hindi, Eisa Hindi, Issa al-Britani. One of 13 people arrested by British authorities on August 3, 2004. Barot, age 32, was suspected of helping to arrange—and probably traveled to the United States to participate in—the pre-9/11 surveillance of five U.S. financial services buildings that were the subject of the terrorist alert in the United States on August 1.

On August 18, prosecutors charged eight British citizens alleged to be al Qaeda operatives with plotting against financial targets in New York, New Jersey, and Washington, D.C. Officials in the United States said they were considering filing their own charges against Dhiren and the others. Attorney Mudassar Arani represented seven of the defendants. The detainees were identified as Dhiren Barot, age 32; Mohammed Naveed Bhatti, age 24; Abdul Aziz Jalil, age 31; Omar Abdul Rehman, age 20; Junade Feroze, age 28; Zia Ul Haq, age 25; Qaisar Shaffi, age 25; and Nadeem Tarmohammed, age 26. The conspiracy charges included murder and public nuisance using “radioactive materials, toxic gases, chemicals and/or explosives to cause disruption.” Barot was charged with possessing a reconnaissance plan, for February 2001 to August 2004, of the Prudential Financial headquarters in Newark, New Jersey; the New York Stock Exchange; the Citigroup Center in Manhattan; and the International Monetary Fund building in Washington, D.C.

On April 12, 2005, the United States announced it would seek extradition following an indictment of Barot, Tarmohamed, and Shaffi, who had planned to blow up financial buildings. The group was also linked to a plan to attack London’s Heathrow Airport.

In a U.K. court on October 12, 2006, Barot pleaded guilty. In August 2004, he had planned to bomb Washington, D.C., and New York financial centers, including the International Monetary Fund. In the United Kingdom, he had plotted to detonate gas cylinders in limousines parked in underground lots, as well as radiological devices. Prosecutors found plans for those attacks on computers owned by Mohammed Naeem Noor Khan seized in Pakistan in July 2004. On November 7, 2006, Judge Neil Butterfield sentenced Barot to life in prison with the possibility of parole in 40 years. The sentence was later reduced to 30 years; he had not carried out the planned attacks. He was a former airliner ticket clerk and a Muslim convert who wanted to create "another memorable black day for the enemies of Islam." He planned to blow up a subway train as it passed through a tunnel under the Thames and proposed to al Qaeda financiers in Pakistan that he use a six-man team to explode gas cylinders in limos near the Savoy, Ritz, and other London hotels, and that they make the bombs with napalm and nails. He had written, "Imagine the chaos that would be caused if a powerful explosion were to rip through here and actually rupture the river itself. This would cause pandemonium, what with the explosions, flooding, drowning, et cetera, that would occur." He was also wanted in Yemen on terrorism charges.

In November 2006, he was sentenced to life in prison. On June 15, 2007, A British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six had pleaded guilty to conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004 and received between 15 and 26 years.

Lahcene Baroudi: Algerian Islamic Salvation Front sympathizer arrested in France on August 12, 1994, as part of a financing and arms trafficking network between Germany and France that had been broken up in May 1994. He is an employee of the Siri Company, a bookshop in the Belleville neighborhood of Paris.

Leandro Barozzi: Italy's request for extradition for Barozzi as a suspected Red Brigades member was denied by Colombia. Barozzi denied the charges in a February 1, 1982, interview with El Espectador and said that he and Antonio Negri were friends.

Jose Maria Barrena Gauchegui: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled by French police to Spain on August 5, 1987, following his release from a French jail, after serving four months for carrying forged documents. He had fled Spain four years earlier.

Simon Barstein: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Fabrizio Bartet: variant Burtet. Arrested on April 3, 1987, by Barcelona police at a checkpoint on suspicion of membership in the Red Brigades and Direct Action. He had been arrested by Genoa police in November 1983. He was in possession of an R-14 weapon stolen in Italy, anarchist propaganda, wigs, forged papers, and a scanner tuned to the frequencies used by the Barcelona police.

Alain Baruk: arrested by French police on May 13, 1981, for the May 9, 1981, firing of shots by Pesach (Passover) at the Syrian Airlines office in central Paris.

Adel Meguid Abd-al-Bary: variant Adel Mohammed Abdul Almagid Bary. Egyptian, age 39, arrested with Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidaous by London police on extradition warrants on July 11, 1999, requested by the United States. Their fingerprints appeared on fax originals that claimed credit for the U.S. Embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. Extradition was approved on December 17, 2001.

Miro Barzico: one of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. Barzico's release was obtained by three Croatian hijackers of Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm on September 15, 1972. He was permitted to leave for Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested extradition. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for the arrest of the two Croatian terrorists, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay. (Miro Barzico is possibly the same person as Miro Baresic.)

Pere Bascompte: arrested by French police on January 11, 1989, he was considered by Spanish police to be a top Catalan Terra Lliure (Free Land) leader.

Aram Basmadjian: Kuwaiti member of four Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. Turkey announced after the incident that it would try the terrorist in absentia under section 125 of the Turkish penal code. On January 31, 1984, a Paris court sentenced the four terrorists to seven years in prison. Basmadjian hanged himself in his prison cell in April 1985.

Bassam: Lebanese believed to be the Hizballah member who provided the explosives used by the bombers in several incidents in France in 1986. On May 5, 1988, the French intelligence service said he had entered the country using the identity of Habib Haydar, was born in 1966, and resided in Beirut.

Colonel Jean-Marie Bastein-Thiry: leader of a group of Organization of the Secret Army members who machine-gunned French President de Gaulle's car in a Paris suburb on August 22, 1962. De Gaulle was unharmed. Bastein-Thiry was sentenced to death by firing squad.

Mario Battisti: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the "second position" Red Brigades splinter group who were arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987. He was a defendant in the kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro and charged with the attempted murder of the deputy chief of the GIGOS antiterrorist police squad.

Dominique Baver: alias of Joelle Aubron.

Silvia Bayer: alias of Silke Maier-Witt.

Omar Al-Bayoumi: Saudi, age 44, picked up on September 21, 2001, in Birmingham, United Kingdom. He was held in London for a week in connection with the 9/11 hijackings. The grad student in business at Aston University in Birmingham had given a welcoming party for 9/11 hijackers Nawaf Alhamzi and Khalid Almihdhar and may have paid their rent at the Parkwood Apartments, where he also lived.

Mohammed Hani Bayoun: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court acquitted five defendants, including Bayoun, of charges that they were planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy. On October 1, 1986, an appeals court in Rome overturned the lower court decision and handed the case to the public ministry for further action. But only one defendant was still in custody.

Aeurobui Beandali: one of five Algerian al Qaeda members, age 26, whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt on charges of plotting to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, and dealing drugs and with various weapons charges. Germany had rejected his asylum application, but he stayed in the country, financing himself through credit card fraud and drug dealing. He told the court on April 23, 2002, that he had moved from a nonreligious drug trafficker on German streets since arriving in 1992 to a terrorist trained in Afghanistan. He had been incensed in 1998 during the Algerian civil war. On March 10, 2003, the Frankfurt court found him guilty of preparing a bomb in the attack on the Strasbourg Christmas market and of conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to 10–12 years. He said that the prosecution had failed to prove al Qaeda links.

Daniel Beaumont: escaped prison on February 27, 1981, when a hijacked helicopter landed in the middle of the soccer field of the high-security Fleury Mergois prison. He was serving a sentence for armed robbery.

Josu Beaumont: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military Izagorri Commando member who appeared to have escaped on June 25, 1987, during a raid by Pamplona police on an arms cache that included three pistols, a machine pistol, nine kilograms of explosive Ammonal, one kilogram of Goma-2 plastic explosive, timing devices, an instruction manual on making incendiaries, and a letter from ETA–Military leader Francisco Mugica Garmendia.

Annelie Becker: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction, including Becker. She was arrested in Hanover on January 13, 1986.

Verena Becker: telephone operator, age 22, who was serving six years in West Berlin for bank robbery and bombings and was freed during the February 27, 1975, kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union, by the group Movement 2 June. She and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, and Amman. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum. Police shot and seriously wounded Becker and Guenther Sonnenberg on May 3, 1977, in a shootout in the town of Singen on the Swiss border. Ballistic tests showed Sonnenberg's machine gun had been used in the April 7, 1977, Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group assassination of Siegfried Buback, West Germany's chief public prosecutor. Becker's release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, who was president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist; they kidnapped him on September 5, 1977. Her release was demanded also by members of the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism who hijacked Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. On December 28, 1977, the former telephone operator was sentenced to life for armed robbery and attempted murder. She struggled with her four guards and had to be subdued while the Stuttgart judge read the sentence. Her release was demanded on September 12, 1981, by the RAF firebombers of the Frankfurt home of the U.S. consul general.

Gabriela Beconi: one of three suspected members of the Italian Red Brigades (RB) arrested by Barcelona police on February 23, 1988, in raids on two apartments. The trio was wanted in Spain for using fake IDs. An international arrest warrant had been issued for their arrest for the armed robbery of several Italian banks, including the armed attack by RB member Luca Marini's cell on a post office at Mezzana di Prat, Italy, in November 1983, which ended in a clash with police. The trial of the cell on charges of organizing and being part of an armed group, and forming a group with terrorist aims, started in May 1989 but adjourned pending extradition. They were members of the RB wing responsible for obtaining funds. On August 4, 1989, the trio was extradited by Spain to Florence, Italy, on a Spanish Interior Ministry plane under Interpol escort. They were transferred to Florence Solliciano jail.

Rudolf Becvar: hijacker of OK 313, an Ilyushin 18 flying from Prague to Bratislava on October 28, 1976.

Henning Beer: suspected of carrying out West German Red Army Faction (RAF) attacks on the U.S. Ramstein Air Base and on U.S. Gen. Frederick Kroesen in Heidelberg. On July 26, 1982, police found a suspected RAF vehicle parked in a visitors' car park at a rehabilitation center in Meisenheim in Rhineland-Palatinate. The floor of the luggage compartment contained a forged Austrian plastic ID card for Beer.

On September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the RAF and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. The government issued a warrant for his arrest in the case.

On July 3, 1991, a German court sentenced him to 6-plus years for 28 cases of attempted murder, including the General Haig case. The court said he had actively taken part in 7 murder attempts and helped plan 21 others. He had been charged for the bombing of U.S. Air Force headquarters in the Ramstein base in Germany in August 1981 and a September 1981 bombing of the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg.

Wolfgang Beer: Red Army Faction (RAF) member believed to have died with fellow RAF member Juliane Plambeck in a car crash near Stuttgart on July 25, 1980. However, he was also suspected in the murder of the head of the Deutsche Bank, Alfred Herrhausen, on November 30, 1989; the attempted attack on State Secretary of Finance Hans Tietmeyer on September 19, 1988; and the attempted bombing of a NATO delegation near Cadiz, Spain, on June 18, 1988.

He was arrested outside his home in Neubrandenburg on June 18, 1990. He was extradited to the West in July 1990 from East Germany.

He was born on September 30, 1958, and had lived in East Germany under the name Dieter Lenz, working as an assistant metalworker. He had been on East German soil since July 29, 1982.

Mengesha Befekadu: accused of being an accomplice of Dagmar Jensen, arrested while trying to sneak a gun aboard a Scanair plane due to fly from Rome to Copenhagen on June 26, 1972.

Djamel Begal: variant Beghal. French Algerian man arrested in Dubai in July 2001. He had been under surveillance for two years, during which time he visited Afghan terrorist camps. Begal provided information that led to the September 21, 2001, arrests in France of seven individuals who were part of a plot to attack U.S. interests in France, including the U.S. Embassy and American Cultural Center in Paris, in March 2002. He and the seven had links to individuals arrested in Belgium and the Netherlands. Begal said he was recruited by Abu Zubaydah, alias of Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn, a bin Laden associate, to organize suicide bomb attacks against the U.S. Embassy and other interests. He was extradited to France by the United Arab Emirates on October 1, 2001.

On January 3, 2005, the trial began of six men suspected of plotting to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris in 2001. They were charged with “associating with criminals connected with a terrorist enterprise.” The defendants faced 10 years. The ringleader was identified in court as Begal, age 39, a suspected al Qaeda member. He had initially confessed the plot to interrogators, but he told the court that the confession had come under “methodical torture.” He had told French investigators that Abu Zubaydah had ordered him to target American interests when they were at an Afghan camp in March 2001.

Begal said Nizar Trabelsi, a former pro soccer player of Tunisian origin, was to be the suicide bomber, who would use either a car bomb or an explosive vest. He was currently in a Belgian prison, serving 10 years for plotting to blow up a NATO base there for al Qaeda. Prosecutors said Begal and Kamel Daoudi had trained at a terrorist camp in Afghanistan in 2000 and 2001. They linked Begal to Abu Qatada, a London-based Syrian Islamic cleric who was a spiritual inspiration for 9/11. On May 9, 2006, Abu Qatada appealed his deportation from the United Kingdom. He had been convicted twice in absentia in Jordan on terrorism charges.

On March 15, 2005, the French court convicted the six of plotting the suicide bombing against the U.S. Embassy in Paris and of criminal association related to a terrorist enterprise. Begal received 10 years in prison. The others were sentenced to 1 to 6 years, except for Daoudi, who was in charge of communications and was sentenced to 9 years.

Djamel Beghal: variant of Djamel Begal.

Maria Begona Sanchez: suspected Basque nationalist freed on March 24, 1989, after an appeals court rejected extradition to Spain.

Walter-Ulrich Behle: one of two neo-Nazi members of the Karl-Heinz Hoffmann Group turned over to authorities on June 25, 1981, in Lebanon by the Maronite Christian Phalange Party. He claimed he was recruited for terrorist training by Fatah leader Salah Khalaf, alias Abu Iyad, in B'ir Hasan in Beirut. He referred to a terrorist recruiting network headquartered in Damascus and headed by Mahammad Hijaza, 'Atif Bsisu, and Amin Hindi. The two members claimed they had entered Lebanon in October 1980. They snuck out of the camp on June 14 and were picked up in Beirut by the Phalange.

Muhammad Husayn Beidum: one of three Lebanese terrorists for whom Spanish police issued arrest warrants after the press reported on October 27, 1991, that a group of seven terrorists were planning assassination attempts at the October 30 opening of the Middle East peace conference in Madrid. Five of the terrorists belonged to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), two belonged to Abu Nidal, and all were aided by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Mohamed Bekkali: one of three Moroccans, age 31, arrested on March 13, 2004, in Spain and held for questioning in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. Bekkali had a criminal record in Spain. On March 19, 2004, he was charged with belonging to a terrorist organization and with 4 counts of terrorism, 190 counts of murder, 1,400 counts of attempted murder, and 1 count of auto theft.

Mirsad Bektasevic: Internet screen name Maximus, a Bosnian refugee who lived in Sweden and later moved to Sarajevo, Bosnia, where he put together weapons for a suicide attack and filmed a martyrdom video for al Qaeda. He was arrested at age 19 on October 19, 2005, in a safe house on Copenhagen's Polygonska Street while making an explosives vest out of nitroglycerin and ammonium nitrate. The Swedish citizen of Bosnian origin ran a Web site on behalf of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. He kept in touch with three men in the United Kingdom who were arrested in early November. The trio was organizing Sarajevo terrorist training camps and making lemon and tennis ball bombs.

Gassan Belbeasi: Jordanian arrested on August 27, 1986, by Italian police on suspicion of belonging to an international terrorist group linked to the April 4, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque in the Berlin-Schoeneberg District of West Berlin that killed 4 people and wounded 231, including 62 Americans. He was a student at the medical school of the University of Genoa.

Mohamed Belerbi: Algerian Islamic Salvation Front sympathizer arrested in France on August 12, 1994, as part of a financing and arms trafficking network between Germany and France that had been broken up in May 1994. He was the manager of the Siri Company, a bookshop in the Belleville neighborhood of Paris.

Mohammed Belfas: Indonesian from Germany, identified by Finnish banking authorities as a bin Laden contact. Agus Budiman was charged with helping him obtain a Virginia ID card on November 4, 2000.

Aouadi Mohamed Ben Belgacem: Tunisian member of an al Qaeda cell in Italy, serving prison terms in Italy for trafficking in arms and explosives when on April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Monsur Mezaroni Belgazem: arrested on May 21, 1980, after firing three shots in a restaurant at the Libyan restaurant owner, who was a naturalized Italian. All three shots missed. He was believed to be a member of Tripoli's anti-dissident hit squads.

Youssef Belhadj: believed to have made the al Qaeda confessor video in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. The 28-year-old Moroccan was extradited from Belgium to Spain on April 1, 2005. He was indicted on April 11, 2006, by Judge Juan del Olmo for membership in a terrorist group, murder, and attempted murder.

Andre Bellaiche: prisoner suspected of links to terrorist groups who on November 23, 1986, was lifted to freedom in a hijacked helicopter from the Rebibbia jail in Rome. He was wanted by French police on a murder charge and was awaiting trial in Italy for possession of false identity papers.

Antonio Bellavita: suspected Red Brigades member from Milan arrested by Paris police for the March 18, 1978, car bombing that killed Francois Duprat, a member of the French ultra-rightist National Front, in Rouen. Bellavita fled to France when three Italian arrest warrants were issued on charges of subversion, creation of an armed band, and public advocacy of instigation to lawlessness. His extradition was requested. He was believed to have helped organize the Red Brigades in 1973 and 1974.

Abdelkader Belliraj: Belgian Moroccan leader of a group of 32 people arrested on February 20, 2008, by Moroccan authorities, who said they were a terrorist network linked to al Qaeda that planned to assassinate cabinet members, army officers, and members of the local Jewish community. Some of the group belonged to al Badil al Hadari, an Islamist party whose banning was announced the same day. The group had conducted holdups and sold stolen goods. One member worked with European criminals to steal $25.65 million from an armored truck in Luxembourg in 2000. The group also stole gold jewelry in Belgium, melting it down and selling it via a goldsmith who belonged to the group. Belliraj had met Ayman al-Zawahiri in Afghanistan in 2001. During his interrogation, he confessed to six murders in Belgium in the late 1980s. Belgian newspapers later reported that he was a paid informant for the Belgian domestic security service while the group planned assassinations and robbed armored cars in Europe.

Colonel Giuseppe Belmonte: variant Belmontes. Ex-officer of the Italian SISMI military intelligence service. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to 10 years in jail on charges of trying to throw investigators off the track in the case of the August 2, 1980, bombing of a Bologna train by right-wing terrorists in which 85 died and 200 were injured. The court then reduced his sentence by three years. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court dropped his 10-year sentence for subversion. For the court, the act of association for subversion did not exist, and he was thus cleared of all charges.

Giuseppe Belmontes: variant of Colonel Giuseppe Belmonte.

Christian Reni Belon: hijacker of TWA 802, a B707 flying from Paris to Rome on January 9, 1970, and diverted to Beirut, Lebanon.

Jose Maria Benaran Ordenana: alias Argala. Leader of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) military wing, who was killed when a bomb hidden in his car exploded in the French Basque locality of Anglet near the Spanish border. He had been involved in an industrialist's kidnapping and the December 20, 1973, murder of Premier Blanco.

Nabil Benatti: on November 28, 2001, Milan antiterrorism police arrested Moroccan Yassine Chekkouri and Tunisian Nabil Benatti, who were suspected of recruiting for al Qaeda and getting them to Afghanistan. Police raided two Milan mosques after the arrests and seized documents and other evidence. The United States said that Milan's Islamic cultural institute and mosque was al Qaeda's main European logistics base.

Menad Benchellali: suspected al Qaeda-trained chemical weapons specialist, age 29, trained at Afghanistan camps, was one of four North Africans arrested on December 16, 2002, in Paris. The detainees had two vials of an unidentified liquid and an anti-contamination suit. Police believed they were planning a terrorist attack on the Russian Embassy in Paris. He returned to France in 2001 and set up a lab in his parents' spare bedroom in Lyon to manufacture ricin, which he hid in Nivea skin cream containers. He is the brother of an al Qaeda leader held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay.

Mourad Benchellali: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for association with terrorists. They admitted to being in the military camps but had not used their combat training. Benchellali was sentenced to four years in prison, three suspended and one year as time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The group was among seven French citizens captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005. One was freed immediately upon arrival. The others spent up to 17 months in French prisons.

Rachid Bendouda: Moroccan alleged to have links to one of the seven 3/11 Madrid train bombings (2004) suspects.

Hamdane Benhelel: Algerian member of a hijacking trio who took over KLM 366, a DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam on September 4, 1976.

Brahim Benmerzouga: one of two Algerians charged by British police on January 17, 2002, with planning and financing terrorists acts for al Qaeda in Leicester. Eleven other men were also detained. Prosecutors said Benmerzouga, age 30, raised money to finance terrorist acts and planned an attack overseas. French media said the Leicester cell planned an aborted al Qaeda effort in 2001 to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

Boualem Bensaid: Algerian student arrested on October 29, 1995, by Lille police after a wiretap picked up a phone conversation in which he gave instructions for a bomb to be planted at an outdoor market in Lille on November 5. Police raided a Lille apartment and found a 29-pound gas canister, explosive substances, nails, bolts, and a timing device. He had arrived in the country a few months earlier and was believed to be a go-between for terrorist cells in France and the Algerian Armed Islamic Group. Police said he was activating dormant terrorist cells and picking spots to set off the bombs. Police said the raids uncovered grenades, two submachine guns, and two automatic pistols, along with documents, computers, and accounting forms that showed how the terrorists received logistical and financial support from outside France. He told police that Rachid Ramda, an Algerian Armed Islamic Group member, was responsible for a series of bombings in France in the fall of 1995 that killed 10 and injured 180.

Mohamed Bensakhria: alias Meliani. Head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. Bensakhria, age 34, was arrested in Spain in June 2001 after escaping from a police raid in Frankfurt, Germany, and extradited to France. He was later linked to a Madrid cell that assisted the 9/11 hijackers. He was one of three Europe-based organizers for the Egyptian Anathema and Exile and the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat. He was arrested in June 2001 on a French warrant for terrorism charges in Alicante, Spain.

Abdelaziz Benyaich: naturalized French citizen from Morocco who was in a Spanish jail as of March 19, 2004. In April 2003, he met in Tangier with 3/11 Madrid train bomber Jamal Zougam, and he also had met several times with Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. He was apparently linked to the Casablanca bombings of May 16, 2003.

Farid Benyettou: variant Benyettoun. On May 14, 2008, Benyettou, age 27, was sentenced to six years by a French judge on terrorism charges of “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise” for sending a dozen French fighters to training camps for al Qaeda in Iraq.

Farid Benyettoun: variant of Farid Benyettou.

Monika Berberich: escaped from West Berlin’s prison on July 7, 1976. She had been held for the February 27, 1975, kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union, by the group Movement 2 June. A Baader-Meinhof Group member, she was serving a 12-year sentence for bank robbery. She was arrested by West Berlin police on July 21, 1976.

Jose-Maria Bereciartua Echarri: alias Txema. On April 1, 1988, France denied Spain’s extradition request for the suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader. He could not be legally returned to his native country because he was married to a French woman and held refugee status. Madrid claimed he was involved in the Madrid Commando’s May 7, 1980, attack on Gen. Joaquin de Valenzuela, then-head of King Juan Carlos’s military guard, in which three people were killed and the general was injured.

Silvie Francois Marie Berger: alias of Nathalie Menigon.

Douglas Bernard: U.S. citizen and Geneva-based arms consultant arrested with three British Northern Irish members of the Ulster Defense Association on April 21, 1989, by French Directorate for Territorial Oversight (DST) counterintelligence police in the Paris Hilton hotel. They were arrested while planning to swap a stolen British Blowpipe surface-to-air missile for weapons from South African state arms manufacturer Armscor.

Tomas Beroz Larburu: Spaniard with French residence papers arrested with Jose Ramon Lopez de Abechuco Liquiniano, a Spanish Basque member of Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) executive committee, by police in Hendaye, France, on April 24, 1989.

Said Berraj: Moroccan, age 31, wanted for questioning in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. Berraj had earlier been mentioned as a key instigator of the attacks who had met with three al Qaeda suspects in Istanbul in October 2000. He quit his job on March 9 and left Spain on March 12, claiming he had to attend his sister's funeral in Morocco; he does not have a sister.

Yolanda Berruete: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

John Berry: on July 17, 1971, he telephoned Aer Lingus and reported that a bomb was on board its B747 flying from New York to Europe. He was apprehended while attempting to take the money he demanded. The plane landed in Boston; no bomb was found.

Kristina Katherina Berster: suspected West German (FRG) terrorist and Socialist Patients' Collective member who fled the FRG before her 1973 trial for criminal conspiracy, illegal use of explosives, and forging identity documents. She was arrested on July 16, 1978, as she attempted to enter Vermont from Canada using a fake Iranian passport. On July 30, 1978, FRG requested extradition. They canceled the request when Berster wrote the Interior Ministry saying she had revoked terrorism and would return freely. After serving 16 months in U.S. jails, she was deported to Hamburg on November 1, 1979.

Ali Berzengi: Iraqi, age 29, sentenced to seven years on May 12, 2005, by a Stockholm court for collecting money at Swedish mosques to fund Ansar al-Islam terrorist attacks in Iraq.

Beshir: code name of a Syrian diplomat whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Q Abderazak Besseghir: Frenchman, age 27, of Algerian origin who worked as a baggage handler at Charles de Gaulle airport and who on December 28, 2002, was arrested by French police after they found radical Islamic and pro-Palestinian documents, information regarding pilot uniforms, a pistol, five cakes of plastic explosives, two detonators, and a fuse hidden in his car. He was investigated for possible al Qaeda ties. He had no known ties to Islamic militants.

Pasqua Aurora Betti: former schoolteacher believed to command the Milan cell of the Italian Red Brigades. She was arrested on December 14, 1981, for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier, senior U.S. officer at the NATO southern Europe ground forces base in Verona and deputy chief of staff for logistics and administration.

Mohammed Naveed Bhatti: Bhatti, age 24, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Shahnawaz Bhutto: student and son of former Pakistani prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, on September 13, 1978, told a London telephone operator that there was a bomb at 10 Downing Street. On December 15, 1979, he was put on two years' probation and ordered to pay up to $2,200 in court costs. His father was hanged by the Pakistani government in April 1979.

Witold Bialoboki: Pole who on the evening of April 8, 1983, fired a .22 caliber rifle at least 13 times at the Soviet Consulate in Marseilles, France. He was apprehended the next evening for firing at the façade of the Aeroflot office in Marseilles following a car chase by police. He was charged with property damage and arrested for the two confessed shootings.

Loredana Biancamano: Front Line terrorist freed on January 3, 1982, from Rovigo women's prison when the Red Brigades blasted open a five-foot hole in a wall. Turin police arrested her on April 15, 1982.

Lo Bianco: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Alberto Biatola: sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 17-plus years for involvement in the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier by the Red Brigades.

Philippe Bidart: leader of the French Basque separatist group Iparretarrak arrested along with four associates on February 20, 1988, by French gendarmes from the Groupement de l'Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale after a shootout in front of the terrorists' Boucau apartment. The former schoolteacher had been sought for more than six years. He was convicted twice in absentia, once for the March 1982 murder of two Compagnie Republicaine de Securite police officers at Saint Etienne de Baigorri, and was suspected in two other slayings of police in August 1983 and August 1987.

Pierre Bidart: French member of the Basque separatist group Iparretarrak who on June 22, 1987, was in a car that was stopped at a crossing near Biarritz. A passing train killed his companion, Marie-France Heguy, an Iparretarrak militant freed from prison in southwestern France on December 14, 1986, and the police officer who stopped the car, Roger Latassa.

Stjepan Bilandzic: imprisoned in Cologne, West Germany, for the attempted murder of Vladimir Topic, Yugoslavia's vice-consul, in Duesseldorf in 1976. He reputedly founded the Croatian National Resistance. Yugoslav authorities requested extradition for sending two individuals to Yugoslavia to begin a terrorist campaign. A Cologne court ruled that he could be extradited, but his lawyers petitioned Germany's highest court for an injunction, arguing that extradition would be a death warrant. His release was demanded by two armed Croatians who seized the West German Consulate in Chicago on August 17, 1978, and demanded that the government prevent his extradition to Yugoslavia. A phone hookup was established, and he urged the duo to surrender. They did. Bilandzic was freed by a Cologne court in September 1978 and visited Chicago to raise money for a defense fund for the two. He was a distant relative of Mike Kodzoman, one of the terrorists.

Inaki Bilbao: one of three people with suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) links who were arrested on May 31, 1992, by the police of Bayonne, France. They were taking over the posts left vacant by the arrests of senior ETA leaders.

Hamid Bilhayat: key figure in the Abu Nidal Group in Europe arrested on November 8, 1984, in Spain by the Foreign Intelligence Brigade. He was carrying two Moroccan passports, one in his true name and one for Said Khalidie. Authorities believed he was collecting intelligence on embassies of moderate Arab countries opposed to Abu Nidal interests. In his apartment police found evidence of the purchase of chemical substances used to manufacture explosives and information on Arab residents in Majorca, the Canary Islands, and Valencia. He was believed to have been involved in the 1981 murder of the director general of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) office in Madrid and the 1982 attempt to assassinate the Israeli ambassador in London.

George Bilinni: Palestinian attached to a terrorist organization in Europe. He served as a link between Sergio Mantovani of Switzerland and Vera Marta Guenter, alias Elvira Gunter, of West Germany, whom the Egyptians said had arrived in Cairo on April 20, 1978, for terrorist attacks. Egypt said Bilinni was the head of 24 people its authorities had arrested who belonged to the international terrorist consortium Correct Course of Fatah, which had been headed by Wadi Haddad and was now part of Black June.

Jean Bilski: suspected political extremist who killed himself with a single shot after assassinating Credit Lyonnais chairman Jacques Chaine in Paris on May 14, 1976. Chaine's wife was wounded in the jaw by a bullet.

Ramzi Binalshibh: alias Ramzi Omar. Yemeni, age 29, an al Qaeda terrorist planner operating in Hamburg, Germany. It is believed that he was planning to be the 20th 9/11 hijacker—he even made a “martyr” video—but had to scrub his mission when he could not get a visa to enter the United States. On November 14, 2001, the FBI concluded that the Yemeni economics student was meant to be the fifth hijacker on United Airlines Flight 93 but that hijacker leader Muhammad Atta had failed in three tries to get him into the United States. The FBI concluded that Zacarias Moussaoui was not to be the fifth hijacker but may have been part of several waves of chemical and biological weapons (CBW) attacks. Germany indicted Binalshibh and fugitive Said Bahaji and Zakariya Essabar, part of an al Qaeda cell that had operated in Hamburg since 1999. Binalshibh had placed a $2,200 deposit at the Flight Training Center in Venice, Florida, before being rejected for a U.S. visa because of suspected links to the USS Cole bombing. He helped find flight schools for the hijackers, helped them enter the United States, and helped finance the attacks. He and Atta had begun a Muslim prayer group at Hamburg Technical University and worshiped at a radical mosque. Binalshibh disappeared on September 5, 2001, leaving behind four Hamburg addresses. He was frequently seen with Said Bahaji, a German citizen whose father was Moroccan. Bahaji, Atta, and Binalshibh had rented an apartment on Marien Street, Hamburg, on December 1, 1998, that had served as an al Qaeda cell. Hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi lived there; Pennsylvania hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah was a frequent visitor. Bahaji, the cell's logistics specialist, showed up in Karachi, Pakistan, on a Turkish Airlines flight in early September 2001, accompanied by individuals claiming to be Abdullah Hussainy, a Belgian of Algerian origin, and Ammar Moula, a Frenchman. Investigators determined in mid-November that they were Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, age 24, a Moroccan who also lived on Marien Street. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked Binalshibh's financial assets. He was also believed to be a leader of a plot to crash a plane into Heathrow Airport.

On September 5, 2002, al Jazeera televised “confessions” by Binalshibh and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed (KSM), two of Mohammed Atta's roommates, who said al Qaeda was claiming credit for the 9/11 attacks. He said he was the “coordinator” of the attacks.

On September 10–11, 2002, Pakistani police arrested him in an apartment in Pechs, Karachi. He was charged in Germany with more than 3,000 counts of murder. He was believed involved in the planning of the 9/11 attacks, the USS Cole bombing, and the 2002 bombing of a Tunisian synagogue.

His release was demanded on April 25, 2003, by a Lebanese male who hijacked a bus with 16 passengers in Bremen, Germany.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 high-value detainees not held at Gitmo would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The members of the group were identified as Abu Zubaydah, KSM, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Abli Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On October 10, 2006, Binalshibh filed a legal challenge in federal court in Washington, D.C., to contest his detention and requested a public defender.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges against six individuals detained at Guantánamo who were believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: KSM, Ramzi bin al-Shibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali alias Ammar al-Baluchi, Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash alias Khallad. The six were charged with “conspiracy, murder in violation of the law of war, attacking civilians and civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property in violation of the law of war, terrorism, and providing material support for terrorism.” KSM, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with “hijacking or hazarding a vessel [aircraft].” Binalshibh’s arraignment on capital charges was scheduled for June 5, 2008. His military defense counsels were Navy Lt. Richard Federico and Navy Cdr. Suzanne Lachelier. His civilian attorney was Thomas Durkin.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself. He was the only defendant of the five whose legs were shackled in the court. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Peterson Binarwa: Dane arrested on June 30, 1983, for links with the Shining Path in Peru. He was turned over to the Danish Embassy in Lima on July 5, 1983.

Peter Binder: chemical engineer and member of the Austrian neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 9, 1993, by Vienna, Austria, police for a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was detained at the Kleinhagisdorf at the Hate border checkpoint with the Czech Republic when he tried to forward an ordered weapons delivery to a German neo-Nazi in Berlin. Czech border officials found 13 long rifles, 3 handguns, and ammunition in his Audi 80, which he wanted to drive to Berlin. In a search of two of his apartments, police found components for the letter bombs, including glycerin, nitric acid, and sulfuric acid, which had been bought abroad.

Thamer Birawi: Jordanian arrested on September 6, 1989, in Rome with four members of the Red Brigades. He was suspected of having links with Abu Nidal.

Miklos Biro: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 bound for Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich.

Piroschka Biro: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 bound for Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich.

Caroline Esber al-Bitar: on September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the ‘Abdallah brothers and other members of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF), including al-Bitar, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing stores on the Rue de Rennes in Paris that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Ilyas Bitar: Lebanese involved in the August 3, 1986, attack on the British air base at Akrotiri by the Unified Nasirite Organization.

Enrique Letona Biteri: alleged member of Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) Arra Legal Commando, which took part in several attacks from 1979 to 1982 in which three civil guardsmen, two police inspectors, one national police lieutenant, one national police sergeant, and his wife, industrialist Luis Versategui, and Jose Artero died.

He was arrested on October 3, 1987, in France and expelled.

Bernard Blanc: one of three men suspected of forming a left-wing terrorist group modeled after Direct Action. He was charged in 1986 with hostage-taking, armed robbery, and complicity to murder. He was accused of the murder of a police sergeant during a holdup in Lyons on November 3, 1981.

Helge Blasche: on March 15, 1985, the state protection branch of the Frankfurt higher regional court sentenced the right-wing terrorist to 10 years for attempted murder, membership in a terrorist organization, explosives offenses, grievous bodily harm, and bank robbery in connection with the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt.

Mira Blei-Lorger: resident of Maribor, Yugoslavia, who was injured when a bomb went off in the regional museum in the New Castle of Voelkermarkt in Carinthia, Austria, on September 18, 1979. She confessed to planting the bomb but said she had not intended to cause injury. Her passport was in a different name. She had falsely claimed to be an Italian from Rome. She refused to admit that a passport found at the scene was hers.

Francois-Joseph Bodenan: hijacked a British-owned and operated HS125 air taxi, chartered to fly from Palma de Mallorca to Ibiza, Spain.

Wilfred Boese: alias Claudius Axel. Believed to be the initial leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976.

Vittorio Bolognesi: one of the three leaders of the Naples section of the Italian Red Brigades in early 1982. He was arrested by Naples police on October 3, 1982.

Dana Boluri: Iranian-born Kurd with German citizenship from Frankfurt detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau, Germany.

Franco Bonisoli: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort on March 16, 1978. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Peter-Jurgen Boock: arrested in January 1981 by Hamburg police for the September 1977 kidnapping and murder of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer. On November 3, 1992, the Stuttgart higher regional court sentenced him to life in prison, judging the attack on a Zurich bank on November 19, 1979, to be robbery resultant in death concomitant with four attempted murders. He was cleared of the death of an uninvolved woman killed in an exchange of fire. He had already been sentenced to a life term. He was denied a pardon in 1979. On March 29, 1992, he made a full confession in a letter he wrote to president Richard von Weizsaecker, admitting involvement in the Ponto and Schleyer attacks. He admitted that he was driving the car of terrorists who fired at Ponto and that he had fired at Schleyer's driver and three security guards, all four of whom were killed.

Waltraud Boock: West German woman, age 26, who was believed to be connected with terrorists and who was arrested on December 13, 1976, in Vienna, Austria, along with Sabime Schmitz, on suspicion of bank robbery. She was visited in prison by Othmar Keplinger, an Austrian student and sympathizer of the Baader-Meinhof Gang. On February 4, 1977, Boock was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

On December 17, 1976, the Waltraud Boock Operation claimed credit for setting off a bomb the exploded in the toilet of the license plate office of the Vienna Rossauer Barracks, a police headquarters.

Border Fox: alias of Dessie O'Hare.

Borg: Moscow Domestic Service identified him as a Red Army Faction terrorist who had told authorities about a bomb that was being prepared for detonation at the annual ball at American headquarters in Heidelberg in 1981.

Nicola Bortone: one of five members of the Italian Red Brigades–Communist Combatant Party offshoot who were arrested in Paris on September 2, 1989. Police discovered arms and leaflets claiming responsibility for attacks and plans for more attacks in Italy. Two men and two women were arrested in the Faubourg St. Antoine District of central Paris, and another man was arrested at a hotel in the Grands Boulevards area. A fifth suspect was arrested later at the hotel.

Jawad Mahmoud Botmeh: variant Botmeh. Detained on January 17, 1995, in London under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of the July 26, 1994, car bombing of the Israeli Embassy in London that injured 14 people. The 27-year-old remained in custody as of March 22, 1995. On June 22, 1995, British antiterrorism police said that a group of wealthy, well-educated, leftist secular Palestinians led by Botmeh, a former student-union vice president at Leicester University, was responsible for the attacks on the embassy and a north London building that housed Jewish and Israeli charities. They all lived in an upscale London neighborhood near the Israeli Embassy. All six people arrested were Palestinians who had been residents of the United Kingdom for years. Botmeh was accused of conspiring to detonate bombs. The group might have been members of a breakaway faction of the Syrian-supported Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP). Botmeh had been an activist with the General Union of Palestinian Students.

Jawad Mahmoud Botmeh: variant of Jawad Mahmoud Botmeh.

Abdelmajid Bouchar: Moroccan, age 22, extradited by Serbia to Spain on September 25, 2005, for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004.

Sadok Hassan Bouchenak: Tunisian born in 1965 who on September 19, 1991, hijacked Alitalia Flight AZ864, an MD Super 80 flying from Rome to Tunis. He wanted to go to Algiers, which denied landing permission. The hijacker was arrested when the plane landed in Tunis; he was jumped in the cockpit during negotiations. He was apparently experiencing difficulties in Italy with his sojourn permit.

Thamer Bouchnak: member of a group of 11 associates of French Muslims. He died in Iraq while fighting for the insurgency. The group, which followed the Salafist interpretation of Islam, was arrested by French authorities in late January 2005. The prosecutor's office said Bouchnak, age 22, plotted attacks against French or foreign interests in France.

Bourki Bouchta: Moroccan-born imam who had taken radical positions and was expelled by the Italian government on September 6, 2005, for representing a danger to public security. He was picked up from Turin and put on a plane to Morocco at Milan's Malpensa Airport.

Hedi Ben Youssef Boudhiba: one of eight suspected Islamic militants charged on January 17, 2005, by Spanish investigating judge Baltasar Garzon with providing logistical support to Ramzi Binalshibh, a suspected coordinator of the 9/11 attacks. They provided him with false identity papers and other documents. Six were to be held pending trial. Boudhiba traveled to Hamburg, Germany, on September 3, 2001, using a false name to meet Ahmed Taleb, a member of the Hamburg cell. The charge sheet said the group created “a network of forged documents to provide false identities or fake documents to other members of the network to help them move about, flee or hide” and to help “with their terrorist activities or links with organizations such as Ansar al-Islam, under the orders of Abu Musab Zarqawi.”

Mohammed Boudia: Palestinian terrorist leader in Europe in the early 1970s. He worked at the Theatre de l'Ouest, workplace of Evelyn Bares, who was one of the Europeans who sabotaged the Gulf Oil refinery in Rotterdam at the behest of Rasd, the Fatah intelligence organization, on March 15, 1971. On August 5, 1972, he led a joint Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)–Black September squad that set off four explosives at the trans-Alpine oil terminal at Trieste, destroying six oil tanks and causing $7 million damage. A warrant was issued for his arrest, but he escaped to France. He was believed responsible for the murder of Baruch Cohen (aliases Uri Molou and Moshe Hannan Yishai), a Mossad officer, on January 26, 1973, in Madrid. The Algerian terrorist was killed in Paris on June 28, 1973, when a bomb exploded in his Renault 16 on the Rue des Fosses St. Bernard. He was a member of a secret Marxist group opposed to Col. Houari Boumedienne's regime.

The PFLP's Commando Mohammed Boudia claimed credit for the August 3, 1974, bombings of two small cars and a minibus parked outside the offices of two anti-Arab newspapers, L'Aurore and Minute, and of the United Jewish Social Fund, in Paris. The Commando Muhammad Boudia claimed credit for the August 25, 1974, bombing of a Mannheim crane construction factory in West Germany. The group next claimed credit for throwing a grenade into the Drugstore Saint-Germaine, a popular Paris shopping complex, on September 15, 1974, killing 2 Frenchmen and wounding 34 others. The group claimed credit for the RPG-7 attack on an El Al 707 in Orly Airport on January 13, 1975, and the follow-up RPG-7 attack at Orly on January 19, 1975.

Yamine Bouhrama: one of three Algerians arrested in Naples, Italy, on November 17, 2005, who were suspected of being Islamist extremists with ties to international terrorists and who could become “potentially operative” and ready to carry out an attack.

Pascale de Bouikers: alias of Joelle Aubron.

Salim Boukari: one of five Algerian al Qaeda members whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt on charges of plotting to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, dealing drugs, and various weapons charges. Boukari, age 30, had a U.K. police record and was carrying a stolen U.K. passport. On March 10, 2003, the Frankfurt court found him guilty of preparing a bomb in the attack on the Strasbourg Christmas market and with conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to 10 to 12 years. He said that the prosecution had failed to prove al Qaeda links.

Khalid Bouloudo: pastry chef born in Maaseik, Belgium, who was detained in January 2004 by police in the Netherlands for driving with a broken taillight. A records check determined that he was wanted on a Moroccan terrorism warrant. He was part of the Maaseik cell of the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group.

Kamel Bourgass: Algerian, age 31, who on April 14, 2005, was convicted of conspiracy to poison. He was already in jail for murdering a British constable. He was sentenced to 17 years in prison for writing recipes for creating ricin. The same day, British authorities announced that there was no ricin in the London apartment of al Qaeda operatives who had been arrested in January 2003. Bourgass had lived in the apartment.

Safe Bourrada: convicted in 1998 of taking part in a series of bomb attacks in 1995, including one on a Paris subway that killed seven people. He was freed from prison in 2003 after serving half of his 10-year sentence. In September 2005, when Bourrada was 35, Algerian police arrested a senior member of the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat group, who told them that there was a cell in France planning to attack the Paris subway, Orly Airport, and the headquarters of the French intelligence service. Paris police had arrested 16 people by mid-October, although 7 were released. The other 9 were held on charges of associating with a terrorist organization and funding terrorism. The group apparently did not plan specific attacks, but were ready to hit high-value targets of opportunity. Bourrada purportedly led the group.

Karim Bourti: one of five people arrested by French police on November 26, 2002, in connection with Richard Reid's attempted shoe-bombing of American Airlines Flight 63 on December 22, 2001, out of Paris. In mid-January 2003, Bourti was charged with links to terrorist groups. The Islamic militant was interrogated in 2002 about his ties to Reid.

Mohammed Sidki Sayed Bous: Libyan sentenced to 15 years for wounding two Lebanese at Fiumicino Airport in 1981, when the terrorists mistook the victims for opponents of Muammar Qadhafi whom they had been ordered to kill. On October 6, 1986, the Italian government announced that for "humanitarian motives," it had freed three convicted Libyan gunmen, including Bous, in exchange for four Italians who had been held in Libya for the preceding six years. A Red Cross plane for the Libyans flew to Tripoli and returned with the Italians.

Abbas Boutrab: Algerian, age 25, who on November 3, 2003, was arrested at Maghaberry prison near Belfast, Northern Ireland, on suspicion of links with al Qaeda and with terrorist offenses. He was scheduled for a court appearance on November 10. He had been held at the prison near Belfast for six months as a suspected illegal immigrant. He was charged with receiving instructions in the use of explosives, possession of items of use to terrorists, and possession of documents also of use to terrorists. A police lawyer told the Belfast high court that a search of his home had revealed computer disks containing "a terrorist training manual."

Abdel Hakim Boutrif: Algerian Islamic Salvation Front sympathizer named in France on August 12, 1994, as part of a financing and arms trafficking network between Germany and France that had been broken up in May 1994.

Maher Bouyahia: on January 24, 2005, Judge Maria Clementina Forleo dropped terrorism charges against three Tunisians and two Moroccans, including Bouyahia, in a decision that differentiated between guerrillas and terrorists according to her reading of the 1999 UN Global Convention on Terrorism. She indicated that their actions in recruiting for and financing training camps in the Iraq war zone did not create civilian terror or break international humanitarian law and as such were guerilla in nature, not terrorist, and could not be prosecuted. Prosecutors said they would appeal. Bouyahia received a three-year sentence for arranging false documents and illegal immigration. The judge's decision was reversed by higher courts in 2007 based on the terrorist nature of the crime rather than its milieu or intended effect. Bouyahia was sentenced to six years.

Mohammed Bouyeri: carried dual Moroccan and Dutch citizenship and on November 2, 2004, shot and stabbed to death Dutch filmmaker Theo van Gogh. Bouyeri, age 26, was charged on November 5 with murder, membership in a group with "terrorist intentions," attempting to kill a policeman and a bystander, and conspiracy to murder a politician. The defendant was believed to be a friend of Samir Azzouz, age 18, a Muslim of Moroccan origin who was to be tried for planning a terrorist attack against a nuclear reactor and Amsterdam's Schipol Airport. On January 26, 2005, a pretrial hearing was held. Prosecutors said he dreamed of putting into place in the Netherlands an Islamic theocracy; he was supported in this view by a network of Islamic fanatics. Bouyeri skipped the hearing. On April 19, 2005, Amsterdam authorities arrested a Chechen, identified as Marad J., age 22, in the case. He was believed to be tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which Bouyeri belonged. On May 3, 2005, prosecutors accused Bouyeri of leading a terrorist organization of the 12 men, hosting meetings in his home. The group aimed to destabilize society and establish an Islamic state through violence. On July 11, 2005, Bouyeri refused to answer questions about his motivation and said he did not plan to fight the charges. He quoted Arabic prayers and walked out of court holding a Koran above his head. The next day, he said that he was driven by religious conviction, saying, "If I were released and would have the chance to do it again . . . I would do exactly the same thing." On July 26, 2005, Bouyeri was sentenced to life with no possibility of parole.

On December 5, 2005, 14 men, including Bouyeri, were tried for plotting attacks and membership in a terrorist network. Most of the other defendants were descendants of Moroccan immigrants. On March 10, 2006, the court convicted nine Muslims of membership in a terrorist group for inciting hatred of non-Muslims. The court ruled that Bouyeri could not be punished further.

Ahmed Bouzid: French citizen arrested on January 13, 1992, by the police of Cotonou, Benin, for the Union de Transports Arien bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171, although Paris police said his name did not appear in any dockets. On January 24, 1992, he was charged in Cotonou with "conspiracy with criminals, and murders."

Jesus Boyada Alvarez: member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Beliza Commando, which killed a civil guardsman. He was arrested on October 3, 1987, in a police sweep of southwestern France and expelled.

Farydoun Boyerahmadi: believed involved with the group that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. As of August 21, 1991, he remained at large. He was with hit man Vakili at the time of the murder. He was the victim's gardener and was believed to have introduced the hit men to Bakhtiar.

Hikmet Bozat: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London's Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio all lived in London. A resident of Junction Road, Upper Holloway, Bozat received 15 years for an arson attack on November 4, 1993.

Bozic: associate of Stanko Nizic, leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia and who was shot to death on August 26, 1981. Bozic vanished.

Amir Mansour Bozorgian: variant Amir Mansur Bozorgyan. One of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemloo, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of leaving injured persons whose lives were in danger. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Amir Mansur Bozorgyan: variant of Amir Mansour Bozorgian.

Carlo Bozzo: Red Brigades member who turned state's evidence. On November 6, 1981, he told a Cagliari, Sardinia, court that Palestinian guerrillas had given him a shipment of submachine guns and hand grenades.

David Bracken: alias of Niall Connolly.

Massimigliano Bradi: arrested by police on June 3, 1987, at the Viaggiotto, San Saba, hide-out of the Red Brigades (RB). He was believed to be involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. Bradi had rented the apartment.

John Christopher Bradley: on February 16, 1981, pleaded guilty to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) murder of West German consul Thomas Niedermeyer in 1973. He was sentenced to 20 years.

Anna Laura Braghetti: Red Brigades member sentenced in Rome on June 9, 1983, to an additional 17 years in jail for holding a prison guard hostage for eight hours. She was serving a life sentence for the kidnapping and murder of Premier Aldo Moro on March 16, 1978. Two decades after the kidnapping, she told the newspaper Corriere della Sera that 200 Red Brigades members were polled and could not justify keeping Moro alive because the government had refused to compromise.

Ahmed Brahim: Algerian, age 57, arrested by Spanish police at his home in Sant Joan Despí on April 13, 2003, on suspicion of financing the al Qaeda bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in August 1998. He had a close relationship with Mamdouh Mahmud Salim, one of al Qaeda's founders, who was in a U.S. prison awaiting trial on conspiracy in the case. Police were also investigating his links to 9/11 hijack leader Mohammed Atta. On April 3, 2006, the National Court sentenced him to 10 years in prison for organizing a Web site to disseminate al Qaeda messages. In May 1998, he met two al Qaeda members to discuss disseminating fatwas. They may have approved the fatwa that led to the Africa attack. Brahim was represented by attorney Sebastia Salellas.

Andjelko Brajkovic: one of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslavian ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. Brajkovic's release was obtained by three Croatian hijackers of Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm on September 15, 1972. He was permitted to leave for Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested extradition for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for the arrest of the two terrorists, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

Peter Brandon: Briton sentenced on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that also slightly injured his wife. A second car bomb on November 22, 2000, injured two men and a woman, all British citizens. Brandon initially admitted to the charges but later recanted. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Gerard Anthony Brannigan: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, in New York City and indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer, and shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. Total bail for the four was $6.5 million.

Jose Carlos Bravo del Amo: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra-right-wing group formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Nicola Brazzi: alias used by a Lebanese who took out a transit license plate of the kind issued to foreigners residing for a short while in Belgium. He was wanted for the October 20, 1981, explosion of a bomb hidden in a parked van in front of the Antwerp Diamond Club across from a synagogue on Hoveniersstraat in Belgium, killing 3 and injuring 100. Direct Action, Section Belgium, claimed credit, although Black September was suspected.

Bruno Breguet: Swiss citizen arrested in Paris on February 16, 1982, after a gun battle that began in a Champs Elysees underground parking lot when watchmen challenged him and Magdalena Kopp as robbery suspects. He twice tried unsuccessfully to fire his 9-mm Herstatt automatic pistol at pursuing French police officers. He had served 7 years of a 1970 Israeli 15-year sentence for possession of explosives. The duo was charged with attempted homicide, death threats, falsified identity papers, and illegal possession of the pistol, 4.4 pounds of explosives, and two small bottles of cooking gas. Their Peugeot 504 had fake license plates. They were carrying $2,000 in cash. On March 1, 1982, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist Carlos demanded that the French release his friends. On April 22, 1982, a Paris court sentenced him to five years in jail, a 10,000 Franc ($1,600) fine, and a five-year prohibition from entering France. The prosecutors had requested a three-year sentence. On September 17, 1985, after serving three years of a five-year sentence for arms possession, Breguet was freed from prison.

Thomas Brehl: member of the neo-Nazi Action Front of National Socialists/National Activists, arrested on the Westautobahn near Ybbs, Austria, on November 22, 1983, for possession of an automatic pistol and a gas pistol.

Paul Brennan: on December 27, 1995, bail was set in the United States at $500,000 for Brennan, one of 38 prisoners who escaped from Northern Ireland's Maze Prison in 1983. He was convicted in Northern Ireland of possessing explosives. He and two other escapees were arrested in California between 1992 and 1994.

Abou Elkassim Britel: Italian citizen detained in Lahore, Pakistan, on March 10, 2002. He was taken to Morocco, where he was sentenced to nine years on terrorism charges.

Paolo Broccatelli: Red Brigades member convicted and sentenced to nine years by a judge in Rome on July 8, 2005, for the murder of a government labor advisor in 1999.

Stephan Broeckx: alias of Georges Cipriani.

William Browning: one of four suspected members of the Irish National Liberation Army arrested in Paris on July 23, 1986, while loading weapons into a car. They were charged with illegal possession and transport of weapons.

Maxime Brunerie: neo-Nazi, age 25, with a history of mental problems who on July 14, 2002, fired a .22 caliber rifle at president Jacques Chirac near the Arc de Triomphe during the annual Bastille Day parade. Brunerie pulled the rifle from a guitar case and fired as Chirac passed in an open-top jeep about 50 yards away. No one was injured.

Brunerie tried to shoot himself after the failed attempt. He was held in a psychiatric hospital. Police said Brunerie was a member of neo-Nazi and hooligan groups.

Daniel Buholzer: hijacker of a Swissair DC8 bound for Geneva on December 1, 1973.

Edith and Pierre Burghalter: elderly French wife and husband who posed as tourists to enter Israel on April 9, 1971, with explosives smuggled for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP). They were part of the Barges-Bardeli cell. Pierre received amnesty in 1972, and Edith in 1974.

Sethi Burgiba: Tunisian held by French authorities for the September 1986 bombing campaign in Paris. As of May 5, 1988, he remained in prison.

Alberto Burubiondo: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested at a French checkpoint 50 kilometers from the Spanish border on November 17, 1990. The group was apparently heading toward Spain, intending to conduct an attack.

Jose Miguel Bustinzar: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Edward Butler: one of the IRA gunmen who shot to death Ross McWhirter, coeditor of the Guinness Book of World Records, in London on November 27, 1975. On February 10, 1977, Butler was convicted of killing McWhirter, Prof. Gordon Hamilton-Fairley, police bomb disposal expert Capt. Roger Goad, and three others. He was also sentenced for the murders of two policemen in a hostage siege on London's Balcombe Street and for several bomb and gun attacks in the United Kingdom. The judge recommended that he not be considered for parole for at least 30 years. On April 9, 1999, Butler was freed as part of the Northern Ireland peace agreement.

C

---

Ciise Maxamad Cabbdullah: alias The Somali. Italian investigators said he worked for Abu Musab al-Zarqawi and Ansar al-Islam in 2003. Mohammed Daki put him up in a house he had with four other immigrants. Ten days before they arrested Daki, police picked up Cabbdullah and two associates. Cabbdullah, as of March 18, 2005, was on trial in Italy for links to international terrorists.

Edgar Cachia: Maltese citizen and one of four would-be assassins of Abdul Hamid Bakoush, a former Libyan prime minister and the head of the Organization for the Liberation of Libya, who were arrested on November 12, 1984, at Bakoush's residence in Egypt. Egypt said the foiled plot was financed by Libya.

Carlos Alberto Caetano: one of three men arrested on December 29, 1985, outside their Paris hotel on suspicion of planning to bomb a synagogue on Rue Copernic. Their apartment contained sulfuric acid, nitric acid, wire, batteries, two packets of nails, a soldering iron, two alarm clocks, and magnesium. The Portuguese citizen had a false Spanish passport. He was carrying three letters claiming responsibility.

Mara Cagol: wife of Renato Curcio, founder of the Italian Red Brigades. She was killed in 1975 in a police raid in Italy. The Mara Cagol Commando of the Red Army Faction of West Germany claimed credit for setting off a bomb on July 9, 1986, that killed Karl Heinz Beckurts and his chauffeur, Eckhard Groppler, in Strass-lach. Beckurts was a nuclear physicist and the chief of research and development at the Siemens Corporation.

Joe Cahill: commander in chief of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) Belfast Brigade. His Irish passport was found during the June 19–20, 1981, FBI discovery of a major IRA gunrunning ring in Queens. His release was demanded in a phone call to the U.S. Embassy in Dublin to say the IRA would otherwise “declare war” on the U.S. government, its buildings, and its property.

Jini Calasek: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 bound for Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany.

Hugh Callaghan: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Sabine Elke Callsen: Red Army Faction member arrested on June 15, 1990, when she was recognized by fellow train passengers who remembered West German wanted posters. The next day, East Germany announced the fingerprints didn't match, and she was released. On March 7, 2003, she surrendered at the Frankfurt airport after a two-year Middle East exile.

Enzo Calvitti: son of a leader of the Italian Radical Party and one of three individuals arrested in Paris on October 12, 1989, on suspicion of being members of the Italian Red Brigades. He had been wanted since his escape from an Italian jail in 1983. An international arrest warrant for him had been issued in 1984. He had been sentenced earlier to 21 years by a Rome court for murdering a policeman.

Diane Campbell-Lefevre: British doctor who had worked in Palestinian refugee camps and who was arrested in France after two terrorists were arrested on March 15, 1973, in France, while attempting to smuggle explosives across the Italian–French border for use in attacks against the Israeli and Jordanian embassies as part of a Black September campaign. The two drove from a Lebanese Fatah base in a Mercedes carrying 35 pounds of plastique. She was deported to London on March 22, 1973.

Manuel Canaveras: student and member of the Spanish Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP) sentenced on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court to death for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Jose Rodriguez. He and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Marcello Capuano: sentenced in absentia on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26-plus years for involvement in the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier. On May 29, 1982, he was shot and captured by police after a running gun battle in which a bystander was seriously wounded.

Hilarion Capucci: Syrian-born Greek Catholic Orthodox Archbishop and Melchite patriarchal vicar of Jerusalem, sentenced to 12 years in 1974 for smuggling guns and explosives from Lebanon to Israel in his official car. At least one Israeli was thought to have died from Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) use of these arms. Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PDFLP) terrorists attempting to enter Fasuta, Israel, on September 4, 1974, had intended to take hostages and demand his release. On November 19, 1974, three PDFLP members attacked a Beit Shean, Israel, apartment house and killed four civilians before they were killed. The group was carrying communiqués in which they demanded Capucci's release. His release was again demanded on March 5, 1975, when eight Fatah members attacked the Hotel Savoy in Tel Aviv, taking 10 hostages. The Arab Liberation Front demanded his release on June 15, 1975, during its attack on a cooperative farm in the village of Kfar Yuval, Israel. His release also was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the PFLP hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe; during the September 4, 1976, hijacking of a KLM DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam; and by six Fatah dissidents who claimed to be members of the Friends of Arabs, who hijacked a B707 leased to Kuwait Airways by British Midland Airway as it was flying out of Beirut on July 8, 1977. Capucci was released from Ramleh Prison and flown to Rome on board an Alitalia plane on November 6, 1977, after the pope requested his release. The understanding reached between Israel and the Vatican specified that Capucci not be allowed to make anti-Israeli propaganda, that he be posted far from the Middle East, and that the pope's letter not deny his guilt.

On February 9, 1980, he went to Tehran to visit the U.S. Embassy hostages, who had been held since November 4, 1979.

Maria Cappello: arrested on September 7, 1988, by Rome police with 20 members of the Fighting Communist Party, including her husband, Fabio Ravalli.

Carlo Caravaglio: Red Brigades member arrested on May 17, 1983, after taking hostages during a bungled robbery attempt at a Rome post office. On May 25, 1986, he was sentenced to life in prison for murdering a woman guard at Rome's Rebibbia Prison in January 1983. A prison doctor was seriously injured in the attack.

Rafael Caride Simon: believed to be the mastermind of many Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) attacks, he was arrested on February 20, 1993, while drinking a beer in a downtown bar in Toulouse, France. He was believed to be behind the 1987 car bombing of a Barcelona supermarket that killed 21 people.

Owen Carron: Irish Republican Army (IRA) member and member of British Parliament. He succeeded Bobby Sands, the IRA terrorist who died of a prison hunger strike. On January 21, 1982, he was stopped at the Whirlpool Bridge and Niagara Falls and charged with conspiracy to smuggle himself and giving false information to immigration officers. He claimed he had landed immigrant status in Canada. He was trying to get to a New York City IRA fund-raising dinner. The U.S. Consulate in Belfast had denied him a visa.

Hugh Carville: Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomber and former Irish football star who joined the Maze Prison hunger strike on August 31, 1981.

Jean-Philippe Casabonne: Frenchman arrested on July 6, 1987, in Torremolinos, Spain, for housing Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members Ines del Rio and Jose Luis Hermosa Urra. He was the first Frenchman known to belong to ETA.

Alessio Casimirri: believed involved in the Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro on March 16, 1978. As of 1988, he remained at large.

Paolo Cassetta: one of three Red Brigades (RB) members arrested by the Carabinieri on January 22, 1987, after a Rome suburbs shootout that wounded two RB members and a bystander, age 79. On March 31, 1987, he was indicted by investigating magistrate Domenico Sica as an accessory to the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Angel Castrillos Allende: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by France to Togo on September 23–26, 1984. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike and was treated in a Togo hospital upon arrival.

Miguel Castro Senaratzin: police were searching for the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member after arresting 14 people in July 1988 in Spain for attempting to re-form the ETA Donosti (Basque term for San Sebastian) Commando, which had been disbanded by police. The group was planning attacks on the San Sebastian Marine Command, on the Office of the Civil Governor of Guipuzcoa, and on a National Police patrol. Police found a significant weapons cache in a Hernani building and two vehicles with false registrations; one car was already prepared for an attack.

Catabiani: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Roberto Catalano: alias Luca. Member of the Prima Valle branch of the Red Brigades who on March 28, 1988, surrendered to the Rome Directorate for General Investigations and Special Operations (DIGOS). He had been wanted since 1976 for armed insurrection against the state and for membership in an armed gang. He reportedly carried out the research for the June 1981 murder of Deputy Police Chief Vince and for the 1981 wounding of Director of the Rome Employment Office Retruzi. He was also involved in the third Aldo Moro trial. Investigators believed he had been hiding in another country since going underground in 1982.

Augusto Caucci: Italian right-wing terrorist arrested on April 13, 1993, by Interpol agents in the Once District of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and charged with involvement in the August 2, 1980, attack on the Bologna railroad station that caused more than 80 deaths and 400 injuries. He was believed to be an explosives expert. He had lived in Argentina for a decade.

Maria Pia Cavallo: member of the Italian Front Line Group serving a 19-year sentence for participation in armed attacks and sentenced in Rome on June 9, 1983, to an additional 17 years in jail for holding a prison guard hostage for eight hours.

Christopher Caze: Muslim convert, medical student, and leader of the radical group Roubaix Gang. In March 1996, the group robbed armored cars and attempted to car-bomb a G-7 Jobs Summit in Lille, France. Caze and most of the gang members were killed in shootouts with police.

Giuseppe di Cecco: Red Brigades member serving 20 years who on September 22, 1986, escaped from the Novara prison hospital following a hunger strike. On December 17, 1987, he escaped from a high-security jail near Fossombrone by sawing through the cell bars and squeezing through a small tunnel leading out of the converted fortress to a nearby river bank. He was serving 24 years as a member of the Red Brigades' Turin unit.

Azzedine Cefouane: arrested on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism-related activities.

Musar Serdar Celebi: variant Musa. Arrested on November 2, 1982, by police in Kriftel, West Germany, on an international arrest warrant for the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was the founder of the Turkish Federation, an extreme right-wing group officials believed was a cover for the Grey Wolves. He was extradited to Italy on January 14, 1983. He was acquitted on March 29, 1986.

Oral Celik: on November 27, 1982, he was charged with complicity in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was acquitted on March 29, 1986.

Victor Cerro: Spaniard and one of two men arrested on May 2, 1986, by Spanish police for carrying a four-kilogram bomb in the vicinity of the Bank of America building in Madrid. The duo claimed membership in the Call of Jesus Christ, a Middle East anti-Zionist terrorist group formed in 1978. Evidence pointed to Libyan funding.

Francesco Pagani Cesa: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank.

Enrique Cerda: tile shop owner in Valencia who on January 13, 2004, was charged by a Spanish judge with financing the al Qaeda truck bombing on April 11, 2002, that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia. He was arrested in March 2003.

Claudio Cerick: leader of a Red Brigades splinter group arrested by the Tunisian Criminal Investigation Department on July 28, 1988. Tunisia said it would hand him over to Italian authorities, whose warrant charged him with murder, kidnapping, abduction, illegal possession of firearms, and forgery. He had arrived from France and was arrested in southern Tunisia on his first day in the country.

Jose Pablo Ces Gomez: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who had been arrested in Rome and was extradited to Spain on August 4, 1989, and taken to Madrid's Carabanchel prison.

Abdelkader Cesur: Turk arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest in Sarajevo. In January 2007, a Bosnian court sentenced him to 13 years.

Kamal Hadid Chaar: Syrian-born Spanish citizen and al Qaeda suspect arrested on July 17, 2002, at his Madrid home. Police said he belonged to the al Qaeda cell led by Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, who was arrested in November on charges of recruiting and fund-raising for the group. Police believed the group played a key role in the preparation of the 9/11 attacks in the United States.

Saadovn Chaker: reputed Iraqi intelligence chief detained in London on July 26, 1978, and charged with instigating the murder on July 9, 1978, of former Iraqi prime minister Abdul Razzak al-Naif, gunned down as he walked from London's Intercontinental Hotel in the Mayfair District near Hyde Park.

Albert Chambon: retired ambassador charged in Paris on July 21, 1977, with failing to tell police of his part in the successful negotiations regarding the kidnapping of Luchino Revelli-Beaumont, president of the Fiat Subsidiary, seized by the Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity on April 13, 1977. They demanded a $30 million ransom by June 11.

Ali and Verena Chanaa: Ali, Palestinian, age 37, and Verena, his German ex-wife, age 37, were arrested by Berlin police on October 10, 1986, for the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque, which killed 4 and injured 229 people. Police believed Verena had planted the bomb at the request of Ali and Yasser Mohammed Chreidi. Ali received 9,000 marks for the bombing. Verena received 6,000 marks for carrying the bomb.

The Chanaas were Stasi informants. Verena had met Ali in East Berlin in 1978 and had become pregnant by him in 1981. The Stasi refused to let the stateless Palestinian settle in East Germany but permitted her, in return for working for the Stasi, to settle with him in West Berlin.

On November 18, 1997, the Chanaas' trial began for three counts of murder, nine counts of attempted murder, and causing a fatal blast. On November 13, 2001, he was convicted of attempted murder and sentenced to 12 years. On November 13, 2001, Verena was found guilty of murder and sentenced to 14 years for picking the target and planting the bomb.

Manuel Chao Dobarro: spokesman for the Guerrilla Army of the Free Galician People on October 11, 1990, when a bomb one of its members was planting accidentally detonated in the Clangor discotheque in Santiago de Compostela, killing 2 terrorists and a young Vigo woman and injuring 49 people.

Mohamed Chaoui: one of three Moroccans arrested on March 13, 2004, in Spain and held for questioning in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. Chaoui, age 34, and his half-brother Jamal Zougam were charged on March 19, 2004, with belonging to a terrorist organization and with 4 counts of terrorism, 190 counts of murder, 1,400 counts of attempted murder, and 1 count of auto theft.

Ben Amed Chaqual: one of three Black June terrorists who fired machine guns and threw grenades at Vienna's Schwechat Airport on December 27, 1985. After a car chase and gun battle with police, he was severely injured. At least 16 people were killed and 73 injured. He carried a faked Tunisian passport, having come to Vienna from Beirut. The terrorists had intended to take hostages to obtain an El Al plane, which they would crash into Tel Aviv. He was charged with murder and attempted murder. The Vienna public prosecutor indicted him on March 13, 1987. On May 21, 1987, he was found guilty of two counts of murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Kerim Chatty: Tunisian-born Swedish man, age 29, arrested by Swedish police on August 29, 2002, for planning to hijack a plane after an X-ray detected a handgun in a toiletries bag in his carry-on luggage as he prepared to board a plane bound for London's Stansted Airport with 185 passengers. He was in a group of 20 people going to an Islamic conference in Birmingham, United Kingdom, according to police in Vaesteraas, 60 miles from Stockholm. The suspect had prior convictions for theft and assault, including a 1999 (or 1997, according to other sources) attack on a U.S. Embassy Marine guard in a gym. The other members of the group included 17 adults and 2 children. Several passengers were evacuated from the Ryanair plane.

Chatty initially told police that the gun had been planted but later said he was carrying it because he feared for his safety in the United Kingdom. His father said his son might have forgotten that the gun was in the bag.

Reuters reported that Chatty had planned to crash the plane into a U.S. embassy in Europe. Four accomplices, including an explosives expert, remained at large, and were deemed wannabes, not al Qaeda members. Police initially denied the story. Others said it might have been a dry run for a terrorist attack. Nils Uggla, Chatty's attorney, said that this was not terrorism or religiously inspired, but that he was not at liberty to discuss why his client was carrying the weapon. Chatty had studied at the North American Institute of Aviation in Conway, South Carolina, from September 1996 to April 1997, but he had been "terminated" for substandard performance and lack of progress in the course. Friends said that he had studied Islam and visited Saudi Arabia in September 2001 and February 2002. He had been questioned by local police shortly after the 9/11 attacks. One newspaper said he had been a regional Swedish gold medalist in Thai boxing. Others said he was a bodybuilder, a martial arts fan, and a bodyguard/enforcer for Yugoslav gangsters. He was convicted in 1993 for possession of an unregistered shotgun. He was later arrested with a Glock machine pistol. His father is Tunisian; his mother is Swedish. She claimed her son became interested in Islam during his flight school training.

Prosecutors were given a deadline of September 2, 2002, to persuade a court to remand him to custody for two more weeks. Police said he would probably be charged with planning a hijack or with illegal possession of firearms. He could face life in prison. Police raided his apartment in a town between Stockholm and Vaesteraas and carted away documents.

On September 2, Chatty was charged with attempted hijacking; the judge agreed to the two-week extension of his detention. Chatty pleaded guilty to illegal possession of a firearm and not guilty to attempted hijacking. His attorney said he would appeal the detention decision.

Chatty had befriended Oussama Kassir, Lebanese Palestinian and Stockholm resident who allegedly had participated in a plot to create a terrorist training camp in Oregon and had made threats against police. Kassir said the two met in Sweden's Osteraker prison in 1998, where Kassir taught him Islamic lessons and prayers. He said Chatty followed the ultra-orthodox Salafi fundamentalist ideology, which does not advocate violence.

Chatty was freed on September 30, 2002, when prosecutors said that they did not have evidence that he intended a hijacking. The prosecutor imposed a travel ban on him and ordered him to report to police daily for the month of October.

Iglesias Chauvas: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader arrested in France on February 2, 2000. He was a suspect in a 1995 plot to assassinate the King of Spain.

Driss Chebli: Moroccan who on September 26, 2005, received a six-year sentence from a Spanish court for collaborating with a terrorist organization, coordinating a key meeting in Tarragona, Spain, with 9/11 hijack leader Mohammed Atta in July 2005.

Said Chedadi: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Imran Cheema: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan. Cheema was believed to be a would-be suicide bomber who came to Barcelona from Pakistan between October 2007 and mid-January 2008.

Hassan El Cheguer: one of two French citizens, age 31, sentenced on June 16, 2005, by Presiding Judge Jacqueline Rebeyrotte to four years in prison, with one year suspended, for conspiracy to assist Richard C. Reid in attempting to shoe-bomb an American airliner over the Atlantic on December 22, 2001.

Ali Ben Zidane: arrested on November 6, 2007, by British authorities in a London suburb. Zidane, age 34, was one of 17 Algerians and Tunisians arrested throughout Western Europe who were suspected of terrorist ties to Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Yassine Chekhour: on November 28, 2001, Milan antiterrorism police arrested Moroccan Yassine Chekhour and Tunisian Nabil Benatti, who were suspected of recruiting for al Qaeda and getting them to Afghanistan. Police raided two Milan mosques after the arrests and seized documents and other evidence. The United States had said that Milan's Islamic cultural institute and mosque was al Qaeda's main European logistics base.

Mohammed Chentouf: sentenced to four years on December 1, 2006, when a court in Amsterdam convicted four Dutch Muslims, including Chentouf, of plotting terrorist attacks against political leaders and government buildings.

Yasser Cherai: variant of Yusir Chraydi.

Ferthi Cherif: Algerian expelled by France on April 5, 1986, for being part of a support network for attacks against U.S. targets in Europe.

Klaid Cherkaoui: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. On June 11, 1987, Orleans police gave the Moroccan eight days to leave the country.

Didier Chevrolet: one of four ringleaders of the Communist Combatant Cells arrested on December 16, 1985, in a fast-food restaurant in Belgium. On January 14, 1986, they were charged with the attempted murder of the night watchman at the Brussels-Lambert Bank, which had been bombed on November 4, 1985. On September 26, 1988, the trial began for six Belgians accused of 28 terrorist attacks between October 1984 and December 1985. The group faced punishments ranging from three years to life in prison.

Boualem Chibani: arrested on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism-related activities.

Stefano Delle Chiaie: charged in 1985 with “complicity in a massacre and forming an armed gang” in the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. On March 27, 1987, Caracas authorities arrested him and immediately extradited him to Italy. He had been a fugitive for more than 17 years. While prosecutors battled over who had precedence, he was charged with participating in an armed band; with reviving the National Vanguard in 1976; and with involvement in the aforementioned train bombing, in a December 1969 raid on a Milan bank in which 16 people died, in a 1974 bombing of the Italicus train in which 15 people died in Florence, and in the bombing of Piazza Fontana in Milan. On April 6, 1987, he was transferred to Brescia from Rome to testify regarding a May 28, 1974, bomb attack on a trade union meeting that killed 8 and injured 208. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court acquitted him on subversion charges for lack of evidence. On July 19, 1990, the act of association for subversion did not exist for the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court, which thus cleared him of all charges.

Carlos Alberto Chicchiarelli: Argentine arrested with his girlfriend and another Italian on September 22, 1987, in Rome for the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. The men were arrested at their Treasury offices.

Antonio Chicocchi: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank.

Godfrey Philip Chiner: Briton and one of four would-be assassins of Abdul Hamid Bakoush, a former Libyan prime minister and the head of the Organization for the Liberation of Libya, who were arrested on November 12, 1984, at Bakoush’s residence in Egypt. Egypt said the foiled plot was financed by Libya.

Antonio Chiocchi: one of the three leaders of the Naples section of the Italian Red Brigades in early 1982.

Ali Chohra: Algerian who hijacked an Air France B737 bound for Paris on March 7, 1984, and diverted it to Geneva.

Yasser Chraidí: variants Yusir Chraydi, Chreidi, Cheraidi, Yasir Shuraydah, Yusuf al-Sharidi. Libyan believed to have orchestrated the bombing of La Belle Disco on April 5, 1986, in West Berlin. He was arrested in 1991 for a string of murders, attempted murder, and burglaries. Germany demanded extradition from Lebanon. On June 21, 1994, the Lebanese criminal court pronounced him not guilty in the 1984 murder of Mustafa al-’Ashiq, a Libyan dissident, in Germany. In June 1995, Lebanon cleared him of suspicion in the 1986 murder of a Libyan dissident in Germany. On May 23, 1996, Lebanon extradited him to Germany after the latter agreed not to send him for trial to the United States or Turkey, where he would face the death penalty. On June 17, 1996, East German Stasi Lt. Col. Rainer Wiegand, the star witness against him, died in a collision with a truck in Portugal; police suspected foul play.

On November 18, 1997, the trial began of Abulghasem Eter, Chraidí, Ali Chanaa, and Verena Chanaa and her sister, Andrea Hausler, for the bombing. Chraidí was charged with three counts of murder, nine counts of attempted murder, and causing a fatal blast. On November 13, 2001, he was convicted of multiple counts of attempted murder and sentenced to 14 years.

Yusir Chraydi: variant of Yasser Chraidí.

Yasser Chreidi: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Lars Christiansen: on December 8, 1993, the five judges of the Second Criminal Bench of the Schleswig Higher Regional Court sentenced him to 10 years prison under the youth penal code on three counts of murder, several counts of attempted murder, and a particularly serious case of arson in a series of right-wing attacks against asylum-seeker hostels in Germany.

Rudol Cihak: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 bound for Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg.

S. Cihakova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 bound for Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg.

Stanislava Cihakova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 bound for Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg.

Dr. Cihan: code name of a woman whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Jacinto Ciloza: first lieutenant in the Portuguese army who forced a Portuguese military plane to fly from Mozambique to Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, in protest of the Salazar government on March 12, 1963.

Paul Joseph Cini: Canadian self-styled Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who hijacked an Air Canada DC8 bound for Toronto on November 13, 1971.

Georges Cipriani: aliases Stephan Broeckx, Eric de Roel, Rene Michel Mercier, Alain Peter Potter, Antoine Arnau Gandolfi. Arrested by French police on March 21, 1987, and charged with the January 25, 1985, assassination in Paris of Gen. Rene Audran, the defense ministry official in charge of France's arms exports. French police searched Cipriani's hideout near Vitry-aux-Loges and found arms, explosives, cash, and documents from the briefcase of Georges Besse, the Renault chief assassinated on November 17, 1986. On January 11, 1988, Cipriani's trial began for the murder of Renault chief Georges Besse, the January 1985 shooting of Army Gen. Rene Audran, the May 31, 1983, murder of two policemen, and illegal association. On January 14, 1989, a jury sentenced him to life with an 18-year minimum recommendation. On April 19, 1989, he was charged with the May 1987 attack on the Interpol headquarters in St. Cloud, Paris. On April 20, 1989, he was one of four imprisoned Direct Action terrorists who began a hunger strike, demanding political prisoner status and the abolition of solitary confinement cells.

Maurizio Cirelli: found hanged in his cell in Avignon, France, on May 9, 1986. His extradition to Italy was scheduled for train robberies believed financed by Red Brigades activities.

Giovanni Ciucci: arrested on January 28, 1982, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Padua. He was holding a pistol to the head of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozer, whom the Red Brigades had kidnapped on December 17, 1981. A member of the Special Agents for Security Operations of the Interior Ministry felled Ciucci with a blow to the head. On January 30, ANSA news agency reported that he had spent time in Libya at a paramilitary training camp. He was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 14 years in the Dozier case.

Ludovico Codella: Italian arrested for the August 5, 1972, attack by a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-Black September squad that set off four explosives at the trans-Alpine oil terminal at Trieste, Italy, destroying six oil tanks and causing $7 million in damage.

Abelardo Collazo: believed to be the leader of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) of Spain. He was arrested on February 11, 1977, by police who arrested six persons holding two hostages: Antonio Maria de Oriol y Urquiyo, president of the Council of State, member of the Council of the Realm, one of Spain's richest men, and the fourth highest-ranking official in Spain, kidnapped on December 11, 1976, apparently by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members; and Lt. Gen. Emilio Villaescusa, president of the Supreme Military Tribunal, kidnapped on January 24, 1977.

Yvan Colonna: Corsican separatist leader arrested on July 4, 2003, on a sheep farm. Authorities believe he shot to death Corsica's most senior French official, Prefect Claude Enrignac, on February 6, 1998, in an Ajaccio street. Colonna had added weight and grown long hair and a beard in an effort to throw off his pursuers.

Gerardina Colotti: one of three Red Brigades (RB) members arrested by the Carabinieri on January 22, 1987, after an evening shootout in the Rome suburbs that wounded two RB members, including Colotti, and a 79-year-old bystander. She had worked as a substitute philosophy teacher in the Vertimiglia school system.

Laurent Communier: philosophy student and one of three would-be terrorists who were arrested on March 9, 1987, after a drunken shootout with police guards at the residence of Jean Tiberi, first deputy mayor of Paris and a government member of Parliament. The students drove off but were captured.

Pierre Conard: French shop manager who was one of eight men arrested by the French Department of Territorial Security (DST) on March 30, 1987, suspected of planning attacks against Israeli targets. He was charged with illegal arms possession and conspiracy following the discovery of an arms cache near Paris and documents that mentioned plans for attacks on Arab, Israeli, and U.S. figures and airlines. He was suspected of belonging to a Syrian guerrilla network linked with an extremist Middle Eastern group.

Gerard Conlon: one of the Guildford Four imprisoned for two alleged Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) pub bombings on October 5, 1974, in which 5 people died and 71 were injured. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and fabricated evidence. They spent 14 years in prison. The four were to receive compensation. Conlon was portrayed by Daniel Day-Lewis in the 1993 film In the Name of the Father. His autobiography was Proved Innocent.

Patrick Giuseppe Conlon: one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. Conlon died in prison in 1980. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed his and the others' convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence.

Niall Connolly: alias David Bracken. One of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas. Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, and Martin McCauley said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. FARC claimed they were in the country to learn about the local peace process. Only Connolly spoke Spanish. Cuba claimed Connolly had been the Sinn Féin Latin America representative since 1996, based in Havana. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives in the IRA members' clothing. On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted on training charges but convicted of traveling on false passports and IDs. Connolly was sentenced to two years and two months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time. On December 16, 2004, Bogota courts overturned the acquittal and ordered the immediate arrests of the men, to serve 17-year terms. Their whereabouts were unknown. On August 5, 2005, the trio snuck back into Ireland. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. Connolly was arrested for carrying a false Irish passport.

Maria Teresa Conti: arrested on October 13, 1980, in Sorrento, Italy, along with Michele Viscardi, leader of the Front Line. He was believed involved in three murders.

David Copeland: engineer, age 22, from a London suburb charged on May 2, 1999, with acting alone in the April 30, 1999, bombing of the Admiral Duncan Pub, a gay hangout in Soho, London, that killed 3 people and hospitalized 27. He was also charged with three counts of causing an explosion—the Duncan bomb, the April 17 Brixton bombing, and the April 24 Brick Lane bombing. He was slated for a West London Magistrates Court appearance on May 8.

Jesus Garcia Corporales: alias Gitanillo. Member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Araba and Madrid Commandos and an expert in car bombs arrested in early 1994 in St. Jean de Luz, France. Police accused him of taking part in 10 attacks in Madrid in which 14 people died. Spain made five extradition requests. On October 12, 1994, a Paris appeals court ruled in favor of extradition.

Macedo Correia: former member of the Popular Forces of April 25 group in Portugal who turned state's evidence in 1985. In a November 27, 1985, trial, he said that the group planned to overthrow the Zairean government.

Anna Corry: member of the Irish National Liberation Army released from prison in Northern Ireland on October 20, 1998. She served 15 years for involvement in a discotheque bombing in 1983. She was one of the first to get early release under the region's peace deal struck in April 1998.

Massimiliano Corsi: Red Brigades member arrested on January 10, 1982, for participating in the shooting and attempted kidnapping of Rome's deputy police chief, Nicola Simone, a few days earlier.

Maria Jose Cortes de la Casa: officer of the Spanish National Police Corps romantically involved with one of eight Hizballah terrorists arrested on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that the terrorists had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the ports of Valencia and Madrid. The telephone used by the terrorists for the Alissar Import-Export Company, a front for the terrorist cell, was registered in her name. The Police Directorate-General opened an investigation and temporarily suspended her.

Seamus Costello: founder of the Irish Republican Sociality Party. He was at odds with the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) and was assassinated on a crowded Dublin street on October 5, 1977.

James Cottle: Briton sentenced on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that slightly injured his wife. A second car bomb on November 22, 2000, injured two men and a woman, all British citizens. He initially admitted to the charges but later recanted. The Saudis deported him on August 8, 2003.

David Courtailler: French citizen arrested in France on March 1, 1999. He trained in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan in 1997 and 1998. On March 17, 2004, Courtailler, age 28, went on trial for "criminal association in relation to a terrorist enterprise," which carries a 10-year sentence. He met Jamal Zougam, a suspect in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and injured 2,000. On May 25, 2004, a Paris court sentenced the Islam convert to four years in prison with two years suspended for abetting a network of Islamic terrorists in Europe.

Jerome Courtailler: French convert to Islam, age 28, arrested by Dutch police on September 13, 2001, on suspicion of planning suicide attacks against U.S. targets in Europe. On December 18, 2002, a Rotterdam court freed him.

Georges Courteios: one of two defendants on trial for robbery in Nantes, France, on December 19, 1985, who were freed and armed by Abdel Karim Khaki, a Moroccan member of Abu Nidal who burst into the courtroom and took hostages. Courteios had met Khaki in jail while awaiting trial. The trio made demands regarding Lebanon but ultimately surrendered. The three were charged with attempted murder and were to be tried in France.

Daniel Couspeyre: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak sentenced to five years on March 28, 1989, for attempting to destroy property using explosives in the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy, France.

Marion Coyle: one of two Irish Republican Army (IRA) kidnappers of Teide Herrema, the Dutch manager of the Ferenka metal plant in Dublin, on October 3, 1975. The kidnappers demanded that three IRA terrorists be released, that Ferenka close for 48 hours, and that police not search for the kidnappers or set up roadblocks. The kidnappers surrendered, and on March 11, 1976, an Irish court sentenced Coyle to 15 years.

James Craig: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorist arrested on March 16, 1993, in Argentina by Interpol's Airport Operations Division for two murders. He had been in the country since 1990. One of his victims was a detective killed in an armed robbery in Northern Ireland. The other was a U.S. citizen in an apparent settling of accounts in the New York underworld. He was expected to be extradited to the United States.

Danielle Francoise Cravenne nee Batisse: hijacker of an Air France B727 flying from Paris to Nice on October 18, 1973.

Joelle Crepet: one of two men charged after his March 30, 1986, arrest with complicity in the murder of Gendarmerie Gen. Guy Delfosse, killed on March 27, 1984, while trying to stop a Lyons bank holdup. He was suspected of forming a left-wing terrorist group modeled after Direct Action. He was charged with hostage-taking, armed robbery, and complicity to murder.

Juan Jose Crespo: member of the Spanish First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who died on June 19, 1981, after a three-month hunger strike at Herrera de la Mancha Prison near Madrid.

Juan Carlos Criado Huache: member of the right-wing Catalan Militia who set fires at Barcelona book shops and attacked the offices of separatist groups in 1986.

Gianluigi Cristiani: Red Brigades member who turned state's evidence. On November 6, 1981, he told a Cagliari, Sardinia, court that Palestinian guerrillas had given him a shipment of submachine guns and hand grenades.

Domencio Cristofaro: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Cristofaro. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Klaus Croissant: leftist lawyer of jailed members of the Baader-Meinhof Gang. He was suspected of relaying information to jailed members of the gang. He fled to France illegally in July 1977, seeking asylum from West German charges of supporting terrorist groups. On August 15, 1977, a pipe bomb exploded in his Stuttgart office. On September 30, 1977, he was arrested by Paris police. He was extradited to West Germany on November 16, 1977, on charges of improperly aiding Andreas Baader while in prison.

Manuel De Cruz: one of three men arrested on December 29, 1985, outside their Paris hotel on suspicion of planning to bomb a synagogue on Rue Copernic. Their apartment contained sulfuric acid, nitric acid, wire, batteries, two packets of nails, a soldering iron, two alarm clocks, and magnesium. The Portuguese citizen had a false Spanish passport.

Arturo Cubillas Fontan: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Antonio Cubillo: leader of the Canaries Autonomy Movement. He was arrested after he returned on August 18, 1985, following a 22-year exile. He was freed on bail the next day.

Finbarr Cullen: County Kildare resident and one of three people convicted on October 27, 1988, in London of conspiring to murder Tom King, Britain's Northern Ireland secretary. The trio had been arrested during the summer in the vicinity of King's country house in rural Wiltshire.

Renato Curcio: founder of the Italian Red Brigades tried in Turin in 1978. His release was demanded by the 12 Red Brigades kidnappers of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome on March 16, 1978.

Henri Curiel: leader of the Curiel Apparat, a Paris-based leftist group that aided scores of revolutionary organizations in the 1970s. He co-founded Egypt's Communist Party. He was shot to death on May 4, 1978, by two youths at his Latin Quarter home. The rightist Organization Delta claimed credit.

Selim Curukkaya: identified on August 12, 1993, by Istanbul's Hurriyet as a Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) deputy and accountant in Cologne

Jerry Jan Czerwinski: one of two Polish Army pilots who on April 1, 1982, ended paratroops training at Krakow by taking their plane to the West. They landed in Poland to pick up their families, flew at treetop level to avoid detection, and landed at Vienna's Schwechat Airport. They requested political asylum. They were arrested, and on July 20, 1982, Czerwinski was sentenced to a year.

D

---

Amina Dabbour: Palestinian schoolteacher, age 21, living in Lebanon who joined three other Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorists who drove in a car and fired 200 bullets from their machine guns and threw three incendiary grenades at El Al 432, a B720B scheduled to fly from Zurich to Tel Aviv, as it was taxiing down the runway on February 18, 1969. The pilot was killed. They were sentenced to 12 years of hard labor for murder by a Winterthur court on December 22, 1969, but were released after the September 6, 1970, hijacking of a Swissair plane by the PFLP. The group said they were "trained in Jordan and some of them left Syria to carry out their attack in Zurich."

Rageb Hammouda Daghdugh: Libyan arrested in Rome on February 5, 1985, carrying a Walther P-38 pistol and $25,000 in checks issued by the Libyan People's Bureau. He said that the checks and gun had been given to him by two Libyan diplomats to assassinate U.S. ambassador Maxwell Rabb and the envoys from Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Nabil Dagher: Lebanese arrested in April 1986 in Paris on suspicion of aiding a terrorist group, but released for insufficient evidence. He died on March 20, 1986, when a bomb exploded in the crowded Point-Show shopping mall just off the Champs Elysees in Paris. The bomb killed 2 Lebanese and wounded 30. Police suspected he had planted the bomb for the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners.

Abu Dahdah: alias of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.

Fa'ud Dahir: Palestinian who lived in West Berlin and was believed involved in the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Disco.

Fayiz Firyal Dahir: member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) charged in absentia on May 8, 1985, by an Italian judge with the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Leamon R. Hunt, the American director general of the multinational force in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. On June 18, 1985, a Trieste court found him guilty and sentenced him to 15 years and a $510 fine. He was believed to be in Lebanon. On September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers and other LARF members, including the Dahirs, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Fayruz Fayey Dahir: on September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers and other Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) members, including the Dahirs, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack killed seven and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Ali Ben Bezhin Dakhli: wanted by Austrian authorities for masterminding the Black June machine gun and grenade attack at Vienna's Schwechat Airport on December 27, 1985, that killed 2 and injured 37. The terrorists had intended to take hostages to obtain an El Al plane, which they would crash into Tel Aviv.

Mohammed Daki: on January 24, 2005, Judge Maria Clementina Forleo dropped terrorism charges against three Tunisians and two Moroccans, including Daki, in a decision that differentiated between guerrillas and terrorists according to her reading of the 1999 UN Global Convention on Terrorism. She indicated that their actions in recruiting for and financing training camps in the Iraq war zone did not create civilian terror or break international humanitarian law and as such were guerilla in nature, not terrorist, and could not be prosecuted. Prosecutors said they would appeal. The judge's decision was reversed by higher courts in 2007 based on the terrorist nature of the crime rather than its milieu or intended effect. Daki was sentenced to four years.

Daki, age 38, was linked to the Hamburg cell that plotted the 9/11 attacks, sharing a mailing address with Ramzi Binalshibh. In early 2003, he received a phone call in Reggio Emilia, Italy, from Abderrazak Mahdjoub, an Algerian and suspected al Qaeda organizer in Germany, who asked him to find shelter for arriving immigrants. One of them was Ciise Maxamad Cabbdullah (alias The Somali) who Italian investigators said worked for Abu Musab al-Zarqawi and Ansar al-Islam. Daki housed him with four other immigrants. Ten days before they arrested Daki, police picked up Cabbdullah. On November 28, 2005, an appeals court in Milan threw out the terrorism charges.

Kenneth H. Dalglish: former British intelligence agent who on November 15, 1981, was participating in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government when he and 44 other mercenaries took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India.

Hafiz Qasim Husayn Dalkamuni: variant of Hajj Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni,

Hajj Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni: variants Hafiz Qasim Husayn Dalkamuni, Haj Hafiz Kassem Kalkamoni; alias Hafez Mohamad Hussein. Al-Dalqamuni was believed to be the leader of a Palestinian terrorist group active in Europe in the 1980s. He was one of 13 persons suspected of membership in the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) arrested on October 27, 1988, in Neuss, West Germany. On November 23, 1988, the Karlsruhe Federal Prosecutor's Office said there was no evidence that he was a PFLP-GC security chief. Frankfurt police found several automatic pistols, numerous hand grenades, and explosives in his apartment. Police also seized a radio filled with explosives in a car used by Dalqamuni and left in Neuss.

Some believed he was involved in the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270. He was linked to Abu Talib and to Talib's contacts. The federal prosecutor said he established a weapons and explosives depot in Frankfurt and arranged attacks on U.S. military trains in August 1987 with one injury because the bomb exploded early in April 26, 1988. On June 3, 1991, al-Dalqamuni was found guilty of attempted murder and violations of the war arms control and explosives laws and was sentenced to 15 years.

Luigi Damoli: arrested in a January 22-23, 1982, sweep in Verona, Italy, during the search for U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier, kidnapped by the Red Brigades on December 17, 1981. Damoli fingered Paolo Galati.

Fitsen Bettine Daniel: West German nurse arrested on October 2, 1986, when Turkish police at Kayseri Airport found a detonator in a bag she and a doctor were about to take onto a Turkish Airlines flight to Istanbul.

Muhammad al'Danini: one of eight Hizballah terrorists arrested in Spain on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that they had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the ports of Valencia and Madrid.

Abu Daoud: alias of Uchmed Daoud Mechamed Auda.

Ouhnane Daoud: Algerian whose fingerprints were found on a bag containing bomb material connected to the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. The bag and cell phone detonators were found in a van in Alcala de Henares parked near the house in which the bombs were assembled.

Kamel Daoudi: fled Paris after the September 21, 2001, arrests of seven suspected terrorist colleagues plotting to attack U.S. interests in France, including the U.S. Embassy, in March 2002, when he was 27 years old. He was arrested in the United Kingdom on September 25. He was returned to Paris and held at French secret service headquarters. On January 3, 2005, the trial began of six men, including Daoudi, who were suspected of plotting to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris in 2001. They were charged with “associating with criminals connected with a terrorist enterprise.” Prosecutors said Daoudi trained at a terrorist camp in Afghanistan in 2000 and 2001. On March 15, 2005, the French court convicted the six of plotting the suicide bombing against the U.S. Embassy in Paris. Daoudi, an engineering and computer specialist who was the communications operative, received nine years.

Tariq al-Daour: arrested in the United Kingdom on October 21, 2005, at age 19. He may have been plotting to bomb the U.S. Capitol and White House. He was charged with Younis Tsouli with conspiracy to commit credit card fraud and with involvement in financial activity “for the purposes of terrorism.” In January, he had been accused of attacking a Jewish man, 24, outside a London parochial school in late 2004; the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Prosecutors said that al-Daour and Tsouli ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and the United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course, which included instructions on how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli had been asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book The Tip of the Camel's Hump. They also stole data for hundreds of credit cards, which they used to purchase supplies for operatives, and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. They had made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, and more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. On July 5, 2007, the law student was sentenced to six and one-half years after pleading guilty.

Kazem Darabi: Iranian intelligence officer alleged by Munich's Focus to have provided money, a car, arms, and Berlin apartments to a Lebanese asylum-seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who on September 17, 1992, shot to death four Kurdish politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On June 14, 1993, Der Spiegel reported that the First Criminal Division of the Berlin Regional Court had indicted the former engineering student, who lived in Berlin and worked as a greengrocer, exporter/importer at Ayad GmbH, and Kreuzberg mosque operator. His trial dragged on for four years. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced the Iranian grocer and former Revolutionary Guard to life in prison.

He was believed to be a leader and financier of the German branch of Hizballah. In 1982, he was sentenced to probationary custody for a breach of the public peace in Mainz, when he took part in an attack on students opposed to Tehran.

Hayri Darban: Kurdish Workers' Party (PKK) militant whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Mamoun Darkazanli: Bin Laden agent whose U.S. assets were ordered frozen on October 12, 2001. On October 15, 2004, Hamburg authorities arrested the Syrian German businessman, age 46, who was wanted in Spain on charges of funding al Qaeda for years. He appeared in a wedding video at a mosque with several of the 9/11 hijackers. He was held for possible extradition. He had been questioned in Germany shortly after 9/11 but was freed for lack of evidence. He was accused of having given logistical and financial support to al Qaeda in Spain, Germany, and the United Kingdom since 1997. He faced 12 years in prison in Spain if convicted of membership in a terrorist organization.

Germany agreed to extradition on October 17, 2004. He was included in the 35 people charged with membership in al Qaeda by Spanish judge Baltasar Garzon in September 2003. He was also charged with purchasing a cargo vessel for bin Laden in December 1993. On July 18, 2005, the German Federal Constitutional Court in Karlsruhe ordered Darkazanli's release because the European Union-wide arrest warrant did not comply with German law, which prohibits extradition of Germans against their will. Spain had requested his extradition for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. On July 14, 2006, German prosecutors closed their investigation of Darkazanli, saying that they were unable to confirm suspicions that he had "founded, along with other people, an organization in Germany with the aim of giving logistical and financial support to the terrorist aims of the international network of violent Islamists."

Osama Darra: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Naser Daryaei: Iranian for whom an international arrest warrant was issued on December 17, 1986, on suspicion of purchasing the blue BMW sedan that exploded on November 24, 1985, behind a U.S. Post Exchange in Frankfurt, injuring 35 people. The car had been purchased at the same dealership that had sold the car used in an August 8, 1985, bombing at the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base.

Maria Jesus Dasca Penellas: pregnant 20-year-old student and member of the Spanish Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP) sentenced on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court to death for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Pose Rodriguez. She and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Samir al-Dasqui: alias Muhammad al-'Ali. Lebanese who was identified by Berlin police on November 20, 1986, as the driver of a car whose Soviet-made grenades and mortar bombs blew up outside the U.S. Tempelhof Air Force Base on October 30, 1986. In 1981, his 1980 application for asylum in Berlin was rejected following a drug offense.

Frank Davis: Nigerian leader of three self-proclaimed members of the Black Liberation Front who bungled a morning robbery attempt and then seized eight hostages at the Spaghetti House restaurant in London on September 28, 1975. They demanded to be flown to Jamaica. On October 1, the radio announced the arrest of two other men on charges of involvement in the robbery. On October 3, the group released the remaining six hostages. Davis shot himself in the stomach, causing serious injuries. On June 30, 1975, the three were found guilty of attempted robbery.

‘Abdallah al-Dawsari: one of two Arabs arrested at Rome Airport in possession of three kilograms of explosives in May 1984. On December 24, 1986, the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) threatened the Rome government if they were mistreated, a threat echoed on January 5, 1987, by Allah’s Faithful.

Sigurd Debus: hunger-striking terrorist who died in a Hamburg jail on April 16, 1981. He began his hunger strike on February 11, 1981. He had been sentenced to 12 years for robbery and attempted bombing. While he was supporting demands by the Red Army Faction and the June 2 Movement for improved prison conditions, he had joined neither group. He had a radio and television in his cell and was not in solitary confinement and thus had the conditions demanded by the others. The hunger strike by two dozen other jailed terrorists was called off after his death.

Nihad Declas: Tunisian student arrested in July 1980 and remanded on August 1, 1980, into custody by an Antwerp, Belgium, court. He said he was to throw a grenade at passengers arriving at Brussels’ Zaventem Airport on El Al.

Muriel Degauque: Belgian convert to Islam who traveled to Iraq in late 2005 at age 38. As al Qaeda’s second female suicide bomber, she set off a suicide vest as a U.S. patrol passed by in Baquba on November 9, 2005, killing only herself. Born into a Catholic family, she had grown up in Monceau-Sur-Sambre, near Charleroi. She had become involved with drugs and alcohol while a teen. Her first husband was an Algerian who had persuaded her to turn to Islamic fundamentalism. Her second husband was a Moroccan believed to have died in Iraq before her death. She had entered Iraq from Syria earlier in the month. On November 30, in raids on homes in four cities, Belgian police detained 14 people—3 Moroccans, 2 Tunisians, and 9 Belgians—suspected of involvement in a terrorist network that sent fighters to Iraq, including Degauque. A 15th suspect—a Tunisian believed to have been in contact with one of those detained in Belgium—was arrested in France on November 30. He was believed to have known Degauque’s Moroccan husband.

Omar Deghayes: Libyan, age 37, arrested at Luton Airport, north of London, on December 19, 2007, one of two British residents among the three who had been released from Guantánamo’s prison after four years in captivity. He was held on the Terrorism Act on suspicion of the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was ordered released on bail.

Behzad Dehqani: one of four people arrested by London police on December 14, 1988, during a demonstration in front of the offices of Iran Air. They attacked three computers and were to face charges of criminal damage and violent disorder on January 5, 1989.

Holger Deilke: one of two suspected Red Army Faction terrorists arrested on December 7, 1989, at Mildstedt, on the outskirts of Husum. He had an identity card that had been stolen from a car parked in Hafenstrasse in September 1988.

Wesam al-Delaema: in May 2005, Dutch police arrested the 32-year-old Iraqi-born Dutch citizen in a raid on his Amersfoort home. He was wanted by the United States on charges of conspiring to kill Americans overseas, by helping to plan attacks in Fallujah, Iraq, in October 2003. Dutch prosecutors found a video showing him and other masked men describing how they mined a road where a U.S. military convoy was heading. The United States charged him in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., on July 27 and requested extradition. He was represented by attorney Victor Koppe. On September 9, 2005, he was indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., for conspiring to kill American troops near Fallujah, Iraq, in October 2003. On December 19, 2006, a Dutch court rejected a final attempt to block his extradition to the United States, where he would become the first suspect tried in a U.S. court for terrorism during the Iraqi insurgency. His trial began on January 29, 2007, when he pleaded not guilty to four counts of conspiracy and two other crimes for membership in the mujaheddin from Fallujah, in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, presided over by U.S. District Judge Paul L. Friedman; he had been extradited to the United States the previous weekend. Two charges carried a life sentence. He claimed he had been kidnapped and forced to participate in the video. The extradition agreement would have him return to the Netherlands to serve any prison time. He would not be treated as an enemy combatant or tried by the U.S. military.

Agurtzane Delgado Iriondo: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member, age 44, who was accused of 18 murders in Spain and who was sentenced on January 13, 2003, by a Paris court to nine years in prison for the murders.

Maria del Rosario Delgado Iriondo: on March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members on Algerian soil. Delgado Iriondo was a member of the ETA–Military Madrid Command in Algeria.

Rosario Delgado Iriondo: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled by Uruguayan authorities on August 26, 1994, for carrying out political activities that led to rioting in Uruguay on August 24, 1994. She had been detained in Montevideo, Uruguay, in May 1992 with a trio of ETA members, who were later expelled on August 24, 1994. Uruguayan courts had denied a Spanish extradition request for her, and she had then lived freely as a refugee in Montevideo.

She was indicted on terrorism and arms charges on August 29, 1994, in Paris. Police searches turned up counterfeit or stolen ID papers and documentation from ETA. Spanish authorities had issued seven international arrest and extradition orders for her involvement in the killing of 17 civil guards, three soldiers, two civilians, and a policeman during the 1980s. A French court granted extradition on February 22, 1995, but said that she would have to first serve time for crimes committed in France. On May 10, 1995, the Paris Court of Appeals granted five of the six requests made by Spanish courts for her extradition. The five were for attacks in which people had been murdered. She would not be handed over to Spain until she had served a sentence for crimes committed in France, including illegal possession of arms and membership in a criminal association with terrorist aims. The attacks included a car bombing on July 14, 1986, against a Civil Guard bus in Madrid's Plaza de la Republica Dominicana in which 12 people died.

Marcello Dell'Omo: one of five members of the Italian Red Brigades–Communist Combatant Party offshoot arrested in Paris on September 2, 1989. Police discovered arms and leaflets claiming responsibility for attacks and plans for more attacks in Italy. Two men and two women were arrested in the Faubourg St. Antoine District of central Paris, and another man was arrested at a hotel in the Grands Boulevards area. A fifth suspect was arrested later at the hotel.

Karl-Heinz Dellwo: one of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed the military attaché, Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, and the economic counselor, Heinz Hillegaart. They demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing 1 of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be joined later by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Dellwo was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison.

George DeMeo: indicted on April 1, 1980, by a federal grand jury in Raleigh, North Carolina, for conspiring to export weapons illegally to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Abdelkarim Deneche: Algerian member of the Armed Islamic Group arrested on August 21, 1995, by Stockholm police for the July 25, 1995, bombing of a subway car at the Saint-Michel station along the Seine River in the Latin Quarter of Paris that killed 7 and injured 86. He reportedly was cleared on suspicion of murder two days later but remained in custody. That day, Judge Laurence Le Vert of Paris issued an international arrest warrant for him. Sweden refused extradition on October 26, 1995, saying that police had confirmed that he was in Sweden when the bomb went off. He had settled in Sweden several years earlier. He remained in custody on suspicion of trying to raise money for Algerian terrorists. On October 31, Sweden announced that he would be deported, but not to Algeria.

Simon Denouse: London-based, South African-backed Seychelles exile who worked for Italy and was blown up by his own bomb on October 20, 1982, before he could launch a coup against the government of Seychelles president Albert France Rene. The Seychelles Resistance Movement claimed credit.

Mohammed Derbas: posted bail of $160,000 in cash in mid-June 1995 for the July 26, 1994, car bombing of the Israeli Embassy in London that injured 14 people. He and his wife, Reem Abdelhadi, were charged. They were freed on July 28, 1995, when a court found insufficient evidence to press charges of possessing explosives and weapons with intent to endanger life.

Tarek Dergoul: one of five U.K. citizens held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban who were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was one of four who were immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was released after questioning.

Simone Barnstein Deroy: alias of Joelle Aubron.

Jean-Pierre Deteix: Frenchman working for the separatist Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front (FLNKS) as a public relations consultant whose car was bombed on May 2, 1988, in New Caledonia. The National Committee Against Independence, believed to be a group of white French settlers, claimed credit.

Michael James Devine: Irish National Liberation Army member serving 12 years for possessing firearms and ammunition who on June 22, 1981, joined the Maze Prison hunger strike. He died on August 20, 1981, on the 60th day of his strike, an hour after polls opened for the Northern Irish Parliamentary seat in Fermanagh and South Tyrone vacated by the starvation death of Bobby Sands. Bombs went off in Belfast and Bangor, injuring 21, in protest of Devine's death.

Matthew Devlin: Irish Republican Army (IRA) hunger striker whose family took him off his strike on September 4, 1981, after he fell unconscious after fasting since July 15, 1981, in Maze Prison.

Sohrab Dezfuli: one of four Iranian members of the Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution arrested on July 23, 1984, while carrying two antitank grenade launchers, six 40-mm grenade launchers, and two .45 caliber machine guns in Barcelona and Madrid. They were charged with plotting to hijack a Saudi airliner. Authorities believed their Barcelona safe house was used in the coordination and perpetration of terrorist acts in Spain and elsewhere in Europe, including attacks against a Saudi plane and the U.S. Embassy in 1983. The terrorists planned to shoot down another Saudi plane and to assassinate Masud Rajavi, leader of the Mojahedine-e Khalq, in Paris.

Mohammed Abu Dhess: one of 11 Muslim radicals detained throughout Germany on April 23, 2002. They were members of the Palestinian group Al Tawhid and were planning attacks in Germany, as directed by Abu Musab Zarqawi, an al Qaeda operational leader. They were plotting to shoot people in a German city square and set off a hand grenade near a Jewish or Israeli target. Mohammed Abu Dhess heads the cell.

Abderrahmane Dhina: member of the council of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) executive body. He escaped a November 9, 1994, French police raid on an FIS safe house and took refuge in Switzerland, where he stayed with Said Lekhal, a member of the FIS committee of elected members.

Mohammed Mehdi Diab: On April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Ramzi Diab: alias of Salah Salmon Fiaz Kweiks.

Kamara Birahima Diadie: Mauritanian ordered by Mohamed Achraf to acquire explosives from an arms trafficker in Almeria and to contact a Palestinian who would prepare the detonator in a plan to bomb the National Court building in Madrid in 2004.

Calogero Diana: Red Brigades member serving a life term for killing a police chief in 1976 who on September 22, 1986, escaped from the Novara prison hospital following a hunger strike that began on August 23, 1986.

Diane: on May 29, 1989, Brazilian federal police arrested her in Rio de Janeiro along with Patrick Haemers, alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium, and Haemers's wife, Lizzie Shack, fellow Belgians, on January 14, 1989. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C-130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Alphone Dianou: leader of the 30 Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front separatists who on April 22, 1988, conducted a gun and machete attack on a French paramilitary gendarme police station on Ouvea island in New Caledonia, killing 3 and injuring 5 gendarmes before taking 15 policemen hostage. He had trained for the Roman Catholic priesthood in the Pacific Regional Seminary in Suva, Fiji, but dropped out after three years of the seven-year program. He was killed in a French rescue operation on May 7, 1988.

Uriarte Diaz: alias Robles. Presumed member of the Executive Committee of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military who was arrested on July 11, 1989, in Bayonne, France, by air and border police. He was believed responsible for the group's finances. He was held by French police who were probing the kidnapping of Basque industrialist Emiliano Revilla after two ransom payments were intercepted by the authorities in France. A French couple who sheltered him were also being questioned.

Christian Didier: on May 19, 1987, carrying false papers and a loaded pistol, he claimed he was to perform a urological examination on former Lyons Gestapo chief Klaus Barbie while attempting to enter Lyons's St. Joseph's Prison. Police thwarted the attempted assassination when the pistol was discovered as Didier passed through an electronic door check.

Elvira Dieguez: female member of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who on December 5, 1992, was arrested in a shootout with Spanish police in a supermarket parking lot. She and other GRAPO members raided an armored van servicing the supermarket, taking 80 million pesetas. She was carrying false documents when captured.

Mohammed Dilal: from Halifax, United Kingdom, age 26, arrested in mid-January 2007 on charges of possession of information of use to terrorists.

Francesca Dimitrio: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder. Dimitrio had been a fugitive since 1982.

Haydar Asad Jamal ad-Din: born in al-Ghubayrah in 1952. One of three Lebanese Shi'ite students who hijacked Alitalia 713, a DC8 flying from Tehran to Rome with a refueling stop in Beirut, Lebanon, on September 7, 1979.

Mahri Muhyi-al-Din: variant Mehri Medieddin. On February 27, 1992, Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere of France issued an international arrest warrant for the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged the Lebanese with murder and attempted murder. Police in Dresden, Germany, arrested him on November 13, 1992. Greece said on November 19 that it would request extradition; France planned a similar request. Dresden prosecution authorities said that he might have been staying in the capital of Saxony since the end of October 1988, when the area was still East Germany.

Rizwan Ditta: arrested by British police in mid-January 2007 on charges of possession of information of use to terrorists, age 29.

Abdelahi Djaouat: member of a Spanish al Qaeda cell broken up by arrests on May 14, 2004. The group, which reported to Abderrazak Mahjdoub and Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, provided financing to the rest of the European network.

Abu Doha: aliases The Doctor, Amar Makhulif. Algerian, age 37, living in London who on July 15, 2001, was arrested and charged by the U.S. Attorney's Office in New York with being the mastermind of the Los Angeles International Airport millennium bomb plot of 2000. He moved to London in 1999 after working as a senior official at an Afghan terrorist camp. He was charged with organizing attacks on the United States and was detained in the United Kingdom and fought extradition to the United States, where faced life in prison.

On August 28, 2001, a Manhattan federal grand jury indicted him on eight counts, including conspiracy to commit terrorist acts and provide material support to terrorists, stemming from charges of serving as the link between Osama bin Laden and Ahmed Ressam, who had been arrested on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives across the Canada-U.S. border. He was charged with helping trainees from one camp in their attempt to bomb “an airport or other large facility” in the United States. Doherty spoke to Ressaam at the Khalden terrorist training camp in Afghanistan about a bombing in the United States. He offered Ressaam “money or means of travel to Algeria” after completion of such a bombing. The agreement was sealed in a November 8, 1999, phone conversation, according to the indictment. He also trained and supported young terrorists by raising money and running a camp in Afghanistan “dedicated exclusively to training Algerian nationals in jihad operations.” He was one of three Europe-based organizers for the Egyptian Anathema and Exile and the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat. On February 4, 2002, he was implicated by Yacine Akhnouche in a plot to bomb the Strasbourg cathedral. On May 10, 2002, U.K. judge Timothy Workman ruled that he could be extradited to the United States, which had agreed not to seek the death penalty. On June 29, 2008, British officials said they would be releasing him on bail per a court order.

Hugh Doherty: one of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunmen who shot to death Ross McWhirter, coeditor of the Guinness Book of World Records, in London on November 27, 1975. On February 10, 1977, Doherty was convicted of killing McWhirter, Prof. Gordon Hamilton-Fairley, police bomb disposal expert Capt. Roger Goad, and three others. He was also sentenced for the murders of two policemen in a hostage siege on London’s Balcombe Street and for several bomb and gun attacks in the United Kingdom. The judge recommended that he not be considered for parole for at least 30 years. On April 9, 1999, Doherty was freed as part of the Northern Ireland peace agreement.

Joseph Patrick Thomas Doherty: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member convicted of murdering Capt. Herbert Richard Westmacott in a shootout with a British convoy on May 2, 1980, in Belfast, Northern Ireland. Doherty escaped from the maximum security Crumlin Road prison on June 10, 1981, as he awaited the verdict in his murder trial. He was convicted in absentia two days later and sentenced to life in prison. On June 18, 1983, Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and FBI agents arrested him at an Irish pub in lower Manhattan, New York City, for unlawful entry into the United States and a false passport. On December 13, 1984, U.S. District Court Judge John E. Sprizzo ruled that he could not be extradited to Northern Ireland because his crime was political. In September 1986, Doherty requested to be sent to Ireland, where he faced a 10-year sentence for escaping from prison. An immigration judge agreed. On June 9, 1988, attorney general Edwin Meese ruled that he should be deported to the United Kingdom, not Ireland. On June 29, 1990, a three-judge panel of the Second U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York granted him the right to apply for asylum as a political prisoner. It was his 8th win in U.S. courts regarding his case. However, on July 19, 1990, the Justice Department requested that the full court hear the case. New York Mayor David N. Dinkins advocated giving him asylum and called him a “political prisoner.” The New York City Council had voted in June 1990 to name a Joe Doherty Corner outside New York Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan, where he was held. In mid-August 1991, Doherty was transferred to a maximum-security penitentiary in Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. On August 27, 1991, two of the three judges on the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York refused to order his release, saying that the lengthy detention did not violate his constitutional rights as a foreigner. The U.S. Supreme Court was scheduled to hear in October 1991 a government appeal of the decision giving Doherty the right to a hearing on asylum. On January 15, 1992, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that he was not entitled to a new hearing on his bid to avoid deportation, reversing the decision of a federal appeals court. He was deported on February 19, 1992, at which time he flew to Belfast and was jailed. On August 3, 1992, the United Kingdom's top official in Northern Ireland denied Doherty credit for the almost nine years he had served in the U.S. prison system while fighting extradition.

Kiernan Doherty: On May 29, 1981, the national H-Block Committee (named after the Maze Prison facilities for Provisional Irish Republican Army [IRA] terrorists) reported that the IRA hunger striker would run in Cavan-Monaghan for the Irish Republic's Parliament in the June 11 general elections. He was elected while serving 22 years in Maze Prison for possession of explosives and firearms in a hijacked car. He died on August 2, 1981, on the 73rd day of his hunger strike.

Pat Doherty: member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army's (IRA) Army Council in December 1998.

Khaled Dayekh Dokh: one of two Black March terrorists who on April 16, 1979, tried to take over El Al 334, a B707 flying from Tel Aviv to Vienna, at Zaventem Airport in Brussels. They conducted a gun battle with police in which a dozen people were injured and then shot seven more Belgians. El Al security men and Belgian police shot one of the terrorists and arrested both. On August 16, 1979, the duo was sentenced to eight years for attempted murder and for carrying illegal weapons and false identity papers.

Karel Dolezal: one of two miners who hijacked a Slovair L410 flying from Prague to Marianske and Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, on April 18, 1972, diverting the plane to Nuremburg, West Germany.

Oldrich Dolezal: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Karel Dolezel: one of two miners convicted of the July 14, 1971, hijacking of the Prague-to-Carlsbad flight to West Germany.

Peter Dollner: one of seven Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) members in Blekingegade, Denmark, sentenced to prison. They may have been responsible for the 1988 post office robbery in Kobmargergade that netted 13 million Danish kroner, but all were acquitted for lack of evidence. He was free after being released after sentencing in 1991.

Alain Domenge: sentenced to 14 years on June 21, 1990, by a court in Pau, France, for two attacks in the French Basque country in 1985 by the right-wing Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Marco Donat-Cattin: leader of the Italian Front Line terrorist group and son of former Christian Democratic government minister Carlos Donat-Cattin. He was arrested on December 18, 1980, by Paris police on the Champs Elysees. Italian police had issued international arrest warrants against him for the murder of Milan's assistant state attorney, Emilio Alessandrini, in January 1979.

Francescu Donati: variant Francesco, Red Brigades member arrested on May 17, 1983, after taking hostages during a bungled robbery attempt at a Rome post office. On May 25, 1986, he was sentenced to life in prison for murdering a woman guard at Rome's Rebibbia Prison in January 1983. A prison doctor was seriously injured in the attack.

Ivan Dontchev: on February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to the Bulgarian for an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome.

Jose Dorronsoro: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for shooting to death Meliton Manzanás, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968. The death sentence was commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian, who was kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Dorronsoro was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzanás's widow. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term.

Mohamed Doumi: arrested on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism activities.

Mohammed Sidki Siad Dous: variant Mohammed Stoki Dosh. One of two Libyans who fired pistols and submachine guns at passengers in the international arrival area of Rome's Fiumicino Airport on February 24, 1981, wounding five passengers. Police returned fire, wounding one terrorist and capturing both. Dous was hiding in an airport restroom. On November 22, 1983, Italy's Assizes Court gave him a 15-year sentence. On October 7, 1986, Italy quietly freed the duo. A Red Cross plane flew the Libyans to Tripoli and returned with four Italians who had been held in Libya for the preceding six years.

Maire Drumm: assassinated on October 28, 1976, by the Ulster Freedom Fighters in Mater Hospital in Belfast. Drumm had resigned a few weeks earlier as vice president of Sinn Féin. More than 20,000 people marched at her funeral.

Pauline Drumm: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested in France in July 1989, sentenced to two years each for forging documents, and extradited to Germany in July 1992. On November 16, 1992, the Cell Higher Regional Court charged them with the attempted murder of four U.K. soldiers and the June 1989 bombing of the Quebec Barracks of the British Army of the Rhine in Osnabrueck that injured a guard. The German federal prosecutor said they had five bombs containing 330 pounds of Semtex explosive when they cut through a fence at the barracks.

Dubovtsev: Soviet male born in 1959 who on March 4, 1991, hijacked an AN-24 en route from Kotlas to Leningrad and demanded to fly to Stockholm. The plane landed at Leningrad's Pulkovo Airport. Dubovtsev let the hostages go, but when police attempted to arrest him, he set off a homemade bomb and died on the way to the hospital. He was a resident of Kotlas in the Arkhangelsk region. The KGB reported that until 1987, he had been registered as a multiple-drug addict and had shunned treatment after that.

Christian Dubray: arrested on December 3, 1986, for involvement in several holdups in the Lyons, France, area in which a police sergeant was killed. He was the cousin of Gilbert Vecchi, a roofer for a public works company arrested by Fresnes, France, police on charges of "complicity in assassination and attempted assassination" and "destruction of personal and real property belonging to others through the effect of an explosive substance which caused the death."

Christine Duemlein: alias Katharina Jensen. Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 14, 1990, in East Germany. She was married to fellow arrested RAF member Werner Lotze, with whom she had an eight-year-old child. They lived in Senftenberg, Cottbus, area. She was later released when West German authorities discovered that the international arrest warrant issued in 1983 had been rescinded in 1988 because she had been charged with RAF membership but not with a specific crime.

Peter S. Duffy: British member of the Wild Geese of the Congo wars who on November 15, 1981, was participating in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government when he and 44 other mercenaries took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India.

Dr. Bridget Rose Dugdale: joined four other armed Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members to steal 19 paintings valued at $19.2 million from the home of Sir Alfred Beit on April 26, 1974, in Ireland. A week later, the group demanded the transfer of four convicted IRA members: Dolours and Marion Price, Hugh Tenny, and Gerald Kelly, from the United Kingdom to Ulster jails. The group's letter demanded $1.2 million in cash by May 14, threatening the destruction of the paintings. The paintings were recovered unharmed on May 3. Dugdale was sentenced to nine years after her arrest. On October 3, 1975, two IRA terrorists kidnapped a Dutch businessman and demanded her release. One of the kidnappers was Eddie Gallagher, father of the baby born in jail to Dr. Dugdale.

Andrew Duggan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Harry Duggan: one of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunmen who shot to death Ross McWhirter, coeditor of the Guinness Book of World Records, in London on November 27, 1975. On February 10, 1977, he was convicted of killing McWhirter, Prof. Gordon Hamilton-Fairley, police bomb disposal expert Capt. Roger Goad, and three others. He was also sentenced for the murders of two policemen in a hostage siege on London's Balcombe Street and for several bomb and gun attacks in the United Kingdom. The judge recommended that he not be considered for parole for at least 30 years. On April 9, 1999, Duggan was freed as part of the Northern Ireland peace agreement.

Lionel Dumont: Frenchman who converted to Islam in 1991 and who escaped during a March 29, 1996, raid by police in Roubaix, France, on a hideout of Algerians and Moroccan terrorists who had committed a series of bank, armored car, service station, and convenience store robberies during which bystanders were shot down. More than 1,000 shots were fired in the gun battle, which ended with four Algerians burning alive. The gang members were associated with a mosque in Lille known for preaching radical theology to disaffected North African immigrants.

Police believe that he was planning, with fellow Bosnian war veteran Andrew Rowe, a British convert of Jamaican descent, a major attack in Europe. He had trained with the Islamic rebels in Afghanistan, fought alongside Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnia war, and later joined the gang in Roubaix.

During his terrorism trial in September 2005 in London, he said he was in Frankfurt waiting for delivery instructions for an arms transfer to Muslim Chechen fighters. He was convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison. On December 16, 2005, the London jury convicted him for his role in the armed robberies in France in 1996 and sentenced him to 30 years in prison.

Gerard Dupre: France's most-wanted criminal, who escaped prison on February 27, 1981, when a hijacked helicopter landed in the middle of the soccer field of the high-security Fleury Mergois prison. He was serving a sentence for armed robbery. Police captured him on March 6, 1981, after he was wounded in a gun battle with police on a crowded street.

Riccardo Dura: on September 26, 1984, Venice magistrate Carlo Mastelloni issued an arrest warrant for Yasir Arafat on arms trafficking charges, citing a 1979 arms shipment from Palestinians in West Beirut to Italian Red Brigades members, including Dura.

Tolga Durbin: German citizen, age 29, residing in Ulm and arrested in June 2007 in Pakistan. He tried to attend an Islamist militant camp and recruit other Germans for the training. He was deported to Germany in August and was questioned and released. He had introduced to radical Islamic circles Fritz Gelowicz, leader of a German group who was arrested on September 4, 2007, while planning terrorist attacks against U.S. interests. Durbin worked at a solar energy company run by Gelowicz's father.

Abdullah Rashid ad-Dusari: one of two members of an Iranian fundamentalist group traveling under forged Syrian passports arrested at Rome's international airport on May 18, 1984, when a search uncovered two bags containing 2.8 kilograms of plastic explosives along with detonators, boosters, charges, a compass, and an Iraqi passport. The duo had arrived on a Syrian Arab Airlines flight from Damascus and were awaiting an Iberian Airlines flight to Madrid. On June 4, 1984, the duo was sentenced to 10 years for possession of explosives. They would be deported after serving their sentences.

Gisela Dutzi: Frankfurt court sentenced her to eight and one-half years on July 18, 1985, for her participation in Red Army Faction activities, including weapon possession and forgery.

E

---

Manuel Echave Urrestrilla: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested by French police on March 10, 1987, in Zumaya, Guipuzcoa, and handed over to Spanish police.

Juan Carlos Echevarria Garmendia: arrested by Paris police on July 3, 1988, on a bus after he had collected 100 million pesetas' worth of French currency in two bags, which the Revilla family had paid as a second ransom in the February 1988 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) kidnapping of industrialist Emiliano Revilla. The Guipuzcoa man belonged to a "legal commando" (made up of ETA members without police records) that had been broken up in 1983.

Jesus Echeverri Elorduy: suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) originally from Amorebieta in Vizcaya and arrested on June 8, 1988, in St. Jean de Luz in France. Judge Legrand ordered him held because the defendant did not have papers authorizing him to live in France. Echeverri was accused by Spain of having helped unload packets of plastic explosives stolen from the Soto de la Marina store in Santander.

Eugenio Echeveste: suspected leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) deported by France to the Dominican Republic on August 9, 1984.

Christa Eckes: one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. She was among the most-wanted terrorists in West Germany. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. She was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977. She was sentenced to eight years by the higher regional court in Stuttgart-Stammheim on March 20, 1986, and sent to Cologne-Ossendorf prison. On February 1, 1989, she was one of 38 RAF members who began a prison hunger strike.

Mikhael Economopoulos: name on a forged Greek passport carried by a Lebanese arrested by Austrian police on January 26, 1992. He was believed to be the mastermind of a plot by three terrorists to attack Kuwaiti facilities in Vienna in early February 1992. Police raided a Vienna apartment and found 5.5 pounds of Semtex, a U.K.-made Sterling 9-mm Parabellum submachine gun, a 7.62-mm Tokarev Soviet-made pistol, and 50 rounds of ammunition for the Sterling and five for the Tokarev. The Lebanese was carrying 20 other ID cards and was believed to belong to the pro-Iraqi Hawari group.

Mesut Edipsoy: Iranian-born Turkish citizen for whom French judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant on September 8, 1992, for aiding and abetting murders and associating with an illegal paramilitary group in the August 6, 1991, assassination of former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He allegedly passed two forged Turkish passports to Ali Rad Vakili and Mohamad Azadi, the presumed killers.

Bowes Egan: advisor to Bernadette Devlin, a member of Parliament, arrested on July 28, 1970, and charged with conspiring with James Anthony Roach, an Ulster Catholic arrested by British police and accused of violating the Firearms Act for throwing two canisters of tear gas onto the floor of the House of Commons from the visitors' gallery on July 23, 1970.

Peter Egloff: Swiss, age 24, who went on trial on September 19, 1977, in Winterthur, Switzerland, on charges of stealing weapons from army depots and passing them to urban terrorists in West Germany, France, Italy, and Spain. He was also accused of carrying out bomb attacks on diplomatic and business premises in Zurich between 1971 and 1974.

Ibrahim Husayn Eidarous: variant Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidarous. Senior Egyptian Islamic Jihad member, then 42, arrested with Adel Meguid Abd-al-Bary by London police on extradition warrants on July 11, 1999, on a request from the United States. They appeared in court on July 12, 1999, when Arvinder Sambi of the Crown Prosecution Service said that their fingerprints appeared on originals of faxes that claimed credit for the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. One fax was received at a shop in London; another was sent after the bombings from a post office, Miss Sambi said in the Bow Street Magistrates' Court. The originals were found at the London offices of the Advice and Reform Council, believed to be an al Qaeda front. On May 2, 2000, the Bow Street Magistrates' Court had ordered his extradition to the United States. Federal prosecutors in New York indicted him. The U.K. Law Lords approved extradition on December 17, 2001.

Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidarous: variant of Ibrahim Husayn Eidarous.

Luciano Eizaguirre Mariscal: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by France to Togo on September 23–26, 1984. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike and was treated in a Togo hospital upon arrival.

Zeki Ejder: Turkish migrant worker who entered France illegally in 1974. He hijacked a Turkish Airlines DC10 flying from Paris to Istanbul on April 30, 1976.

Sepala Ekanayaka: on June 30, 1982, wearing dynamite sticks around his neck, he hijacked Alitalia Flight 1790 out of Rome bound for Tokyo.

Azad Ekinci: suspected accomplice of two suicide truck bombers who attacked two Turkish synagogues on November 15, 2003, killing 25 and injuring 303. He was later tentatively identified as one of the two al Qaeda suicide bombers who on November 20, 2003, set off truck bombs at both the British Consulate and the headquarters of HSBC, a British bank, killing at least 30 people and wounding 450.

Levon Ekmekjian: variant of Levon Ekmekjian.

Levan Ekmekjian: variant Levon Ekmekjian. Carried a French passport and was one of three members of the Martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia who fired submachine guns and set off a bomb in a crowded international flight terminal passenger lounge at Ankara's Esemboga Airport on August 7, 1982. He was wounded by police in a gun battle. He was executed in January 1983.

Hamid Elasmr: arrested on January 31, 2007, as part of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading. He was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. His trial was scheduled to begin on January 29, 2008. He pleaded guilty.

Abdallah Elazragh: Libyan intelligence officer believed linked to the September 19, 1989, bombing of the Union Des Transport Aeriens aircraft over Chad. Observers expected French investigating judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere to issue an arrest warrant following his July 5–18, 1996, visit to Libya. Fellow Libyan intelligence officer Abdesslam Hamouda was believed to have purchased the bomb timer in Germany. On June 12, 1998, France announced that it would try him, along with five other Libyans, in absentia. On March 10, 1999, a French antiterrorism court imposed life in prison on the six. The prosecutor said the evidence showed that the Libyan officials had organized the attack.

Paulo Elcoro Ayastuy: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Juan Maria Elizalde Urrieta: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members believed by police to be responsible for the September 7, 1987, assassination of Civil Guard 2nd Lt. Cristobal Martin Luengo in Bilbao, Spain.

Zabaleta Elosequi: alias Baldo; variant Waldo. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) activist sentenced on February 28, 2000, to 24 years for supplying weapons to ETA. On April 11, 1989, over 400 French policemen were searching for him after the Civil Guard deactivated a parcel bomb sent to Jose Barrionuevo, minister of transport, tourism, and communications.

Patrick Emers: variant of Patrick Haemers.

Kristine Endrigkeit: arrested on January 11, 1988, by police in Lubeck, West Germany, for planting the bomb that went off on April 4, 1986, in La Belle Discotheque in the Berlin-Schoeneberg District of West Berlin, killing 4 people and wounding 231, including 62 Americans. On December 21, 1988, the State Attorney's Office at the Berlin Regional Court dropped its investigation of her.

Sahim Engisek: senior member of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) arrested in Paris on August 25, 1994, following a demonstration in support of the outlawed party. He was deported to Germany on August 31, 1994, because his papers were not in order.

Gudrun Ensslin: one of the prominent members of the Baader-Meinhof group, also known as the Red Army Faction (RAF) in West Germany. She was arrested in a Hamburg shopping center on June 7, 1972. Her release was demanded by the Socialist Patients' Collective, who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975. She was one of three RAF members sentenced to life in prison on April 28, 1977, by a five-man tribunal in Stuttgart. The counts included the murders of four U.S. soldiers in bombings of U.S. installations in Frankfurt and Heidelberg in May 1972. They were also found guilty of 34 attempted murders and were given 15-year sentences for bombing two police stations, a publishing house, and a judge's car and for the attempted murder of policemen during a shootout when they were arrested. Their attorney, Otto Schilly, argued that their actions had been legitimate protests against the Vietnam War and that they should be treated as prisoners of war. Several times, Ensslin's release was a demand of kidnappers and hijackers. Ensslin committed suicide in Stammheim prison in Stuttgart on October 18, 1977, hours after the Lufthansa rescue in Somalia by the West German GSG9 team. Ensslin was found hanging from a wire from a window bar in her cell.

Jose Felix Erezuma: deputy head of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Barcelona commando, who died in an exchange of fire with police who raided a house in Llica D'Amunt, near Barcelona, Spain, on May 30, 1991. He was believed involved in the May 29, 1991, bombing of a Civil Guard barracks in Vic that killed 9 people and injured 50 others.

Josefa Ernaga: member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) sentenced on October 23, 1989, to 1,588 years in prison for the car bomb attack on June 19, 1987, that killed 21 people and injured 45 in a Barcelona department store.

Barbara Ernst: one of six suspected Red Army Faction members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. She was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977.

Lt. Jose Erostrabe: sentenced to 1,000 years in Spain on July 30, 2001, in connection with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) activities.

Andres Errandonea Arrupi: one of four alleged members of Irritxi, a subgroup of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military, arrested on May 17, 1986, in Inchaurren, Spain, on suspicion of machine-gun attacks against French trucks.

Jacqueline Esbar: variant of Jacqueline Esber.

Jacqueline Esber (variant Esbar, Asbir): girlfriend in 1984 of George Ibrahim ‘Abdallah, believed to be the leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF). In November 1983, Yugoslav police found a map pinpointing the March 26, 1984, attack in Strasbourg against U.S. consul general Robert Onan Homme, who was slightly injured by a lone gunman. On October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the explosives smuggling charges against the at-large LARF member for insufficient evidence. She had been accused of participating in the kidnapping of Jean Pirot and the killing of Israeli diplomat Yacov Barsimantov in Paris. On September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the ‘Abdallah brothers and other LARF members, including Esber, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, an attack that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Mohsen Sharif Esfahani: one of 13 Iranians believed involved in the murder in Geneva, Switzerland, on April 24, 1990, of Kazem Rajavi, brother of Massud Rajavi, leader of the People’s Mujahedin. He was arrested in Paris in November 1992 at the request of the Swiss government. France approved extradition; Switzerland protested the expulsion.

Reza Eskfi: one of four people arrested by London police on December 14, 1988, during a demonstration in front of the offices of Iran Air. They attacked three computers and were to face charges of criminal damage and violent disorder on January 5, 1989.

Jacques Esnal: member of Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) roving commando who on June 18, 1993, was sentenced by a Paris court to 10 years in prison.

Gianluigi Esposito: right-wing terrorist accused of murder who on November 23, 1986, was lifted to freedom in a hijacked helicopter from the Rebibbia jail in Rome.

Raffaella Esposito: Italian woman arrested on September 25, 1987, in Montelimar, France. Italy requested extradition for involvement in armed robberies to finance Prima Linea. Naples legal sources said that she had been sentenced to 59 months for membership in the group. Her request for recognition as a “dissociated” defendant, a status given to alleged terrorists who refuse to act as informers but who nonetheless publicly recognize that “armed struggle was a mistake” and can thereby qualify for lighter sentences, was denied.

Zakariya Essabar: alias Ammar Moula. Moroccan, age 24 as of September 2001, who lived on Marien Street in Hamburg, Germany, and was an associate of the cell that assisted the 9/11 hijackers. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked his financial assets.

Esteban Estaban: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months.

Ricardo D’Este: believed to be a founder of the Italian Red Brigades, he escaped from a Rome prison in June 1985 but was arrested by Barcelona police on April 26, 1987.

Juan Jose Etchave Orogengoa: former Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader who was critically injured on July 3, 1978, when hit in the stomach by two machine-gun bullets in Saint-Jean-de-Luz. His wife Rosario died at the scene.

Esteban Etchevarria Larralde: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member for whom Beniform, Belgium, police were searching in July 1988.

Felix Etchevarria Gutierrez: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member for whom Beniform, Belgium, police were searching in July 1988.

Joseph Etcheveste: deputy leader of the French Basque separatist group Iparretarrak arrested on February 20, 1988, by French gendarmes from the Groupement de l’Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale along with four associates after a shootout in front of the terrorists’ Boucau apartment. He was wounded in the back.

Musbah Abdulghasem Eter: variant of Musbah Abulgasem Eter.

Musbah Abulgasem Eter: variant Abdulghasem. Alleged bomb maker for the LaBelle Disco attack of April 5, 1986, in West Berlin. On October 10, 1997, the Libyan was extradited from Italy to Germany. He showed up at the German Embassy in Malta in 1995, offering to blame everything on Libya. He claimed he had seen cables between the Libyan People’s Bureau and Said Rashid, the head of Libyan intelligence, who had also been tied to the 1988 bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie. Eter claimed Rashid ordered the bombing and said Yasser Chreidi was the mastermind. Eter later flew to Libya and then on to Berlin to await trial, but ran off. He was arrested in Rome at a hotel across from the Libyan Embassy, where he was found with a suitcase full of cash.

On November 18, 1997, the trial began of Eter, Chreidi, Ali Chanaa, and Verena Chanaa and her sister, Andrea Hausler, on charges of murder, attempted murder, and being an accessory to a crime. Eter and Hausler were charged as accessories. All faced life sentences. Eter passed the Libyan Embassy’s money to Chreidi and Ali Chanaa.

On December 2, 1997, prosecution star witness Eter recanted his confession implicating Libya and the other defendants. He said Libya had not approved the bombing and blamed another group of two Italians and Mohamed Aschur, a Libyan opposition leader later murdered in East Berlin. On November 13, 2001, he was convicted of attempted murder and sentenced to 12 years.

Eliana Etxeberria: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested along with her husband, Juan Manuel Galarraga, by French authorities in St. Pee-Sur-Nivelle on March 11, 1988.

Eugenio Etxebeste: alias Antxon. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader deported to Algiers from France in the 1980s. On April 18, 1989, he was among the 6 of the 50 ETA members living in Algeria who were expelled. On January 16, 1996, Spanish justice and interior minister Juan Alberto Belloch announced he would request his extradition from the Dominican Republic.

Rafael Etxebeste Garmendia: one of two members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military who died on August 15, 1987, when a bomb they were handling exploded inside their car in San Sebastian, Guipuzcoa.

Sabino Euba Cenarruzabeitia: alias Pelo Pintxo. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military member arrested on March 29, 1992, by Paris police as he was about to board a plane to Mexico.

Astrid Eyzaguirre: dual German American citizen, age 23, and fiancée of Osman Petmezci, a Turkish al Qaeda sympathizer. The couple was arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, as they were planning to bomb the U.S. Army's European headquarters and other targets in Heidelberg on September 11. Police found 290 pounds of chemicals, 5 pipe bombs, gunpowder, and marijuana plants in their apartment. Police also found a picture of bin Laden, Islamic literature, and a book about bomb making.

She was an assistant manager at the post exchange store (PX) at U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg. She had worked at the base for several years.

As the trial opened on April 11, 2003, Petmezci denied plotting an attack and said the chemicals were intended for making firecrackers. Prosecutors withdrew the terrorism counts, saying there was not "sufficient specificity" to prove the plot against the base. She was acquitted of the explosives charge but convicted of a drug offense and sentenced to six months.

Tahar Ezirouali: one of eight Islamic militants charged on January 17, 2005, by Spanish investigating judge Baltasar Garzon with providing logistical support to Ramzi Binalshibh, a suspected coordinator of the 9/11 attacks. They provided him with false identity papers and other documents. Ezirouali remained at large.

F

---

Nourredine el F: Moroccan arrested on June 22, 2005, by Dutch security services for the November 2, 2004, murder of filmmaker Theo van Gogh. He was believed tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which assassin Mohammed Bouyeri belonged.

Rudolf F: German, age 56, arrested on October 15, 1999, by Frankfurt police as an accomplice of Hans-Joachim Klein.

Barbara Fabrizi: on May 25, 1986, the Red Brigades member was sentenced to life in prison for murdering a woman guard at Rome's Rebibbia Prison in January 1983. A prison doctor was seriously injured in the attack.

Massimiliano Facchini: charged in 1985 for the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to life in the train case but acquitted him on subversion charges for lack of evidence. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court overturned the life sentence and cleared him of any involvement in carrying out the bombing.

Rashid Facha: British-born Pakistani in his twenties initially identified as one of the four 7/7 London subway bombers in 2005.

Rafiq Fu'ad al-Fahl: former member of the defunct Lebanese Forces arrested by Sweden on December 4, 1995, for the January 26, 1994, bombing of the Sayyidat al-Najat Church in Beirut. Lebanon requested extradition.

Neemtalla Mohammed Fahs: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court acquitted five defendants, including Fahs, of charges that they were planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy. However, Fahs was convicted of forming an armed gang and sentenced to two years in prison. On October 1, 1986, an appeals court in Rome overturned the lower court decision and handed the case to the public ministry for further action, but only Fahs was still in custody.

Shaykh Abdullah Ibrahim el-Faisal: on February 18, 2002, during a dawn raid in East London, el-Faisal, age 38, was arrested by Scotland Yard's antiterrorist branch for inciting racial hatred. El-Faisal publicly exhorted followers to murder Jews, Americans, Hindus, and other nonbelievers. The Jamaican Muslim cleric was charged under the Public Order Act and the Offences against the Person Act. Members of Parliament demanded his arrest after videos with his message went on sale in London Islamic bookstores. His audiocassettes instructed men to train for battle and called on boys to learn how to use Kalashnikovs. He was charged with incitement to murder two weeks after the Times of London had reported his statement. On March 7, 2003, Judge Peter Beaumont in London sentenced him to nine years in prison and recommended extradition to Jamaica.

Sarhane Ben Abdelmajid Fakheth: alias The Tunisian. Leader and coordinator, age 35, of the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and injured 2,000. A March 31 international arrest warrant said the bombs were prepared at his house. He died on April 3 when Madrid police cornered him and six others in their safe house.

By April 11, investigators believed that the cell leader, Fakheth, had sought out al Qaeda for assistance but that the group did not directly participate. Fakheth had traveled to Turkey in 2002 or 2003 to outline his plan to senior al Qaeda European operative Amer Azizi. Azizi said al Qaeda could not offer aid but supported the plan and offered al Qaeda's name in claiming credit. Azizi also suggested contacting Jamal Zougma, a follower of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, imprisoned since November 2001 on suspicion of being al Qaeda's Spanish cell leader.

Mohammed Fakihi: Saudi diplomat who served as director of Islamic Affairs at the Saudi Embassy in Berlin and who was implicated during the trial of Ihsan Garnaoui on June 1, 2004, as being a member of an al Qaeda cell. On March 22, 2003, Germany ordered Fakihi to leave the country.

Ali Falahiyan: on March 15, 1996, Germany issued an arrest warrant for Iran's intelligence minister on suspicion of involvement in the murder of four members of the Iranian Democratic Party of Kurdistan in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant on September 17, 1992. On June 8, 2001, he was one of 10 candidates for Iranian president. He was known as Master Key, an individual who was behind the killings of numerous dissidents in Iran and overseas.

Maurizio Falcone: driver with the Rome Interior Ministry arrested on June 19, 1987, in a Red Brigades (RB) hideout in a suburban Rome garage that contained arms, munitions, documents, and two motorbikes, one of which was believed to be the getaway vehicle in the March 20, 1987, assassination of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement, by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group.

Thomas Falvey: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gun-running ring. Undercover agents were offered $16,000 in cash for 42 automatic rifles and handguns. In late July 1981, Falvey and two others appeared in court to face grand jury indictments charging them with receiving and possessing firearms not registered to them, possessing firearms on which the serial numbers had been obliterated, and planning to export the arms to the IRA in Ireland.

Odile Falxa: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak sentenced to two years, one suspended, on March 28, 1989, for attempting to destroy property using explosives in the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy in France. The court dropped charges of conspiracy and smuggling explosives.

Daher Faour: on February 21, 1991, a Berlin court issued an arrest warrant for the Lebanese who was serving time in a Berlin prison on a sex offense. He allegedly had smuggled the bomb into the La Belle Disco in West Berlin on April 5, 1986.

Saad Faqih: prominent London-based Saudi dissident reportedly involved in a Libyan-financed plot in 2003 to assassinate Saudi government leader Crown Prince Abdullah. On November 27, 2003, Egyptian authorities arrested Col. Mohammed Ismail, a Libyan believed to have orchestrated the plot, hours after he left Saudi Arabia as the plan collapsed. Saudi officials said he worked with surgeon Faqih to recruit radicals. Faqih received $1.3 million. British officials as of 2009 have not arrested him and permit him to remain in London. In December 2004, the United Nations added him to a list of financiers and supporters of terrorism, per a request by the United States, the United Kingdom, and Saudi Arabia. The U.S. Treasury Department said he paid for a satellite phone that Osama bin Laden used in the U.S. Embassy bombings in Tanzania and Kenya in 1998. On July 15, 2005, the Department of the Treasury added to its list of terror supporters the Movement for Islamic Reform in Arabia, a London-based group headed by Faqih.

Adriana Faranda: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged her with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, she and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned.

Abuaisha Ali Fargani: knife-wielding Libyan who hijacked an Iberian airliner landing at Rome's Fiumicino Airport on May 2, 1977.

Farhat Mahmud Farhat: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Mairead Farrell: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas killed by British commandos on March 6, 1988, while the terrorists were planting a 1,100-pound plastic explosive bomb in an abandoned white Ford Fiesta in Marbella, near the governor's residence in Gibraltar.

Mohamed Farwati: suspected Syrian sleeper member of the Abu Nidal group for 13 years who wanted to get out of the group but was stabbed to death on November 10, 1992, in his pizzeria in Vienna, Austria.

'Umar Sadat al-Salam 'Abd al-Fatah: Jordanian arrested on November 28, 1985, in Verona, Italy, on arms smuggling charges. His apartment contained 20 kilograms of explosives, 2 Polish machine pistols, other arms, and a radio transmitter and receiver. He said that the weapons would have been used against Syrian targets in the Netherlands. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) denied that he was a member. Phone taps indicated that he planned to free the four Achille Lauro hijackers held in Italy. On December 11, 1985, he was found guilty of arms smuggling and sentenced to 14 years in prison. On March 7, 1996, Italian newspapers reported he had been released four years early.

'Abd al-Latif Ibrahim Fatayer: one of four Palestine Liberation Front members who on October 7, 1985, hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, with 116 passengers and 331 crew members as hostages. American passenger Leon Klinghoffer was murdered. (See also Mar'uf Ahmad al-As'adi.)

Nouredine al-Fatmi: already serving five years in another terrorism case, al-Fatmi received four more years when on December 1, 2006, a court in Amsterdam convicted four Dutch Muslims of plotting terrorist attacks against political leaders and government buildings.

Edouard de Faucigny-Lucinge: student at the Institute of Political Science in Paris, famed heir, and one of three would-be terrorists arrested on March 9, 1987, after a drunken shootout with police guards at the residence of Jean Tiberi, first deputy mayor of Paris and a government member of Parliament. The students drove off but were captured.

Khalid 'Abd-al-Rahman Hamad al-Fawwaz:

U.K.-based Saudi lieutenant of Osama bin Laden arrested by British authorities on September 23, 1998. The United States requested extradition of the civil engineer who had headed bin Laden's Advice and Reform Committee. He was bin Laden's Kenya representative and had issued orders to one of the cells involved in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy.

On September 27, 1998, London police rearrested Fawwaz, then 36, and arrested six other fundamentalists in Operation Challenge. Police found in his house copies of statements issued by the World Islamic Front for Fighting Jews and Crusaders, bin Laden and Zawahiri's group, and a forged passport. By May 2000, the United Kingdom had agreed to extradite him to the United States, and in late 2001, he had lost an appeal and was awaiting transport to the United States.

Abdelhamid al-Fayek: Yemeni exile, age 56, identified by Swiss authorities on August 21, 2004, as connected with the al Qaeda bombings in Riyadh in May 2003.

Mouloud Feddag: one of six North African men arrested on January 5, 2003, by U.K. antiterrorist police after traces of ricin were discovered in a London apartment. There is no antidote for the poison. They were held without charge under the United Kingdom's antiterrorist laws. Police said they were following a tip from French intelligence. A seventh man was grabbed on January 7.

On January 11, police charged Mouloud Feddag, age 18; Sidali Feddag; Samir Feddag, age 26; and Mustapha Taleb, age 33, with possession of articles of value to a terrorist and being concerned in the development or production of chemical weapons. Nasreddine Fekhadji was charged with forgery and counterfeiting. A sixth man was arrested for possession of drugs and immigration offenses. A seventh man was turned over to immigration officials. On February 26, British authorities charged three men with conspiring to make chemical weapons. By April 2004, nine individuals associated with the ricin threat were charged with conspiracy to murder and other related charges. Their trials were slated for May and September 2004.

Samir Feddag: one of six North African men arrested on January 5, 2003, by U.K. antiterrorist police after traces of ricin were discovered in a London apartment. There is no antidote for the poison. They were held without charge under the United Kingdom's antiterrorist laws. Police said they were following a tip from French intelligence. A seventh man was grabbed on January 7.

On January 11, police charged Mouloud Feddag, age 18; Sidali Feddag; Samir Feddag, age 26; and Mustapha Taleb, age 33, with possession of articles of value to a terrorist and being concerned in the development or production of chemical weapons. Nasreddine Fekhadji was charged with forgery and counterfeiting. A sixth man was arrested for possession of drugs and immigration offenses. A seventh man was turned over to immigration officials. On February 26, British authorities charged three men with conspiring to make chemical weapons. By April 2004, nine individuals associated with the ricin threat were charged with conspiracy to murder and other related charges. Their trials were slated for May and September 2004.

Nasreddine Fekhadji: one of six North African men arrested on January 5, 2003, by U.K. antiterrorist police after traces of ricin were discovered in a London apartment. There is no antidote for the poison. They were held without charge under the United Kingdom's antiterrorist laws. Police said they were following a tip from French intelligence. A seventh man was grabbed on January 7.

On January 11, police charged Mouloud Feddag, age 18; Sidali Feddag; Samir Feddag, age 26; and Mustapha Taleb, age 33, with possession of articles of value to a terrorist and being concerned in the development or production of chemical weapons. Nasreddine Fekhadji was charged with forgery and counterfeiting. A sixth man was arrested for possession of drugs and immigration offenses. A seventh man was turned over to immigration officials. On February 26, British authorities charged three men with conspiring to make chemical weapons. By April 2004, nine individuals associated with the ricin threat were charged with conspiracy to murder and other related charges. Their trials were slated for May and September 2004.

Fabio de Felice: right-wing terrorist leader suspected of ordering the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. He was arrested in 1985.

Raffaele Fenio: Red Brigades member sentenced on December 14, 1982, by a Potenze court to life in prison for killing state prosecutor Nicola Giacumbi on March 16, 1980, in Salerno.

Enrico Fenzi: Genoese literature professor arrested on April 4, 1981, along with Mario Moretti, the Red Brigades mastermind of the kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro.

Daher Feriol: on October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the explosives smuggling charges against the at-large Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction member for insufficient evidence.

Joao Benedito Fernandes: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services, who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement on December 6, 1982, sabotaged a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses. On February 22, 1983, he was sentenced to four years.

Ibon Fernandez Iradi: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) military commander who escaped from custody in 2002. He was arrested on December 4, 2003, by police in Mont-de-Marsan, France, with two other ETA suspects.

Jean Domonique Feron: alias Henry Parot. French citizen affiliated with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on April 13, 1990, by Spanish police following a shootout and car chase in which two Spanish policemen were injured. His car contained 325 kilograms of explosives and had been rigged to explode. Police believed the target was the national police headquarters in Seville, which was scheduled to hold a World's Fair in 1992.

Junade Feroze: Feroze, age 28, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Chiara Ferrante: alias Clara Piacenti. Arrested on April 3, 1987, by Barcelona police at a checkpoint on suspicion of membership in the Red Brigades and Direct Action. She had been arrested by Cuneo police in 1978. She was in possession of an R-14 weapon stolen in Italy, anarchist propaganda, wigs, forged papers, and a scanner tuned to the frequencies used by the Barcelona police.

Robert Ferraro: indicted on April 1, 1980, by a federal grand jury in Raleigh, North Carolina, for conspiring to export weapons illegally to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Pilar Ferreiro: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members captured by police who raided a house in Llica D'Aunt, Spain, on May 30, 1991. She was believed involved in the May 29, 1991, bombing of a Civil Guard barracks in Vic that killed 9 people and injured 50 others.

Cesar Ferri: variant Cesare. Italian neofascist sought by Italy for the May 28, 1974, bombing of a trade union meeting that killed 8 and injured 208. The prosecution said he should receive a life sentence for organizing the massacre and for the 1981 murder of Ermanno Buzzi, a neo-Nazi convicted of the Bresci bombing whom Ferri feared would talk to police. On May 23, 1987, a Brescia court acquitted him of the bombing, saying there was insufficient evidence.

Martin Ferris: member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army's (IRA) Army Council in December 1998.

Al Amin Khalifa Fhimah: variant of Lamen Khalifa Fhimah.

Lamen Khalifa Fhimah: variants Al Amin Khalifa Fhimah, al-Amin Khalifah Fuhaymah; alias Mr. Lamin. Libyan intelligence officer charged on November 14, 1991, by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., with 193 felony counts in the bombing of Pam Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on December 21, 1988, in which 270 people were killed. He and accomplice 'Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi were accused of planting and detonating the bomb and were believed to be in Libya. The U.S. indictment included 189 counts for killing 189 U.S. citizens, 1 count of conspiracy, 1 count of putting a destructive device on a U.S. civil aircraft resulting in death, 1 count of destroying a U.S. civil aircraft with an explosive device, and 1 count of destroying a vehicle in foreign commerce. The United Kingdom issued similar arrest warrants for al-Amin Khalifah Fhimah. On November 27, 1991, the United States and United Kingdom demanded that Libya hand Fhimah over for trial. Mu'ammarr al-Qadhafi refused on November 28, 1991. On December 4, 1991, Libya's new intelligence chief, Col. Yusuf al-Sabri, announced the detention of the indicted duo. The United States and United Kingdom again demanded extradition, which Qadhafi again declined. On December 8, 1991, Libya announced it would try the two men and would deliver the death penalty if they were found guilty. But the Libyan foreign minister said the government did not think they were guilty.

Fhimah was born in 1956 in Suk Giuma, Libya. He was approximately five feet seven inches tall and weighed 190 pounds. He had black hair and was married. His cover for the Jamahiriya Security Organization was station manager for Libyan Arab Airlines at Malta's Luqa Airport. He stored plastic explosive at his airport office and helped make the bomb. He and al-Megrahi allegedly illegally obtained Air Malta luggage tags and used them to route the bomb-rigged suitcase as unaccompanied luggage on an Air Malta flight to Frankfurt. The suitcase was transferred to Pan American Flight 103A and on arrival in London was put on Pan Am 103, which blew up 38 minutes after departing for New York.

On April 5, 1999, Libya turned Fhimah and al-Megrahi over to UN officials for trial. They appeared in court the next day when the names of the 270 victims were read aloud. They were charged in English and Arabic with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, and violations of international aviation security laws. On May 3, 2000, the trial opened, and the defendants pleaded not guilty. On January 10, 2001, the prosecution closed its arguments and dropped the lesser charges of conspiracy and a violation of British aviation law, leaving only the murder counts. On January 31, 2001, the court found Megrahi guilty of murder but acquitted Fhimah, who was flown to a hero's welcome in Libya.

Jacksey Fiaz: initially identified as one of the four bombers in the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005.

Antonio Agustin Figal Arranz: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Ulrike Fildberg: passport alias of Sigrid Sternbeck.

Valerio Fioravanti: charged in 1985 with the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. On May 2, 1985, the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei member was sentenced to 22 years and 8 months for a series of murders, attempted murders, bombings, and assaults between 1977 and 1981. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to life in the train case. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court overturned the life sentence and cleared him of any involvement in carrying out the bombing. The court also reduced his sentence for armed insurrection to 13 years.

Raffaele Fiore: on January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Roberto Fiore: on May 15, 1989, the British government announced that it had no reason to expel the member of the Italian neofascist Third Position (Terza Posizione), who had been sentenced in absentia by an Italian court on charges of participating in an armed gang. He was also suspected of involvement in the August 2, 1980, bombing of a train in Bologna in which 85 were killed and 200 injured.

Michele Firk: member of the French Communist Party and graduate of the Institute of Higher Cinematographic Studies. Guatemalan police traced an automobile rented for the Rebel Armed Forces of Guatemala (FAR) on August 22 and went to her apartment, where she shot herself to death to avoid interrogation in the killing of U.S. ambassador John Gordon Mein on August 28, 1968.

Fiti: alias of Jose Maria Arregui Erostarbe.

Fitipaldi: alias of Joseba Aguirre Erostarbe.

Arebi Mohammed Fituri: former Libyan diplomat identified by Rageb Hammouda Daghdugh, a Libyan arrested in Rome on February 5, 1985, carrying a Walther P-38 pistol and $25,000 in checks issued by the Libyan People's Bureau. Daghdugh claimed Fituri and another Libyan had given him the money and gun to assassinate U.S. ambassador Maxwell Rabb and the envoys from Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Fituri was protected by diplomatic immunity and was ordered to leave Italy. In April 1986, Fituri was arrested in Italy for smuggling in a gun. He had returned to Italy as an employee of the Libyan Arab Foreign Investment Company, a Libyan government investment-holding company. On August 11, 1986, he was expected to be released on bail while awaiting his trial for plotting to assassinate the envoys.

Giorgios Flamourides: construction worker who hijacked an Olympic DC6B flying from Crete to Athens on January 2, 1969, and diverted it to Cairo, where he requested political asylum.

Harry Flynn: one of four suspected members of the Irish National Liberation Army arrested in Paris on July 23, 1986, while loading weapons into a car. They were charged with illegal possession and transport of weapons.

Kolosh Foladi: a friend loaned him a Datsun that contained a bomb that exploded in London's Connaught Square on December 13, 1981, killing two Iranian terrorists and injuring a third.

Maurizio Foligni: accused by Rome magistrates of arms trafficking between the Red Brigades, Palestinian terrorists, and Libya. Greece refused to extradite him in the summer of 1988.

Knut Folkerts: Baader-Meinhof Gang member named by the West German Federal Criminal

Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. Folkerts was arrested in the Netherlands in a shootout with police on September 22, 1977. He was believed to be accompanied by Brigitte Mohnhaupt, who escaped. It was believed that the two had been involved in a shooting incident in The Hague earlier in the week, but they had escaped with the aid of two Dutch accomplices. Folkerts was also wanted in the assassination of Bonn's chief prosecutor, Siegfried Buback, and for questioning in the death of banker Juergen Ponto. On September 25, 1977, the German newspaper Bild am Sonntag claimed that Folkerts and other West German terrorists planned to kidnap Prince Claus, husband of Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands. On December 20, 1977, he was sentenced by a Dutch court to 20 years. He claimed to be at war with the Federal Republic of Germany. On January 29, 1985, he gave up his hunger strike in a Hanover, West Germany, prison. On March 13, 1993, he applied for early release.

Marion-Brigitte Folkerts: arrested upon arriving at Paris's Orly Airport from Beirut, Lebanon, on May 26, 1978, on suspicion of having links to the Baader-Meinhof Gang and Japanese Red Army. She was deported to West Germany, to be charged with forging documents and belonging to a terrorist organization. Her brother-in-law, Knut, and husband, Uwe, had been previously arrested for terrorist activity.

Uwe Folkerts: brother of Baader-Meinhof Gang member Knut Folkerts and husband of Marion-Brigitte Folkerts, arrested in Paris on May 26, 1978, on suspicion of terrorist links. He had been arrested earlier for terrorist activity.

Antonio Fonseca: Portuguese acquitted by a Beira, Mozambique, court on February 22, 1983, of charges of spreading anti-Mozambique propaganda and insulting government leaders. He testified against defendants in the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack.

Diego Forastieri: leader of the Front Line group who escaped from prison in October 1980, where he was serving a 24-year sentence for involvement in four murders, armed robbery, and other crimes. He was rearrested on January 27, 1983.

Juan Carlos Fotea: Argentine terrorist suspect arrested on June 21, 1985, in Madrid. Argentina requested extradition. On December 2, 1985, Spain turned down the extradition request for the suspected member of the Argentine Anticommunist Alliance.

Abdelila Fouad: one of two Moroccans, age 28, jailed on April 7, 2004, in connection with the 3/11 Madrid train bombings by al Qaeda in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Lucienne Fourcade: one of four French Basque militants arrested on December 12, 1988, by the police of Bayonne, France. Fourcade was charged with assassination, attempted assassination, violating arms and explosives laws, association with criminals, and other infractions related to a terrorist enterprise.

Benjamin Fox: Portuguese citizen and section chief of the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement on December 6, 1982, sabotaged a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses. On February 22, 1983, a Beira court sentenced him to eight years.

Bernard Fox: on August 24, 1981, the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoner serving 12 years for possessing explosives and bombing a hotel joined the prison hunger strike in replacement of Patrick Quinn, one of three prisoners who abandoned the fast.

Hans Peter Fraas: on March 15, 1985, the state protection branch of the Frankfurt higher regional court sentenced the right-wing terrorist to eight and one-half years for terrorist activities in the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt. A third attack in Frankfurt failed because Fraas had second thoughts and did not connect the fuse.

Wolfgang Fram: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction, including Fram.

Emanuela Frascella: variant Frasella. Arrested on January 28, 1982, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Padua, where the group was holding U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozer, who had been kidnapped on December 17, 1981. She was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 13-plus years.

Emanuela Frasella: variant of Emaneula Frascella.

Giorgio Frau: one of two suspected Italian Red Brigades members arrested on March 23, 1988, in Barcelona, Spain, on charges of robbing at least six banks in Spain's Catalonia Region. Italy requested extradition on May 19, 1988. Frau received a six-year sentence by an Italian court in 1984 for Red Brigades membership. On June 27, 1989, he was jailed for 27 years by a Spanish court for conducting three armed robberies at banks in Spain and making off with 8 million pesetas ($72,000).

Franco Freda: released on August 1, 1985, after a six-plus-month trial, for insufficient evidence on charges of organizing a terrorist attack on a Milan bank on December 12, 1969, that left 16 dead and 87 injured. In April 1987, neofascist terrorist Stefano Delle Chiaie told an Italian court that he had helped Freda escape to Latin America.

Michael Freminet: skinhead from the Reims suburbs who on May 1, 1995, slapped and pushed Brahim Bouarram, a Moroccan immigrant, on a towpath along the Seine, where Bouarram fell in and drowned. The incident took place during a May Day march by the far-right National Front in Paris. Freminet claimed that he did not mean to kill him. He had two accomplices, David Parent and Christophe Calame.

Max Frerot: believed to be the leader of the Direct Action bomb attack on the French police anti-crime squad on July 7, 1986, which killed an inspector and injured three other policemen. On December 10, 1986, police discovered one of his safe houses beneath a Paris garage.

Stefan Frey: one of six suspected Red Army Faction members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. He was among the most-wanted terrorists in West Germany. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. On June 25, 1985, he was charged at the Fifth Criminal Division of the Duesseldorf Provincial High Court with belonging to a terrorist organization, falsifying documents, and violating the firearms law. He was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977.

Waldemar Frey: would-be hijacker of a LOT AN24 bound for Poland, on August 7, 1970.

Ralf Baptist Friedrich: arrested on November 19, 1990, in Karlsruhe on suspicion of membership in the West German Red Army Faction (RAF). He had been detained with nine other former RAF members in the former East Germany in June 1990 but was released again. He was the husband of Sigrid Friedrich, and both were charged by German prosecutors on August 9, 1991, with setting up the bombing attack against Gen. Alexander Haig, former NATO commander-in-chief in Europe, in Obourg, Belgium, on June 25, 1979. On June 22, 1992, he was sentenced to six and one-half years for preparing the explosives attack on Haig.

Sigrid Friedrich: wife of Baptist Ralf Friedrich, along with whom she was charged by German prosecutors on August 9, 1991, with setting up the bombing attack against General Haig.

Pierre Frigulie: variant Frugoli. One of four Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group members who shot to death four Spanish refugees in a Bayonne bar on September 25, 1985. Two of those killed were thought to be members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). Frigulie's sentence was struck down on appeal in 1988. On March 24, 1989, a Paris court sentenced him to 20 years for killing the Basque nationalists.

Ronald Fritsch: his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnapers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Christa Margot Frohlich: member of the West German Red Army Faction arrested on June 18, 1982, at Rome's Fiumicino Airport after customs authorities found she was carrying a false-bottomed suitcase filled with 3.5 kilograms of T-4 explosives, 2 electric detonators, and a timing mechanism. She also had in her possession falsified Austrian and West German passports, an authentic West German identity card, $3,500 in several currencies, and train schedules for the Rome-Paris line.

Pierre Frugoli: variant of Pierre Frigulie.

Franz Fuchs: Austrian letter bomber from 1993 to 1997 who was serving a life sentence when he committed suicide in his prison cell on February 26, 2000.

Maria Christina Fuentes Corea: Chilean and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany.

Miren Jasone Fuentes Reizabal: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Vizcaya Command member arrested on March 30, 1992, by Spanish police in the Txurdinaga District of Bilbao.

Mohammed Abdul Karim Fuheid: Palestinian Fatah lieutenant arrested by British police on December 24, 1972, while attempting to smuggle weapons through a London airport for an attack on Israel's Stockholm embassy. He was charged with illegal possession of a Browning automatic pistol and 51 rounds of ammunition. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison at the Old Bailey. Authorities later received threats of sabotage to airports and airliners unless the Black September courier was freed. He earned full remission of his sentence and was released after one year.

Kurosh Fuladi: Iranian arrested in 1980 when a bomb exploded in London in his car, killing two people and injuring him. He had entered the United Kingdom in 1979 on a student permit. He was convicted in November 1982 and sentenced to 10 years. On September 9, 1989, he was released and flew home to Iran. In turn, Iran released U.K. businessman Roger Cooper, who had been in a Tehran prison since 1986 on charges of spying.

William James Fulton: following the longest criminal trial in the region's history, a court in Northern Ireland convicted the Protestant extremist on January 26, 2007, on 48 counts of terrorism and sentenced him to 28 years.

G

---

Muhammad G.: Ghanaian, age 36, who was one of 15 people arrested by Spanish authorities on December 19, 2005, on charges of setting up a recruiting network for al Qaeda that sent Islamic militants to Iraq. He helped Africans travel to the United States under false identities.

Antonio Gabiola Goyogana: believed by Spanish police in April 1995 to be a member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Madrid Commando.

Luis Jose Galan: Spanish convert to Islam and a defendant who was the first witness in the April 21, 2005, trial of al Qaeda suspects in Spain linked to the 9/11 attacks. He faced 18 years in prison for belonging to al Qaeda and illegal possession of weapons.

Yusuf Galan: Spanish national charged in Madrid in November 2001 with involvement with al Qaeda.

Angel Maria Galarraga Mendizabal: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member killed in a shootout with police in San Sebastian, Spain, on March 14, 1986. A search of his vehicle found 10 to 15 kilograms of plastic explosive and a 9-mm pistol.

Juan Manuel Galarraga: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested along with his wife, Eliana Etxeberria, by French authorities in St. Pee-Sur-Nivelle on March 11, 1988.

Eva Galaskova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, which was diverted to Nuremburg.

Michele Galati: arrested in January 1982 for Red Brigades activities. He allegedly provided police with the address of a Padua Red Brigades apartment after a confrontation with Red Brigades leader Stefano Petrella.

Jose Miguel Galdos Oronos: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by France to Togo on September 23–26, 1984. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike and treated in a Togo hospital upon arrival.

Mario Galesi: Red Brigades terrorist, age 37, wanted for the 1999 slaying of a labor reform advisor to the Italian government. He was shot to death by police on March 2, 2003, after he fired on police on a train, killing one officer and wounding another.

Eddie Gallagher: one of two Irish Republican Army (IRA) kidnappers of Teide Herrema, the Dutch manager of the Ferenka metal plant in Dublin, on October 3, 1975. The kidnappers demanded that three IRA terrorists be released, that Ferenka close for 48 hours, and that police not search for the kidnappers or set up roadblocks. The kidnappers surrendered, and on March 11, 1976, an Irish court sentenced Gallagher to 20 years.

Saroia Gallarada: French woman, age 21, who leased a two-bedroom apartment for two months, raising suspicions when she paid in cash. The apartment was used by Juan Antonio Olarra Guridi (alias Otsagi), who heads Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military, and Ainhoa Mugica Goni, wanted in several ETA attacks. She was arrested by Spanish and French police on September 16, 2002, at the Talence safe house in Bordeaux, France.

Cepa Gallende: Spanish terrorist who died during a prison hunger strike in 1981.

Sandro Galletta: on September 26, 1984, Venice magistrate Carlo Mastelloni issued an arrest warrant for Yasir Arafat on arms trafficking charges, citing a 1979 arms shipment from Palestinians in West Beirut to Italian Red Brigades members, including Galletta.

Prospero Gallinari: one of the original leaders of the Red Brigades (RB), he was arrested on September 24, 1979, after being injured in a gun battle with Rome police. He was believed to have driven the car with diplomatic plates that blocked the car of former premier Aldo Moro during his March 16, 1978, kidnapping and murder in Rome by the Red Brigades. On January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with Moro's kidnapping and killing and the slaying of his five-man escort. On March 24, 1987, he was tried in Rebibbia Prison for the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Martin Galvin: American Irish Republican Army (IRA) sympathizer whom Belfast police failed to arrest at a rally on August 12, 1984. The publicity director of the New York-based Irish Northern Aid Committee had been barred from entering Ulster. When police stormed the speaker's platform, a riot ensued.

Jose Maria Ganchegui: on April 18, 1989, he was among the 6 of the 50 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members living in Algeria who were expelled.

Christian Ganczarski: Polish-born German convert to Islam, age 35, with ties to al Qaeda figures. On April 22, 2002, Tunisia blamed an April 11, 2002, truck bomb attack on a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia, on Tunisian citizen Nizar Nawar and a relative living in the country. Police discovered that Nawar had phoned Ganczarski in Germany shortly before the blast that killed 17 people. Nawar was asked if he needed anything and replied, "I only need the command." Ganczarski, active in radical Muslim circles in Duisburg, was released without charge after questioning.

Ganczarski said he met Nawar in August 2001 in Pakistan. He also admitted knowing Mouhamedou Ould Slahi, who was extradited by Mauritania to the United States on suspicion of involvement in the December 1999 plot to bomb the Los Angeles airport. The duo apparently attended the same Duisburg mosque. Police also found in Ganczarski's apartment the bank account number of the wife of a Mounir Motassadeq, who had witnessed the will of 9/11 hijacker Muhammad Atta. A witness at Motassadeq's terrorism trial, Jordanian citizen Shadi Abdallah (variant Abdellah), age 27, said Ganczarski had trained in Afghan camps. Ganczarski and his family quietly left Germany for Saudi Arabia via Frankfurt and Amsterdam in November; police learned of his departure post facto. On June 2, 2003, police at Charles de Gaulle Airport arrested Ganczarski.

Antoine Arnau Gandolfi: alias of Georges Cipriani.

Mohammad Gandour: variant Mowefaq Said Gandour. Palestinian arrested in Rome in early September 1985 for possession of fake documents. He was an alleged courier and financier for the Palestine Liberation Front hijackers of the cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. On June 18, 1986, his Genoa trial for being an accomplice to murder and kidnapping began. On July 10, 1986, he was sentenced to eight months with time served. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction. On July 25, 1987, he jumped to his death from his fifth-floor Rome apartment, trying to avoid arrest and extradition to Syria on fraud charges.

Gandura: variant of Mohammad Gandour.

Varadjian Garabidjian: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Isidro Maria Garalde Bedialauneta: alias Mamaru. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member from Ondarroa arrested by French police in 1985 in Tarnos. He was later sentenced by a Bayonne court to five years for criminal association and arms possession. He was convicted of manufacturing arms and explosives and was believed to be the head of ETA's logistics and arms section. He was released from a Toulouse prison on January 12, 1990, after serving two-thirds of the five-year sentence. He was not permitted to live in the French departments bordering Spain for seven years. He was later imprisoned in Douai following Madrid's extradition request, which a French court postponed on June 6, 1990. On June 27, 1990, an appeals court postponed examination of the extradition request until September 25. The accused refused to speak in court without a Basque interpreter.

Isidro Garayalde: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader deported to the Seychelles by France on October 22, 1984. He had served four months in prison for an arms conviction in Biarritz.

Anthony Garcia: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants, including Garcia, age 24, of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. They were given life sentences by Judge Michael Astill. Prosecutors said after the trial that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group was trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Carlos Garcia Gaztelu: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who had been deported from Venezuela and was turned over to Spanish police by French officials on November 3, 1987.

Carmela Garcia Merchan: suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) originally from Amorebieta in Vizcaya who was arrested on June 8, 1988, in St. Jean de Luz in France. Judge Legrand ordered him held because the defendant did not have papers authorizing him to live in France. He was a member of the Kioto legal commando of ETA, he allegedly took part in several attacks on Civil Guard barracks, and he may have participated in the murder of a toll collector on the Bilbao–San Sebastian motorway.

Francisco Garcia Gomez: one of eight Islamic militants charged on January 17, 2005, by Spanish investigating judge Baltasar Garzon with providing logistical support to Ramzi Binalshibh, a suspected coordinator of the 9/11 attacks. They provided him with false identity papers and other documents. Six were held pending trial. He released Spaniard Francisco Garcia Gomez on 20,000 euros ($26,210) bail. The charge sheet said the group created "a network of forged documents to provide false identities or fake documents to other members of the network to help them move about, flee or hide” and to help “with their terrorist activities or links with organizations such as Ansar al-Islam, under the orders of Abu Musab Zarqawi.”

Francisco Xabier Garcia Gaztelu: suspected military leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), age 35, captured on February 22, 2001, by French police at a café in Anglet. Authorities believed that a few hours earlier, he had ordered the bombing of a commuter train station in San Sebastian, in the Basque region.

Ignacio de Garcia Arregui: alias Inaki de Renteria. Believed to be Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) chief in November 1994. Garcia, age 45, was arrested on September 15, 2000, along with his girlfriend in a raid in Bidart, France. He allegedly ordered the failed 1995 assassination attempt of King Juan Carlos of Spain.

Jorge Garcia Sertucha: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on August 9, 1995, in an apartment where explosives, pistols, machine guns, and forged papers were seized along with papers detailing movements of figures close to the royal household. He was believed to be planning the assassination of King Juan Carlos.

Jose Carlos Garcia Ramirez: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members extradited by France to Spain on September 23–26, 1984, to face murder charges. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike.

Juan Manuel Garcia Alartia: one of four members of an armed group with ties to the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on February 19, 1983, by police in the Basque region of Llodio. They were charged with two bombings and seven planned executions of “informers.” Police found an arms cache.

Luis Francisco Garcia Lopez: one of two suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Renteria, Spain, on November 18, 1990. The duo was preparing to escape to France.

Raquel Garcia: freed on December 8, 1993, by a Brussels, Belgium, court. She and her husband, Luis Moreno, had been accused of having close links with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Ramon Garcia Sanz: welder and member of the Spanish Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP) sentenced on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court to death for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Pose Rodriguez. He and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Raquel Garcia Arranz: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on June 14, 1993, in Vilvoorde-Koningslo, Belgium, on suspicion of involvement in five murders and the kidnapping of a Spanish industrialist. A Spanish arrest warrant with a view to extradition was issued. She was born in Derio in November 1961. She and Moreno Ramajo, also arrested, had lived under their true names for less than a year in a house on the Streekbaan. They were believed part of the logistical support cell of the Commandos Biscaya, part of ETA-Military. Two ETA members arrested in January 1992—Kepa Urra and Juan Ramon Rojo—had benefited from their logistical support. In February 1994, Belgium rejected their request for political refugee status; they appealed the decision.

Hussein Garibi: one of four Iranians detained on December 15, 1989, in Manchester’s Stretford Police Station under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of planning to kill Salman Rushdie. The student was freed on December 19, 1989.

Sean Garland: leader of a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) splinter group indicted in 2004. In the 1990s, he allegedly couriered more than $1 million in counterfeit Supernotes to Europe from the North Korean Embassy in Moscow. On October 12, 2005, the U.S. Department of Justice indicted the Irish Workers' Party leader, age 71, and six accomplices on charges of conspiring with North Korea to put millions of dollars of counterfeit U.S. $100 bills into circulation in the United Kingdom and Eastern Europe. Garland was arrested in a Belfast hotel lobby on October 7, 2005. His attorney entered a plea of not guilty. As of January 2008, he was in Ireland, which said the United States had not requested extradition.

Jose Antonio Garmendia: student and member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) sentenced to death on August 28, 1975, by a Burgos, Spain, military tribunal for killing Gregorio Posada, a member of the Civil Guard, in San Sebastian in 1974.

Francisco Mugica Garmendia Artapalo: former Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader sentenced to 1,000 years in prison in Spain on July 30, 2001. On July 4, 1984, Civil Guard antiterrorist units uncovered five letters he had written to ETA members in which he called for stepped-up attacks on French interests in the hopes of pressuring Mitterrand's government to end its expulsion of ETA members in southern France. The group said not to attack the Spanish Socialist Workers' Party or banks.

Ihsan Garnaoui: Tunisian, age 33, arrested after he left the apartment of Abdel-Karim Jahha on May 4, 2004. He was charged in Berlin with planning to bomb Jewish and U.S. targets in Germany during the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq. The indictment said he entered Germany illegally in January 2003 to plan the attacks, for which he had trained at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan beginning in July 2001. He was represented by attorneys Michael Rosenthal and Margarete von Galen. As of May 30, 2004, security officials had refused to permit two confidential informants to testify, and a key police report had gone missing. The prosecution had been unable to specify what attacks Garnaoui was planning. On April 6, 2005, he was acquitted of terrorism charges in Berlin but found guilty of tax evasion and illegal possession of weapons and was sentenced to three years and nine months. In what was known as the Berlin al Qaeda trial, he was accused of planning attacks on Jewish or U.S. targets in Berlin to coincide with the beginning of the war in Iraq in March 2003.

Moez Garsalloui: Tunisian political refugee in Switzerland who married Malika El Aroud. Together they ran al Qaeda Web sites. They were arrested on April 2005 and charged with promoting violence and supporting a criminal organization. He was sentenced but released in late 2007 after 23 days. Malika claims he is "on a trip" out of the country.

Markus Gartmann: one of four right-wing skin-heads charged on December 30, 1993, with murder and arson for the May 29, 1993, arson of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, killing 5 people and injuring 10, including a 6-month-old infant. Gartmann was a former member of the extremist German People's Union. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf Presiding Judge Wolfgang Steffen to 15 years.

Basiru Gassama: arrested on January 31, 2007, as part of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading. Gassama, age 29, was charged under the Terrorism Act with failing to inform authorities about the plot. He pleaded guilty.

Mouawad Gassn: Lebanese arrested in November 1987 by the Italian Justice Department in connection with the discovery of 8 large-caliber pistols, 6 Uzi carbines, and 12,000 rounds of ammunition on the Cedar Sea II yacht, which had arrived in Genoa from Monte Carlo for maintenance. Gassn is chief administrator of the Swiss-based company that owns the yacht.

Captain Gatso: leader of Motorists against Detection, which claimed to have destroyed 1,000 Gatso speed cameras in the United Kingdom since 2000, doing $40 million worth of damage. He denied involvement in a series of letter bombs in February 2007 against companies involved in traffic regulation.

Christian Gauzens: senior member of the outlawed Direct Action leftist group arrested on October 12, 1982, after picking up documents from a rail station baggage locker that linked him to the alleged assassins of U.S. and Israeli diplomats in Paris.

Musbah 'Abul Gasym: Libyan citizen who on February 12, 1986, was given a visa by East Germany upon entry to the country. The Stasi regarded him as a person responsible for murders in Europe but gave him the cover name Dervish. He established contact with a Palestinian, Yusif Salam (aliases Nuri, Yusir Chraydi), who worked in the Libyan People's Bureau and was also viewed by the Stasi as a killer.

Mahmoud Mohammed Gebara: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court acquitted five defendants, including Gebara, of charges that they were planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy. On October 1, 1986, an appeals court in Rome overturned the lower court decision and handed the case to the public ministry for further action. But only one defendant was still in custody. Gebara said his fiancée had been killed in Beirut by shells from the New Jersey. He admitted drawing the map but claimed the plan was a fantasy.

Licio Gelli: head of the underground P-2 Mason Lodge. On December 12, 1985, Bologna magistrates issued a warrant for him for the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. Gelli was alleged to be involved in tax frauds and financial scandals that brought down the Christian Democratic government in 1982. He escaped from a Swiss prison in 1983. On July 21, 1986, the Italian Supreme Court ruled that there was sufficient evidence to hold him for subversion and terrorism. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court acquitted him on the charge of masterminding the train bombing for lack of evidence. He was sentenced to 10 years in jail on charges of trying to throw investigators off the track. The court then reduced his sentence by 5 years. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court acquitted him of slander and planting false evidence to mislead investigators. For the court, the act of association for subversion did not exist, and he was thus cleared of all charges.

Fritz Martin Gelowicz: aliases Abdullah, Abdul Malik. Ringleader, age 28, of two Germans and one Turkish citizen arrested on September 4, 2007, at their Oberschledorn house. They were planning "massive" attacks against U.S. interests, including Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and the Frankfurt airport. Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for 9 months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. In July, police exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. On August 17, one of the suspects rented the vacation cottage in Oberschledorn, and they began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage to begin their bomb making. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group that has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of the terrorists had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested the trio and charged them with membership in a foreign terrorist organization. Police noted that they were German and white, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype.

Gelowicz came from an upper-middle-class background in Munich and converted to Islam in 2005. His mother was a doctor, and his father owned a successful business. He was married in January 2007, attended a technical college in Ulm, and studied industrial engineering at the Neu-Ulm University of Applied Science. He was active in Islamist circles in Ulm and a regular at the Multi-Kultur-Haus, a Wahhabi center in the Ulm scene. He was also active in Islamic circles in Stuttgart. Gelowicz was seen with Yehia Yousif in Neu-Ulm. Yousif was a key figure in the Multicultural House, which catered to Islamists.

German interior minister Wolfgang Schäuble announced on September 25 that the plotters had smuggled Syrian-origin detonators through Turkey and received orders from Pakistani-based operatives. They were to attack Americans in Europe within days.

Johannes Gerdus: Dutch terrorist who died during the hijacking by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism of Lufthansa Flight 181, bound for Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977.

Karl-Heinz Gerum: Red Army Faction (RAF) terrorist from Hamburg described by Der Spiegel in late July 1990 as one of the nine remaining at-large longtime RAF members.

Deniz Gezmiş: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) kidnappers of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. Their release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972. On the same day, the Turkish tourist office in Sweden was bombed in response to Ankara's parliament ratifying the death sentences. The trio was hanged on May 6, 1972.

Mohammed al-Ghabra: on December 19, 2006, the U.S. Treasury Department froze the accounts of the naturalized British citizen for providing "material and logistical" support to al Qaeda and other terrorist groups. Americans were also prohibited from doing business with him. Al-Ghabra had organized travel to Pakistan for people wanting to meet with al Qaeda leaders and to undertake jihad training.

Basel Ghalyoun: Spain trial of the Syrian, age 26, began on February 15, 2007, for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004.

Ghasoub Abrash Ghalyoun: alias Abu Musab. On July 16, 2002, Spanish interior minister Angel Acebes announced that the Syrian-born Ghalyoun was "directly implicated in the financial activities of the al Qaeda cell, which has already been dismantled." In April, Spanish police had seized Ghalyoun's footage, shot during a 1997 U.S. visit, of the World Trade Center, the Brooklyn Bridge, the Statue of Liberty, a New York airport, the Sears Towers in Chicago, San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge, Disneyland, and Universal Studios in California. The statement noted that "the form and type of recording go beyond touristic curiosity as shown by two of the tapes, which are entirely of different angles from different distances of the twin towers in New York." Ghalyoun was detained at his Madrid home with two other Syrian al Qaeda suspects but was later released. He was re-arrested on July 16, with the two others.

‘Abd al-Fattah Ghandanfar: variant Abdul Fattah Ghandanfar. One of 13 suspected Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP-GC) members arrested in raids in West Germany on October 27, 1988. On November 9, 1989, Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann preferred charges of joint double murder and other crimes against him in the Frankfurt-Main court of appeal. The Federal State Prosecutor’s Office said he set up a weapons and explosives depot in Frankfurt and organized the two attacks on U.S. military trains in August 1987 and April 1988. The August 1987 attack with 150 aboard led to no casualties because the train was delayed and the bomb exploded too early. A woman driving by the scene was injured. On June 3, 1991, Ghandanfar was sentenced to 12 years after being found guilty of attempted murder and violations of the war arms control law and the explosives law. On January 22, 1995, the German government denied that it had made a deal with the government of Iran for the November 1994 expulsion of Ghandanfar. The Syrian-born Palestinian was deported after serving half of his 12-year sentence.

Abdul Fattah Ghandanfar: variant ‘Abd al-Fattah Ghandanfar.

Gharib: alias of Mr. Mazeh, itself an alias.

Basel Ghayoun: Syrian who on March 29, 2004, was charged by a Spanish judge with mass killings and belonging to a terrorist organization for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi: associate of Syrian arms trafficker Monzer al-Kassar. Arrested in Romania on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of sophisticated weaponry to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels. Al-Kassar met with two U.S.

Drug Enforcement Administration informants near Marbella to discuss a $7.8–$13.5 million deal on February 6, 2007. Al-Kassar also offered men to help FARC fight U.S. military officers in Colombia. He and his associates were indicted on four counts of supporting foreign terrorist group and conspiracy.

Eugenio Pio Ghignoni: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987. He had been released from preventive custody in 1986 because official charges could not be brought before a deadline elapsed. He was a defendant in the third trial dealing with the 1978 kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro and was suspected of involvement in the March 1981 raid on the inspector’s office at Rome’s San Camilo Hospital, the June 1981 murder of police official Sebastiano Vinci, and the July 1981 holdup of the offices of the SIP Telephone Company.

Marcello Ghiringhelli: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank. On July 4, 1985, a Turin court rejected his appeal.

Chibab Ghoumri: Algerian who was one of six men arrested on March 1, 2002, by Rome police on suspicion of al Qaeda ties. They were held on suspicion of association with a “criminal organization with terrorist intentions” and intent to obtain and transfer arms and weapons. Wiretaps of their conversations included discussions of killing President Bush, a cyanide compound, and weapons needed for terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Police seized videos, address books, and a plane ticket to Phoenix. They also found a letter with the address of Lotfi Raissi, an Algerian accused in the United Kingdom of giving pilot training to the 9/11 hijackers.

Hassan Ghosen: on April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Ali el-Giahour: Libyan businessman who on March 13, 1984, was charged with conspiracy regarding several bombs that went off in London during the previous three days. On August 21, 1984, police found his decomposing body in a Marylebone apartment in London. He was out on bail and had apparently been lured to the apartment by a killer. An autopsy disclosed that he had died from a single bullet wound to the head. Libya protested the murder.

Massimo Gidoni: on September 26, 1984, Venice magistrate Carlo Mastelloni issued an arrest warrant for Yasir Arafat on arms trafficking charges, citing a 1979 arms shipment from Palestinians in West Beirut to Italian Red Brigades members, including Gidoni.

Francisco Jose Gil Gajate: one of five suspected members of the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) armed illegal commando Aizkora who were arrested on October 23, 1987, by Spanish police.

Miguel Angel Gil Cervera: alias Tubika. One of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested by French police on June 6, 1992. Police also discovered the apartment in which the terrorists made parcel bombs that were distributed to terrorists in Spain. Police later said that they also had Gil's mistress in preventive detention.

Anthony William Gill: Briton and one of four would-be assassins of Abdul Hamid Bakoush, a former Libyan prime minister and the head of the Organization for the Liberation of Libya. They were arrested on November 12, 1984, at Bakoush's residence in Egypt. Egypt said the foiled plot was financed by Libya.

Claudia Gioia: arrested by police on June 3, 1987, at the Viaggiotto, San Saba, hideout of the Red Brigades (RB) believed involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Simonetta Giorgeri: one of five members of the Italian Red Brigades–Communist Combatant Party offshoot arrested in Paris on September 2, 1989. Police discovered arms and leaflets claiming responsibility for attacks and plans for more attacks in Italy. Two men and two women were arrested in the Faubourg St. Antoine District of central Paris, and another man was arrested at a hotel in the Grands Boulevards area. A fifth suspect was arrested later at the hotel. Giorgeri was suspected to be a mastermind of the combatants and was in contact with French and West German terrorists.

Maurizio Giorgi: on July 19, 1990, the act of association for subversion did not exist for the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court, which thus cleared Giorgi of all charges.

Alexandros Giotopoulos: alias Michael Oikonomous. Paris-born man who on July 17, 2002, was arrested at his island home in Lipsoi, 160 miles of Athens. Police believed he was the ideological leader, and possibly a founder, of November 17. He was questioned in Athens about items seized from his Athens residence, including a typewriter that might have been used for November 17 propaganda statements. Police had set a fire as a ruse, permitting the helicopter team to swoop in. On July 19, police charged Giotopoulos with the premeditated murder of 13 people, including two U.S. military officials and a U.K. military attaché, back to 1984.

Umberto Giovine: one of two Italian hijackers of an Olympic Airlines B707 flying from Paris to Athens who forced the plane back to Paris on November 8, 1968.

Egidio Giuliani: on July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court reduced his sentence for armed insurrection to eight years.

Gino Giunti: one of five members of the Italian Red Brigades—Communist Combatant Party offshoot arrested in Paris on September 2, 1989. Police discovered arms and leaflets claiming responsibility for attacks and plans for more attacks in Italy. He was arrested at a hotel in the Grands Boulevards area.

Jean-Klaude Gladieux: arrested in 1983 and admitted to organizing the Corsican National Liberation Front's terrorist acts in the Paris region.

Othman el Gnaoui: on October 31, 2007, a Spanish court convicted the Moroccan of membership in a jihadist terrorist cell, terrorist murder, and helping to get explosives to the house near Madrid where the 3/11 Madrid train bombs (2004) were prepared.

Angelika Goder: member of the West German Red Army Faction. On May 25, 1987, Die Welt reported that her group planned kidnappings to obtain her release from prison. She was part of a Red Army Faction hunger strike by 38 prisoners that began on February 1, 1989. On March 28, 1989, Die Welt speculated that four sick or feeble prisoners, including her, might be released before the end of their prison terms.

Eneko Gogeochea Arronategui: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Mikel Goikoetxea: alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) hit man wanted in Spain for 27 murders. The Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group claimed in December 1983 to have assassinated him outside his St. Jean-de-Luz home.

Cristina Goiricelaya Gonzalez: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Jose Maria Goitia Unzurrunzaga: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, and faced six counts of homicide.

Paul Gokkel: Dutch student who hijacked a KLM DC9 bound for Madrid on August 6, 1978, and diverted it to Algiers.

Husnu Gol: fired a .22 caliber revolver to kill Dursun Aksoy, an administrative attaché in the Turkish Embassy in Brussels, on July 14, 1983. He dropped the gun while fleeing the scene. He was arrested on July 22, 1983, in the Netherlands and extradited to Belgium to face trial. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, the Justice Commandos Against Armenian Genocide, and the Armenian Revolutionary Army claimed credit.

Pablo Jose Gomes Ces: suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Blanditz commando arrested on October 6, 1987, by the Italian Secret Service at a nuns' educational institute on Monte Mario, Rome, where he was studying the history of religion.

Garbine Gomez Gorrotxategui: member of the satellite group of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Vizcaya Commando who had been on the run for three years before her arrest on November 17, 1994, by police in Toulon, France.

Jessu Maria Gomez: one of four members of an armed group with ties to Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on February 19, 1983, by police in the Basque region of Llodio. They were charged with two bombings and seven planned executions of “informers.” Police found an arms cache.

Pedro Gomez Lopez: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Spain protested Gomez’s nonextradition on November 27, 1993.

Belen Gonzalez Panalva: alias Carmen. On March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members, including Gonzalez, on Algerian soil. On April 18, 1989, she was among the 6 of the 50 ETA members who had been living in Algeria who were expelled.

Carmen Gonzalez Peralva: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members whose extradition Spain requested from the Dominican Republic on October 27, 1989. The duo had been sent from Algiers earlier in the year. They were wanted for the murder of a Spanish Navy admiral.

Francisco Xabier Garcia Gaztelu: head of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military arrested in January 2001.

Juan Antonio Alfonso Gonzalez: Spaniard arrested on April 9, 1978, for the April 7, 1978, attack by the Canary Islands Intelligence Service against Antonio Cubillo, the leader of the Movement for Self-Determination and Independence of the Canary Islands. He was stabbed at the entrance to his home in Algiers but recovered. On May 7, 1978, an Algiers court sentenced Gonzalez to death.

Maria del Carmen Gonzalez Luengo: Spanish citizen and suspected Italian Red Brigades member arrested by Barcelona police on April 25, 1987, on Planeta Street. She was released by Madrid police on May 5, 1987, for lack of evidence.

Maria Dolores Gonzalez Catarain: alias Yoyes. Former Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader who on September 10, 1986, was shot in the head by ETA members who branded her a traitor for laying down arms under a Spanish government amnesty plan and returning from exile in Mexico and France in October 1985. She was shot in her hometown of Vilafranca de Ordizia while playing with her four-year-old son.

Ellen Good: variant Ellen Codd. U.S. citizen from New York and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. She was believed to be a member of the Red Brigades. Italian police said she was the first U.S. citizen to be implicated in a probe of European terrorism and may have contacts with French and West German groups that she furnished with information on NATO installations and activities in Italy. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri’s murder.

Wahid Gordji: in June 1987, a Paris court ordered the Iranian Embassy staff member to appear for questioning in a series of bombings by one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He instead ran to the Iranian Embassy in Paris to avoid appearing before the examining magistrate. On July 17, 1987, Paris and Tehran broke off diplomatic relations over the case. Iran claimed Gordji had diplomatic immunity. Following the release of two French hostages in Lebanon on November 27, 1987, the French permitted Gordji to leave the embassy on November 29, 1987.

Anthony Patrick Gorman: on March 14, 1994, the Dublin district court freed the Armagh man wanted in the United Kingdom for the murder of a soldier, Sgt. Michael Newman, a British Army recruiting officer in Derby, United Kingdom, in 1992. The Irish National Liberation Army member's detention was ordered by an Irish court on April 5, 1995. He was arrested when police stopped an INLA van on a road to Belfast by firing stun grenades. Police found six assault rifles, 20 handguns—many packed with their user's manuals—and 2,000 rounds of ammunition.

John Gormley: one of four suspected members of the Irish National Liberation Army who were arrested in Paris on July 23, 1986, while loading weapons into a car. They were charged with illegal possession and transport of weapons. He was freed on August 22, 1986, on payment of a $3,000 bail.

Joaquim Gorostidi: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for shooting to death Meliton Manzananas, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968. He was also sentenced to death for banditry. The death sentences were commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian, who was kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Gorostidi was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzananas's widow. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term.

Cathal Goulding: Marxist who had been chief of staff of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) and who died in a Dublin hospital on December 26, 1998, at age 75. His poorly armed and organized IRA decided against insurrection in Northern Ireland in the late 1960s, leading younger Catholic militants to break away and form the Provisional IRA and Sinn Féin. Goulding's Official IRA called a cease-fire in 1972.

Luis Ignacio Iureta Goyena Lanza: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested by French police on June 6, 1992. Police also discovered the apartment in which the terrorists had made parcel bombs that were distributed to terrorists in Spain.

Volkert van der Graaf: Dutch citizen, age 32, arrested for the May 6, 2002, fatal shooting of Pim Fortuyn, a leader of a right-wing anti-immigrant Dutch opposition party, as he was walking to his car outside a radio station in Hilversum, near Amsterdam, during the night. Fortuyn was hit by six bullets. Prior to this death, he had reported receiving numerous death threats, including one the day of his death.

Police charged van der Graaf with the first murder of a political leader in recent Dutch history. The accused killer was a vegetarian and animal rights activist who opposed "factory farming." He was arrested with the gun still in his hands. Police raided his apartment, where they found literature from radical leftist groups and environmental causes.

On August 9, 2002, prosecutors laid out their case against the accused killer, noting that the suspect was captured with gunpowder on his gloves and cell tissue matching Fortuyn's on his pants.

On March 27, 2003, van der Graaf, who had confessed, told a panel of judges that he had acted out of concern for the country's Muslim minority. He pleaded guilty to illegally possessing firearms and sending threats to Fortuyn before the assassination. On April 15, 2003, Presiding Judge Frans Bauduin sentenced van der Graaf to 18 years in prison. On April 22, the defense counsel said he would appeal the sentence.

Wolfgang Werner Grams: on September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the Red Army Faction (RAF) and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. RAF member Grams was arrested on June 15, 1990, when he was recognized by fellow train passengers who remembered West German wanted posters. The next day, East Germany announced the fingerprints didn't match, and he was released. On June 27, 1993, he died in a gun battle with anti-terrorist unit officers.

Manfred Grashof: Baader-Meinhof Gang terrorist who served almost 17 years in jail and was pardoned on November 30, 1988, as of March 2, 1989, by retiring Rhineland-Palatinate prime minister Bernhard Vogel.

Robert Achille de Greef: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Dimitru Gregoriou: bomber of a Jewish synagogue in Paris. On April 11, 1983, the Egyptian National Security Organization said that the Greek-Cypriot administration had issued 225 unused and sealed passports to the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. He used one of the passports.

Karl-Friedrich Grosser: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction, including Grosser. He was arrested in Ludwigsburg, near Stuttgart, on September 28, 1985.

Walter Gruber: leader of the Schuetzen group, whose German-speaking members seek autonomy for Italy's Alto Adige Province. He was blown up on May 24, 1984, by a bomb he was carrying in Lana, 20 kilometers from Bolzano, the capital of the province. He had been connected to a series of bombings in 1972 and after 1979 in south Tirol.

Pablo Grude Pego: alleged leader of the Autonomous Anti-Capitalist Commandos, killed on August 13, 1984, in a shootout with police in Lasarte, Spain. He had opened fire at Civil Guard officers when they approached him. He had earlier planted two bombs that exploded in a French car salesroom.

Jessu Maria Guaresti: one of four members of an armed group with ties to Basque Nation and Liberty arrested on February 19, 1983, by police in the Basque region of Llodio. They were charged with two bombings and seven planned executions of "informers." Police found an arms cache.

Vera Marta Guenter: alias Elvira Gunter. West German terrorist and Swiss who the Egyptians said on April 20, 1978, had come into Cairo for terrorist attacks. She was linked to George Bilinni, head of 24 people Egypt had arrested who belonged to the international terrorist consortium Correct Course of Fatah, headed by Wadi Haddad, and she was now part of Black June. She studied Arabic at a German-run cultural center in Cairo; some sources said she also worked in television.

Sabina Guidoni: variant Sabina Didoni. Bologna resident born in Modena and one of three Red Brigades members arrested by Bologna police in Italy on June 5, 1987.

Carmen Guisasola: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested at a French checkpoint 50 kilometers from the Spanish border on November 17, 1990. The group was apparently heading toward Spain, intending to conduct an attack. She was one of Spain's most-wanted terrorists as a member of ETA's Vizcaya Commando. She was born in Markina and began terrorist activity in Guipuzcoa in 1980 with the Gorbasategui Commando, which murdered two people in 1981. After the group disbanded, she fled to France. She was arrested by French police but was released because she had committed no crimes in France. Spanish courts requested extradition. In Spain, she joined the Vizcaya Commando and escaped from several police dragnets. She was believed to have been involved in planting a device at a French auto dealer in Bilbao; in the murder of Carlos Arbreas, a Plentzia bar owner accused of drug trafficking; in planting a car bomb outside the Cantabria Civil Guard barracks; and in the grenade attack on the Civil Guard barracks in Balmaseda.

Antonio Guistini: died in a Red Brigades ambush of an armored truck in Rome on December 14, 1984. He was wanted for a series of Red Brigades terrorist incidents.

Lars Gule: Norwegian claiming to be a journalist arrested on May 6, 1977, at Beirut Airport before he could board a Lebanese flight to Frankfurt when 25 ounces of plastic explosives were found hidden in a book in his baggage. Detonators were also found. He said he had obtained the explosives from a man named Ahmed in the Sabra district of Beirut.

Hasan Hayri Guler: Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) militant whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Mohammed Yasar Gulzar: British citizen, age 25, charged on August 29, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and with helping to plan to smuggle explosives on board aircraft in a foiled plot by al Qaeda; the plan was to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. They were also charged with conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. He lived in Barking, Essex. The prosecution said he was one of the group's leaders.

Victor Gunnarsson: Swedish member of the Europe Labor Party, a small anticommunist group, identified on March 12, 1986, by a taxi driver as running from the scene of the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm. He was released due to insufficient evidence.

Elvira Gunter: alias of Vera Marta Guenter.

Pedro Jose Guridi Iriarte: alleged member of the Anti-Capitalist Autonomous Commandos expelled by Bayonne authorities on August 27, 1986.

Angel Gurmino Izarraga: member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who on February 8, 1984, was assassinated by the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group in Hendaye, a French-Spanish border town.

Eugenio Gutierrez Salazar: member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) killed in the Basque region of southern France on February 25, 1984, by the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Ismael Miguel Gutierrez: on November 19, 1987, Spain requested his extradition from Thailand, where he was being held on drug trafficking charges, for membership in the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group, an anti-Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) terrorist group.

H

---

I.H.: Dutch female, age 19, arrested on July 18, 1990, by Dutch police for the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen of two vacationing 24-year-old Australian lawyers believed to be British soldiers at an Italian restaurant in Roermond, the Netherlands. She was believed to have helped with the murder. She lived in Amstelveen, near Amsterdam, and was arrested at the frontier with Germany, near Venlo, on returning from holiday in Yugoslavia. Police searched her flat and found documents indicating that she had rented the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) hideout. She was believed to be friendly with Edward Thornton, one of three individuals held for the murders.

Redouane E. H.: Moroccan-descended German citizen in Kiel, age 36, arrested on July 8, 2006, by German police on suspicion of supporting a foreign terrorist organization. He was suspected of contacts with Said Bahaji, who had close contacts to the 9/11 trio of Mohamed Atta, Marwan al-Shehi, and Ziad Jarrah. Prosecutor's Office spokesperson Fauke Scheuten said that "the accused had numerous contacts with the international network of violent jihadis, among other places in Syria, Algeria, and Iraq." On May 16, 2007, German federal prosecutors in Berlin charged him with giving financial support to al Qaeda, establishing a terrorist association abroad, and helping to recruit members. He was suspected of transferring $6,800 to Syria and Egypt to buy equipment for terrorists to use in explosives training.

Siegfried Haag: Baader-Meinhof lawyer charged with supplying two Suomi automatic weapons to the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975. He was arrested in West Germany after a 10-month search on November 30, 1976, and was accused of bombing three U.S. military installations in the previous four years. He was a colleague of Klaus Croissant, an attorney for Baader-Meinhof figures.

Monika Haas: arrested on March 20, 1992, for involvement in the October 13, 1977, hijacking of the Landshut plane to Mogadishu.

Redouane el Habab: Moroccan German tried in Kiel, Germany, in November 2007 for recruiting suicide bombers to go to Iraq.

Mohammed Habibi: Jordanian and one of three Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who attempted to hijack an El Al B707 in Munich on February 10, 1970.

Jibril el-Hadar: one of four Libyans who arrived in France on August 20, 1987, who then were arrested by Paris police on September 2–3, 1987, and who were deported on September 4, 1987. The U.S. Embassy and French Interior Ministry said that the Libyans were plotting a series of attacks on French soil to mark the 18th anniversary of the September 1 takeover of Libya by Col. Muammar al-Qadhafi and to "punish France" for its support of the Chadian government.

Farouk Haddad: one of 138 individuals whose trial in Fleury-Merogis, France, began on September 1, 1998, on charges of selling arms to Algerian terrorists. Haddad said he was asked to keep the weapons.

Abdelkrim el Hadouti: variant Abdelkrim el-Haddouti. Moroccan, age 26, arrested in Belgium on September 13, 2001, for involvement in a plot against the U.S. Embassy in Paris. On September 30, 2003, he was sentenced to five years for being an accomplice of Nizar Trabelsi, who planned to attack Kleine Brogel Air Base in Belgium by driving a car bomb into the canteen.

Patrick Haemers: variant Patrick Emers. Alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. On May 29, 1989, Brazilian federal police arrested him in Rio de Janeiro. He was detained along with Lizzie Shack, his wife, and Diane Inu, both Belgians. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C-130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Andrea Haeusler: variant of Andrea Hausler.

Hagop Hagopian: variant of Hagop Hagorian.

Hagop Hagorian: variant Hagopian; aliases Arutyun Takosyan, Agop Agopyan. Hooded spokesperson for the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. On July 31, 1982, he and his bodyguard died from injuries suffered in the previous day's Israeli bombing of the group's Beirut headquarters. Other reports said that he was assassinated on April 28, 1988, in front of his Athens home. He was posing as Henri Tutuzan, a Lebanese. He was carrying a South Yemeni passport.

Ghassan Ibrahim el Haj: one of two Palestinians arrested by Spanish police on July 12, 1985, for plotting to blow up the Syrian Embassy in Madrid. They were believed to be members of Force 17, part of Fatah. Police found 12 kilograms of explosives on the men. On November 5, 1986, he was sentenced by the Spanish National High Court to four years and four months for being accessory to the illegal possession of arms and explosives. The offense of preparing to attack the Syrian ambassador was "not proven."

Mohammed Abu el Haja: Palestinian, age 24, who with three other Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorists fired 200 bullets from their machine guns and threw three incendiary grenades at El Al 432, a B720B scheduled to fly from Zurich to Tel Aviv, as it was taxiing down the runway on February 18, 1969, and while they were driving a car. The pilot was killed. They were sentenced to 12 years' hard labor for murder by a Winterthur court on December 22, 1969, but were released after the September 6, 1970, hijacking of a Swissair plane by the PFLP. The group said they were "trained in Jordan and some of them left Syria to carry out their attack in Zurich."

Youssef Mohammed el-Hajdib: Lebanese citizen, age 21, arrested in the Kiel, Germany, train station on August 19, 2006. Police suspected he had ties to Hizb ut-Tahrir, a radical Islamic group banned in Germany. He also might have visited the Imam Ali Mosque in Hamburg, a hangout for Hizballah supporters. He had arrived in Germany from Lebanon in September 2004 and was taking engineering classes in Kiel in preparation for enrolling at a German university. Hajdib's brother had been killed in an Israeli air raid in southern Lebanon in July 2006. On December 18, 2007, he was sentenced in absentia in Lebanon to life in prison. The same day, Hajdib appeared before a Duesseldorf court. On February 7, 2008, he told a German court that he had taken part in the attempt to bomb two German commuter trains in July 2006 and that the ringleader was Jihad Hamad, sentenced in Lebanon in December 2007 to 12 years in prison. The bombing was to be revenge for German newspapers' reprinting of caricatures of Muhammad.

Mustafa Haji: alleged by the Mojahedin-e Khalq to be the leader of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemloo, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Boubakeur el-Hakim: on March 14, 2008, a French judge sentenced him to seven years on terrorism charges of "criminal association with a terrorist enterprise" for sending a dozen French fighters to training camps for al Qaeda in Iraq. His brother was killed in Iraq.

Jamil Abdel Hakim: Palestinian deported to Damascus on March 23, 1973, from France after two terrorists were arrested on March 15, 1973, in France, while attempting to smuggle explosives across the Italian–French border for use in attacks against the Israeli and Jordanian embassies as part of a Black September campaign. The two drove from a Lebanese Fatah base in a Mercedes carrying 35 pounds of plastique. The two Fatah members were imprisoned for six months and then expelled from France.

Abdelkader Hakimi: on February 16, 2006, a Belgian court sentenced him to seven years for belonging to the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, which was involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 and the 2003 bombing in Casablanca that killed 32 people.

Abdelkhir el-Hakkaoui: Moroccan, age 25, arrested with two others on December 29, 1973, by Heathrow police for carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. On January 4, 1974, he and his accomplices were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. El-Hakkaoui received a three-year jail sentence.

'Abbas Muhammad Hala: Kuwaiti and one of eight Hizballah terrorists arrested in Spain on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that they had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the ports of Valencia and Madrid. Addresses of network members and the address of Fadlallah, Hizballah's spiritual leader, were found in his personal notebook.

'Ali Sayf al-Din Muhammad Halawah: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Therese Halaseh: one of four Black September hijackers on May 8, 1972, of Sabena Airlines Flight 517 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb.

Ute Haldki: one of two suspected Red Army Faction terrorists arrested on December 7, 1989, at Mildstedt, on the outskirts of Husum. She had been arrested earlier following violent demonstrations in the Hafenstrasse area in February 1988.

Claude Halfen: French Direct Action member arrested for the May 31, 1983, murders of two policemen on a Paris street during a routine identity check. On July 13, 1984, the French government filed murder charges against him in the 1983 case. In response, Direct Action bombed several facilities, including the Atlantic Institute, the French Navy Ministry, and the Industry Ministry. On December 8, 1986, the trial for three members of the group, including Halfen, was stopped because jurors, intimidated by death threats, failed to show up for the trial.

Nicolas Halfen: French Direct Action member arrested for the May 31, 1983, murders of two policemen on a Paris street during a routine identity check. On July 13, 1984, the French government filed murder charges against him in the 1983 case. In response, Direct Action bombed several facilities, including the Atlantic Institute, the French Navy Ministry, and the Industry Ministry. On December 8, 1986, the trial for three members of the group, including Halfen, was stopped because jurors, intimidated by death threats, failed to show up for the trial.

Mahmud Abu Halima: Egyptian-born former Brooklyn cab driver who obtained German citizenship. He was a friend of Sayyid Nosair, who was acquitted of the murder of Rabbi Meir Kahane, and of Mohammed A. Salameh, who was arrested for renting the truck used in the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which seven people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. By March 13, 1993, police wanted Halima for questioning in the case. He was arrested by Egyptian police on March 14 at the family home in Kafr al-Dawwar city near Alexandria. Egypt deported him to the United States on March 24, 1993. He had a U.S. green card.

He was born in January 1960. He joined Alexandria University's faculty of law but dropped out in the first year. He traveled to Germany in 1980 and moved on to New Jersey in 1982. He later moved back to Munich, where he married a German woman and had four children. He was believed to be a driver for radical "blind sheik" Omar Abd-al-Rahman.

On May 26, 1993, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993. The trial began in September 1993. On March 4, 1994, after five days of deliberation, the jury found him guilty on all counts of conspiracy, explosives charges, and assault. On May 24, 1994, U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy sentenced him to 240 years in prison, a life term calculated by adding the life expectancy of each of the people killed in the blast, plus 30 years for two other counts.

Nimer Halima: key associate of Abu Nidal, he was arrested by Vienna, Austria financial police on January 13, 2000.

Jihad Hamad: turned himself into authorities in Tripoli, Lebanon, in August 2006, at age 20. He had been living in Cologne. Police found bomb-making materials and a receipt for gasoline canisters in his apartment in Germany. He was sentenced in Lebanon on December 18, 2007, to 12 years in prison. On February 7, 2008, Lebanese citizen Youssef Mohammed el-Hajdib told a German court that Hamad was the ringleader in a plot to bomb two German commuter trains in July 2006 in retaliation for German newspapers' reprinting of caricatures of Muhammad. Police said they might have had support from a network of Islamic extremists in Germany and Lebanon. They might have acted out of anger over the Israeli incursion into Lebanon to root out Hizballah terrorists.

Abdel Hadi Hamadei: variant Abdelhadi Hamadi. Senior member of Hizballah's security command and brother of Mohammed Ali Hamadei. On April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Ali 'Abbas Hamadei: naturalized German national and brother of Muhammad Hamadei arrested on January 26, 1987, by Frankfurt airport police for the January 18, 1987, kidnapping in Lebanon of Rudolf Cordes, a West German pharmaceutical company executive, and German Siemens electronics company employee Alfred Schmidt. His release was demanded on July 24, 1987, by an Air Afrique hijacker. On August 6, 1993, German authorities released and deported him after he had served five years for the Cordes-Schmidt kidnappings.

Mohammed Ali Hamadei: wanted for the June 14, 1985, hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847, during which U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was shot to death and thrown onto the tarmac.

Abdelhadi Hamadi: variant of Abdel Hadi Hamadei.

Mohammad Hamadi: one of two suspected Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) members arrested on April 26, 1979, at the Passau-Achleiten crossing point on the Austrian–Bavarian border when West German police searching their rental car found 50 kilograms of explosives, time fuses, and 11 passports with photographs not of them. Bonn authorities believed that the duo intended to pass the documents to Palestinians either already in Germany or intending to arrive soon. They had planned to bomb an Israeli ship in Hamburg harbor. They were also suspected of involvement in the April 24, 1979, bombing of a Jewish synagogue in Vienna. They were held in Munich for trial. During his trial in Straubing, the Lebanese said that he was a Palestinian freedom fighter and that refusal to carry out his organization's orders would have meant his death. He said that he was to take the explosives from Vienna to Hamburg for transshipment to an Israeli port and that he had not intended to use the explosives in Germany. On July 20, 1979, the Passau regional court found him guilty of having prepared a bombing attack and sentenced him to two and one-half years.

Muhammad Ali Hamadi: held for hijacking TWA Flight 847 in 1985.

Ali Hamdan: one of three Lebanese men arrested on August 20, 1986, in West Berlin on suspicion of preparing to bomb a U.S. military installation. The trio was supported by Libya. They were released on September 3, 1986, due to insufficient evidence. Two of the men were handed over to immigration police for possible deportation.

Isaac Hamdi: alias Osman Hussein; variant Hussein Osman. He is a Briton of Somali origin (other reports have said Ethiopian origin), who was age 27 when he was suspected in the 7/7 Shepherd's Bush, West London subway train bombings in 2005. Police tracked his cell phone. He had been in London, Paris, Milan, and Rome. His brother (or brother-in-law), Ramzi Hamdi, age 34, who runs a jewelry store near the central train station, was also detained with Isaac on July 29, 2005, by police in Rome for the failed copycat bombings of the London subway system on July 21, 2005. Another brother was detained later; the brothers were held for possession of false documents and other charges. Hamdi had lived in Italy from 1991 to 1996. He obtained false Somali documents and used the name Osman Hussein to obtain U.K. citizenship.

On July 31, Isaac Hamdi told Italian police that the attacks were not intended to harm anyone (not mentioning the photo of nails attached to a bomb that ran in the world's media), but to draw attention to the war in Iraq. He claimed the group was not linked to al Qaeda. He had the assistance of other Ethiopians throughout Europe in escaping the country immediately after the bombing. He grew up in Italy and speaks fluent Italian. He was represented by attorney Antoinetta Sonessa. Italian police said that he was probably a member of a group of amateurs rather than part of an Islamist cell. The United Kingdom requested extradition. On August 17, an Italian court approved his extradition to the United Kingdom. He appealed the ruling on August 26. On September 13, a lawyer for the British government said that Isaac Hamdi was to be extradited to the United Kingdom within 10 days after an Italian court rejected his appeal. On September 22, British police arrested him after he was extradited to the United Kingdom from Italy. He was charged with attempted murder, conspiracy to murder, and explosives offenses.

In mid-2007, he was found guilty of conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He would be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Ramzi Hamdi: brother (or brother-in-law) of Isaac Hamdi, age 34, both of whom were arrested by Rome police on July 29, 2005, for the failed copycat bombings of the London subway system on July 21, 2005.

Abdelali Hamdoun: Algerian imam of a mosque in France arrested by French police and deported to Morocco on October 21, 1994, for links with Algerian terrorists.

Ahmed Hamad Hamed: Libyan arrested after three gunmen killed Abdel Belil Aref, a wealthy Libyan businessman, as he was dining at the Café du Paris on the Via Veneto in Rome on April 18, 1980.

Mohammed Hamid: self-appointed Osama bin London, age 50, convicted on February 26, 2008, of running terrorist training camps in the U.K. countryside, including one attended by the five men convicted of the failed bombing plot of July 21, 2005, against the London subway system. He was also convicted of encouraging Muslims to attend the camps and of holding recruiting sessions in his London home aimed at murdering “nonbelievers.” Prosecutors told the Woolwich Crown Court that he had deemed the 52 deaths in the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005 as “not even breakfast for me.” He was an associate of Abu Hamza al-Masri, the radical Islamic cleric. Hamid, who often gave fiery speeches at Speakers’ Corner in Hyde Park, ran a bookstall in central London.

Rashid Hamieda Hamieda: at-large member of the Abu Nidal group. On February 5, 1987, Italian prosecutor Domenico Sica asked Judge Rosario Priore to indict him as the control officer for the December 27, 1985, Abu Nidal Kalashnikov and grenade attack in Rome’s Fiumicino Airport terminal that killed 16 people and wounded 73 others. On February 12, 1988, a Rome court sentenced him in absentia to life in prison.

Dion Hamilton: British citizen and director of the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement on December 6, 1982, sabotaged a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

Finlay Dean Hamilton: British director of a shipping firm in Beira sentenced to 20 years by a Beira court on February 22, 1983, for the December 9, 1982, sabotage by the Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO) of the Munhava oil tank farm near Beira, destroying the British Petroleum part of the complex and damaging the facilities belonging to Caltex and Mobil. Mozambique blamed South Africa for the attack. He was also convicted of concealing at his Beira home four pistols, three grenades, and 200 rounds of ammunition.

Ahmed Hammami: brother of Said Hammami. On July 31, 1978, he and a colleague attacked the Iraqi Embassy in Paris, throwing a grenade, firing submachine guns, and taking eight hostages. The second terrorist ran away. Hammami demanded the release of a woman who had been arrested in the assassination of Iraqi ambassador Taha Ahmad ad-Dawud three days earlier in London. He wanted a plane to pick her up in London and then fly elsewhere. Hammami surrendered. As the terrorist was being escorted out of the embassy by French police plainclothesmen, Iraqi guards opened fire, killing a French police inspector and wounding two other police officers and Hammami.

Said Hammami: Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and Fatah spokesperson in London killed on January 4, 1978, when a Middle Eastern man fired three shots into him in the basement of the Arab League headquarters. The PLO blamed Black June. The Voice of the Palestinian Revolution claimed credit. His brother, Ahmed, was one of two Palestinian terrorists who attacked the Iraqi Embassy in Paris on July 31, 1978.

Abdesslam Hamouda: Libyan intelligence officer believed linked to the September 19, 1989, bombing of the Union Des Transport Aeriens aircraft over Chad. Observers expected French investigating judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere to issue an arrest warrant following his July 5–18, 1996, visit to Libya. Hamouda was believed to have purchased the bomb timer in Germany. On June 12, 1998, France announced that it would try him, along with five other Libyans, in absentia. On March 10, 1999, a French antiterrorism court imposed life in prison on the six. The prosecutor said the evidence showed that the Libyan officials had organized the attack.

Kamel Hamraoui: on January 24, 2005, Judge Maria Clementina Forleo dropped terrorism charges against three Tunisians and two Moroccans, including Hamraoui, in a decision that differentiated between guerrillas and terrorists according to her reading of the 1999 UN Global Convention on Terrorism. She indicated that their actions in recruiting for and financing training camps in the Iraq war zone did not create civilian terror or break international humanitarian law and as such were guerilla in nature, not terrorist, and could not be prosecuted. Prosecutors said they would appeal. The judge's decision was reversed by higher courts in 2007 based on the terrorist nature of the crime rather than its milieu or intended effect. Hamraoui was to be tried again in a Brescia court.

Mahmoud Hamshari: Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) and Al Fatah representative in Paris killed on December 8, 1972, in his apartment at 175 Rue d'Alesia when a high-pitched whine over his phone line activated a detonator in the phone. Israeli intelligence was suspected. The Israelis claimed he was behind the attempted assassination of David Ben Gurion in Copenhagen in 1969 and the bombing of the Swissair plane that killed 47 persons on February 21, 1970. Israel said he was a Black September operative with connections to Mohammed Boudia's group.

Mohammed el-Hanafi: Egyptian and one of three Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who attempted to hijack an El Al B707 in Munich on February 10, 1970.

Mohammed Haneef: Indian, age 27, who graduated from the Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences in Bangalore in 2002. He was a doctor in England's Halton Hospital until 2005. He was scheduled to move to the Gold Coast Hospital in Australia but was arrested in Brisbane. On July 14, Australian police charged him with providing support to a terrorist organization for the June 29, 2007, bombing of a London disco and the June 30, 2007, ramming of a flaming SUV into the entrance of the Glasgow airport in Scotland. He allegedly gave terrorists Sabeel and Kafeel Ahmed a cell phone SIM card registered in his name. He was represented by attorney Stephen Keim. He was granted bail on July 16 after the judge said that the prosecutors had not established his links to a terrorist group. On July 27, Australia's chief prosecutor dropped the charges, saying it was a mistake to have linked him to the bombings. His Australian work visa remained canceled. The next day, he flew to India. On August 21, an Australian court ruled that the immigration minister had incorrectly revoked the visa.

Gerard Hanratty: arrested on the Dutch–German border in August 1988. In June 1989, he was charged with attempted murder for the March 23, 1987, car bomb attack on the British Army of the Rhine headquarters and the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombing of barracks at Duisburg on July 13, 1988. On July 31, 1991, the Sixth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court ruled that there was no longer a strong suspicion regarding the Duisburg bombing and suspended the arrest warrant. However, the court ruled that he be kept in provisional extraditionary custody because the U.K. judiciary was proceeding against him for unauthorized possession of weapons and had applied for his extradition.

Bret Ankier Hanse: Swiss photographer arrested on March 12, 1985, for the May 30, 1984, bombing of a press conference in Nicaragua by Eden Pastora, leader of the anti-Sandinista Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, in which 8 people were killed and 22 injured. He was also suspected of planting a bomb in March 1985 that damaged a Tegucigalpa disco. He might have used a stolen Danish passport of Per Anker Hansen.

Karsten Moller Hansen: one of seven Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) members in Blekingegade, Denmark, sentenced to prison. They may have been responsible for the 1988 post office robbery in Kobmargergade that netted 13 million Danish kroner, but all were acquitted for lack of evidence. He was free after being released after sentencing in 1991.

Per Harker Hansen: Swede posing as a journalist and alleged to be a Sandinista agent, suspected by Honduran police of setting off a bomb on March 9, 1985, at Le Volcanic Discotheque on Morazan Boulevard in downtown Tegucigalpa. He might be the same person identified as Bret Ankier Hanse, believed responsible for the May 30, 1984, bombings in la Penca, Nicaragua, that injured Eden Pastora.

Manuela Happe: alleged member of the Red Army Faction sentenced to 15 years by the higher regional court in Stuttgart-Stammheim on March 20, 1986.

Mohammed Haq: on May 20, 1987, the Libyan shot former Libyan ambassador Ezzedin Ghadamsi in the head in the latter's Vienna, Austria, apartment building. Haq scuffled with his victim and then dropped his passport and fled to the Libyan Embassy with a bloodied shirt. Haq surrendered to police, who arrested an accomplice at a Hernals hotel.

Zia Ul Haq: Haq, age 25, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Carlos Francesaus Haraguas: member of the right-wing Catalan Militia who set fires at Barcelona book shops and attacked the offices of separatist groups in 1986.

Frederick Haramboure: member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) roving commando who on June 18, 1993, was sentenced by a Paris court to 10 years in prison.

'Ali Sa'id al-Hariri: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Husayn Muhammad al-Hariri: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Jamal Harith: one of five U.K. citizens who had been held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban who were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. Four were then immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. Harith, age 37, was released.

George Harrison: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning ring. Undercover agents were offered $16,000 in cash for 42 automatic rifles and handguns. In late July 1981, Harrison and two others appeared in court to face grand jury indictments charging them with receiving and possessing firearms not registered to them, possessing firearms on which the serial numbers had been obliterated, and planning to export the arms to the IRA in Ireland.

Gerald Harte: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested and charged in the Netherlands with the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen of two vacationing 24-year-old Australian lawyers believed to be British soldiers at an Italian restaurant in Roermond. The IRA apologized for the mistake.

Rolf Erwin Hartung: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on October 4, 1988, by police on charges of involvement in the September 8, 1986, bombing of the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution in Cologne. Parts of a handwritten letter found near the scene were believed to have been written by him. He joined an RAF "fighting unit" in the summer of 1986. He was also involved in the bombing of the Dornier firm in Immenstaad on Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, which caused DM 500,000 in damages. Handwritten warnings were also written by Hartung.

Alan G. Harvey: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Farid Hasan: Syrian arrested on May 10, 1986, in connection to two men arrested on May 2, 1986, by Spanish police for carrying a four-kilogram bomb in the vicinity of the Bank of America building in Madrid. The duo claimed membership in the Call of Jesus Christ, a Middle East anti-Zionist terrorist group formed in 1978. Evidence pointed to Libyan funding. Madrid's Cam-bio 16 reported that he had worked for France as a double-agent penetration of the terrorist group. He had been arrested in Paris a year earlier but had been released on condition that he spy on the group.

Gha'ib Hasan: identified on October 9, 1990, by the London-based Kuwaiti newspaper al-Qabas al-Duwali as being a leader of a worldwide Iraqi terrorist network. The paper claimed that on March 14, 1984, the Iraqi diplomat had opened fire in Stockholm on a group of demonstrators protesting against the policies of Saddam Hussein, killing two. He left Sweden, later surfacing in East Berlin and Sudan.

Mahdi Su'du Hasan: one of two Lebanese hijackers of a Romanian B707 chartered by the Libyan Arab Airways to fly from Athens to Tripoli on June 23, 1983.

Osama Ahmad Hasan: one of seven fundamentalists with terrorist connections arrested on September 27, 1998, in London under the immigration law. He was a member of the Armed Islamic Group in Egypt and brother of Sharif Hasan, a leader of the Returnees from Afghanistan executed in Egypt years earlier.

Abdol Ghaffar Hasemi: Moroccan holding a Dutch passport who was among 18 suspected terrorists held by the Spaniards on November 8, 2004. He was suspected by Spanish investigators of developing technology for converting laptops into time bombs.

Adnam Ali Hasham: one of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC)—Black September—Nationalist Youth Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who told two vacationing British women that they were Persians and gave them an electronic music device to bring with them on an El Al B707 flying from Rome to Tel Aviv on August 16, 1972. The device had a bomb inside, which exploded shortly after takeoff. The plane landed safely in Rome. Rome police arrested the Iraqi and Jordanian men. In February 1973, they disappeared from Italy after being given provisional liberty on the grounds that the bomb “was not adequate to destroy the airliner.”

Syed Hashmi: alias Fahad. U.S. citizen, age 26, wanted in the United States on charges of procuring military equipment for al Qaeda. He was arrested on June 6, 2006, by Heathrow Airport police as he attempted to board a flight to Pakistan. He was extradited to the United States on May 25, 2007, and appeared in federal court the next day. He was the first terrorism suspected extradited to the United States by the United Kingdom.

Ahmed Nawaf Mansour Hasi: Palestinian with Jordanian papers arrested for the West Berlin bombings of La Belle Discotheque on April 5, 1986, and the German–Arab Friendship Society on March 29, 1986. Hasi said on April 30, 1986, that his group was responsible for the Friendship Society bombing at the behest of Haithem Said (Abu Ahmed), a lieutenant colonel in the Syrian Air Force and second in command of the Syrian intelligence service. On July 31, 1986, attempted murder charges were brought against Hasi and Farouk Salameh, a Palestinian with Jordanian papers, for the Friendship Society bombing. The trial began on November 17, 1986, and the duo was convicted on November 26.

Hassan el-Haski: ringleader of the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, arrested by authorities in the Canary Islands in December 2004. He was charged with plotting attacks on the Spanish mainland and with setting up a Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group cell. He traveled at least six times to Maaseik, Belgium, believed to be the location of a terrorist cell. He was one of Saudi Arabia’s most-wanted terrorists.

Lahoussine el-Haski: most-wanted suspect in Saudi Arabia, arrested in July 2004 in Maaseik, Belgium. He had returned from a trip to Syria and Turkey. On February 16, 2006, a Belgian court sentenced him to seven years for belonging to the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, which was involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 and the 2003 bombing in Casablanca that killed 32 people. He was indicted on April 11, 2006, by Spanish judge Juan del Olmo for membership in a terrorist group, murder, and attempted murder.

Nabil Hasnen: Lebanon-based Palestinian, age 25, who was the leader of three Black June members who took five hostages at the Syrian Embassy in Rome on October 11, 1976. They surrendered after two hours, after discovering they had not taken the ambassador hostage. The attackers were jailed and charged with attempted murder. On November 6, 1976, a Rome court sentenced them to 15 years in jail, to be followed by 3 years of supervised freedom. The Syrians requested extradition.

Abdel Mohsen Hassan: killed by an Israeli security guard after he and three other Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists driving in a car fired 200 bullets from their machine guns and threw 3 incendiary grenades at El Al Flight 432, a B720B scheduled to fly from Zurich to Tel Aviv, as it was taxiing down the runway on February 18, 1969. The pilot was killed.

Farj Hassan: leader of an al Qaeda cell in the Italian cities of Milan, Naples, and San Remo and the island of Malta. On October 10–11, 2002, Italian police arrested five North African members of the cell; a sixth remained at large. The Salafist Group for Call and Combat terrorist cell based in Milan was part of a European network, with contacts in Iran, Malaysia, and Afghanistan, that was suspected of plotting attacks on U.S. targets.

Hassan Rad Hassan: Brazilian member of Hizballah arrested in Valencia, Spain, on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that eight Hizballah terrorists had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the ports of Valencia and Madrid.

Hasan Hassani: one of four Iranian members of the Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution arrested on July 23, 1984, while carrying two antitank grenade launchers, six 40-mm grenade launchers, and two .45 caliber machine guns in Barcelona and Madrid.

Eva Sybille Haule-Frimpong: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction (RAF), including Haule-Frimpong. She was wanted for the attempted bombing of the NATO school at Oberammergau on December 18, 1984. On August 2, 1986, she was arrested in a café in Ruesselsheim, near Frankfurt, in possession of a false identity card, a loaded pistol, and 80 rounds of ammunition. She was wanted in the bombing by the Mara Cagol Commando of the RAF on July 9, 1986, that had killed Karl Heinz Beckurts and his chauffeur, Eckhard Groppler, in Strasslach. Beckurts was a nuclear physicist and the chief of research and development at the Siemens Corporation. On September 11, 1988, West German authorities found an anesthetics cache of eight ampules for kidnappings in the Stuttgart home of a 30-year-old RAF suspect who had been maintaining contact with an imprisoned terrorist. Found with the ampules were handwritten instructions that graphologists traced to Haule-Frimpong, who had recently been sentenced to 15 years in prison by the Stuttgart Regional Court. On January 25, 1993, she was being investigated in the killing of U.S. soldier Edward Pimental on August 8, 1985, and the deaths of two others at the U.S. air base in Frankfurt in a bombing in which 20 others were injured as well. On August 17, 2007, the Frankfurt State Court ruled that she no longer posed a danger to the public and was to be paroled on August 21, 2007, after serving 21 years of her life sentence. She was freed on August 20, 2007.

Andrea Hausler: variants Haeusler, Haeussler. Extradition from Greece to Germany was announced on January 8, 1997, for the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque that killed 4 and injured 229 people. Hausler, age 31, was arrested in October 1996 at the request of German authorities while vacationing in a Chalkidiki resort.

On November 18, 1997, the trial began of Abulghasem Eter, Yasser Chreidi, Ali Chanaa, and Verena Chanaa and her sister, Andrea Hausler, for the bombing on charges of murder, attempted murder, and being an accessory to a crime. Eter and Hausler were charged as accessories. All faced life sentences. On November 13, 2001, Hausler was acquitted for lack of proof that she knew there was a bomb in her sister Verena's bag.

Bernard Hausmann: Baader-Meinhof terrorist, age 25, carrying the passport of Hugo Mueller, a Dutch political science student, who was killed on May 25, 1976, when his booby-trapped suitcase exploded when he opened it in a security office off the luggage area of Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport. The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine claimed credit for the bombing.

Siegfried Hausner: Red Army Faction of West Germany member arrested on June 19, 1972. Possibly the "Hausener" who led the Socialist Patients' Collective that took over the German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975.

The Siegfried Hausner Commando Group of the Red Army Faction claimed credit for kidnapping Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Hausener: leader of six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective (they initially claimed they were members of the Holger Meins Commando) who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed the military attaché, Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, and the economic counselor, Heinz Hillegaart. They demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others, including Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof, Gudrun Ensslin, and Jan-Carl Raspe. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing one of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, four terrorists were sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison.

Andre Haverman: variant Haberman; alias Jean Baptiste. French photographic microfilmer who provided papers and money to Japanese Red Army member Takahashi Taketomo in 1974. He was arrested and charged with forgery and the use of forged documents but was then released. Directorate of Territorial Surveillance (DST) authorities believed he was the Curiel Apparat's document forger.

Habib Haydar: alias of Bassam.

Patrick Hayes: arrested on March 1993 at his home in Walford Road, Stoke Newington, London, where police found guns, explosives, and bomb-making equipment. He was detained for the January 28, 1993, Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombing of Harrods that injured four people. On April 14, 1994, the jury was told that authorities had found an IRA hit list at the home of an English terrorist recruit after the Harrods explosion. The notebook was found in Hayes's jacket. The hit list included the names of Stella Rimington, the head of MI5, and Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley. Hayes was linked to a conspiracy to bomb Canary Wharf. He was also believed to have bombed a train from Victoria to Ramsgate in Kent in February 1993. He refused to plead on what he claimed were "political matters," but a not-guilty plea was entered for him on eight counts.

Amer Haykel: British citizen, age 45, arrested on June 21, 2005, by Mexican authorities on information from U.S. law enforcement. U.S. and Mexican authorities said that he had initially been wanted for questioning for suspected links to the 9/11 attackers, but he was released the next day after being deemed not to "represent any threat for national security."

Nicholas Francis Henry Heath: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send him to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

David William Hedges: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send him to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Marie-France Heguy: Basque separatist prisoner in France whose release was demanded on December 13, 1986, by 10 armed Iparretarrak members who broke into a prison in Pau, France. She was freed the next day. She had been sentenced to four years for keeping weapons at her home. She is believed to have been killed on June 22, 1987, by a train when a police officer stopped her fleeing car at a crossing near Biarritz.

Renata Hehr: West German arrested on May 3, 1983, in Arequipa, Peru, and accused of terrorist activities, including the bombing of the Peruvian-U.S. Cultural Institute in Arequipa. She had 39 sticks of dynamite, 83 fuses, 2 revolvers, and subversive materials. She was charged with terrorist activities committed in 1978, 1980, and 1983 while she was a member of the Shining Path. She said that Shining Path leader Alberto Segura forced her to commit the 25 terrorist acts, which were directed at stores, banks, power line towers, electricity stations, and radio stations in Cusco, Puno, and Arequipa. On November 7, 1986, she was sentenced to a 12-year prison term, to end on April 30, 1995. Her first attorney, Vasquez Huayca, disappeared under mysterious circumstances. Martha Huatay, head of the Peruvian Democratic Lawyers Association, charged that government forces had abducted Huayca in the corridors of the building.

Volker Heidel: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Rolf Heissler: student, age 26, serving eight years for armed robbery. He was freed during the February 27, 1975, kidnapping by group Movement 2 June of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. He and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, and Amman. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum. He was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Monika Helbing: alias Elke Winter. Red Army Faction members Helbing and her husband Horst Winter were arrested on June 14, 1990, in East Germany. They were wanted for several kidnappings and assassinations of prominent Germans in the late 1970s, including the slaying of Hanns-Martin Schleyer in 1977. On July 27, 1990, they were freed by an East Berlin court because of the statute of limitations.

'Abd al-Ra'uf Mahir Muhammad Helni: one of three men arrested on December 29, 1985, outside their Paris hotel on suspicion of planning to bomb a synagogue on Rue Copernic. Their apartment contained sulfuric acid, nitric acid, wire, batteries, two packets of nails, a soldering iron, two alarm clocks, and magnesium. The Egyptian citizen had a false Spanish passport.

Mohammed Henab: variant Mohammed Jenab. One of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France on July 17, 1980. On March 10, 1982, a Nanterre jury sentenced him to 20 years in prison. His release was demanded on July 31, 1984, by the three Guardsmen of Islam hijackers of an Air France B737 flying from Frankfurt to Paris.

Massud Hendi: Iranian businessman and nephew of Ayatollah Khomeini arrested and charged in Paris in late September 1991 for having obtained visas for the three members of the hit team that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. Paris television reported that he had worked in the Iranian Embassy during the Gorji affair, named after the Iranian translator implicated in the Paris attacks of 1986. On December 6, 1994, a Paris terrorism court convicted him and sentenced him to 10 years for helping the killers enter France.

Lased Ben Heni: Libyan, age 31 as of October 2001, who went to Afghan camps and on March 13, 2001, had discussed with Essid Sami Ben Khemais a suffocating chemical that could be hidden in a tomato can. He was the liaison between an al Qaeda cell in Italy and a cell in Frankfurt that was wrapped up in December 2000. He was arrested in Germany and extradited to Italy. He was indicted for trafficking in arms, explosives, and chemical weapons. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Lased Ben Henin: Libyan arrested on October 10, 2001, near his Munich home on suspicion of links to al Qaeda. He was extradited to Italy on November 23, 2001.

Odfried Hepp: West German member of the right-wing Wehrsportgruppe Hoffman, arrested by Paris police on April 7, 1985, as he entered the apartment of a Tunisian colleague. Police found a number of pistols in the hideout. Hepp was wanted for the 1982 bomb attacks that injured several U.S. servicemen in Butzbach and Darmstadt and for five bank robberies.

Alfred Herman: name on a passport used by Helmut Voigt.

Stellan Hermanson: Swedish freelance journalist, formerly president of the Swedish Young Communist League, detained by the Southern Luzon Command in the Philippines on June 9, 1988, on suspicion of links with New People's Army (NPA) rebels. He was detained while on his way to an NPA mountain camp. On June 11, 1988, murder and kidnapping charges were filed against him; he had allegedly trained the NPA rebels. Witnesses reported that he had participated in several guerrilla attacks against security forces in the rebel-infested Bondoc Peninsula on Quezon Province and was part of the group that raided San Francisco town on February 12, 1988, killing a police officer and wounding two others. Manila rejected a Swedish Embassy request for his release.

Jose Luis Hermosa Urrea: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on July 6, 1987, by Saragossa, Spain, police, who seized more than 30 kilograms of explosives from their hotel room. He belonged to a Vizcaya "Gor-bea" ETA group. The duo was allegedly headed toward southern Spain, where they planned to bomb crowded beaches. They were traveling in a car carrying 34.7 kilograms of explosives, 1.98 kilograms of TNT, two bottles of oxygen, and firing pins. Police also found plans of Andalusia supermarkets.

Patrick Hill: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Paul Hill: one of the Guildford Four imprisoned for two alleged Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) pub bombings on October 5, 1974, in which 5 people died and 71 were injured. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and fabricated evidence. They spent 14 years in prison. The four were to receive compensation. Hill remained in prison for a conviction for the July 1974 kidnapping and murder of Brian Shaw, a former British soldier in Northern Ireland. On April 21, 1994, the conviction was overturned, and he was released. His case was portrayed in the movie In the Name of the Father.

Enrico Hilprecht: eldest of three German skin-heads who on June 11, 2000, kicked to death Alberto Adriano, age 39, a 20-year resident of Germany and Mozambican father of three, because of the color of his skin. Adriano was walking through a deserted park after midnight when he was attacked by the drunken extremists. Upon arrest, the trio described the victim as a “foreign pig.” Adriano died two days later of massive head injuries. On August 30, a state court in Halle sentenced Hilprecht, 24, to life in prison.

Zaki al-Hilu: alias Abu Sa’id. Commander leader for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. On August 17, 1984, gunmen on a motorcycle fired at him at point-blank range in Madrid, Spain, hitting him in the neck. On August 19, 1984, his condition had improved.

Ali Ghaleb Himmat: resident of Campione d’Italia, Switzerland, and Damascus, Syria, who held dual citizenship of Switzerland and Tunisia. In November 2001, the United States listed him as a terrorism financier.

Awni Hindawi: Jordanian student arrested in Italy on March 9, 1987, for political conspiracy through association, which carried a 5- to 12-year jail sentence. He was arrested in Genoa in June 1986 for belonging to an armed gang but was released after six months for lack of evidence. The Genoa magistrature believed he was an important Arab terrorist. Two of his cousins were believed to have organized the abortive bomb attack on an Israeli plane about to take off from a London airport in April 1986 and the bombing of a West Berlin disco in April 1986 in which 2 people were killed and 180 others injured.

Nezar Hindawi: Palestinian with Jordanian citizenship who left his pregnant girlfriend, Anne Marie Murphy, at Heathrow Airport in London to catch a morning flight to Tel Aviv on April 17, 1986. An X-ray machine found a 1.5 kilogram bomb in the bag that was to go on El Al Flight LY-016, a B747 scheduled to fly 376 people. The bomb was set to explode five hours into the flight. Hindawi was arrested in a London hotel on April 18, 1986. It was later determined that Hindawi was already married to Barbara Litwiniec. He claimed he had met the head of Syrian military intelligence in Damascus and had agreed to attack Israeli targets for $250,000. His apartment contained a Browning pistol and ammunition and a false Swiss diplomatic passport. On July 15, 1986, a London judge ordered him to stand trial for conspiring to murder Murphy and the passengers. The trial began on October 6, 1986, at the Old Bailey in London. He was found guilty on October 24, 1986, and sentenced to 45 years in prison. He is the brother of Ahmed Nawaf Mansour Hasi, arrested for the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque in West Berlin and the March 29, 1986, bombing of the German–Arab Friendship Society in the Kreuzberg District of West Berlin.

Eisa Hindi: alias of Dhiren Barot.

Issa al-Hindi: alias of Dhiren Barot.

Jean-Paul Hiribaren: member of the French Basque separatist group Iparretarrak arrested on February 20, 1988, by French gendarmes from the Groupement de l’Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale along with four associates after a shootout in front of the terrorists’ Boucau apartment.

Christian Hittier: one of four French citizens convicted on October 17, 1991, by a Bayonne court of belonging to the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group, which had killed 27 alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members between 1983 and 1987. The four were charged with criminal conspiracy and possession of weapons and explosives after police uncovered a weapons cache near the Spanish border in 1987. He was sentenced to five years in jail.

Michael “Mad Mike” Hoare: Irish-born former British military officer who on November 15, 1981, was participating in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government when he and 44 other mercenaries took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. He was charged by South Africa with kidnapping rather than hijacking. He was released on bail on December 1, 1981. However, after Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982. On July 26, 1982, he was found guilty on three charges. On July 29, 1982, he was sentenced to 20 years, with 20 years suspended. On August 5, 1982, the South African Supreme Court blocked his appeal.

Gerard Hodgins: Irish Republican Army (IRA) convict who joined the Maze Prison hunger strike on September 13, 1981.

Josef Hoellrigl: one of two South Tiroleans from the Plaus community arrested on September 23, 1988, by Italian police, who found eight kilograms of explosives in a secluded farmhouse in the Vintschgau mountains. They denied involvement in recent bombings.

Sean Gerard Hoey: unemployed electrician, age 35, and suspected Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) dissident. On May 10, 2005, a Belfast prosecutor said that he would be charged with 29 counts of murder in the Omagh case, which he was on May 26, 2005. He refused to testify. On December 20, 2007, Hoey was found not guilty of all 50 charges related to the August 15, 1998, Real IRA bombing in Omagh that killed 29 people and wounded more than 300. Judge Reginald Weir criticized the police forensics work as “slapdash” and involving “deliberate and calculated deception.”

Sieglinde Hofmann: West German Red Army Faction (RAF) terrorist sentenced to 15 years in 1982 for involvement in the Juergen Ponto assassination. Then on September 26, 1995, a Stuttgart judge sentenced her to life in prison for pushing a baby carriage in front of the car of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association, in the fall of 1977. The RAF member took weapons out of the carriage, opened fire, and killed Schleyer's driver and three police officers. She was also involved in the June 1979 assassination attempt against NATO commander in chief Alexander Haig.

Karl-Heinz Hoffman: leader of the neo-Nazi paramilitary group Military Sports Group Hoffman. He and five of his followers were arrested on September 27, 1980, in West Germany for the detonation of a hand grenade the previous day near the exit from the Munich Oktoberfest beer festival, which killed 13 and injured 215. On September 29, 1980, five of the suspects were released for insufficient evidence of connection to the blast.

Sieglinde Hoffmann: member of the West German Red Army Faction arrested with four other women in the Latin Quarter of Paris on May 6, 1980. Police found gasoline bombs, guns, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, and false identity papers.

Barbara Perau-Hofmeier: Red Army Faction member serving eight years in prison for a bomb attack on a federal border Guard barracks. She was freed early from custody on March 13, 1993.

Josef Norbert Hofmeier: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 22, 1987, and charged with setting off three bombs on August 11, 1986, at a barracks of the Federal Frontier Force in Swistal-Heimerzheim near Bonn, West Germany. On January 20, 1989, the 5th Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found the Duisburg resident guilty of bombing the Frontier barracks and the Fraunhofer Institute for Laser Technology in Aachen in 1986. He was sentenced to 10 years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that he was involved with the RAF.

Birgit Hogefeld: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction (RAF), including Hogefeld. On September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the RAF and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. The government issued a warrant for her arrest in the case. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the “hard core” of RAF members.

On June 27, 1993, she was arrested following a gun battle with officers of the GSG-9 antiterrorist unit of the federal frontier protection force in Bad Kleinen near Schwerin, Germany. Police were investigating whether she was involved in the March 1993 bombing of the prison in Weiterstadt, in Hesse, Germany. She had also been wanted for questioning in the early 1985 assassination of Maschinen-Turbinen Union board member Zimmerman, the July 1985 killing of Siemens board member Beckurts and his driver Groppler, the October 1985 attack on diplomat van Braunmühl, and the November 1989 attack on Deutsche Bank Board Chairman Herrhausen. She had been a Red Army Faction member since 1974.

She was born in Wiesbaden in 1956. She passed her final university exam in 1975. She broke off law studies and taught the organ.

On November 5, 1996, she was sentenced to life in prison by a five-judge court for the bombing of a U.S. Army base in Frankfurt in which Airman First Class Frank Scarton and civilian Becky Jo Bristol were killed. Soldier Edward Pimental was killed before the bombing so that his identity card could be used. She was also convicted for taking part in the 1988 attack on Tietmeyer, who later became president of the Bundesbank. The court was silent on the charge of murder linked to her June 1993 arrest. Hogefeld said that the RAF was part of a “bygone era” and should disband and that the armed struggle was wrong.

William Holleeder: arrested in Paris on February 29, 1984, and later extradited to the Netherlands on suspicion of involvement in the November 9, 1983, abduction in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, of Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur.

Josef Homolov: Czech-born Canadian who hijacked an Air India B747 flying the Bombay–Beirut–Rome–New York run on December 25, 1974.

Eleanore Honel-Hausman: widow of “Hugo Muller”—Bernard Hausmann—who died on May 25, 1976, when his suitcase exploded in Tel Aviv’s airport. She might have been one of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976, and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Werner Hoppe (variant Hopper): Baader-Meinhof Group member whose release from a West German jail was demanded both on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, and on September 5, 1977, by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers’ association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany’s most famous industrialist. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977.

Werner Hopper: variant of Werner Hoppe.

Bouchra el-Hor: young Dutch Moroccan mother from Zutphen detained with her husband, Yassin Nassari, age 27, in May 2006 at Luton Airport outside London. Police found suspicious files in his laptop computer, such as instructions for making explosives and a rocket launcher. When police searched their home, they found a document titled “A Training Schedule for Committing Jihad.” They found a letter by el-Hor in which she offered herself and their 6-month-old son as martyrs. She was charged with failing to disclose information to prevent a terrorist attack. Nassari was charged with possessing documents for terrorism. Their trial was set for May 23, 2007, in London. The duo had lived in the United Kingdom and traveled often to the Netherlands. El-Hor was represented by Amsterdam attorney Bart Nooitgedagt.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hornik: two of three people who brandished a broken pistol on June 2, 1958, and forced the pilot of a domestic Czechoslovakian general aviation charter plane to fly to Vienna, Austria. The trio was arrested for extortion under threats, but the charges were dropped on June 6, 1958.

Luitgard Hornstein: variant of Luttgard Hornstein.

Luttgard Hornstein: variant Luitgard Hornstein. Suspected member of the Red Army Faction arrested on August 2, 1986, in a café in Ruesselshiem near Frankfurt while carrying a false identity card. Involved in the bombing of the Dornier firm in Immenstaad on Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, which caused DM 500,000 in damages.

Said Khavar-Hoseyni: one of four Iranian members of the Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution arrested on July 23, 1984, while carrying two antitank grenade launchers, six 40-mm grenade launchers, and two .45 caliber machine guns in Barcelona and Madrid. They were charged with plotting to hijack a Saudi airliner. He was accused of running a terrorist operation out of his residence in Barcelona. Authorities believed the safe house was used in the coordination and perpetration of terrorist acts in Spain and elsewhere in Europe, including attacks against a Saudi plane and the U.S. Embassy in 1983. The terrorists planned to shoot down another Saudi plane and to assassinate Masud Rajavi, leader of the Mojahedine-e Khalq in Paris.

Ahmed Hossein: Palestinian, age 22, and one of three Black June members who took five hostages at the Syrian Embassy in Rome on October 11, 1976. They surrendered after two hours, after discovering they had not taken the ambassador hostage. The attackers were jailed and charged with attempted murder. On November 6, 1976, a Rome court sentenced them to 15 years in jail, to be followed by 3 years of supervised freedom. The Syrians requested extradition.

Seye Jabbar Hosseini: one of four Iranians arrested on July 24, 1984, in regard to a bungled terrorist attack in the fall of 1983 against a Saudi aircraft at Madrid's Barajas International Airport. Security guards found a rocket launcher near the main runway.

Djafar el Houari: president of the Algerian Fraternity in France placed under house arrest in Folembay, Aisne, France on August 5, 1994, in a roundup of Algerian terrorists.

Dr. Huber: Heidelberg psychiatrist who with his wife led the Socialist Patients' Collective, a group of mental patients who believed that the cause of mental illness is society, which must be changed through violent action. The group took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975.

Ahmed Huber: Islamic name of Albert Friedrich Armand Huber.

Albert Friedrich Armand Huber: variant Ahmed Huber. Resident of Mettmenstetten, Switzerland, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. The Swiss was an Al Qaeda official who converted to Islam and changed his first name from Albert. He told Swiss television that he hadn't met bin Laden but had met "members of his entourage" at Islamic conferences in the Middle East.

Johann Huber: would-be hijacker of Pan American 742, a B727 flying from Munich to West Berlin on August 3, 1970.

Francis Hughes: jailed Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunmen, age 25, who died during the evening of May 12, 1981, on the 59th day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison. He was serving a life term for killing a U.K. soldier and participating in several other attacks on security forces by an IRA unit he had led in the mid-1970s.

Paul Hughes: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested and charged in the Netherlands with the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen of two vacationing 24-year-old Australian lawyers believed to be British soldiers at an Italian restaurant in Roermond. The IRA apologized for the mistake.

Sean Hughes: Irish citizen arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van was carrying 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. Hughes's girlfriend, Susan May, was also arrested.

Aiden Hulme: brother of Robert Hulme, age 26. Both were convicted on April 8, 2003, by a U.K. court of endangering life and severely damaging property in bombings in London and Birmingham in 2001 as part of a campaign by Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) dissidents, probably the Real IRA.

Robert Hulme: brother of Aiden Hulme, age 23. Both were convicted on April 8, 2003, by a U.K. court of endangering life and severely damaging property in bombings in London and Birmingham in 2001 as part of a campaign by Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) dissidents, probably the Real IRA.

Alan Hunter: one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. Swedish police claimed that the group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson. Hunter was sent to England, where he was released.

Gerard Hunter: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Ahmad 'Abdallah al-Hurr: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Martin Hurson: on May 29, 1981, the national H-Block Committee (named after the Maze Prison facilities for Provisional Irish Republican Army [IRA] terrorists) reported that the IRA hunger striker would run in Longford-Westmeath for the Irish Republic's Parliament in the June 11 general elections. He died in Maze Prison on July 13, 1981, on the 45th day of his hunger strike. He had been sentenced to 20 years in November 1977 for bombings and conspiracy to kill members of the security forces in Northern Ireland.

Ibrahim Husari: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front (PLF) member, already in custody, for the PLF hijacking on October 7, 1985, of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, which set sail from Genoa, Italy. The hijackers took 116 passengers and 331 crew members as hostages. They killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer.

Hafiz Qasim Husayn: variant of Haq Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni.

Hasib Hussain: on July 7, 2005, at 9:47 A.M., a bomb being carried by Hussain, age 18, exploded on London Bus No. 30 at Tavistock Square, killing 13 people. The bomb had been placed at the rear of the upper deck of the bus, which had been de-toured because of the King's Cross–Russell Square bombing a few minutes earlier. Some theorized that the bomber had intended to hit another train but was prevented from entering a train station when they all closed. Hussain then hopped on a bus and was attempting to reset the timer when the bomb went off. The Pakistani lived in Leeds and completed vocational business studies at Matthew Murray High School. He had become more religious two years earlier. He had traveled to Karachi, Pakistan, on July 15, 2004.

Mehran Hussain: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with failure to disclose information that could have helped prevent a terrorist attack in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. On November 1, Hussain, age 23, was released for insufficient evidence.

Nabeel Hussain: British citizen, age 22, charged on August 29, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and with helping to plan to smuggle explosives on board aircraft in a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. The next hearing was scheduled for September 18.

Nabeel Hussain: variant of Nabel Hussain.

Nabel Hussain: variant Nabeel Hussain. One of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. Hussain was acquitted. Prosecutors said after the trial that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group was trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Tanvir Hussain: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and with preparing acts of terrorism in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. The trials of Hussain, age 25, and seven others began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, and to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. On his martyrdom videotape he said he wanted to commit several suicide attacks and "just do it again and again until people come to their senses and realize, you know, don't mess with the Muslims."

Umain Hussain: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with failure to disclose information that could have helped prevent a terrorist attack in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. On November 1, Hussain, age 24, was released for insufficient evidence.

Umair Hussain: variant of Umain Hussain.

Abdullah Hussainy: alias of Ramzi Binalshibh.

Mazen Ali Hussein: arrested on December 3, 2004, at a safe house of three radical Islamic members of the Iraqi group Ansar al-Islam, hours before they planned to attack Iraqi prime minister Ayad Allawi during a state visit. On November 16, 2005, Germany charged Ata Abdoulaziz Rashid; Hussein, now age 24; and Rafik Mohamad Yousef, age 31, with plotting to assassinate Allawi. Their trial began on June 19, 2006.

Robert Rudy Huys: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Jim Hyland: jailed for possession of explosives, his release was demanded by Teide Herrema's Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) kidnappers in Dublin, Ireland, on October 3, 1975.

I

---

I.I.: 41-year-old Turk arrested in a café on June 27, 1988, following the fatal shooting of Nihat Karaman, founder of the Association of Turkish Workers in the Netherlands, outside his Amsterdam home during the night. He had opposed the extreme rightists Grey Wolves Turkish terrorists and was active in the Dutch pacifist movement.

Bislan I.: Chechen, age 25, arrested in Tours, France, on May 18, 2005, for the November 2, 2004, murder of filmmaker Theo van Gogh. He was believed tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which assassin Mohammed Bouyeri belonged.

Mauro Iacone: Italian Defense Ministry employee arrested by Rome police on June 25, 1987, for the March 20, 1987, assassination of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement, by the Union of Communist Fighters, a Red Brigades splinter group.

Fernando Iannetti: lecturer in moral philosophy at the University of Salerno and friend of Red Brigades leader Giovanni Senzani. He was arrested on January 12, 1982, in his Formia apartment. Police believed the apartment was to be used in the kidnapping of Cesare Romiti, managing director of Fiat.

Miguel Ibanez Oteiza: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents.

He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, and faced six counts of homicide.

Pedro Jose Ibanez: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized an arms cache.

Carlos Ibarguren Aguirre: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military leader arrested by French police in a gunfight in St. Jean de Luz on November 9, 1982. A Madrid newspaper reported that ETA planned to assassinate the pope during his visit to Spain. Ibarguren was expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Miguel Angel Ibarguren: French citizen suspected of lodging Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members who was arrested on May 4, 1992, by French police.

Angel Ibarrola: one of four members of an armed group with ties to Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on February 19, 1983, by police in the Basque region of Llodio. They were charged with two bombings and seven planned executions of "informers." Police found an arms cache.

Sulayman Bilal Zain-ul Ibadin: arrested in early October 2001 by British authorities for links to Sakina Security Services, which trains Muslims for jihad.

Ahmed Mohammed Ibrahim: Ethiopian student, age 24, and suspected Eritrean Liberation Front member arrested on December 10, 1969, in Madrid airport while carrying a suitcase containing explosives. He said that the duo attempted to hijack an Ethiopian Airlines flight on the Madrid–Romeo–Athens–Addis Ababa run on December 12, 1969, to fly the plane over Paris and London, with plans to distribute leaflets and then destroy the plane on the ground in Copenhagen.

Muktar Said Ibrahim: alias Muktar Mohammed Said. Somali (other reports said he was from Eritrea), age 27, seen wearing a white baseball cap and a T-shirt with a palm tree in the upper deck of the number 26 bus on Hackney Road minutes before a backpack detonated on July 21, 2005, in an abortive copycat attack on the London bus and subway system. He had immigrated to the United Kingdom in 1990 and was sentenced to five years in prison in 1996 for a series of gang muggings. He became devout in prison. He obtained early release in 1998 and may have spent time at the Finsbury Park mosque in London. He became a U.K. citizen in September 2004. He was arrested on July 29, 2005, in a televised raid in London. On August 8, 2005, a London court charged Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, and Yasin Hassan Omar. They were ordered held until a November 14 hearing, when they would enter pleas on conspiracy and explosives offenses.

His trial began on January 15, 2007. Ibrahim allegedly had practiced firing rocket-propelled grenades in Sudan in 2003 and trained for jihad in Pakistan in 2004. Omar, Yahya, and Ibrahim attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred. On March 19, 2007, Ibrahim told the court that he had intentionally made fake bombs out of hydrogen peroxide that would not explode.

He had learned the technique off the Internet. He was represented by attorney George Carter-Stephenson.

On July 9, 2007, the jury convicted him of conspiracy to murder by plotting to bomb London's public transport system. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He would be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Sa'du Muhammad Ibrahim: variant Saado Mohamed Ibrahim Intissar. Lebanese Palestinian barber, age 28, who on July 26, 1996, hijacked Iberia Flight 6621, with 218 passengers and 14 crew flying from Madrid to Havana, and forced it to land in the United States. He surrendered peacefully to FBI authorities. Lebanese authorities announced that the hijacker was Palestinian, not Lebanese. On April 25, 1997, a Miami, Florida, jury deliberated for four hours before declaring him guilty. Sentencing was scheduled for August 11.

Saaïd Ibrahim: Dutch citizen of Ethiopian origin freed on December 18, 2002, by a Rotterdam court on charges of planning attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

Sa'id Ibrahim: one of four gunmen posing as patients who on October 22, 1995, shot to death Dr. Graziella Fumagalli, an Italian doctor working at a tuberculosis hospital in Marka, also wounding biologist Dr. Cristoforo Andreoli. Ibrahim remained at large.

Jone Idigoras Santana: one of five Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Biarritz, France, on March 18, 1991. She is the wife of ETA member Juan Jose Aristizabal Kortajarena, deported by Panama to France in 1984. The detainees were held at the Bayonne Judicial Police station.

Muhammad 'Ali Idris: one of three Libyans invited to leave Spain on December 20, 1985, when secret service agents uncovered the Libyans' plot to assassinate exile Libyan opposite leader

Dr. al-Muqayrif. The trio had worked for the Libyan Embassy in Madrid but did not have diplomatic status. They left within three weeks.

Bajro Ikanovic: returned to his native Bosnia-Herzegovina and converted to Islam. He was arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest in Sarajevo. He was arrested after Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy.

Pedro Aztorkitza Ikazurriaga: alleged leader of the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) political-military organization arrested in southwestern France on February 24, 1983.

Iker: one of six Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) gunmen who assassinated Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973, by placing a bomb in the street in which his car was driving.

Abu Imad: Muslim cleric who preaches at a Milan mosque, sentenced on December 20, 2007, by a Milan court to three years and eight months in prison for being part of a group that promotes holy war. Ten others were convicted of the same charge.

Marten Imandi: one of 15 members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) arrested on May 18, 1989, in Sweden on suspicion of involvement in explosions in Copenhagen and other crimes. On December 21, 1989, he was convicted of murder and gross destruction dangerous to the public and was sentenced by the Uppsala town court to life in prison. He was found innocent of the bombing of Northwest Orient Airlines' office in Stockholm in April 1986. He was found guilty of the bombing of the Copenhagen office of Northwest Orient in July 1985, and he admitted complicity in the bombing of a Copenhagen synagogue in July 1985. He was also convicted of complicity in the bombing of the Amsterdam office of El Al in 1986, but an appeals court overturned the conviction in 1990. On May 9, 1991, he escaped from Kumla prison by using a sheet to let himself down a 23-foot wall. He used a shotgun hidden outside to commandeer a car. He was captured with fellow escapee Ioan Ursut on May 14, 1991, while driving a stolen car near Arboga, 15 miles from the prison, when they came to a police checkpoint. Imandi was captured following a car chase; Irsut was picked up two hours later.

Huseyin Inan: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) kidnappers of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. Their release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972. On the same day, the Turkish tourist office in Sweden was bombed in response to Ankara's parliament ratifying the death sentences. The trio was hanged on May 6, 1972.

Vilim Inkret: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum.

Maria Soledad Iparraguirre Guenechea: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). On October 3, 2004, police in France and Spain detained 21 suspected ETA members, including ETA chief Miguel Albisu, age 43, and his female colleague Iparraguirre, age 43. French antiterrorism police arrested 20 suspects in seven raids in southwestern France near the French-Spanish border; Spanish Civil Guard police picked up the other suspect in Spain. Police found 900 pounds of explosives, dozens of guns including 20 submachine guns, grenade launchers, munitions, detonators, and computers.

Spanish authorities said Albisu had been the top leader of ETA since 1993; Iparraguirre was the senior-most ETA female and was “in charge of the revolutionary tax”—extortions from companies and other institutions—and was wanted for at least 14 murders. The duo was caught with their son in a house in Salies de Bearn, France.

Asif Iqbal: one of five U.K. citizens who had been held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban who were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was one of four who then were immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was released after questioning the next day.

Shaib Iqbal: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Zahoor Iqbal: arrested on January 31, 2007, as part of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading, age 29. He was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. His trial was scheduled to begin on January 29, 2008. He pleaded not guilty to assisting ringleader Parviz Khan and knowing of his plot and not reporting it to police. Police found in Iqbal’s computer the Encyclopedia Jihad, plus videos and books that included a “mujaheddin poison book.”

Ignacio Irastorza Martin: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Gorbea Commando member from Portugaleta Vizcaya arrested on January 31, 1987, by French police. He was expelled to Spanish police hours later.

Mohammed Irfan: arrested on January 31, 2007, as part of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading, age 30. He was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. His trial was scheduled to begin on January 29, 2008. He pleaded guilty.

Irhabi007: Internet screen alias of Younis Tsouli, a Moroccan living in London who was a pioneering cyberterrorist for al Qaeda.

Delgado Iriando: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Although Spain requested extradition, he was released.

Jesus Maria Lariz Iriando: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Although Spain requested extradition, he was released. A Court of Appeals spokesperson said on July 8, 1993, that it had denied extradition because the Spanish charges—belonging to an armed organization, kidnapping, carrying explosives and weapons, and destructive acts—were political crimes.

Ana Isabel Iriarte Santa Colomba: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Vizcaya Command member arrested on March 30, 1992, by Spanish police in the Txurdinaga District of Bilbao. Her husband, Luis Manuel Aldea Dominguez, was arrested with her.

Odile Iriarte: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in southern France on December 1, 1989, in raids that netted 180 kilograms of explosives, including ammonal and Goma-2; ammunition; grenade launchers; detonators; handguns; and forged papers.

Xavier Iriarte: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Jose Arregui Irostarbe: variant Erustarbe. Suspected Spanish member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by French police on December 19, 1987, while driving a van down a secondary road near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in the French Basque country. Police found that the van carried 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives, which are often used in ETA attacks. Police believed the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Otavi Iriqoyen: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in southern France on December 1, 1989, in raids that netted 180 kilograms of explosives, including ammonal and Goma-2; ammunition; grenade launchers; detonators; handguns; and forged papers.

Luis Iruretagoyena: on August 7, 1996, the Basque explosives expert jailed in Spain confessed that he had helped manufacture bombs for the Nicaraguan Sandinistas and leftist Salvadoran guerrillas. His bombs were used in a 1982 car bombing at the Defense Ministry in El Salvador and in several attacks on Salvadoran bridges and power line towers. He was arrested in Paris in 1992 and was extradited to Spain.

‘Abd al-Nabi ‘Abd al-Rasul ‘Isa: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid’s Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Khumayis Walid ‘Isa: Palestinian alleged by Panorama on August 2, 1992, to be a leader of an anti-Arafat Palestinian Popular Struggle Front linked to a Calabrian Mafia plot to assassinate Italian minister of defense Salvo Ando, minister of justice Claudio Martelli, and Enrico Coppola, Carabinieri general and commander of the fourth division, with its base in Messina. He was born on August 23, 1961, in Al-Fuhays, Jordan. He married Clara Di Ciaulo in Milan in 1987. He was the subject of a May 1987 expulsion order. A similarly named individual was arrested in Brazil for possession of a large quantity of heroin.

Majid ‘Abdallah al-’Isa: Palestinian who was one of 18 Arab terrorists reported by Madrid’s Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain in August to attack Middle Eastern diplomatic missions and assassinate Saudi ambassador Muhammad Nuri Ibrahim. They had received weapons and casing reports on the ambassador from a Lebanese student resident in Spain whose initials were HMI.

Anwar Abu ‘Isah: secretary some believed was involved in the April 10, 1983, assassination of ‘Isam as-Sartawi, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) representative at the Socialist International Conference held in Albufeira, Portugal. Abu Nidal claimed credit, as did the Antiterrorist Iberian Command. ‘Isah was shot in the thigh during the attack. He had joined the PLO a year earlier.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraz Isar: two of seven anticommunist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Jacqueline Isbir: member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction charged in absentia on May 8, 1985, by an Italian judge with the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Leamon R. Hunt, the American director general of the multinational force in Egypt’s Sinai Peninsula. On June 18, 1985, a Trieste court found three other defendants guilty.

Umar Islam: born Brian Young. Charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism for a foiled al Qaeda plot to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. The trial of Umar Islam, age 28, and seven others' trials began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, and to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. On his martyrdom videotape he said, "This is revenge for the actions of the U.S.A in the Muslim lands and their accomplices, such as the British and the Jews. This is a warning to the nonbelievers that if they do not leave our lands, there are many more like us. We are doing this in order to gain the pleasure of our Lord, and Allah loves us to die and kill in his path."

Yusif Ali Yuseb Ismail: suspect arrested in October 1985 by Italian authorities in a Rome campground for the hijacking on October 7, 1985, of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro.

Helhem Khodr Issa: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court acquitted five defendants, including Issa, of charges that they were planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy. On October 1, 1986, an appeals court in Rome overturned the lower court decision and handed the case to the public ministry for further action. But only one defendant was still in custody.

Hussein Issa: one of three Lebanese men arrested on August 20, 1986, in West Berlin on suspicion of preparing to bomb a U.S. military installation. The trio was supported by Libya. They were released on September 3, 1986, due to insufficient evidence. Two of the men were handed over to immigration police for possible deportation.

Redouan Issar: alias Abu Khatib. Syrian military veteran, age 43, who remained at large after the arrests on November 10, 2004, in The Hague of two Islamic radicals. In October 2003, police detained Issar and three others when their names were forwarded by the police of Barcelona, Spain, after a raid. The group was released for lack of evidence even though bomb-making materials were seized. The police also could not hold suspects during the summer after the cell members were suspected of plotting an attack on the European soccer championships in Portugal. He was believed to be the leader of the cell.

Christophe Isteque: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak who died while setting off a bomb during the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy in the Pyrenees-Atlantiques region of France on July 6, 1987.

Angel Iturbe Abasolo: variant Angel Iturbe Abbasolo. Brother of former Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader Domingo Iturbe Abasolo. On April 18, 1989, he was among the 6 of the 50 ETA members who had been living in Algeria who were expelled.

Angel Iturbe Abbasolo: variant of Angel Iturbe Abasolo.

Domingo Iturbe Abasolo: variant Abbasolo; alias Txomin; variant Txmin. Alleged leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by Arbonne border police in France on April 27, 1986. He had left Spain in 1975 to live in exile in France. In July 1986, he was expelled to Gabon. In September 1986, the Gabonese sent him to Algeria. He died in a traffic accident near Ghardaia, Algeria, on February 27, 1987. The body arrived in Barcelona's Prat Airport on March 7, 1987. The plane had made a technical stop at Palma, Balearic Islands, where there had been a bomb scare. On March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 ETA-Military members on Algerian soil.

Domingo Iturbe Abbasolo: variant of Domingo Iturbe Abasolo.

Aitor Iturruno: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in southern France on December 1, 1989, in raids that netted 180 kilograms of explosives, including ammonal and Goma-2; ammunition; grenade launchers; detonators; handguns; and forged papers

Zbigniew Ivanicki: hijacker of a LOT AN 24 bound for Poland on June 5, 1970, and diverted to Copenhagen, Denmark.

Francisco Izco: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for shooting to death Meliton Manzananas, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968.

He was also sentenced to death for banditry. The death sentences were commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian, who had been kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Izco was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzananas's widow. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term.

Jokin Izeta Picavea: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who had been deported from Venezuela and was turned over to Spanish police by French officials on November 3, 1987.

Abu Izzadeen: arrested by British antiterrorism police on February 8, 2007, on suspicion of encouraging terrorism, at age 31. He had heckled Home Secretary John Reid at a public meeting in 2006. On April 24, 2007, he was one of six people arrested for raising funds for terrorism and for inciting others to commit terrorism overseas. He had been free on bail on charges of encouraging terrorism after praising the suicide bombings behind the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005. On April 18, 2008, he was jailed in London and sentenced to four and one-half years after being found guilty of funding terrorists and inciting terrorism overseas.

J

---

Fahmi Muhammad Jabaq: born in 1956, one of three Lebanese Shi'ite students who hijacked Alitalia 713, a DC8 flying from Tehran to Rome with a refueling stop in Beirut on September 7, 1979.

Jabon: on November 24, 2005, Spanish authorities announced that the suspected terrorist, who had been arrested six months earlier, had diagrams of the London Underground and Canadian subways on his laptop.

Isabell Jacob: Red Army Faction member released early on March 13, 1993. She had been serving a sentence of four and one-half years for a bombing of the Hannover Fair, inter alia.

Ingrid Jacobsmeier: variant of Ingrid Jakobsmeier.

Abdel Fiad Ja'far: Algerian expelled by the British Home Office to Algeria on May 17, 1984, for "preparing acts of terrorism."

Abu Jafar: mentioned by Yacine Akhnouche on February 4, 2002, as involved in a plot to bomb the Strasbourg cathedral. Possibly Abu Jafar al-Jaziri, the later al Qaeda financier and logistics chief.

Khalid Ja'far: on March 20, 1989, Radio Free Lebanon claimed that the Lebanese student was given a cassette recorder rigged with explosives by a Libyan explosives expert called "The Professor" in Bonn one week before the December 21, 1988, Lockerbie bombing of Pan American Flight 103 that killed 270 people.

Khalour Muhammed Jafar: one of three Lebanese Palestinians identified in a March 16, 1989, Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) warning of a possible plan to hijack a U.S. airliner in Europe. The FAA said the trio might be carrying false passports issued in Bahrain, Pakistan, or North Yemen.

Mohammad Qasem Ja'fari: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He had been arrested in Lyons. On June 8, 1987, the Iranian student was expelled to Iran.

Joe Erling Jahr: member of a neo-Nazi group called the Boot Boys, age 20, convicted on January 17, 2002, in Oslo City Court of the premeditated murder of Benjamin Hermansen, 15, stabbed to death. He was sentenced to 16 years.

Joseph Jakaby: one of seven anticommunist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Ingrid Jakobsmeier: variant Jacobsmeier. Involved in the 1981 attack on a U.S. military airfield in Ramstein. She was one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. She was among the most-wanted terrorists in West Germany. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. She was charged on September 15, 1985, with the robbery of a Bochum bank and was sentenced to nine years by the higher regional court in Stuttgart-Stammheim on March 20, 1986. On October 18, 1993, the Stuttgart Higher Regional Court sentenced her to 15 years in prison for 17 cases of attempted murder. She was found guilty of causing an explosion and aiding and abetting the attempted murder of four other persons for the assassination attempt against NATO Gen. Frederik Kroesen. She had already served a 9-year term for her RAF membership. She was released on October 21, 1994.

Abdul Aziz Jalil: Jalil, age 31, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Mohammed Jameel: arrested in early October 2001 by British authorities for links to Sakina Security Services, which trains Muslims for jihad.

Q Mansur al-Jamri: spokesman for the London-based Bahrain Freedom Movement, who took credit for the nine bombs that exploded on May 5, 1996, in Manama, Bahrain, destroying four shops and damaging five others.

Mohammed Javad Janab: one of five terrorists jailed for trying to assassinate former Iranian prime minister Shapour Bakhtiar in France on July 17, 1980, who were pardoned on July 27, 1990, and deported to Tehran.

Ilse Jank: her release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. Her release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977.

Giovanni Jannaccone: arrested in 1981 for involvement in the Proletarian Offensive Resistance Movement and later one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the "second position" Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987.

Ludvinna Janssen: blonde Dutch woman, age 23, arrested at Ben Gurion International Airport on September 26, 1976, while carrying a tin can to test the efficiency of metal-detecting devices. She was convicted of collaborating with Palestinian guerrillas and was sentenced to six years.

Manfred Janssen: alias of Werner Bernhard Lotze.

Muhammad Jarbu': on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member for the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. The hijacking ended in Egypt. Jarbu' was scheduled to be aboard the ship but fell ill before the ship departed.

Frazek Jarda: engineer of a Czech four-car passenger train who with accomplices on September 11, 1951, hijacked the train to Selb-Ploeszberg in the U.S. Zone of Germany when a confederate switched a track at Asch station and crossed the border. The United States granted him asylum.

Muhsin Jarudi: Lebanese student arrested by Geneva police on August 20, 1979, for the assassination of Zuhair Muhsen, who was chief of Saiqa (Thunderbolt), a Syrian-sponsored Palestinian organization, and head of the Palestine Liberation Organization's (PLO) military department, on July 25, 1979, in Cannes. The PLO asked the Swiss to hand him over or allow the PLO to interrogate him. France and Syria made similar requests through Interpol.

Riadh Jelassi: one of three Tunisians whose trial began on February 18, 2002, in Milan. The trio was convicted on May 17. (The State Department said four members of the Tunisian Combatant Group were sentenced to up to five years for providing false documentation and planning to acquire and transport arms and other illegal goods.) Judge Ambrogio Moccia said they would be expelled from Italy after serving their sentences. They had been cleared of several charges of supplying false documents and smuggling arms. Jelassi received four years and six months.

Drees Jemrani: resident at the Marien Street apartment used by the Hamburg al Qaeda cell that assisted the 9/11 hijackers. As of late November 2001, he remained in Hamburg.

Mohammed Jenab: variant Mohammed Henab. One of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France, on July 17, 1980.

Noel Jenkinson: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) explosives expert sentenced on November 14, 1972, to life in prison in the United Kingdom for setting off a bomb on February 22, 1972, inside a car in front of the kitchen of the Aldershot Army Base, 35 miles from London, killing 9 people and injuring 17 others. It was the first IRA attack in the United Kingdom since World War II.

Anthony Perry Jensen: one of two British citizens detained in Morocco on August 1, 2003, on suspicion of having ties to the Salafia Jihadia, a group of underground Islamic extremists involved in the May 16, 2003, suicide bombings in Casablanca. He was 37. The group has ties to al Qaeda. The duo was not suspected of involvement in the attacks.

Dagmar Jensen: arrested while trying to sneak a gun aboard a Scanair plane due to fly from Rome to Copenhagen on June 26, 1972.

Anwar Jomaa: on October 31, 1990, the Paris Appeals Court reduced his prison sentence from eight to five years for being an accomplice in a bombing wave in Paris in September 1986. The court added a 10-year ban on entering France.

Jon: one of six Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) gunmen who assassinated Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973, by placing a bomb in the street in which his car was driving.

Niels Jorgensen: blind Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) associate involved in planning the 1985 would-be kidnapping of Jorn Rausing, the son of a Swedish billionaire from Lund. On May 2, 1991, he said that he buried explosives in North Zealand, Denmark, on the night of May 2, 1989. Police discovered 45 kilograms of explosives on the grounds of a summer house in Tibirke in North Zealand belonging to his sister.

Joseph: one of six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) cover name, who took over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, and took 70 hostages, including 11 oil ministers. A warrant was handed down in the OPEC case by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975, describing him as about 30 years old and about 175-cm tall, with slender body, curly black hair combed back to the neck, and a moustache.

Feisal Hanna Joudi: Lebanese arrested on May 10, 1986, in connection to two men arrested on May 2, 1986, by Spanish police for carrying a four-kilogram bomb in the vicinity of the Bank of America building in Madrid. The duo claimed membership in the Call of Jesus Christ, a Middle East anti-Zionist terrorist group formed in 1978. Evidence pointed to Libyan funding. The duo claimed that Joudi had promised them $70,000 and that he was directed by the Libyans. The Madrid Cambio 16 reported that Joudi had worked for France as a double-agent penetration of the terrorist group. He had been arrested in Paris a year earlier but had been released on condition that he spy on the group.

Mohammed Joulane: during a raid on his apartment in France on September 6, 1994, an Algerian Islamic Salvation Front stamp and documents were found. He was charged the next day.

Jose Antonio de Juana: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and injuries to 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

K

---

Czesław K.: Polish pilot who diverted his Polish LOT on its Warsaw–Wrocław run on February 12, 1982, and landed in West Berlin, where he requested political asylum.

Yamal K.: one of two Syrians who hijacked a Lufthansa B727 en route from Frankfurt, Germany, to deport them to Damascus, Syria, on February 27, 1985.

Salaheddine Kaara: one of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France, on July 17, 1980. On March 10, 1982, a Nanterre jury sentenced four of them, including Kaara, to life in prison. His release was demanded on July 31, 1984, by the three Guardsmen of Islam hijackers of an Air France B737 flying from Frankfurt to Paris.

Sedat Sirri Kadem: former leftist terrorist whom Mehmet Ali Agca was with in Saint Peter's Square during the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Ali Hemin Kadir: Iraqi who was one of six men arrested on March 1, 2002, by Rome police on suspicion of al Qaeda ties. They were held on suspicion of association with a "criminal organization with terrorist intentions" and intent to obtain and transfer arms and weapons. Wiretaps of their conversations included discussions of killing President Bush, a cyanide compound, and weapons needed for terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Police seized videos, address books, and a plane ticket to Phoenix. They also found a letter with the address of Lotfi Raissi, an Algerian accused in the United Kingdom of giving pilot training to the 9/11 hijackers.

Husni Hatem Abdul Kadir: Palestinian with Jordanian nationality and one of two assassins of Izz Ad-Din al-Qalaq, Paris Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief, and his aide, Hammad Adnan, on August 3, 1978. The Rejection Front of Stateless Palestinian Arabs, as well as Black September and Black June, claimed credit. The Abu Nidal Organization member was released from a French jail on February 5, 1986, after serving 8 years of a 15-year sentence for the murder. He was deported to an unnamed Arab country.

Karim Kadouri: one of three unemployed men arrested on November 16, 2002, by Scotland Yard and charged under the Terrorism Act with possession of articles for the preparation, instigation, and commission of terrorism acts. He was 33. Local press said that they had planned to release cyanide gas in the underground rail system.

Rabah Kadre: individual with al Qaeda ties, age 35, arrested in November 2002 in the United Kingdom on terrorism-related charges. Kadre was accused of possessing materials for the "preparation, instigation or commission" of terrorism. He had been to terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. He was linked to three Algerians and a Moroccan arrested in a Paris suburb on December 16, 2002, who had two vials of an unidentified liquid and an anti-contamination suit that could protect “against biological, chemical, and nuclear risks.” Police believed they were planning a terrorist attack on the Russian Embassy in Paris.

Rabah Kadris: one of three unemployed men arrested on November 16, 2002, by Scotland Yard and charged under the Terrorism Act with possession of articles for the preparation, instigation, and commission of terrorism acts, age mid-thirties. Local press said that they had planned to release cyanide gas in the underground rail system.

Mohammed Abdul Kahar: arrested on June 2, 2006, when 250 antiterrorism police raided an east London house. Kahar, age 23, was shot after he fired on officers. Police also arrested a man who was possibly Kahar’s brother, Abul Koyair, age 20. Police suspected the house was used for making bombs or chemical weapons. Kahar was detained on suspicion of terrorism. The other man was held under the Terrorism Act. Police feared that a homemade chemical bomb had been spirited out of the safe house. Nine family members were brought in for questioning, fingerprinting, and DNA testing.

The next day, police interrogated the two brothers and searched their East London home. Police were searching for a chemical vest that could release chemicals in a suicide attack. Neighbors said the duo was British-born and of Bangladeshi extraction. Kahar worked in the British post office; Koyair worked in a local grocery store. On June 4, the two brothers denied the accusations. On June 9, the brothers were released, apparently for lack of evidence. Kahar said that police shot him in the shoulder during the raid without warning.

On February 13, 2007, the Independent Police Complaints Commission said that London police should publicly apologize to the two families, who had filed more than 150 complaints against the police.

Moussafer Kakar: Turk arrested on April 24, 1985, at the Gare du Nord by Paris police for smuggling four sticks of dynamite and four detonators. He also had eight forged identity cards and eight forged Belgian driver’s licenses. The dynamite was traced to a theft in June 1984 at Ecossine of 800 kilograms of explosives by Direct Action.

Mouslam Kakher: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was detained at the St. Etienne home of a Shi’ite Muslim Iraqi friend.

Djaber Kalibi: arrested in September 1986 by French counterintelligence agents following a wave of bombings that left 13 dead. On April 24, 1988, Paris police jailed the Iranian anti-Khomeini leftist for possession of explosives he said would be used for attacks in Iran. He was sentenced to four years.

Mahmut Kalkan: hijacker of a Turkish B727 that had left Istanbul for Izmir on April 15, 1983. He diverted the plane to Ellinikon Airport near Athens.

‘Abd-al-Rahim Kallas: on May 11, 1988, Italy’s Supreme Court of Cassation confirmed an appeals court’s life sentence for him in the October 7, 1985, shipjacking of the Achille Lauro and murder of U.S. passenger Leon Klinghoffer.

Fateh Kamel: Algerian veteran of the 1980s anti-Soviet Afghan war, tied to the 1996 bombers in Paris who left one bystander and several Islamic radicals dead. He was also linked to Ahmed Ressam, arrested on the Canadian–U.S. border on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives. On April 2001, a Paris court sentenced him to eight years in prison for running an underground terrorist logistics network linked to al Qaeda.

Corinna Kammermeier: Red Army Faction (RAF) terrorist described by Der Spiegel in late July 1990 as one of the nine remaining at-large longtime RAF members.

Mehdi Kammoun: one of three Tunisians whose trial began on February 18, 2002, in Milan. The trio was convicted on May 17. (The State Department said four members of the Tunisian Combatant Group were sentenced to up to five years for providing false documentation and planning to acquire and transport arms and other illegal goods.) Judge Ambrogio Moccia said they would be expelled from Italy after serving their sentences. They had been cleared of several charges of supplying false documents and smuggling arms. Mehdi Kammoun received 5 years and 10 months.

Imad Kanouni: acquitted by a French court on December 19, 2007, on charges of “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” He was the only one of six former inmates of Guantánamo Bay who was not found guilty of using false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but had not used their combat training. The group was among seven French citizens captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then were handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005. One was freed immediately upon arrival. The others spent up to 17 months in French prisons.

Cemalreddin Kaplan: founder of the Cologne-based Caliphate State, which was banned by German authorities on December 12, 2001. The group’s members had links to al Qaeda.

Rafael Kappel: hijacker of a Lufthansa B727 flying from Paris to Frankfurt and Cologne on September 12, 1979.

Geza Karacsony: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 bound for Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich.

Andrzej Jaroslaw Karasinski: hijacker of a Polish TU134 flying from Copenhagen to Warsaw on November 4, 1976.

Huseyin Karbulut: brother of Metin Karbulut, both Kurds. He was arrested on August 6, 1990, for the attempted murder the previous day of Hamut Yerli, a Turk, reportedly the leader in Austria of the Turkish right-wing Grey Wolves group. Yerli was shot in Vienna, Austria, but survived the two shots to the stomach. Huseyin Karbulut’s trial for attempted murder began on June 7, 1994, in Wiesbaden.

Metin Karbulut: brother of Huseyin Karbulut, both Kurds. He escaped arrest on August 6, 1990, for the attempted murder the previous day of Hamut Yerli, a Turk, reportedly the leader in Austria of the Turkish right-wing Grey Wolves group. Yerli was shot in Vienna, Austria, but survived the two shots to the stomach. Metin Karbulut was later arrested in Wiesbaden.

Hani al-Siba’i Abu-Karim: one of seven fundamentalists with terrorist connections arrested on September 27, 1998, in London under the immigration law.

Hasan Mahmud Karim: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid’s Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Samir Karimou: variant Abdelkader Krimou. One of five Algerian al Qaeda members whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt for the plot to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, and dealing drugs and with various weapons charges. Germany had rejected his asylum application, but he stayed in the country, financing himself through credit card fraud and drug dealing. He was arrested in April 2001. On August 29, 2002, Judge Karlheinz Zeiher ruled that there was not enough evidence that he belonged to the group and ordered his release. Karimou had admitted spending time in an Afghan military camp, but he claimed he left it after three months because he lacked discipline. He had not been charged with involvement in the plot, only with membership in the group.

Ara Hovsel Karvikian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through Lisbon Airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Hamzah Kasim: Lebanese man arrested in January 1987 in West Germany regarding the detention of Ali 'Abbas Hamadei, brother of the hijacker of a Trans World Airlines plane in June 1985. Hamadei had stayed with Kasim until December 1986.

Monzer al-Kassar: variant Munsir al-Qaysar. Syrian arms trafficker who sold weapons to groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Cyprus, Bosnia, Croatia, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Palestinian territories. He was connected to Mohammed Abbas (alias Abu Abbas), who was behind the Achille Lauro attack, and to Saddam Hussein's older son, Uday. On July 24, 1987, he and his brother Haytham were expelled from Spain. He was accused of being connected with two attacks on Arab citizens in Madrid.

On November 1, 1989, subpoenas issued by the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., in a suit against Pan American pending in federal court in Brooklyn asked for all documents pertaining to al-Kassar's activities. The suit arose from the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie that killed 270 people.

On June 4, 1992, Marbella, Spain, police arrested him. He was believed to have financed the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. On February 24, 1993, Spain extradited him to Argentina for forgery.

He was acquitted in Spain in 1995 of supplying assault rifles used by the Palestinians who shipjacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in 1985, killing an American.

He was arrested by Spanish authorities in Madrid on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of significant weaponry to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels. On February 6, 2007, he met two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants near Marbella to discuss a $7.8–$13.5 million deal. Al-Kassar offered to send men to fight against U.S. military officers in Colombia. He and his associates were indicted on supporting a foreign terrorist group and conspiracy. Romanian authorities arrested his co-defendants, Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi and Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy. On June 13, 2008, he was extradited to the United States after the government agreed not to seek the death penalty or life without parole.

Oussama Kassir: Lebanese Palestinian and Stockholm resident who allegedly participated in a plot to create a terrorist training camp in Oregon and made threats against police. In August 2002, he admitted to having met Kerim Chatty in Sweden's Osteraker prison in 1998, where Kassir taught him Islamic lessons and prayers.

Prague authorities arrested him on December 11, 2005, and extradited him to New York on September 25, 2007, where he was accused of planning to teach others bomb making, poisoning, and throat-slitting tactics and to set up a terrorist training camp in Bly, Oregon. The newly trained Muslim radicals would then fly to Afghanistan for further training before deployment.

Christos Kassmis: leftist economist, age 34, who died in a gun battle with police on October 20, 1977, after he was discovered attempting to bomb a West German factory in Athens.

Abdulla Khayata Katan: Spaniard of Syrian origin believed to be an al Qaeda militant who on May 9, 2005, testified that Spanish police had visited him in prison in 2004 and suggested that they would obtain his release in exchange for cooperation on the 9/11 case.

Josef Katrincak: one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 airliner flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhein-Main Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978.

Anna Katrincakova: one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 airliner flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhein-Main Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978.

Magdalena Kaupp: variant of Magdalena Kopp.

Paul Kavanagh: in March 1984, the Northern Ireland resident was arraigned in Belfast for the December 17, 1983, car bombing of Harrods in London that killed 6 and injured 90.

Ali Haydar Kaytan: on January 24, 1989, the chief West German federal prosecutor proffered charges against the suspected Kurdish terrorist before the fifth criminal bench of the Duesseldorf higher regional court for a double murder by a Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) execution squad on June 10, 1987. The PKK "revolutionary court" had conducted a show trial in Lebanon in which Kaytan helped sentence the two rebel party members to death. Kaytan had been in custody since March 25, 1988.

Muhammad and Said Kazdari: on July 11, 2002, police arrested nine Arab suspects in the Milan area suspected of fabricating false identity papers for al Qaeda. The Kazdaris, two Moroccan brothers, had served time earlier for making false papers for stolen cars. Police were investigating whether this counterfeiting operation assisted al Qaeda worldwide.

Abu 'Ali Kazim: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member for the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. Kazim was a bodyguard for Abbas Zaida.

Rabah Kebir: foreign spokesperson of the Islamic Salvation Front arrested for involvement in the August 26, 1992, bombing of the Air France ticket counter at Houari Boumedienne Airport in Algeria that killed 12 people and wounded 128. Public sessions of his trial began on May 4, 1993. On May 26, 1993, a special Algiers judicial council passed death sentences on 38 defendants, including him. The council found him guilty of inciting citizens to carry arms against state security, belonging to an armed group, spreading killing and destruction, hiding criminals, possessing forbidden weapons, and heading armed gangs. He remained at large. On June 13, 1993, Algeria requested his extradition from Germany, where he had been arrested. On June 15, 1993, the German Justice Ministry said it had not received the request.

Larbi Kechat: arrested on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism activities.

Khaled Kelkal: petty criminal from a depressed Lyon suburb whose fingerprints were found on a gas canister used in a failed bomb attack on a high-speed train in Lyon. French police initiated a manhunt for him on September 9, 1995. He escaped a September 11 series of raids in Paris and Grenoble and a September 27 raid of his forest hideout near Lyon. He was killed by police on September 29, 1995, during a nighttime shootout at a bus stop near Vaugneray outside Lyon. He was believed involved in 6 bombings that killed 7 and injured more than 130.

Gerald Kelly: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member sentenced to two life terms in 1973 for terrorist activity, including the bombing of the Old Bailey in which 1 person died and 250 were injured. His release was demanded by IRA members who stole 19 paintings valued at $19.2 million from the home of Sir Alfred Beit on April 26, 1974, in Ireland. The paintings were recovered unharmed on May 3. He escaped Maze Prison during a September 1983 mass breakout. He was arrested in Amsterdam on January 16, 1986. On July 2, 1986, the Dutch Supreme Court heard original evidence as part of the extradition case. He was released in 1989. He was a former member of the IRA's ruling Army Council and a senior member of Sinn Féin.

Othmar Keplinger: Austrian student and sympathizer of the Baader-Meinhof Gang who was arrested by Swiss police at the Italian border checkpoint of Chiasso while carrying weapons and the ransom paid two weeks earlier in the November 9, 1977, kidnapping of Walter Michael Palmers, owner of a lingerie retailing company with stores in West Germany and Austria.

Walter Kexel: West German neo-Nazi terrorist arrested in the United Kingdom in February 1983 and wanted by French police for questioning about the August 9, 1982, machine-gun attack on Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant in Paris. On March 15, 1985, Germany sentenced him to 14 years for attempted murder, membership in a terrorist organization, explosives offenses, grievous bodily harm, and bank robbery in connection with the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt.

Amanullah Kha: arrested on September 5, 1985, in the United Kingdom for the Kashmir Liberation Army's (KLA) kidnapping of Ravindra Hareshma Mhatre, assistant commissioner of the Indian High Commission in Birmingham, United Kingdom, on February 3, 1984. The kidnappers killed Mhatre. Kha was the leader of the KLA.

Samir Muhammad Ahmad Khadir: variant of Samir Mohammed Hadar.

Al-Khadrah: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member in connection with the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. Al-Khadrah helped smuggle the arms used in the attack.

Abdel Karim Khaki: Moroccan who burst into a Nantes, France, courtroom on December 19, 1985, took hostages, and armed two defendants while two others escaped. He claimed membership in the Abu Nidal Organization. France intended to deport Khaki after he surrendered, but Morocco refused to take him. He was charged with attempted murder and was to be tried in France.

Keni Nusbah Khalafa: arrested by Bonn police in his hotel after arriving from Tripoli, age 15. He was believed part of an anti-dissident Libyan hit team.

Mahmoud Youssef Sheik Khalid or Khaldi: one of two Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution, or possibly Saiqa terrorists, who took five hostages on board diesel passenger train number 2590, which left Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, and entered Marchegg, Austria, on September 28, 1973. Two of the hostages escaped. The gunmen later took off for Vienna's Schwechat Airport, where they demanded that Austria close down the Schonau Castle facility for Soviet Jewish émigrés and not allow further émigré transit through Austria. The hostages were newly arrived Soviet Jews on their way to Israel. The Austrians agreed to safe passage. After refueling stops in Yugoslavia and Italy, the plane was denied landing by Tunisia and Algeria and eventually landed in Libya. In December 1973, Libya announced that the duo had been released to fight against Israel. Some reports claimed that the duo had trained in a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) camp in Lebanon. One of them participated in the December 1975 OPEC raid.

Mahmoud Ibrahim Khaled: alias Mohammad Sarham. He was born in the Shatila refugee camp and was one of four Martyrs of Palestine terrorists who on December 27, 1985, fired Kalashnikovs and lobbed grenades in Rome's Fiumicino Airport terminal. He was the only terrorist who survived a gun battle with police. The Abu Nidal group claimed credit for killing 16 people and wounding 73 others. On December 28, 1985, he was indicted for murder in Rome. On February 5, 1987, Italian prosecutor Domenico Sica asked Judge Rosario Priore to indict him. His trial began on December 16, 1987; he was charged with leading the attack. He was sentenced on February 12, 1988, to 30 years.

Khalid: one of six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) cover name, who took over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, and took 70 hostages, including 11 oil ministers. A warrant was handed down in the OPEC case by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975, saying that he was about 30 years old and about 175-cm tall and had a slender figure, curly black hair combed back to the neck, and a moustache.

Ridouane Khalid: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for "criminal association with a terrorist enterprise." The prosecution said they used false IDs and visas to "integrate into terrorist structures" in Afghanistan. He was sentenced to four years in prison, three suspended and one year as time served.

Walid Khalid: aliases Rizq Sa'id 'Abd-al-Majid' Awdah, Rizaq Sayyid 'Abd-al-Majid. Spokesperson for the Abu Nidal group during its November 8, 1987, hijacking of the Silko, a French-flagged 11-meter yacht off the Gaza Strip in which eight Israeli passengers were taken hostage. He was arrested outside a central Brussels police station on January 16, 1991, but released with an apology after it was learned that he had come for talks with the political director of the Belgian Foreign Ministry to discuss the Silko case. He was expelled from the country on January 17, 1991. On July 23, 1992, he was assassinated in Beirut when two gunmen in a white Fiat station wagon fired silencer-equipped submachine guns as he was riding in his blue Mercedes 280 near Mar Ilyas camp.

Said Khalidie: name on a Moroccan passport carried by Hamid Bilhayat, an Abu Nidal figure arrested in Spain on November 8, 1984.

Elbai Khalifa: Libyan arrested after three gunmen killed Abdel Belil Aref, a wealthy Libyan businessman, as he was dining at the Café du Paris on the Via Veneto in Rome on April 18, 1980.

Salim (variant Salih) 'Ali Husayn Khalifah: one of two members of an Iranian fundamentalist group traveling under forged Syrian passports arrested at Rome's international airport on May 18, 1984, when a search uncovered two bags containing 2.8 kilograms of plastic explosives along with detonators, boosters charges, a compass, and an Iraqi passport. The duo had arrived via a Syrian Arab Airlines flight from Damascus and were awaiting an Iberian Airlines flight to Madrid. On June 4, 1984, the duo was sentenced to 10 years for possession of explosives. They would be deported after serving their sentences.

Ibrahim Mohamed Khalil: on January 23, 2005, in a morning raid in Mainz, German police arrested Khalil, age 29, a German citizen from Iraq suspected of planning suicide attacks in Germany, and Yasser Abu Shaweesh, age 31, a Palestinian medical student living in Bonn. They were believed to have had contacts with Osama bin Laden and were charged with belonging to a foreign terrorist organization. The Federal Prosecutor's Office said there was no indication that they had organized an al Qaeda cell in Germany. While in Afghanistan, where he trained before the 9/11 attacks, Khalil had contacts with bin Laden and Ramzi Binalshibh. Khalil fought U.S. forces for more than a year in Afghanistan and had high-ranking al Qaeda contacts who persuaded him to recruit suicide attackers in Europe. He moved to Germany in September 2002 to raise money and provide logistical support for al Qaeda. He had attempted unsuccessfully to obtain 48 grams of uranium from Luxembourg. Khalil recruited the Libyan-born Shaweesh for a suicide attack in Iraq. They had sought to raise money by taking out a $1 million life insurance policy on Yasser Abu S., who was to fake a fatal traffic accident.

The duo had been under investigation since October 2004. Police searched four apartments in Mainz and Bonn in January 2005. The week before the raids, German police had detained nearly two dozen Islamic extremists.

German authorities had wiretapped the duo and heard them make plans to move to the Netherlands, to obtain uranium for a dirty bomb that would kill Americans, and to recruit suicide bombers to go to Iraq. They talked about how to blend in to their surroundings. In late January, the judge ruled that there was enough evidence to hold them for trial.

Mazin Abu Mehanid Khalil: one of the two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Pan American 93, a B747 flying from Amsterdam and diverted to Beirut, where they picked up another PFLP member on September 6, 1970.

Mustafa Ali Khalil: Lebanese arrested in the shooting of Libyan Embassy official Mohammed Idris, who was driving to the embassy in Madrid on September 12, 1984. Khalil had grown up in Beirut and was a member of the Imam Musa as-Sadr Brigade. On October 10, 1984, the kidnappers of Spanish ambassador Pedro Manuel de Aristegui demanded Khalil's release. On June 18, 1985, the hijackers of TWA 847 demanded his release. He and the shooter were scheduled to stand trial on June 19, 1985, in Madrid. The Spanish government refused to release them. On June 25, 1985, the duo was sentenced to 23 years in prison for attempted murder. There were rumors that they would be sent to Lebanon to serve out their sentences. On January 17, 1986, Khalil's relatives abducted a Spanish diplomat and two Lebanese Spanish Embassy consular staffers and demanded his release. The Black Flag also demanded his release. He was pardoned by the Spanish government on July 14, 1986, and returned to Beirut.

Sakar Mahmoud al-Khalil: Palestinian who was one of two terrorists arrested on March 15, 1973, in France, while attempting to smuggle explosives across the Italian-French border for use in attacks against the Israeli and Jordanian embassies as part of a Black September campaign. The two drove from a Lebanese Fatah base in a Mercedes carrying 35 pounds of plastique. The two Fatah members were imprisoned for six months and then were expelled from France.

Yasir al-Khalil: wife of Nizar Muhammad Hallak whose expulsion from France was ordered on December 24, 1986, in connection with the discovery of an arm cache in her husband's garage in Aulnay-sous-Bois on December 18, 1986. Police questioned but released him.

Manoucher Khamene'i: one of four people arrested by London police on December 14, 1988, during a demonstration in front of the offices of Iran Air. They attacked three computers and were to face charges of criminal damage and violent disorder on January 5, 1989.

Mehdi Khammoun: aide of Essid Sami Ben Khemais, a Tunisian in contact with a network of al Qaeda recruits in Italy, Germany, Spain, the United Kingdom, France, and Belgium.

Abid Hussain Khan: in early January 2008, he faced terrorism charges in the United Kingdom. He was involved in jihad Internet sites and was given a video of potential U.S. targets—including fuel storage tanks near Lorton, Virginia; World Bank headquarters; the Pentagon; and the George Washington Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, Virginia—that was taken by Ehsanul Islam Sad-queue and Syed Haris Ahmed, who faced 60 years in prison in the United States.

Ali Ahmed Khan: variant Ahmed Ali Khan; alias Abdulla Ahmed Ali. Arrested by British authorities on August 20, 2006, as a key facilitator in a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. He took direction from Rashid Rauf. Khan's trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, and to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. At the time of his trial, he was 27 years old. He lived in Walthamstow, United Kingdom. In his martyrdom video, he claimed to be the leader of the "blessed operation," observing that "sheik Osama has warned you many times to leave our lands or you will be destroyed, and now the time has come for you to be destroyed." The West should "stop meddling in our affairs. Otherwise, expect floods of martyr operations against you. We will take our revenge, [leaving] your people's body parts decorating the streets."

On June 2, 2008, he told the jury that he was not involved in an airliner plot but had looked into setting off a non-lethal bomb at the British Parliament to protest U.K. participation in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. He said that he and fellow defendant Assad Sarwar had gone to Pakistan to work with Afghan refugees and that they had considered bombing the Bank of England and the Canary Wharf financial district.

Arafat Waheed Khan: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Age 25, he was ordered held without bail until a September 18 court appearance, when 10 other suspects were to appear in court. Prosecutors had said that the trials might not begin until March 2008. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. They were also charged with conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. He lived in Walthamstow, United Kingdom.

Hasina Patel Khan: widow of Mohammed Sidique Khan, one of the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). On May 9, 2007, British police arrested Khan, age 29, on suspicion of assisting the bombers.

Izz al-Din Badra Khan: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the military chief of the Palestine Liberation Front for the hijacking of Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. On July 10, 1986, Khan was sentenced in absentia to life in prison for murder and kidnapping. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction.

Khalid Khan: Dutch national of Indian origin arrested on October 3, 1981, in New Delhi for the September 29, 1981, hijacking by the Dal Khalsa of an Air India B737 bound for Srinagar on September 29, 1981, and diverted to Lahore, Pakistan.

Mohammed Ajmal Khan: Briton serving a prison term in the United Kingdom for terrorist offenses when he was indicted in the United States on May 22, 2006, in connection with the “Virginia Jihad Network” case.

Mufti Mohammed Khan: Bin Laden associate from Pakistan arrested on September 11, 2001, hours after the 9/11 attacks when he arrived at London’s Heathrow Airport from New York. The Sunday Telegraph said he was to meet with bin Laden allies in London and Birmingham. The Telegraph claimed he was sent back to New York for questioning by the FBI.

Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan: alias Abu Talha. British Pakistani, age 25, arrested in Pakistan on July 13, 2004, on suspicion of involvement in the 2004 al Qaeda threat to U.S. and U.K. financial centers. He was sending coded e-mails to other al Qaeda operatives planning attacks in the United States, United Kingdom, and South Africa. Data on the computers led 12 days later (his detention was announced in early August) to the arrest of Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, a Tanzanian al Qaeda terrorist, for his role in the August 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He was also linked to terror plots in the United States and United Kingdom, where 12 of his colleagues, including Dhiren Barot, were arrested. Information from those captures, including maps and photos found on their computers, led to a U.S. government warning about possible al Qaeda attacks on financial institutions in the United States.

He was released on August 20, 2007, after three years in custody, and returned to his Karachi home. He was represented by attorney Babar

Awan, who said his client was never charged or brought before any court.

Parviz Khan: arrested on January 31, 2007, as the leader of a group that planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading. Age 36, he was charged with providing equipment and funding for the plan. He was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. In mid-January 2008, Khan pleaded guilty to sending night-vision equipment, sleeping bags, walkie-talkies, computer equipment, and other gear to Pakistan to be used by extremists. The shipments were made in 2005 and 2006. His plea was made public on January 29 at the opening of the trial of two co-defendants. He planned to kidnap the serviceman in the Broad Street entertainment area of Birmingham. Khan had been stopped by U.K. authorities on his return from Pakistan in July 2006 when they found him carrying a notebook of “a shopping list from terrorist contacts of materials they wanted sent back in the next delivery.” He was under surveillance until his arrest.

Roshan Jamal Khan: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tablighi Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Sidique Khan: variant Mohammed Sidique Khan. Teaching assistant, age 30, at a Leeds public school. On July 7, 2005, at 9:17 A.M., a bomb he placed on the floor of the second carriage of London Underground Circle Line Train 216, leaving Edgware Road Station for Paddington Station, exploded, killing seven people. The explosion ripped through a wall and damaged two other trains.

He was born in the United Kingdom to Pakistani parents. He was married and the father of a daughter (age 8 months). He had recently moved to Dewsbury. He had a degree in education from Leeds University. He traveled to Karachi, Pakistan, with Shehzad Tanweer on November 16, 2004, and flew home on February 7, 2005. Khan was in Israel for a day in the spring of 2003. The Sunday Telegraph said that Khan, the leader of the team who set off four bombs that day, met in Pakistan in fall 2004 with Mohammed Yasin (alias Ustad Osama), an explosives expert who manufactures “suicide jackets” for Harkat-e-Jihad.

On April 24, 2008, the prosecution in the case of the terrorists involved in the attack played a video Khan had made in November 2004 in which Khan bounces his baby girl on his knee and says, “Sweetheart, not long to go now. And I’m going to really, really miss you a lot. I’m thinking about it already. Look, I absolutely love you to bits, and you have been the happiest thing in my life.” He continued, “I’m doing what I’m doing for the sake of Islam. I just wish I could have been part of your life. I just so much wanted to be with you. But I have to do this thing for our future and it will be best . . . in the long run. That’s the most important thing.” In another video made in October 2004, Khan introduced her to her “uncles,” including Waheed Ali, one of the defendants.

Omar Elmi Khareh: sentenced to life in prison in France in 1968 for attempting to assassinate French Territory of the Afars and Issas (FTAI) political leader Ali Aref. His release was demanded by the Somali Coast Liberation Front kidnappers of French ambassador Jean Gueury in March 23, 1975, in Somalia. France agreed to the group’s demands.

Tarek Sajed Khater: hijacker of the Paris–Cairo flight of an Air France jumbo jet on August 12, 1977, that was diverted out of Nice to Benghazi, Libya, where authorities prevented the plane from landing.

Adam Khatib: charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Khatib, age 19, was ordered held without bail until a September 18 court appearance, when 10 other suspects were to appear in court.

Osman Adam Khatib: from Walthamstow, United Kingdom, age 19, arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in relation to a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. The United Kingdom detained 41 people.

Yousef Khatib: variant Yusaf al Khatib. One of three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an El Al B707 going from Rome to Tel Aviv’s Lod Airport on July 22, 1968.

Abbas Khawaja: Lebanese detained by French counterintelligence on July 22, 1987, for a wave of bombings in Paris between December 1985 and September 1986 that killed 13 and wounded 250. He was indicted three days later for associating with terrorists.

Fraze Khelfa: alias Khelfa Same. Algerian member of Black September who attempted to assassinate Jordanian ambassador Zaid Rifai in London on December 15, 1971. Khelfa fired 30 rounds into the ambassador’s car. He was arrested in Lyons in January 1972. The Lyons court recommended that France grant the United Kingdom’s extradition request, but the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent him to Algeria.

Essid Sami Ben Khemais: alias The Saber. Tunisian, age 33, arrested in April 2001 and who was believed to be the leader of a Milan al Qaeda cell broken up in November 2001. On October 22, 2001, the Washington Post reported that extensive telephone taps and bugging devices in the Milan apartment of Khemais had revealed a network of al Qaeda recruits in Italy, Germany, Spain, the United Kingdom, France, and Belgium, with supporters in other countries, including Switzerland. Khemais had moved to Milan in March 1998 after two years of training in bin Laden camps in Afghanistan. The group discussed bombings and other attacks in Europe. On March 13 Khemais talked of a suffocating chemical that could be hidden in a tomato can with Lased Ben Heni, age 31, a Libyan who went to Afghan camps. Khemais's aide was Mehdi Khammoun.

The network's cells were organized by the Egyptian Anathema and Exile and the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat. They were led by three individuals. Abu Doha, age 36, an Algerian who had moved to London in 1999 after working as a senior official at an Afghan terrorist camp, was charged with organizing attacks on the United States. He was detained in the United Kingdom and was fighting extradition to the United States. In April 2001, Algerian Mohamed Bensakhria, age 34, escaped from a police raid in Frankfurt, Germany, and was arrested in Spain on June 22, 2001. Tarek Maaroufi, a Tunisian with Belgian citizenship, was wanted on an Italian warrant; his Belgian citizenship prevents his extradition.

Khemais visited Maaroufi in Brussels on February 10, 2000, where they met Essoussi Laaroussi, a Tunisian who had done time in a Belgian jail.

The Milan records indicated that the December 2000 takedown of a Frankfurt terrorist cell stopped a planned chemical attack as well as the bombing of a Strasbourg, France, market area. The cell was led by Mohamed Bensakhria, who was in regular contact with the Milan cell.

Italian authorities said that the terrorists met in Geneva and used faked Italian IDs to travel to Pakistan and then on to Afghanistan. It was financed by Khemais's operations involving drug trafficking, counterfeit money and documents, and money laundering.

On February 5, 2002, Italian judge Giovanna Verga presided in the Milan trial of Khemais and three other Tunisian men charged with providing false passports for al Qaeda members in Europe, breaking immigration laws, and criminal association with the intent to obtain and transport arms, explosives, and chemicals. Wiretaps indicated the intention to obtain the arms, although none were found. Ben Khemais was suspected of supervising a plan to attack the U.S. Embassy in Rome in January 2001, although he was not charged. Spanish authorities believed he met with 9/11 hijack leader Mohamed Atta in Spain in 2001. The four were arrested between April and October 2001 in a joint German–Italian investigation.

On February 22, 2002, a Milan court convicted four Tunisians on terrorist charges, including criminal association with intent to transport arms, explosives, and chemicals and falsifying 235 work permits, 130 driver's licenses, several foreign passports, and various bank documents. They were acquitted of charges of possession of arms and chemicals. The guilty verdicts were the first in Europe against al Qaeda operatives since the 9/11 attacks. The four belonged to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, an Algerian wing of al Qaeda. Khemais received a five-year sentence.

On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Mohamed Salah Ben Hamadi Khemiri: arrested on November 6, 2007, by British authorities in Manchester, age 53. He was one of 17 Algerians and Tunisians arrested throughout Western Europe on suspicion of terrorist ties in Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Ahmed Taheri Khormabadi: one of 13 Iranians believed involved in the murder in Geneva, Switzerland, on April 24, 1990, of Kazem Rajavi, brother of Massud Rajavi, leader of the People's Mujahedin. He was arrested in Paris in November 1992 at the request of the Swiss government. France approved extradition; Switzerland protested the expulsion.

Marwan Khreesat: Jordanian living in West Germany who was arrested on October 26, 1988, in Neuss, West Germany, where police found a weapons cache, including altitude-sensitive detonators and three bombs built into Toshia Bomb-453 radio cassette recorders, which exactly matched the bomb used in the attack on Pan American Flight 103 on December 21, 1988, in Lockerbie, which killed 270. The Scotsman on October 13, 1989, claimed that the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP-GC) member had convinced West German police that he was working for Jordanian intelligence.

Bashir Khudur: Lebanese-based Palestinian arrested on January 12, 1987, by Milan's Linate Airport police for carrying 11 kilograms of plastic explosives and 36 detonators as he arrived on a flight from Beirut to Milan via Geneva. The explosives were hidden in two picture frames and several Easter eggs; the detonators were in the batteries of his transistor radio. On February 19, 1987, a Milan court sentenced him to 11 years, fined him $1,540, and ordered his expulsion after he served his sentence. He had been a student in Italy since 1981, studying Italian at the University of Perugia and later studying electronic engineering in Rome and Milan. Police found at his home the addresses of five Jewish institutions, which could have been targets of terrorist attacks designed to free imprisoned Lebanese terrorists. Police believed he was a member of Islamic Jihad.

Salim Mas'ud al-Khuri: on September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers and other Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) members, including al-Khuri, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris, which killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Omar Khyam: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. In June 2003, Khyam, 24, met Mohammed Junaid Babar—who had pleaded guilty to terrorism charges in a federal court in New York in 2004—in Pakistan to say that the United Kingdom was “unscathed and needed to be hit because of its support for the United States.” Babar was the government's key witness. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants, including ringleader Khyam, age 26, of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. They were given life sentences by Judge Michael Astill. After the trial, prosecutors said that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group had been trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Abu Kifah: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member for the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. Kifah helped smuggle the arms used in the attack.

King of Black Plots: alias of Giancarlo Rognoni.

James King: one of three British Northern Irish members of the Ulster Defense Association arrested on April 21, 1989, by French Directorate for Territorial Oversight (DST) counterintelligence police in the Paris Hilton hotel while the individuals were planning to swap a stolen British Blowpipe surface-to-air missile for weapons from South African state arms manufacturer Armscor.

Stefan King: Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) member arrested on August 28, 1982, by Paris police. The Irish-born man was one of three INLA members making a bomb for use against the U.K. military attaché in The Hague. Documents at the scene tied the trio to terrorist activity in West Germany and Switzerland.

Peter Kintscher: resident of Bielefeld, West Germany, who on August 5, 1984, kidnapped a SF Air freight company DC8 en route from Marseilles to Algeria. He was dressed as an airport employee and demanded that the plane return to Marseilles, unload its cargo, and fly to San Francisco. He was overpowered by the Groupement de l'Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale.

Terence Kirby: on December 27, 1995, bail was set in the United States at $1 million for Kirby, one of 38 prisoners who escaped from Northern Ireland's Maze Prison in 1983. He had been convicted in Northern Ireland of murder. He and two other escapees were arrested in California between 1992 and 1994. After a lengthy extradition battle, the British government withdrew its extradition request in 2000.

John Kirkoryan: Armenian gunman arrested on June 9, 1981, in the fatal shooting of Mehmet Savas Erguz, a secretary in the Turkish Consulate in Geneva. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia claimed credit.

Samir Kishk: alias Hamada. Kishk, age 46, was arrested on November 30, 2001, by Italian police at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport as he arrived from Cairo en route to his Paris home. He was believed to be a major figure in a Milan-based Islamic extremist group with bin Laden ties. The arrest warrant was issued in October. The Milan cell provided false documents, cell phones, and other logistical support for Muslims trying to reach al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan or trying to fight the Russians in Chechnya. Kishk was charged with criminal association with the intent of trafficking in arms, explosives, chemicals, and false ID documents and aiding and abetting clandestine immigration. He was believed to have close ties with the Milan cell's leader, Essid Sami Ben Khemais, a Tunisian arrested in April. Kishk could be a leader in France of the extremist Tunisia-based Salafite Group for Preaching and Combat, to which Khemais belongs.

Gabor Kiss: one of seven anticommunist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Akira Kitagawa: he was expelled from France for his involvement in the Japanese Red Army's Operation Translation. On September 3, 1975, he was deported to Japan under Sweden's Anti-Terrorism Act. Japanese police arrested him upon his arrival at Tokyo International Airport. He was held for violation of the passport law.

Christian Klar: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the September 5, 1977, Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, and as a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. Klar was also wanted for the murder of Siegfried Buback. He was believed to have driven one of three cars used when the RAF fired two RPG-7s on September 15, 1981, at the armored Mercedes of Frederick J. Kroesen, commanding general of the U.S. Army in Europe. Police offered a $40,000 reward for Klar and Inge Viett's arrests. Friedrichsruh police arrested him on November 16, 1982. In 1983, he was convicted of murder in the July 30, 1977, slaying of Juergen Ponto, chief executive of Dresdner Bank. On April 2, 1985, a Stuttgart court convicted him of murdering three prominent West Germans and their bodyguards and of the attempted murder of a U.S. Army general and sentenced him to life. The conviction was upheld in higher court. In 2007, Klar sought early release and a presidential pardon. Clemency was denied by German president Horst Koehler on May 7, 2007. Klar was eligible for parole on January 3, 2009.

Hans Joachim Klein: associate of Venezuelan terrorist Carlos, former companion of Hanna Elisa Krabbe, and a member of the Socialist Patients' Collective that took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975. He next surfaced as one of six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) cover name, who took over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, and took 70 hostages, including 11 oil ministers. He was the boyfriend of Mechthild Rogali, who might have participated in the OPEC raid. In a gun duel at OPEC, Klein was shot in the stomach. He was taken out of the building on a stretcher but later returned after demands made by the other terrorists. When the terrorists' plane flew to Algiers' Dar El Beida Airport, Klein was taken to a hospital in a Red Crescent ambulance. Later reports claimed that he was transferred to a Libyan hospital and that he had been paid L100,000 by Libya's Col. Muammar Qadhafi for his participation in the operation. A warrant was handed down in the OPEC case by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975. In 1978, Klein told Der Spiegel that he had renounced terrorism. Frankfurt prosecutors determined in 1997 that he spent some of his time in France. He was arrested on September 8, 1998, at the only bar in Saint-Honorine-la-Guillaume, a Normandy village. Townspeople thought "Dick" was a German journalist. German prosecutors planned to request extradition. On February 15, 2001, he was found guilty of murder in the OPEC attack and sentenced to nine years by the Frankfurt court.

Vera Klementova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverting to Nuremberg.

Peter Klemt: East German automobile mechanic, 24, who was one of two hijackers of a Polish Lot Ilyushin 18 flying the Warsaw–East Berlin–Brussels run on October 19, 1969, that was diverted to West Berlin's Tegel Airport in the French sector.

Gerald Klepper (variant Kloepper): his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On September 28, 1977, the West German federal prosecutor's office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and for kidnapping Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Gerald Kloepper: variant of Gerald Klepper.

Daniela Klette: Red Army Faction member wanted in 1991 for participation in the attacks on Trust Agency chief Rohwedder and State Secretary Hans Neusel.

Honza Klugar: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Andrea Martina Klump: former office worker from Frankfurt and Red Army Faction (RAF) member who on December 15, 1988, was accused by the West German Federal Attorney's Office of having set off explosions at a NATO installation in Rota, Spain, on June 17, 1988. Police were searching for her and two other male RAF members. On September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the RAF and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. The government issued a warrant for her arrest in the case. She was believed to have fled the scene on June 17, 1988, when a motorcycle was prepared with an explosive charge in Cadiz, Spain. She also may have been involved in the August 1986 assassination of U.S. soldier Pimental in Wiesbaden, West Germany. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the "hard core" of RAF members. Annette Klump is her sister.

Christian Kluth: suspected member of the Red Army Faction arrested on August 2, 1986, in a café in Ruesselsheim near Frankfurt while carrying a false identity card. He was believed to have carried out the bombing of the Dornier works in Immenstaad/Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, causing 1.3 million marks in damage. In December 1987, he was on trial before the Stuttgart Upper Regional Court.

Hans-Peter Knoll: Baader-Meinhof Gang member arrested on February 28, 1981, by police in Sydney, Australia. He had been wanted for 10 years by West Germany for a bomb attack on a British yacht club, which killed a man; the attempted murder of a police officer; three bank robberies; two arsons; and an attempt to release two jailed women.

Michael Knoll: West Germany Red Army Faction member who died in a shootout in Dortmund on September 24, 1978, during which policeman Hans-Wilhelm Hansen was killed.

Musa Kocer: name used in a false Turkish passport by an Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas.

Felix Koehnen: one of four right-wing skinheads charged on December 30, 1993, with murder and arson for the May 29, 1993, arson of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, which killed 6 people and injuring 10, including a 6-month-old infant. He was a former member of the extremist German People's Union. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf Presiding Judge Wolfgang Steffen to 15 years.

Vinay Kohly: one of two Indian Spanish citizens who on March 19, 2004, were charged in Spain with aiding a terrorist organization and falsifying documents. They were ordered held without bail and placed in isolation for another five days at Soto del Real prison.

Mehrdad Kokabi: male Iranian doctoral candidate in engineering at the University of Manchester Institute of Science and Technology and one of four Iranians detained on December 15, 1989, in Manchester's Stretford Police Station under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of planning to kill Salman Rushdie. On March 15, 1991, Tehran Domestic Service reported that he was released after 15 months and a trial with the result of charges not proven. He was met by senior government officials at Tehran airport, where he called on the world's Muslims to carry out the Imam's fatwa against Rushdie.

Magdalena Kopp: variant Kaupp. West German Kopp and Bruno Breguet were charged after a February 16, 1982, gun battle in Paris with attempted homicide, death threats, falsified identity papers, and illegal possession of a pistol, 4.4 pounds of explosives, and two small bottles of cooking gas. Their Peugeot 504 had fake license plates, and they were carrying $2,000 in cash. West German police believed she belonged to a terrorist group; Johannes Weinrich of the Baader-Meinhof Gang was a friend and former lover, and Ilich Ramirez Sanchez (alias Carlos the Jackal) of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine was her husband. On April 22, 1982, a Paris court sentenced her to four years in jail and a 10,000 franc ($1,600) fine. On May 7, 1991, German magazine Stern claimed that Kopp was living with Sanchez, posing as a Mexican businessman, and their daughter Rosa in a heavily guarded Damascus, Syria, apartment next to the Egyptian Embassy. On March 17, 2003, she refused to testify in the Berlin trial of her husband.

Robert Korcz: Pole who on October 19, 1993, took over the future Polish Consulate General in the Steilshoop, Germany. He was overpowered by police 14 hours later and died of gunshot injuries. He had been fined $150 (3 million zloty) in April 1993 for threatening employees of the municipal welfare office in Gorzow Wielkopolski, Poland. He had attacked the consulate building to protest the court verdict.

Jesus Abrisketa Korta: leading member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 13, 1982, by police in Saint-Jean-de-Luz during a routine check of identity papers. He had been sought since the April 28, 1982, discovery of a large cache of ETA weapons in a Bayonne apartment that were traced to him.

Cherif Kouachi: on January 29, 2005, French authorities put the radical Islamist, age 23, under investigation for associating with terrorists but did not charge him. He was suspected of volunteering to travel to Iraq to fight against the Coalition.

Mohammed Koudache: Algerian who joined another imprisoned Arab terrorist and two Dutch criminals to take 22 hostages at the prison chapel at Scheveningen, Netherlands, on October 26, 1974. Guns had been smuggled into the prison. After a 105-hour siege, police raided the chapel. The Dutch attorney general said the four would be charged with unlawful deprivation of liberty.

Abdennabi Kounjaa: Moroccan who died on April 3, 2004, when Madrid police in the Leganes suburb cornered him and six other terrorist suspects in their safe house. After a two-hour gun battle, the terrorists set off bombs in their apartment. Police found a weapons cache and said the dead terrorists had been planning another major attack in Madrid. One document mentioned a Jewish cemetery and cultural center in a mountain town near Madrid.

Kovalenko: one of two would-be hijackers of Aeroflot Flight 83-05 on July 23, 1990, bound for Murmansk. They threatened to blow up the TU-234 unless it was flown to Stockholm or any foreign military field. The crew landed at Petrozavodsk, where a rescue squad seized the hijackers.

Cafer Kovaycin: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London's Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio lived in London. Kovaycin received 15 years for November 4, 1993, arson attack.

Mehrdad Kowkabi: Iranian student arrested on April 9, 1990, for an arson attack at Dillons bookshop in London where The Satanic Verses was on sale.

Oleg Kozlov: unmarried Russian speaker who on June 19, 1990, hijacked Aeroflot 8305, a TU-134 flying from Riga to Murmansk, and diverted it to Helsinki's Vanta Airport. He gave himself up to Finnish authorities and requested asylum.

Friederike Krabbe: she was believed to be related to Hanna Elisa Krabbe. Friederike was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Hanna Elisa Krabbe: variant Hanna-Elise. Former companion of Hans Joachim Klein, an associate of Venezuela terrorist Carlos. One of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed the military attaché, Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, and the economic counselor, Heinz Hillegaart. They demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing 1 of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Krabbe was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison.

Jan Kralovansky: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950.

Ben Krami: Palestinian arrested by Rome police on October 15, 1985, while smuggling two 3.5-kilogram bombs in false-bottom suitcases from Baghdad at Fiumicino Airport. Each of the pen-thrite plastic explosive bombs was capable of destroying a building. On December 6, 1986, he was found guilty of arms smuggling and sentenced to eight years in prison. He admitted that he was a member of the May 15 Arab Organization for the Liberation of Palestine and that he intended to blow up the U.S. Embassy and the American Express offices.

Petra Kraus: variant Krause. Leader of a Baader-Meinhof-style urban terrorist group in Switzerland. She was arrested in Switzerland in 1975 and charged with the bombing of an American bank in Zurich and supplying arms to West German and Italian terrorists. The June 27, 1976, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France Flight 139 demanded her release. Her trial was to begin on September 19, 1977.

Josef Kredler: variant Gredler. Arrested on November 7, 1988, in Innsbruck, Austria, for helping Karul Ausserer, a South Tirol terrorist, secure 15 kilograms of explosives and pistols, fuses, ammunition, and hand grenades hidden in the basement of his apartment. He was scheduled to be interrogated by an Innsbruck investigating judge on December 11, 1988.

Gabriella Teidman Kreiger: variant of Gabriele Krocher-Tiedemann.

Robert B. Krejcik: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Mullah Krekar: alias of Najumuddin Faraj Ahmad.

Gabriele Krocher-Tiedemann: variant Gabriella Teidman Kreiger. Freed during the February 27, 1975, kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union, by the group Movement 2 June. On March 3, their plane was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, and Amman. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum. She next surfaced as one of the six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) cover name, who took over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, and took 70 hostages, including 11 oil ministers on December 21, 1975. A warrant was handed down by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975, for shooting an Austrian policeman at point-blank range during the OPEC attack. She was suspected of involvement in the Entebbe hijacking of June 27, 1976. She was captured after a shootout with Swiss police on December 20, 1977. With her was Christian Moeller, suspected of taking part in West German bank raids after he joined the Baader-Meinhof Gang in July 1977. Some money paid in the ransom of Walter Palmers, kidnapped on November 9, 1977, in Austria, was found in their car. In October 1983, Carlos sent a letter to the same embassy, threatening to kill Bonn interior minister Friedrich Zimmermann if authorities prosecuted Krocher-Tiedemann for her role in the 1975 OPEC attack; she was already serving 15 years in Switzerland for seriously wounding two customs officers. On December 18, 1987, Swiss authorities extradited her to West Germany, where she was to serve a six-year sentence and answer charges to the OPEC attack and the Palmer kidnapping.

Norbert Krocher: wanted in a 1972 warrant for terrorist activities for a Baader-Meinhof splinter group. He was one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. On April 3, the Swedes turned over two of the West Germans, including Krocher, to Bonn. Swedish police claimed that the group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson. On April 4, 1977, Krocher's headquarters was raided. Police found 15 pounds of explosives, medical equipment, several books on bombing techniques, a police uniform, and 30 false Swedish, German, and French passports.

Juan Fernandez Krohn: dissident Spanish priest stopped six yards from Pope John Paul II in the shrine of Our Lady of Fatima, Portugal, on May 12, 1982. He slashed a security guard and was charged with attempted homicide. On May 1, 1983, he was sentenced to six and one-half years, a $180 fine, and expulsion from Portugal.

Marko Krpan: fired four shots at Yugoslav vice consul in Duesseldorf Vladimir Topic as he was entering his office building on June 28, 1976. None of the shots hit Topic. Krpan escaped in a car driven by Pavle Perovic; both were later arrested.

Florian Kruszyk: alias Commander Wysocki. Leader of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. Police revealed that he had been a member of Polish intelligence in 1962–1965 and had been convicted of spying in Vienna in 1968. He was then rearrested in Vienna in 1969 for robbing a jewelry store and holding a family hostage and served a nine-year sentence for the robbery. He then moved to the Netherlands, where he married a Dutch citizen and made threats against the Polish Embassy in The Hague. Switzerland denied extradition. On October 10, 1983, he received 6 years in prison and 15 years' banishment from Switzerland.

Krbystov Krynski: one of five hijackers of a LOT IL14 bound for Poland on August 19, 1970, and diverted to the Danish island of Bornholm.

Christine Kuby: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested in January 1978 following a shootout with two policemen in Winterhude, Hamburg, in which she and a police officer were wounded. In 1979, the Hamburg Supreme Court sentenced her to life in prison for two counts of attempted murder. On May 16, 1992, she and three other imprisoned RAF female terrorists said in a televised interview from Luebeck Prison that the RAF had not given up terrorism. On February 10, 1995, the Hamburg Supreme Court set a release date of February 22, the day she was to be discharged from a rehabilitation clinic following a spinal operation.

Michael Kuehnen: chairman and founder in 1977 of the neo-Nazi Action Front of National Socialists/National Activists, arrested on the West-autobahn near Ybbs, Austria, on November 22, 1983, for possession of an automatic pistol and a gas pistol.

Anton Kujundzic: warrant was issued for his arrest for the September 1979 incident in which four Yugoslav émigrés fired on diners at the Balkan Grill in Frankfurt, West Germany. One person was killed.

Sureh Kumar: one of two Indian Spanish citizens who on March 19, 2004, were charged in Spain with aiding a terrorist organization and falsifying documents. They were ordered held without bail and placed in isolation for another five days at Soto del Real prison.

Ilyas Kuncak: from Ankara, age 47, one of the two al Qaeda suicide bombers who on November 20, 2003, set off truck bombs at the British Consulate and the headquarters of HSBC, a British bank, killing at least 30 people and wounding 450. Kuncak, a spice merchant, drove the HSBC truck.

Kung Fu: alias of Ascaín Pedro Murua Etxave.

Semsettin Kurt: Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) demonstrator who died of his wounds following a shootout with Turkish Embassy workers in Bern, Switzerland, on June 24, 1993.

Kuznetsov: one of two individuals who on July 23, 1990, failed to hijack Aeroflot Flight 83-05 scheduled to fly from Riga to Murmansk. They threatened to blow up the TU-234 unless it was flown to Stockholm or any foreign military field. The crew landed at Petrozavodsk, where a rescue squad seized the hijackers.

Ole Nicolai Kvisler: member, age 22, of a neo Nazi group called the Boot Boys who was convicted on January 17, 2002, in Oslo City Court of the premeditated murder of Benjamin Hermansen, age 15, stabbed to death. Kvisler was sentenced to 15 years.

Salah Salmon Fiaz Kweiks: alias Ramzi Diab. Palestinian arrested in the Neuss, West Germany, apartment that was raided on October 26, 1988, resulting in the arrests of 14 Arabs suspected of Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) terrorist ties. He had taken the Diab name from an Israeli passport stolen in Spain. He had spent time in an Israeli prison and had been freed in a May 1985 prisoner exchange engineered by Hajj Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni.

L

---

Abdullah Abd al-Hamid Labib: variant of Mohammed Abdel Ali Labib.

Mohammed Abdel Ali Labib: variant Abdullah Abd al-Hamid Labib; alias Colonel Hawari. Leader of a terrorist group of which Mohammed Rashid, an accused Palestinian serial bomber, was a member. On October 20, 1988, a French court convicted Labib in absentia for his role in several terrorist attacks throughout Western Europe in the mid-1980s aimed at Syrian, Libyan, and U.S. targets and gave him the maximum 10-year sentence for complicity in transporting arms, ammunition, and explosives and for “criminal association.” The United States said he was behind a TWA attack. He had headed the Fatah Special Operations Group’s intelligence and security apparatus that sometimes served as Yasir Arafat’s bodyguard.

Philippe Lachavanne: political science student and one of three would-be terrorists arrested on March 9, 1987, after a drunken shootout with police guards at the residence of Jean Tiberi, first deputy mayor of Paris and a government member of Parliament. The students drove off but were captured.

Philippe Lacroix: one of two Belgians arrested on March 15, 1991, by Colombian security forces in Barranquilla for involvement in at least four armed robberies and the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnapping on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. They were also affiliates of Medellin cocaine cartel leader Pablo Escobar.

They apparently had signed up as mercenaries for the cartel, which was reconstituting its terrorist infrastructure. They had entered through Brazil four months earlier after leaving Belgium. They each had a dozen faked national ID cards with different aliases, $170,000 in cash—which they offered the arresting officers—and several telephone numbers of cartel members in Medellin. They were to be returned to Belgium on March 21, 1991, on a special Belgian military plane.

Ahmed Laidouni: arrested on January 18, 1999, by French police for ties to Osama bin Laden and charged with criminal association with a terrorist enterprise. He was born in France to Algerian parents. He fought with Bosnian Muslims from 1992 to 1995 and trained in Afghan camps. On March 17, 2004, he went on trial for associating with a terrorist enterprise, which carries a 10-year sentence.

Renaud Laigle: suspected member of Direct Action arrested on July 21, 1987, by Munich police near the airport. He was a childhood friend of Max Frerot, a Direct Action bomb expert wanted for several terrorist operations. On September 3, 1987, he was extradited to France on charges of participating in several bank robberies and bombings.

Phelim Lally: one of two Irishmen arrested on February 1, 1979, in Greece after crossing the Turkish border. Lally was from Newry, County Down, and lived in Northern Ireland although he held an Irish passport. They were charged with smuggling explosives to support terrorist groups, believed to be the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), for which they faced 10 years. The U.K. consul said he could not request extradition because they were not wanted for any offense in the United Kingdom.

Alin Lambert: sentenced to 14 years on June 21, 1990, by a court in Pau, France, for two attacks in the French Basque country in 1985 by the right-wing Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Aarno Laminparras: Oulu building contractor who hijacked a Finnair plane on September 30, 1978, and shuttled for 16 hours between Oulu and Helsinki, Finland, before releasing his hostages.

Olivier Lamotte: French citizen arrested on August 25, 1994, by Marseilles police with Maria Idoia Lopez Riano, a former member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Madrid Commando, accused of 23 murders. The duo was indicted on terrorism and arms charges on August 29 in Paris. Police searches turned up counterfeit or stolen ID papers and documentation from ETA.

Roman Landarra Martin: Priest from Santurce, Puerto Rico, arrested on October 3, 1987, in a police sweep of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members in France and expelled.

Joerg Lang: former partner of radical lawyer Klaus Croissant, the defense attorney for the Baader-Meinhof Gang. Lang was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Florence Patricia Lanner: alias of Nathalie Menigon.

Armondo Lanza: repentant terrorist who was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 12 years for involvement in the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

A. Lapez: alias used by one of two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 741 flying from Frankfurt, Germany, to New York on September 6, 1970.

Jean-Charles Laporal: Direct Action member arrested in Guadeloupe by Pointe-a-Pitre police on December 20, 1986. He was believed to have carried out attacks with Max Frerot and the Lyons Branch of Direct Action in the 1980s.

Maria Teresa Lara: Parisian girlfriend of Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist, following the December 21, 1975, takeover of the OPEC ministerial meeting in Vienna, Austria. She and Carlos moved in to the Albert I Hotel.

Mohamed Larbi: one of three Algerians arrested in Naples, Italy, on November 17, 2005, suspected of being Islamist extremists with ties to international terrorists and who could become "potentially operative" and ready to carry out an attack.

Antonin Larch: one of two miners who hijacked a Slovair L410 bound for Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, on April 18, 1972, and diverted it to Nuremberg, West Germany.

Francisco Larena: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for shooting to death Meliton Manzanás, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968. The death sentence was commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian Eugen Beihl, who was kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Larena was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzanás's widow.

Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term.

Jesus Lariz: on March 16, 1994, Spain's request for his extradition was rejected by a hearing court and upheld by an appeals court. He was released, although he was still charged with use of false documents.

Jesus Larondo-Osta: Spaniard suspected of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) membership who was arrested on July 29, 1987, by police in Armendarits, France, and handed over to Spain.

Jose Maria Larrechea: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Juan Lasa Mitxelena: alias Txikiardi. Leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Anglet, France, in January 1985.

Philippe Lascaray: member of the French Basque separatist group Iparretarrak arrested on February 20, 1988, by French gendarmes from the Groupement de l'Intervention de la Gendarmerie Nationale, along with four associates, after a shootout in front of the terrorists' Boucau apartment.

Jose Miguel Latasa: one of 14 people arrested in July 1988 in Spain for attempting to re-form the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Donosti (Basque for San Sebastian) Commando, earlier disbanded by police. The group planned attacks on the San Sebastian Marine Command, on the Office of the Civil Governor of Guipuzcoa, and on a National Police patrol. Police found an arms cache and two cars prepared to be used in an attack.

'Abd al-Latif: Palestinian associate of man arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel on December 17, 1985, who tried to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane. Police believed he was one of four Arabs who intended to hijack the plane.

Sergio Latini: tried by Italy for the May 28, 1974, bombing of a trade union meeting that killed 8 and injured 208. On May 23, 1987, a Brescia court ended a five-month trial by acquitting him of the bombing, saying there was insufficient evidence.

Torkil Lauesen: hospital laboratory technician whom Copenhagen's Berlingske Tidende claimed on September 12, 1990, was in Algeria in the fall of 1984 to receive Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) instructions regarding a plan to kidnap Jorn Rausing, son of multimillionaire Gad Rausing. He also admitted involvement in a 13-million-kroner robbery at the Kobmagergade post office, proceeds of which went to the PFLP. He was one of seven PFLP members in Blekingegade, Denmark, sentenced to prison. They may have been responsible for the 1988 post office robbery, but all were acquitted for lack of evidence and were due to be released in December 1995.

Pascal Laure: alias of Nathalie Menigon.

Michel Lavie: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak sentenced to 18 months in prison, 12 suspended, on March 28, 1989, for conspiracy to destroy property using explosives in the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy in France on July 6, 1987. Police found in his home a pamphlet about underground fighting, five kilograms of sodium chlorate, gas lighter tips, and electrical switches.

Tatzi Layana: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Annick Layardette: French woman arrested with Luis Ignacio Irureta Goyena Lanza, one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested by French police on June 6, 1992. Police also discovered the apartment in which the terrorists had made parcel bombs that were distributed to terrorists in Spain. The cache included 40 kilograms of dynamite. Layardette owned the apartment.

Suzanna Lazzati: Argentine arrested with her boyfriend and an otherwise unidentified Italian on September 22, 1987, in Rome for the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. She was arrested at her home.

Mrs. Attilia Lazzeri: hijacker of an Alitalia Caravelle flying from Rome to Milan on March 11, 1972.

Lebedev: unemployed 17-year-old resident of Leningrad who on July 12, 1990, attempted to hijack a TU-154 of the Leningrad Civil Aviation Directorate.

Jose Javier Lecasta Salina: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested by French police in Hendaye and turned over to Spanish authorities on March 11, 1987.

Jacques LeClerc: French citizen held on April 5, 1983, on charges of drug trafficking and leading a paramilitary neo-Nazi group, the Bridegrooms of Death.

James Lee: Briton sentenced on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that slightly injured his wife. A second car bomb on November 22, 2000, injured two men and a woman, all British citizens. Lee initially admitted to the charges but later recanted. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Estibaliz Lejarza Arza: one of several Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Basauri, Spain, on November 18, 1990.

Said Lekhal: member of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front (FIS) committee of elected members who provided safe haven to FIS executive council member Abderrahmane Dhina in Switzerland after he escaped a November 9, 1994, French raid on an FIS safe house.

Misar Lelzein: on April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Patrick Lembeye: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak sentenced to five years on March 28, 1989, for attempting to destroy property using explosives in the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy in the Pyrenees-Atlantiques region of France on July 6, 1987. In the attack, Lembeye lost a leg.

Marinko Lemo: accomplice of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslavian ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. A Stockholm city court gave Lemo a two-year term for complicity on July 14. He later helped negotiate with hijackers in another incident.

Cesare Lenardo: variant of Cesare Leonardo.

Dieter Lenz: alias of Wolfgang Beer.

Encarnacion Leon Lara: female member of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who on December 5, 1992, was arrested in a shootout with Spanish police in a supermarket parking lot. She and other GRAPO members raided an armored van servicing the supermarket, taking 80 million pesetas. She was carrying false documents when captured. She was wounded and admitted to the hospital with multiple gunshot wounds.

Cesare Leonardo (variant spellings Di Leonardo, di Lenardo): arrested on January 28, 1982, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Padua, where the group was holding U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozer, whom the Red Brigades had kidnapped on December 17, 1981. The repentant terrorist was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 27 years in the Dozier case.

Cesare di Leonardo: variant of Cesare Leonardo.

Hans-Dieter Lepzien: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Antonin Lerch: one of two miners convicted of the July 14, 1971, hijacking of the Prague–Carlsbad flight to West Germany. Lerch shot the copilot twice; reports differ as to whether the victim survived. Czechoslovakia demanded extradition but was refused. After pleading guilty, the pair was sentenced to seven years under Germany's new hijacking law.

Philippe Lesgourgues: French member of the Basque group Iparretarrak sentenced to two years, one suspended, on March 28, 1989, for attempting to destroy property using explosives in the July 6, 1987, bombing attempts against public buildings in Anglet, Cambo, and Iholdy in the Pyrenees-Atlantiques region of France on July 6, 1987. The court dropped charges of conspiracy and smuggling explosives.

Raoul Levett: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Denis Leyne: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, in New York City and indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer, and shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. Total bail for the four was $6.5 million.

Alvaro Liacono: Red Brigades member arrested by Interpol in Switzerland's Lugano region on June 9, 1988. He had obtained Swiss citizenship. He was wanted in Italy for the kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro in 1978. Italian authorities on July 21, 1988, requested that he serve in Switzerland the sentences passed on him in Italy because he could not be extradited to Italy.

Emilia Libera: arrested on January 28, 1982, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Padua, where the group was holding U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier, whom the Red Brigades had kidnapped on December 17, 1981. Libera and her boyfriend, Antonio Savasta, were sentenced the next day to 30 years for their role in a 1980 shootout in Sardinia. She was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 16-plus years in the Dozier case.

Fabio Liberti: Bologna resident and one of three Red Brigades members arrested by Bologna police on June 5, 1987.

Abdul Basit Abu Lifa: Palestinian Dane in contact with a group of al Qaeda sympathizers in Europe in 2006. On February 15, 2007, a Copenhagen judge sentenced him to seven years in jail for involvement in a failed plot to blow up a European target.

Tomas Linaza Echeverria: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military member whose extradition to Spain was denied on June 8, 1981, by French Premier Pierre Mauroy. On September 29, 1984, he was arrested in Biarritz for illegal possession of a 9-mm pistol and for breaking a court order limiting his movement.

Germaine Lindsay: alias Abdullah Shaheed Jamal. Jamaica-born British citizen, age 33, who grew up in a single-parent household in southern England. On July 7, 2005, at 8:56 A.M., a device he placed on the floor of the first carriage of the London Underground, near the first set of double doors where passengers stand, went off three minutes out of the Russell Square Station en route to King's Cross Station, killing at least 21 people on the Piccadilly Line Train 311. At least 900 passengers were on board. He had converted to Islam and was a carpet layer and sold cell phone covers on the weekend. He had become a father 15 months earlier.

Nadia Desdemona Lioce: Red Brigades member convicted and sentenced to life in prison by a judge in Rome on July 8, 2005, for the murder of a government labor advisor in 1999.

Dioia Lippi: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Nikila Lisac: one of three Croatian males who hijacked SAS 130, a DC9 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm, on September 15, 1972.

Noel Little: one of three British Northern Irish members of the Ulster Defense Association arrested on April 21, 1989, by French Directorate for Territorial Oversight (DST) counterintelligence police in the Paris Hilton hotel while they were planning to swap a stolen British Blowpipe surface-to-air missile for weapons from South African state arms manufacturer Armscor. Little had made several trips to Europe during 1988 and had been held for questioning for a week by the Royal Ulster Constabulary before being released without charges. He was a clerical worker at a local Northern Ireland school in County Armagh, southern Ulster, and a political supporter of Rev. Ian Paisley. On November 24, 1989, Paris investigating magistrate Jean Louis Bruguiere granted him an unannounced amount of bail.

Ivan Livajica: warrant was issued for his arrest for the September 1979 incident in which four Yugoslav émigrés fired on diners at the Balkan Grill in Frankfurt, West Germany. One person was killed.

Jesus Maria Lizarralde: extradition to Spain from Uruguay was granted on March 16, 1994. Spain charged him with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) membership. The next day, the First Chamber of the Appeals Court upheld the extradition on charges of causing damage and destruction, illegal association, and illegally taking hostages. He was held in custody at the Central Police Precinct jail in Montevideo and was charged with using false documents. He was one of three imprisoned ETA members who conducted a 14-day hunger strike that ended on August 24, 1994. He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, facing six counts of homicide.

Jose Maria Lizarralde: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who operated in Navarra Province and was believed responsible for the November 24, 1989, kidnapping of Spanish industrialist Adolfo Villoslada Martin from his garage in Pamplona.

Luis Maria Lizarralde Izaguirre: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. A Uruguayan lower court granted extradition, but the decision was appealed before a higher court.

Pedro Maria Lizarralde Izaguirre: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Although Spain requested extradition, he was released.

Angel Lizarte Oses: one of two suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in the Olivet District of the Guipuzcoa town of Renteria in Spain on November 18, 1990. The duo was preparing a possible escape to France.

Maurizio Locusta: alleged Red Brigades (RB) triggerman in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. Paris police arrested him on June 15, 1987, in a hotel.

Alvaro Lojaco: convicted of terrorism in Italy and believed involved in the Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro on March 16, 1978. Police in Lugano, Switzerland, arrested him on June 8, 1988. He was tried in 1975 and initially was acquitted of murdering a young rightist extremist but subsequently was found guilty by a higher court in 1980, which sentenced him to 16 years. He had vanished by the time of his second trial.

Concepcion Lopetegui: French citizen suspected of lodging Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on May 4, 1992, by French police.

Concepcion Tristan Lopez: pregnant nurse, age 21, and member of the Spanish Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP) who was sentenced on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court to death for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Pose Rodriguez. She and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Enrique Lopez Olmedo: Spanish citizen believed to be carrying out subversive activities who was killed in a police shootout on November 16, 1977, in Chile after he refused to identify himself.

Estanislao Lopez: one of four alleged members of Irritxi, a subgroup of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military, arrested on May 17, 1986, in Inchaurren, Spain, on suspicion of machine-gun attacks against French trucks. Police found 25 kilograms of Goma-2, two submachine guns, pistols, watches, detonators, wigs, and other items.

Felix Gaun Lopez de la Calle: alias Mobutu. Head of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) armed commandos arrested on November 17, 1994, by the police of Toulon, France. He was the subject of several arrest warrants for murder and bombings. Police believe he was ETA's second in command, controlling the group's logistical supply apparatus in France. Spain's High Court Public Prosecutor's Office believed that it would be difficult to obtain his extradition because of the nature of the fairly old indictments. He was mentioned in an indictment in relation to the assassination of industrialist Saturnino Sota Argai, committed in Calle Cuchilleros, in the town of Vitoria, on December 14, 1978.

Idoia Lopez Riano: on March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military members on Algerian soil. Lopez was one of the ETA-Military Madrid Command members living there.

Javier Lopez Pena: political and military leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), age 49, arrested in Bordeaux, France, on May 20, 2008. He had been the object of a 25-year manhunt. He was believed to be behind the decision to end the ETA cease-fire by bombing an airport parking garage in Madrid in December 2006 that killed two people. Police had followed an ETA lawyer to the hideout, where they confiscated four handguns, a computer, and bomb-making materials.

Jose Miguel Lopez Galarza: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Maria del Carmen Lopez-Anguila: arrested by Spanish police on July 25, 1979, in a raid on a First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) safe house in Madrid, where police found plans to kidnap or kill a senior U.S. Air Force officer in the Royal Oaks military housing community. She confessed to 14 killings since joining GRAPO in late 1978. She was accused of being responsible for bombing a Madrid cafeteria on May 29, 1979.

Maria Idoia Lopez Riano: aliases Margarita, The Tigress. Former member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Madrid Commando, arrested on August 25, 1994, by Marseilles, France, police. She was accused of involvement in 23 murders. She was armed with a Browning pistol when arrested while driving a car in Aix-en-Provence.

Martin Lopez Castanares: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on September 14, 1994, when French police found 200 million pesetas, explosives, and chemicals on a property used as an ETA arms factory. Police were trying to determine whether some of the money was from the ransom paid to release San Sebastian engineer Julio Iglesias Zamora, who had been kidnapped and held by ETA from July 5 to October 29, 1993.

Gorka Loran: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) terrorists arrested by Spanish police on December 24, 2003, as they were planning to set off two powerful bombs on a train at a Madrid station. The duo was arrested in towns in the Basque region. One was picked up in San Sebastian, carrying a 55-pound bomb in a suitcase. Police then found a second suspect who had placed another 55-pound bomb on a train traveling from San Sebastian to Madrid. The train was stopped in Burgos. After the train was evacuated, police defused the bomb, which was set to explode at 4:00 P.M., when Madrid's Chamartin Station would have been packed with travelers. On December 25, police said that the suspects also had planned to attack a rail line in Zaragoza Province in northeastern Spain on Christmas Eve. However, the explosion occurred a day too early and caused limited damage without disrupting rail traffic.

Flavio Lori: important member of the Red Brigades Tuscany group arrested on September 7, 1988, by Rome police with 20 members of the Fighting Communist Party.

Werner Bernhard Lotze: alias Manfred Janssen. Red Army Faction (RAF) member believed responsible for the February 1, 1985, murder of Ernest Zimmermann, chairman of the board of the Motoren-und Turbinen-Union, in Gauting near Munich. He was arrested on June 14, 1990, in Cottbus, East Germany. The Berlin City Court issued an arrest warrant on June 17, 1990, following an earlier complaint from the GDR General State Prosecutor about the refusal of the Central Municipal Court to arrest three RAF members. He was wanted for several kidnappings and assassinations of prominent Germans in the late 1970s, including the slaying of Hanns-Martin Schleyer in 1977. The Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) intended to request extradition.

Lotze was married to Christine Duemlein, alias Katharina Jensen, a fellow arrested RAF member with whom he had an eight-year-old child. They lived in the Senftenberg, Cottbus, area. He admitted to the murder of a policeman during a September 24, 1978, shootout in Dortmund. By September 3, 1990, Lotze had turned state's evidence and had admitted to setting fire to the car of a lawyer in February 1977; to driving the getaway car in the Schleyer case; to shooting Hans-Wilhelm Hansen, the aforementioned policeman; to robbing the Bank fuer Gemeinwirtschaft in Darmstadt in March 1979; to robbing a Nuremberg bank in April 1979; to participating in the Haig attack in June 1979; to renting safe houses for the RAF; to establishing weapons drops; and to planning the kidnapping, not carried out, in the late 1970s of Karl Otto Poehl, then vice president and later president of the German Bundesbank. On January 31, 1991, the Bavarian Higher Regional Court sentenced him to 12 years; the Federal Prosecutor's Office had asked for only nine years. The court found Lotze guilty of murder, four counts of attempted murder, and two counts of robbery with extortion.

Ahmed Loudaini: French citizen of Algerian extraction, age 30, and suspected associate of Osama bin Laden, arrested on January 18, 1999, at Paris's Gare du Nord rail station by Directorate of Territorial Security (DST) officers investigating a forgery ring. He was about to board the Eurostar cross-channel train for London. Police found a coded document they were attempting to decipher. Loudaini was indicted for association with terrorist activity. The Europe 1 radio station claimed that a four-man terrorist team had been sent to France by bin Laden. The arrest was carried out under the aegis of France's top antiterrorism judge, Jean-Louis Bruguiere.

Jamal al-Lounici: Moroccan sentenced to death in his home country and serving time in a French jail in 1995. He was named as the leader of 12 members of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front arrested on June 6, 1995, in Milan, Rome, Naples, and Pavia, who had links with terrorists in Algeria, France, Germany, and Belgium. The group was suspected of involvement in the July 7, 1994, attack in Djendjen, Algeria, in which seven Italian sailors were found with their throats cut.

Muhammad Lu'Ay: one of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France, on July 17, 1980.

Antonio de Luca: member of the Red Brigades arrested by the Italian Secret Service and French and Swiss police on September 22, 1988, in Basel, Switzerland, while he was traveling on a train in Paris. Armed with a Mauser 7.65, he was believed to be on his way to Milan and Rome to reestablish ties with the group's factions. He had joined the group while working for an electronics firm in Pomezia, near Rome. He was a member of a cell headed by Barbara Balzerani and had escaped capture when she was arrested in 1985.

Paola di Luca: wife of Paolo Ceriani-Sebregondi, both Red Brigades members. They were arrested on May 19, 1987, in Asnieres, France. She was a former member of the Prima Linea and was sentenced to 12 years in prison for participation in an armed group. Italy's extradition request was denied.

Anna Maria Ludmann: member of the Italian Red Brigades shot dead by Genoa police on March 28, 1980. On September 15, 1986, the Anna Maria Ludmann Fighting Unit of the West German Red Army Faction bombed the Munich offices of Panavia Aircraft, Ltd., a joint West German-British-Italian venture that manufactures the Tornado NATO aircraft.

Giovanni Lugnini: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort.

Francisco Javier Lujambio Galdeano: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members extradited by France to Spain on September 23–26, 1984, to face murder charges. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike.

Mostafa Lunani: on February 16, 2006, a Belgian court sentenced him to six years for belonging to the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, which was involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 and the 2003 bombing in Casablanca that killed 32 people.

Gianfranca Lupi: one of several members of the Union of Communist Fighters of the Italian Red Brigades arrested in Paris on June 15, 1987. She was sought for two assassinations in Italy, including the February 1984 murder of U.S. Gen. Leamon Hunt, Commander of a UN peacekeeping force in the Sinai. She had been wanted since 1981. She had been living in France under an alias for several years. On November 7, 1987, she was expelled to Spain. On June 17, 1988, Madrid extradited her to Italy. She was implicated at the trial of those accused of the 1978 kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro.

Efesio Lussu: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Lussu. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Kevin Lynch: the imprisoned Irish National Liberation Army hunger-striker ran in Waterford for the Irish Republic's Parliament in the June 11, 1981, general elections. He received 3,000-plus votes and died on August 1, 1981, on the 71st day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison.

M

---

M.: Libyan terrorism suspect who had been held without charge for two years in London's high-security Belmarsh prison and whose release was ordered by the appeals court on March 18, 2004.

Karim M.: Moroccan who was detained by German police on April 11, 2002, carrying Ramzi Binalshibh's phone number and who was a possible 20th hijacker for the 9/11 attacks. He was believed involved in the April 11, 2002, truck bombing of a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia, that killed 17 people.

Rudy M.: Dutch student, age 26, charged with embezzling a state document along with Hugo Mueller, a Dutch political science student whose passport was carried by Bernard Hausmann, a Baader-Meinhof terrorist killed on May 25, 1976, when his booby-trapped suitcase exploded when he opened it in a security office off the luggage area of Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport. The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) claimed credit for the bombing. Wadi Haddad's supporters in Amsterdam had provided the altered passport to Hausmann.

Habib Maamar: variant Habib Ma'mar. Tunisian member of the May 15 Organization arrested in Paris in May 1986 who confessed to the bombing on Orchard Street in London on December 25, 1983, near Marks and Spencer and Selfridges. He claimed he was paid $3,000/month by a pro-Iraqi faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) led by Abu Ibrahim to bomb Israeli targets. He also confessed to the February 23, 1985, bombing of Marks and Spencer in Paris that killed 1 and injured 14 and to the August 21, 1985, bombing of the Israeli Bank Leumi office in Paris. Large quantities of a plastic explosive, penthrite, were found in his Paris home. His trial opened on December 13, 1989. He told police he was asked to photograph Jewish establishments in Paris, London, Athens, and Istanbul. He made regular visits to Baghdad to collect money and explosives. He traveled via Madrid under various names and using forged Moroccan passports.

Tarek Maaroufi: Tunisian with Belgian citizenship, wanted on an Italian warrant in October 2001; his Belgian citizenship prevented his extradition. He was one of three Europe-based organizers for the Egyptian Anathema and Exile and the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat. He was in contact with Essid Sami Ben Khemais, a leader of a European network of al Qaeda cells. He was arrested by Belgian police in December 2001 on charges of forgery, criminal association, and recruiting for a foreign army or armed force. On September 20, 2003, a Belgian court sentenced him to six years for the September 9, 2001, al Qaeda assassination in Afghanistan of Northern Alliance leader Ahmed Shah Massoud. He was accused of involvement in the fake passport ring linked to the Massoud killing. Italy wanted him for ties to known al Qaeda cells.

Germano Maccari: sentenced to life on July 16, 1996, by an Italian court for shooting to death former prime minister Aldo Moro, who was kidnapped by the Red Brigades on March 16, 1978.

In 1993, a Red Brigades member convicted as an accomplice led police to arrest Maccari as the fourth kidnapper.

Jorge Macarron Fuentes: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Vizcaya Command member arrested on March 30, 1992, by the Spanish Civil Guard.

Dennis Mach: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Stefan Macicko: one of two Czech teen hijackers who on March 29, 1989, shot their way onto a Hungarian Malev Tupolev-154B on its regular Budapest–Prague–Amsterdam–Barcelona route in Prague and demanded to be flown to the United States. Macicko was born on December 10, 1972. Both hijackers lived in the Banska Bystrica District. They surrendered in Frankfurt. The Americans took custody of the duo and handed them over to German police. The duo wanted to stay in West Germany. On March 30, 1989, the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs requested their extradition. They repeated the request on April 13, May 5, and June 8. On August 29, 1989, a Frankfurt am Main court sentenced them to two years to be served in a juvenile detention center, where they were to study German and learn automobile mechanics. On September 13, 1989, Bonn denied extradition, saying that the offenses fell within West German legislation.

Shane Mackey: one of five Real Irish Republican Army (Real IRA) members arrested on August 17, 1998, for the August 15, 1998, car bombing in the Omagh, Northern Ireland, town square that killed 29 people and wounded more than 350 others. He was the son of Francis Mackey, an Omagh city council member and chairman of the 32-County Sovereignty Committee, which opposed the peace plan and was believed to be the political arm of the Real IRA.

James MacLaughlin: Irish citizen arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van carried 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army.

Sean MacStiofain: chief of staff and a founder of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

He died at age 73 on May 17, 2001, in a hospital in Navan, Ireland. He had been in failing health since suffering a stroke in the mid-1980s. He had served as chief of staff with the Provisional IRA when the group was founded in 1970. He led the IRA delegation that negotiated a brief cease-fire with the British in 1972.

He was born John Stephenson. In 1953, he and two other IRA members were jailed for stealing more than 100 rifles from a U.K. military armory. He was paroled in 1959. He became the IRA's intelligence chief in 1962. He and other Catholics split from the leftist Official IRA to form the Provisional IRA. He was arrested in 1972 and held a 57-day hunger strike. He was slightly wounded by a letter bomb mailed to him in the IRA offices in Dublin on March 20, 1972. He published Memoirs of a Revolutionary in 1975.

Franjo Macukic: associate of Stanko Nizic, a night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich who was killed on August 26, 1981, by a revolver bullet fired at point-blank range. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said Macukic was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia. Macukic was arrested on December 12, 1981, while attempting to cross the Swiss–German border with arms and ammunition.

Abderamane Madami: arrested on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism activities.

Khaled Madani: Algerian who was arrested in Spain on February 23, 2004, on suspicion of supplying forged documents to the Hamburg, Germany, al Qaeda cell. On April 12, 2004, the FBI and a U.S. prosecutor questioned him about whether he had forged passports for the 9/11 attackers.

Oussama Madani: son of the Islamic Salvation Front of Algeria leader Abassi Madani. On June 3, 1993, Algeria asked Germany for the extradition of Oussama.

Julen Madariaga y Aguirre: founder of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested by Biarritz, France, police on May 31, 1988. He was born in Bilbao, Spain, 56 years earlier but was a French national and owner of an Anglet plumbing company.

Saed Madjid: Iranian hijacker of a British Airways BAC111 flying from Manchester to London on January 7, 1975.

Magaryan brothers: on July 20, 1988, Geneva police arrested two Armenian terrorists identified as the Magaryan brothers, nephews of Yanikian, who had murdered Turkey's Los Angeles chief consul Behadir Demir on January 27, 1973. The duo was carrying out foreign-currency transfer operations for terrorists. They were caught as part of the La Atilla operation launched by Turkish and Italian police 18 months prior to their arrest, an operation that had extended into 13 countries. The duo was under investigation for 9 months and were believed to have been involved in the murder of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in 1986 and the raid on a synagogue in Turkey.

Joseph Magee: Belfast man arrested in June 1985 in a police raid in Glasgow that uncovered a 16-bomb campaign planned by him and four others for British resorts during the summer of 1985. His accomplices were also arrested. On June 11, 1986, he was found guilty of murder stemming from the October 12, 1984, bombing of the Grand Hotel in Brighton that killed five and narrowly missed killing prime minister Margaret Thatcher and her entire cabinet at the Conservative Party Conference. He was also found guilty of planning a bombing campaign during 1985. On March 1, 1994, the Dublin High Court ruled against extradition to the United Kingdom to face charges for the murder of a soldier, Sgt. Michael Newman, in 1992.

Patrick Magee: possibly the same person as Joseph Magee, a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who tried to kill U.K. prime minister Margaret Thatcher in 1984. He received eight life sentences for his role in the bombing of the Conservative Party annual conference in southern England. Four people died; Thatcher was unharmed. The sentencing judge recommended no parole for at least 35 years. On June 22, 1999, he was freed from Northern Ireland's main antiterrorism prison. He became the 277th paramilitary prisoner, half of them IRA members, to be released early as part of the 1998 Good Friday peace accord.

Said Magri: placed under house arrest in Folembay, France, on August 11, 1994, by French police for terrorism activities. He went on a hunger strike on August 16, 1994, and on August 26 said he was ready to commit suicide if not released.

Anne Maguire: one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. Maguire had already served her sentence.

Donna Maguire: Northern Ireland resident arrested in Belgium on June 16, 1990, for the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen at an Italian restaurant in Roermond, Netherlands, of two vacationing Australian lawyers, age 24, believed to be British soldiers. The Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) apologized for the mistake. The Netherlands requested her extradition. West Germany requested extradition for questioning for two 1989 IRA terrorist attacks—the bombing of the U.K. army barracks on Osnabrueck and the killing of a U.K. corporal in Hannover. An Irish court acquitted her of weapons charges in February 1990. She was eventually extradited by Dutch authorities to Germany in October 1991. She was alleged to be involved in the May 4, 1990, attempted bomb attack against the U.K. barracks in Langenhagen, in Hanover, and the June 2, 1990, murder of U.K. Maj. Michael Dillon-Lee in Dortmund. On November 16, 1992, the Cell Higher Regional Court heard charges of attempted murder of four U.K. soldiers by four suspected IRA members, including Maguire. The Federal Prosecutor's Office said they would also face trial for the June 1989 bombing of the Quebec Barracks of the British Army of the Rhine in Osnabrueck, which injured a guard.

Noel Maguire: convicted on April 8, 2003, by a U.K. court of endangering life and severely damaging property in 2001 London and Birmingham bombings as part of a campaign by Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) dissidents, probably the Real IRA.

Patrick Maguire: Anne Maguire's husband and one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. Maguire had already served his sentence.

Patrick Maguire: Anne Maguire's son and one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. Maguire had already served his sentence.

Peter Eaman Maguire: Dublin, Ireland, resident indicted on August 10, 1989, by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply surface-to-air missiles to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA). The conspiracy apparently began in 1978. On April 21, 1994, the admitted mastermind of the plot to provide the IRA with weaponry to destroy helicopters in Northern Ireland pleaded guilty in Boston to violations of the U.S. Armed Export Control Act. He faced 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Thomas Oliver Maguire: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, in New York City and indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer, and shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. Total bail for the four was $6.5 million.

Vincent Maguire: Anne Maguire's son and one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. Maguire had already served his sentence.

Jasem Mahboule: one of nine members of the Mujahadeen Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Adurahmin Mohammed Mahdi: London-based spokesperson in mid-2007 for the Ogaden National Liberation Front, a separatist movement in the remote eastern area of Ethiopia.

Abderrazak Mahdjoub: Algerian and suspected al Qaeda organizer in Germany who asked Mohammed Daki to find shelter for arriving immigrants in early 2003. He was one of two individuals arrested in Rome on November 28, 2003, on suspicion of recruiting suicide bombers against Coalition forces. He was charged with association with the aim of international terrorism. On March 19, 2004, Germany extradited him to Italy. As of March 18, 2005, he was on trial in Italy for links to international terrorists.

Abderrazak Mahdjoub: resident of Germany and brother of Samir Mahdjoub linked to three Algerians and a Spaniard who on May 14, 2004, were arrested in Spain and jailed pending investigation of their suspected involvement in terrorism. On May 19, High Court Judge Baltasar Garzon said the three Algerians belonged to al Qaeda and were recruiting Muslims across Europe to go to Iraq to fight the United States. The group was directed by Abu Musab Zarqawi. Garzon said the network was linked to one broken up in November in Italy. He said the group was also connected to the 9/11 Hamburg cell. He said Samir Mahdjoub had helped others "distribute money to finance the sending of mujaheddin to Iraq" using the infrastructure of Ansar al-Islam in Italy and Syria. He said Mahdjoub and Redouane Zenimi and Mohamed Ayat had formed a Spanish al Qaeda cell lending "economic financing to the rest of the European network." He said the trio took orders from Abderrazak Madhjoub. Zarqawi ordered Abderrazak Mahdjoub and Abdelahi Djaouat to travel "to Damascus in March 2003 with the intention of going to Iraq, where other mujaheddin would be arriving." The duo was arrested in Syria.

Samir Mahdjoub: one of four individuals arrested in Spain on May 14, 2004, and jailed pending investigation of their suspected involvement in terrorism. On May 19, High Court Judge Baltasar Garzon said the three Algerians belonged to al Qaeda and were recruiting Muslims across Europe to go to Iraq to fight the United States. The group was directed by Abu Musab Zarqawi. Garzon said the network was linked to one broken up in November in Italy. He said the group was also connected to the 9/11 Hamburg cell. He said Samir Mahdjoub had helped others "distribute money to finance the sending of mujaheddin to Iraq" using the infrastructure of Ansar al-Islam in Italy and Syria. He said Mahdjoub and Redouane Zenimi and Mohamed Ayat had formed a Spanish al Qaeda cell lending "economic financing to the rest of the European network." He said the trio took orders from Abderrazak Mahdjoub, a resident of Germany and a brother of one of the trio.

Horst Mahler: one of the four founders of the Baader-Meinhof Group. His release was demanded during the February 27, 1975, kidnapping by Movement 2 June of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. He chose to stay in prison "so that he would not desert the class struggle." Some observers believed that his toying with Maoism had led to his comrades' being irritated with him and that perhaps they hoped to change his thinking forcibly.

Amjad Mahmood: arrested on January 31, 2007, as part of a group that had planned to kidnap a British soldier in Birmingham and video his beheading. Age 31, he was ordered held until February 23, when a hearing was scheduled. His trial was scheduled to begin on January 29, 2008.

He pleaded not guilty to assisting ringleader Parviz Khan and knowing of his plot and not reporting it to police.

Shujah Mahmood: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. Mahmood, Omar Khyam's brother, was acquitted. After the trial, prosecutors said that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group had been trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Waheed Mahmood: one of seven British men arrested in March 2004 by London police on charges of plotting to bomb nightclubs, trains, and the country's power network as part of an al Qaeda plot. Police seized 1,300 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, often used in homemade bombs. The group had flown to Pakistan for instruction at a terrorist training camp. On April 30, 2007, the jury convicted five defendants, including Mahmood, age 34, of conspiracy to build and detonate a fertilizer bomb. They were given life sentences by Judge Michael Astill. After the trial, prosecutors said that the group had met in the United Kingdom and Pakistan with Mohammed Sidique Khan and Shehzad Tanweer, two of the four 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). The group had been trained in Pakistan by Abd al-Hadi al-Iraqi, a senior al Qaeda figure later detained at the U.S. prison at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Husseini Rad Mahmoud: one of two Black March terrorists who on April 16, 1979, tried to take over

El Al 334, a B707 flying from Tel Aviv to Vienna, at Zaventem Airport in Brussels. They conducted a gun battle with police in which a dozen people were injured and then shot seven more Belgians. El Al security men and Belgian police shot one of the terrorists and arrested both. On August 16, 1979, the duo was sentenced to eight years for attempted murder and for carrying illegal weapons and false identity papers.

Mohammed Mahmood: leader of the Global Islamic Media Front, an Internet propaganda arm of al Qaeda, age 22, held by Austrian police who on September 12, 2007, detained three al Qaeda sympathizers for having posted an Internet video in the spring that threatened to attack Austria and Germany if they did not withdraw their military forces from Afghanistan.

Imad Salim Mahmud: Lebanese resident in West Berlin believed involved in the April 6, 1986, bombing of La Belle Disco. Libyan terrorists stored weapons in his apartment.

Silke Maier-Witt: former nurse named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. In October 1980, the French Neue Revue claimed that in police raids on RAF terrorist safe houses in Paris, traces were found of Clostridium botulinum, as well as books on medicine and biology and handwritten notes by Maier-Witte.

She was arrested in East Germany on June 18, 1990, in the pharmaceutical enterprise where she was working as the head of the information and documentation office. Unmarried, she had obtained German Democratic Republic citizenship and had been living in the country since October 1, 1980. She lived in Neubrandenburg under the name Silvia Bayer. She was a close friend of detained Susanne Albrecht and had lived in Dresden under the name of Eva-Maria S. from 1983 to 1986. She first lived in a workers' hostel and later in the Dresden-Prhlis new district. Information from a Stasi defector led to her arrest.

On April 29, 1991, she was charged in the Stuttgart higher regional court with five murders, several attempted murders, and robbery causing subsequent death, including for having participated in Schleyer's murder, the attempted mortar attack on the Federal Prosecutor's Office in 1977, the failed assassination attempt on Alexander Haig in 1977, and the bank robbery in Zurich in 1979. On October 7, 1991, a German court sentenced her to 10 years. She was convicted of helping with the Schleyer kidnapping and confessed to aiding the Haig attack and the Zurich bank robbery.

Mario Victor Maimone: would-be hijacker of a Swissair DC9 flying from Geneva to Rome on April 17, 1972.

Mohammed Majid: alias Mullah Fouad. Iraqi Kurd and key Ansar organizer in Parma, Italy, who fled to Syria and who allegedly was behind the November 12, 2003, truck bombing in Nasiriyah, Iraq, that killed 19 Italians and 12 Iraqis.

Saili Majid: Iranian man sought under an international arrest warrant for the August 6, 1991, assassination of former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. On February 7, 1994, French judge Louis Bruguiere dropped the charges.

Makram Bin Salem al-Majri: alias Abu Mua'az. Swedish clerk born in 1974 who joined al Qaeda in Iraq as a fighter circa 2007, contributing his watch. He also brought his passport and driver's license. He turned over all of his $2,700 to his handlers in Syria, who told him it was a donation. He had arrived from Sweden via Egypt and Syria.

His recruitment coordinator was Ashraf, whom he had met during the Hajj. His home phone number was 0046850022939, and his wife's was 00201162833329, although he asked the al Qaeda personnel officer not to contact her.

Francesco Maietta: arrested by Paris police on June 3, 1987, in a raid on Direct Action. He was believed to be a Red Brigades (RB) member involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. He was believed to be the triggerman and head of the faction and was charged with the killing. He had served six months in France for holding false identity documents. He had recently returned to Italy.

Amar Makhulif: aliases Abu Doha, The Doctor. Makhulif, age 34, was arrested at Heathrow Airport on charges of orchestrating a foiled plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999. He was in contact with Redouane Dahmani. By September 2001, he was believed to be a senior Algerian terrorist in London with links to European al Qaeda terrorist cells

Marco Malaspina: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. He was considered to be the link between the Rome column of the Red Brigades and the Union of Communist Fighters. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder.

Abdul Malik: alias of Fritz Martin Gelowicz.

Qadeer Malik: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Samina Malik: “Lyrical terrorist” who worked in a Heathrow Airport store and told al Qaeda–trained Sohail Anjum Qureshi about airport security measures. She was sentenced to nine months in prison in November 2007 for possession of articles useful for terrorist purposes.

Celik Malkoc: Brussels spokesperson for the Turkish terrorist group Dev Sol who declared on July 18, 1991, that his group would attack U.S. president George Bush during his upcoming visit to Ankara.

Kevin Mallon: after he was jailed for attempted murder, his release was demanded by Teide Herrema’s Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) kidnappers in Dublin, Ireland, on October 3, 1975.

Sergei Malyschew: alias Amin al-Ansari. Belarusian chemical weapons expert who was one of 15 people arrested by Spanish authorities on December 19, 2005, on charges of setting up a recruiting network for al Qaeda that sent Islamic militants to Iraq. Police said at least two men were preparing to travel to Iraq as fighters. There was no evidence that they were preparing attacks in Spain, but they had materials to make explosives.

Francesca Mambro: charged in 1985 with “complicity in a massacre and forming an armed gang” for the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. She was already serving a prison sentence and had married Valerio Fioravanti, also charged in the case. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced her to life in the train case. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court overturned the life sentence and cleared her of any involvement in carrying out the bombing. The court also reduced Fioravanti’s sentence for armed insurrection to 12 years.

Captain Mamoud: variant Mahmoud; alias of Zuhair Akache.

Ahmed Mamour: Lebanese arrested on April 3, 1985, by Rome police after he fired an antitank rocket at the fourth-floor window of a building housing the Jordanian Embassy. He admitted to being a member of Black September, the cover name for Abu Nidal’s group.

Janos Mamuzsits: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 flying from Bucharest, Romania, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich.

Patrick Mannion: alias of Michael O’Rourke.

Ben Khalifa Mansour: Tunisian who was one of six men arrested on March 1, 2002, by Rome police on suspicion of al Qaeda ties. They were held on suspicion of association with a “criminal organization with terrorist intentions” and on intent to obtain and transfer arms and weapons. Wiretaps of their conversations included discussions of killing President Bush, a cyanide compound, and weapons needed for terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Police seized videos, address books, and a plane ticket to Phoenix. They also found a letter with the address of Lotfi Raissi, an Algerian accused in the United Kingdom of giving pilot training to the 9/11 hijackers.

Mohamed Mansour: resident of Kusnacht, Switzerland; Zurich, Switzerland; the United Arab Emirates; and Egypt. He was listed in November 2001 by the United States as a terrorism financier.

Zeinab Mansour-Fattouh: resident of Zurich, Switzerland, listed in November 2001 by the United States as a terrorism financier.

Ali Mansur: Lebanese with German citizenship arrested on July 25, 1990, on suspicion of murder. He was believed to have been involved in the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Disco in West Berlin. On August 22, 1990, the examining magistrate at the Tiergarten Court rescinded the arrest warrant at the request of the public prosecutors. Mansur was freed two days later.

May Elias Mansur: Lebanese woman initially suspected of setting off a bomb on TWA Flight 840 en route from Rome to Athens on April 2, 1986. Four people were sucked out of the hole in the side of the B727. Mansur had sat in seat 10F and had disembarked before the plane left. She allegedly had past connections with a terrorist act involving an Alitalia flight, but it was determined that authorities had confused her with a man believed responsible for placing a bomb on an Alitalia flight in 1983. She was questioned by Lebanon's military prosecutor and an investigating judge on April 10, 1986, but no arrest warrant was ever issued.

Muhammad 'Abdallah al-Mansuri: variant Abdallah al Mansouri. Member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) arrested on August 6, 1984, in Trieste as he entered Italy carrying 6.6 kilograms of explosives. His release was demanded by the gunmen who kidnapped Giles Sidney Peyrolles, the director of the French Cultural Center and a consular official, near his Tripoli office on March 24, 1985. On May 8, 1985, al-Mansuri was charged by an Italian judge with the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Leamon R. Hunt, the American director general of the multinational force in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. On June 18, 1985, a Trieste court found him guilty and sentenced him to 16 years and a $510 fine. On October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the charges against the LARF member for insufficient evidence. On November 27, 1985, the group threatened Italy unless he was released. On March 20, 1986, a bomb exploded in the crowded Point-Show shopping mall just off the Champs Elysees in Paris, killing 2 Lebanese and wounding 30; the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners demanded the release of Mansuri.

Gianni Mantelli: one of three suspected Red Brigades members arrested on June 6, 1987, by Florence police for subversive association and participation in an armed band.

Sergio Mantovani: Swiss who the Egyptians said on April 20, 1978, had come into Cairo for terrorist attacks. He was linked to George Bilinni, head of 24 people Egypt had arrested who belonged to the international terrorist consortium Correct Course of Fatah, which had been headed by Wadi Haddad and was now part of Black June.

Rudi Manz: gunman who seized two hostages after being foiled in his attempt to free a courtroom defendant in West Germany on March 9, 1976. He demanded 1 million DM ($390,000) and a plane to Cuba. The German government gave him the money, but he refused to leave the Frankfurt courthouse, which was surrounded by 350 police armed with submachine guns. On March 10, his captives jumped him, and he was injured in the shootout.

Felix Manzanos: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Sayyid 'Abd-al-Maqsud: one of seven fundamentalists with terrorist connections arrested on September 27, 1998, in London under the immigration law.

Marcario: alias of Jose Luis Aracama Mendia.

Gabriella Mariani: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, she and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Aldo Orlando Marin Pinones: Chilean leftist terrorist killed on August 5, 1977, when a dynamite bomb he was planting with an Italian terrorist exploded in Turin.

Antonio Marini: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort.

Lamine Maroni: one of five Algerian al Qaeda members whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt on charges of plotting to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, and dealing drugs and with various weapons charges. His fingerprints matched those of a man living in Sheffield, United Kingdom, convicted of bank robbery. On March 10, 2003, the Frankfurt court found him guilty of preparing a bomb in the attack on the Strasbourg Christmas market and of conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to 10 to 12 years. He said that the prosecution had failed to prove al Qaeda links.

Alexander Martens: owner of a Brussels gun shop arrested by Belgian police on August 7, 1987, for selling arms to Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military, a charge on which he had been arrested and acquitted for lack of evidence four years earlier. In July 1987, he was held for alleged involvement in the 1980 attempted murder of a Congolese diplomat in Brussels.

Juan Martin Luna: variant Lunz. Founder of the First of October Antifascist Revolutionary Group (GRAPO) and sentenced to 37 years in jail for the murder of Army Capt. Herdera. In December 1979, he and four other guerrillas escaped from the high-security Zamora prison in Spain. Police said he was behind a wave of bomb attacks on public buildings in Spain in September 1982. On December 5, 1982, he fired a pistol at police when told to halt in front of a Barcelona grocery store. Police fatally wounded him.

Juan Martin Lunz: variant of Juan Martin Luna.

Michael Martin: alleged to have been involved in the attempted purchase in 1990 of a Stinger missile for the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Florida. He avoided arrest by fleeing to the United Kingdom but was caught and spent eight months in prison. The Irish citizen was extradited to the United States in December 1991. He was sentenced on June 9, 1995, to one year and four months in prison for his role and was not to receive credit for his eight months in the U.K. jail. However, in August 1995, officials at the federal corrections institution in Oakdale, Louisiana, mistakenly gave him credit for time served in the United Kingdom and released him into the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The error was discovered on September 7, just hours before he was to be taken to Atlanta for a flight to Ireland. A court issued an emergency stay. He was to be given credit for six months, part of the time he spent in prison in the United States before being sentenced. He was expected to be eligible for parole in January or February 1996.

Carlos Martinez: unemployed Spaniard who on August 16, 1983, held four hostages, including the consul general, for 10 hours at the Spanish Consulate in Los Angeles.

Emilio Martinez de Marigorta: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Jose Manuel Martinez Belostegui: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members extradited by France to Spain on September 23–26, 1984, to face murder charges. He was severely dehydrated after a 46-day hunger strike.

Jose Maria Martinez Ferreira: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra-right-wing group, formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Jose Martinez de la Fuente: leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Anglet, France, in January 1985. He was held in St. Omer prison after being sentenced by a French court to seven years in prison. On February 8, 1990, the French Council of State turned down his appeal to stop his extradition to Spain.

Jose Martinez Gomez: one of 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. French police said he was wanted for six holdups in 1980 that netted $300,000.

Juan Jose Martinez: aliases El Rubio, The Blond. Leader of 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. Local leftists claimed he was a police informer in 1976–1979.

Inaka Martiricorena: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Jesus Maria Martiricorena: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Joaquim Martino da Silva: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement on December 6, 1982, sab-otaged a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

Hasan Marwan: variant Marwan Hasan; alias Ali Yusuf. Egyptian (or Jordanian) arrested on August 29, 1981, by Austrian police after he fired a Polish PN-63 machine pistol and threw grenades into a Vienna, Austria, synagogue, killing 2 and injuring 20. He was believed connected to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal's Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination. Marwan was wounded in the synagogue attack. Police later received a phone call from an Arab-accented man who threatened to bomb three movie theaters if the synagogue terrorists were not released. On January 21, 1982, a Vienna court sentenced Marwan to life imprisonment for the Nittel murder. Marwan testified in the case against Bahij Mohamed Younis, sentenced to life for masterminding the Nittel murder and the grenade attack.

Antonio Mas Mas: Spanish student who joined the Tupamaros at Montevideo University and was arrested by Uruguayan security officials on March 29, 1973. He was held for murdering U.S. AID official Daniel Mitrone, who was kidnapped by the Tupamaros on July 31, 1970. He was sentenced on February 16, 1977, to 30 years in prison and 12 years of additional unspecified security measures, the maximum punishment provided by the penal code. He was also charged with murdering Pereira Garay, a police agent, and Ruben Zambrano, a guard, in collaboration with other terrorists, and with the shooting of police officer Hector Moran Charquero. He was also believed to have been an accessory in the kidnapping of Uruguayan political Ulysses Pereira Reverbel and U.K. ambassador Sir Geoffrey Jackson.

Jordi Mas Tryunque: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members captured by police who raided a house in Llica D'Aunt, near Barcelona, Spain, on May 30, 1991. She was believed involved in the May 29, 1991, bombing of a Civil Guard barracks in Vic that killed 9 people and injured 50 others. She had sheltered two ETA leaders before and after the Sabadell attack. The contract on the safe house was in the name of Mas, an associate teacher with a temporary contract in the math department of the science faculty of the Autonomous University of Barcelona.

Pedro Mas: Civil Guard captain held in prison for organizing an abortive February 23, 1981, coup attempt. His release was demanded by 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. He refused to leave.

Alex Maskey: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoner who nearly died in an assassination attempt in 1987. On June 5, 2002, he was elected Sinn Fein's first mayor of Belfast. He was the city's second Roman Catholic mayor in recent years, following two centuries of Protestants.

Intos Silvia Masmela: girlfriend of the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist Carlos. Her release from French prison was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the PFLP hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aero-spaciale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Abu Hamza al-Masri: born Mustafa Kamel Mustafa, a London resident and member of the Islamic Army of Aden, which claimed credit for the USS Cole bombing. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

On May 27, 2004, at U.S. request, a U.K. antiterrorist squad arrested Masri, age 47, a Muslim cleric whose Finsbury, London, mosque was a focal point for radical Islamists. Police had earlier closed his mosque. U.S. officials unsealed a federal indictment charging him with planning terrorist acts in Oregon, Afghanistan, and Yemen. He was accused of planning a military training camp for jihadists in rural Bly, Oregon, in 1999 with James Ujaama (who had turned state's evidence) and of leading a plot by the Islamic Army of Aden to take 16 Western tourists hostage in Yemen in December 1998 (the group kidnapped 12 Britons and 2 Americans in Yemen). The indictment said he provided a satellite phone to the group and received three calls in London from them the day before the kidnapping. He offered to serve as an intermediary, speaking to the kidnapping leader. The indictment was handed up on April 19 by a federal grand jury in New York.

The Egyptian had become a U.K. citizen in 1981. He had earlier worked as a nightclub bouncer. He lost both hands and an eye while fighting the Soviets in Afghanistan. He often praised bin Laden and blamed the Jews for 9/11. U.K. authorities believed he had recruited Richard Reid, the would-be shoe bomber of December 2001, and Zacarias Moussaoui, the would-be 20th 9/11 hijacker. In 2003, the United Kingdom declared Masri a threat to national security and moved to strip him of his U.K. citizenship. He was represented by attorney Maddrassar Arani. He was eligible for the death penalty for the kidnapping plot; however, the United Kingdom has no death penalty. The United States requested extradition. He was also wanted in Yemen, which does not have an extradition treaty with the United Kingdom. Yemen said police had arrested a carload of 10 radicals, including Masri's son, around the time of the kidnapping. The group was carrying explosives and planning to attack a British Consulate and two churches.

In April 2004, a federal grand jury in New York indicted him on charges of seeking to establish a military training camp for Muslim terrorists in Bly, Oregon, and aiding the kidnapping of 16 Western tourists in Yemen in 1998. On August 26, 2004, British police arrested him on suspicion of involvement in "the commission, preparation or instigation or acts of terrorism," holding him at London's high-security Belmarsh prison. On August 27, antiterrorism police were given until September 2 to question him.

On October 19, 2004, British prosecutors charged him with 10 counts of soliciting others to murder nonbelievers, including Jews; five counts of “using threatening, abusive or insulting words or behavior with the intention of stirring up racial hatred”; and one count of possessing a terrorist document. The charges could lead to a life sentence. Observers believed that this would add years to the U.S. extradition request. He remained in London’s Belmarsh Prison. In February 2006, he was sentenced in the United Kingdom to seven years in prison for incitement to kill non-Muslims.

On February 7, 2008, the British Home Office approved his extradition to the United States to face charges in the Oregon terror camp case. He had 14 days to appeal, which he did on February 20, 2008.

On June 20, 2008, a London court quashed the Egyptian-born radical cleric’s attempt to block his extradition to the United States to face terrorist charges of setting up a terrorist training camp in Bly, Oregon, from 1999 to 2000 and of plotting the seizing of 16 Western hostages in Yemen in 1998.

Khaled el-Masri: German citizen of Lebanese descent, age 43, arrested on May 17, 2007, in Germany on suspicion of arson and sent to a psychiatric ward following a 4:45 A.M. fire in a wholesale market in Neu-Ulm that caused $680,000 in damage. He was represented by attorney Manfred Gnjjidic, who claimed his client had experienced a “complete nervous breakdown” because he claimed the CIA had kidnapped him in Macedonia on New Year’s Eve 2003 and tortured him in an Afghan prison. In March 2007, the U.S. Federal Appeals Court in Richmond, Virginia, had refused to reinstate his lawsuit, saying it could jeopardize national security by exposing state secrets.

Layla al-Masri: one of seven people, including three Lebanese, arrested on March 5, 1987, by French police in a raid on her apartment in the Rue de l’Assomption in the 16th District in which police found 15.8 kilograms of explosives, two automatic pistols, and another pistol.

Cecilia Massaro: wounded in a Red Brigades ambush of an armored truck in Rome on December 14, 1984. She recovered under heavy guard at a hospital. She was wanted in the July 1979 assassination of Carabinieri Col. Antonio Varisco.

Petar Matavick: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976.

Lucien Mattei: one of four Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group members who shot to death four Spanish refugees in a Bayonne bar on September 25, 1985. Two of those killed were thought to be members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). Mattei was arrested on a nearby bridge after the incident. His sentence was struck down on appeal in 1988. On March 24, 1989, a Paris court sentenced him to life for killing the Basque nationalists.

Paola Maturi: one of two suspected Italian Red Brigades members arrested on September 18, 1992, by French police in the Latin Quarter of Paris after Italian authorities issued international arrest warrants for the killing of a police superintendent in Rome in 1981, attempted murder, kidnapping, and illegal possession of firearms.

Werner Mauss: former German intelligence agent and private investigator, age 54, who on November 17, 1996, was arrested by Medellin airport police with a 36-year-old woman (who used the alias Michaela Moellner) claiming to be his wife, as the duo was boarding a private plane. They were accompanied by Brigitte Schoene, a German they had ransomed from the Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN). Mauss was carrying 14 passports, a satellite telephone with a GPS, a satellite fax, a computer with encryption, and letters from the German Embassy saying the duo was on an “official mission.”

The police claimed that Mauss, who had acted as an intermediary in peace talks between narcoterrorists and the government, had helped the rebels select kidnap targets and increase their ransoms. He would then offer his services as an intermediary and obtain multimillion-dollar commissions. He had arranged for the release in 1995 of three Italians kidnapped by the ELN. Schoene had been kidnapped in September 1996, after which family members had neared a deal to pay a $200,000 ransom. After Mauss entered the picture, the ransom demand had increased to $1.5 million, according to the family.

Mauss also tried to get the Cali cartel to close up shop in return for the government permitting its members to keep 20 percent of its drug profits.

On July 26, 1997, Mauss was freed. His lawyer, Abraham Casallas, said that Mauss and Moellner would stay in the country to clear their name. Germany pressured Colombia to deport Mauss. The regional head of Colombian intelligence in Medellín, Emilio Rojas, told reporters that as soon as legal issues were cleared up, Mauss and Moellner would be deported for entering the country on false passports.

Susan May: arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van carried 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. May’s Irish boyfriend, Sean Hughes, was arrested on the same charges.

Barbara Mayer: variant Meyer. The Baden-Wuerttemberg land criminal investigation office reported in July 1985 that her fingerprints matched those found during investigations at a gravel pit in Ortenau Kreis where members were suspected of trying to steal explosives. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the “hard core” of Red Army Faction members. On May 8, 1999, Mayer, now 42, was detained at the Frankfurt Airport after having turned herself in. She had been hiding out in Lebanon.

Husayn Mazbou: on April 27, 1989, French investigating magistrate Gilles Boulouque issued a warrant for his arrest for conspiracy and illegal possession of explosives.

Mr. Mazeh: alias Gharib. Name used to register at London’s Beverly Hotel by an Arab terrorist who blew himself up with his own bomb on August 1, 1989. The Organization of the Strugglers of Islam said he had intended to kill Salman Rushdie.

Abu Mazem: alias of Anis Naqqash.

Michele Mazzei: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party (PCC), a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. She was believed to be a PCC leader for the Tuscany region. She was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Guglielmo Mazzochi: Naples member of the Communist Guerrilla Nucleus arrested in Paris on May 21, 1987. He had been sentenced to five years in prison by a Naples court. Italy requested extradition.

Pearse McAuley: escaped from Brixton jail in the summer of 1989. He was accused of plotting with two other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members to murder Sir Charles Tidbury, former chairman of Whitbread, and other persons and to cause explosions. He was arrested at Stonehenge on October 2, 1990, after going to Tidbury’s home on September 15, 1990. Activity at the home deterred them from continuing.

George McCam: one of four suspected members of the Irish National Liberation Army who were arrested in southern Paris on July 23, 1986, while loading weapons into a car. They were charged with illegal possession and transport of weapons. He was freed on August 22, 1986, on payment of a $3,000 bail.

Daniel McCann: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas killed by British commandos on March 6, 1988, while the terrorists were planting a 1,100-pound plastic explosive bomb in an abandoned white Ford Fiesta in Marbella, near the governor's residence in Gibraltar.

James McCann: one of the Provisional Irish Republican Army's (IRA) most-wanted terrorists who was arrested on August 25, 1979, when police in Naas, Ireland, came across a van hauling 800 pounds of cannabis. He had escaped from jail after being arrested in a 1979 Belfast bombing. He had been sought by U.K., West German, and Dutch authorities but had successfully avoided extradition attempts when arrested in Canada two years earlier and in France in 1978.

John McCann: Dublin resident and one of three people convicted on October 27, 1988, in London of conspiring to murder Tom King, Britain's Northern Ireland secretary, and other "persons unknown." The trio had been arrested during the summer in the vicinity of King's country house in rural Wiltshire.

Sean John McCann: Canadian arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines. On October 4, 1990, a federal judge in Fort Lauderdale dismissed all charges against McCann after federal agents admitted they had erred when they said in sworn affidavits that the Toronto resident had been a lookout during a meeting between undercover agents and the alleged smugglers to set up the weapons deal. He was more than 1,000 miles away in Texas at the time.

Martin McCauley: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas. Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, and Martin McCauley said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. FARC claimed they were in the country to learn about the local peace process. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives on the IRA members' clothing. On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted on training charges but convicted of traveling on false passports and IDs. McCauley was sentenced to three years and eight months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time. On December 16, 2004, Bogota courts overturned the acquittals and ordered their immediate arrests to serve 17-year terms. Their whereabouts were unknown. On August 5, 2005, the trio snuck back into Ireland. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. McCauley left the station without charge.

Liam McCloskey: jailed Irish National Liberation Army terrorist who on September 26, 1981, gave up his Maze Prison hunger strike in its 55th day. He was serving a 10-year sentence for ambushing British troops, conspiring to steal military weapons, and taking part in punishment shootings.

Joseph McColgan: Irish citizen arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines.

Pat McCool: member of the Irish National Liberation Army released from prison in Northern Ireland on October 20, 1998. He had served 15 years for involvement in a discotheque bombing in 1983. He was one of the first two to get early release under the region's peace deal struck in April 1998.

Raymond McCreesh: imprisoned Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorist who died on May 21, 1981, on the 61st day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison. He and three other IRA terrorists had been captured in June 1976 after a two-hour gun battle with British paratroopers. He had been sentenced in March 1977 to 14 years for attempted murder and possession of firearms.

John McCullogh: head of a local roofers union and Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter with close ties to local organized crime who was murdered in December 1980, reportedly by Philadelphia crime boss Philip Testa, who himself died as a result of a pipe bomb in March 1981, probably at the hands of the IRA.

Gerald McDonnell: arrested in June 1985 in a police raid in Glasgow that uncovered a 16-bomb campaign planned by him and four others for British resorts during the summer of 1985. On June 12, 1986, a London court found four defendants guilty of participating in the planning of the 1985 bombing campaign directed at London and 12 coastal resorts.

Joe McDonnell: on May 29, 1981, the national H-Block Committee (named after the Maze Prison facilities for Provisional Irish Republican Army [IRA] terrorists) reported that the IRA hunger striker would run in Sligo-Leitrim for the Irish Republic's Parliament in the June 11 general elections. He died in Maze Prison on July 8, 1981, on the 61st day of his fast. Patrick McGeown, a convicted bomber, was named to replace him in the hunger strike. McDonnell was serving a 14-year sentence for illegal arms possession after being arrested following a firebombing of a West Belfast furniture store in 1976. He was arrested and convicted with Bobby Sands, the first hunger striker to die, and replaced Sands in the campaign.

Brendan McFarland: Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who escaped Maze Prison during a September 1983 mass breakout. He was arrested in Amsterdam on January 16, 1986. On July 2, 1986, the Dutch Supreme Court decided to hear original evidence as part of the extradition case.

Terence McGeough: arrested on the Dutch-German border in August 1988. In June 1989, he was charged with attempted murder for the March 23, 1987, car bomb attack on the British Army of the Rhine headquarters and the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombing of barracks at Duisburg on July 13, 1988. On July 31, 1991, the Sixth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court ruled that there was no longer a strong suspicion regarding the Duisburg bombing, but it still strongly suspected he was involved in the NATO Moenchengladbach headquarters attack in which 36 people were injured and DM 2 million in damage was caused. He had purchased the car used in the bombing.

Patrick McGeown: convicted bomber who joined the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prison hunger strike on July 8, 1981, following the death of Joe McDonnell after 61 days of fasting. On September 6, 1981, McGeown's mother removed him from his 70-day fast when he became unconscious. The Irish National Liberation Army said it would not add more prisoners to the strike.

Bernard McGinn: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunman who threatened to blow up himself and his three hostages on March 27, 1980. He surrendered to police in Dundalk, Ireland, a day later.

Francis McGirl: farmer who used a fictitious name and address when rearrested by Irish police on August 27, 1979, near Granard, County Leitrim. He had an Eire address and was listed as coming from a family of Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) activists. He was held on charges of IRA membership but later was released on a technicality. However, when Earl Louis Mountbatten of Burma, second cousin of Queen Elizabeth, was killed by a bomb that exploded on his fishing boat at Mullaghmore, County Sligo, on August 27, 1979, McGirl was immediately rearrested and taken to Dublin's special no-jury criminal court, where he was charged with that day's murder. He was found innocent of the slaying on November 23, 1979. However, he was to stand trial on January 21, 1980, on charges of belonging to the outlawed IRA.

Dominic McGlinchey: one of four Irish Republican Army (IRA) members who on November 24, 1983, kidnapped Don Tidey, a grocery chain executive, in Ireland. On December 16, 1983, police and the army's Ranger Corps fought a gun battle in Ballinamore with the kidnappers. McGlinchey escaped and was named Ireland's most-wanted terrorist. The chief of staff of the Irish National Liberation Army was captured along with three others following a 30-minute shootout at a County Clare cottage in Ireland on March 17, 1984. On March 19, 1984, the Irish Supreme Court voted 2–1 to extradite him to Northern Ireland to stand trial on charges of terrorism, murder, and armed robbery. He had been charged there with the 1977 killing of a postmistress. In a 1984 newspaper interview, he claimed he had been behind 30 killings and 200 terrorist acts, including the 1982 Ballykelly disco bombing that killed 17. On December 24, 1984, he was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of a policeman. He was released from prison in 1993 after serving seven years for firearms offenses. On June 12, 1993, he was shot in the hand by two gunmen in Dundalk, Ireland, on the border with Northern Ireland. Police believe he was a target of rivals in the INLA.

Nancy McGovern: also known as Nancy Hershovitz, one of two would-be hijackers of a BOAC VC10 due to fly from New York to London and Tel Aviv on September 27, 1970.

Martin McGuinness: member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army's (IRA) Army Council in December 1998.

Richard McKelkeny: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Thomas McIlwee: Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorist who died on the 62nd day of his hunger strike on August 8, 1981. He was serving 20 years for manslaughter for his participation in a 1976 IRA bombing attack on shops and other businesses in Ballymena in which 17 bombs went off and a female shopkeeper was killed.

William McKane: police found 50 kilograms of Semtex explosives, 6 guns, 5 car bombs, and a "huge" bomb in a rucksack inside a Lada Riva car parked near flats where he lived. The bricklayer was arrested on October 2, 1990. McKane was accused of plotting with two other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members to murder Sir Charles Tidbury, former chairman of Whitbread, and other persons and to cause explosions.

Sean McKenna: imprisoned Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who on December 18, 1980, ended the hunger strike he had begun on October 27, 1980, in support of the "dirty" protest by nationalist terrorists. He was comatose and near death.

Lawrence McKeown: variant of Lawrence McGeown.

Michael "Mickey" McKevitt: former senior Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member, age 49, who had served as the IRA's quartermaster. He was one of five Real Irish Republican Army (Real IRA) members arrested on August 17, 1998, for the August 15, 1998, car bombing in the Omagh, Northern Ireland, town square that killed 29 people and wounded more than 350 others. He had been shot in both legs by the IRA in 1975 for breaking rules but never revealed the names of his attackers. On April 29, 2001, Irish National Police announced the arrest of the resident of Dundalk, Ireland, on charges of “directing terrorism” based on a law enacted after the Omagh bombing. The charges grew out of a series of car bombs planted by the Real IRA in recent months. He and his colleagues had been arrested before but had been released for lack of evidence. His bail request was rejected. His wife, Bernadette Sands-McKevitt, traveled often to the United States to raise funds. He was convicted in 2004 and sentenced to 20 years in jail.

Kevin Joseph McKinley: arrested on October 12, 1984, and held in West Palm Beach, Florida, for trying to buy a Stinger antiaircraft missile. He said his group of Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorists had completed many bombings and tried to assassinate Margaret Thatcher at Brighton. He was charged with conspiracy and arms export violations.

He was arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. (This may be a garbled version of the same earlier report.) The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines.

He was also charged with Seamus Moley in Patrick Moley’s November 11, 1992, IRA case involving the purchase of detonators shipped to Northern Ireland.

Brendan McLaughlin: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) hunger striker who ended his 14-day hunger strike on May 27, 1981, because he was suffering from a perforated ulcer. He was the first striker to quit. He was serving 12 years on firearms charges.

James McLintock: aliases Mohammed Yacoub, Tartan Taliban. Scots-born Muslim convert, age 41 in 2005, suspected of being an al Qaeda terrorist. In 2000, he presided over Islamic study groups at the Iqra bookshop in Leeds in which the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005) Sidique Khan, Hasib Hussain, and Shahzad Tanweer spent time. He was arrested by Pakistani authorities in December 2001 at a checkpoint near the Afghan border. He was again arrested while visiting Manchester in 2003 but was released without charge.

Thomas McMahon: upholsterer and Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) expert in bomb mechanisms arrested by Irish police on August 27, 1979, near Granard, County Leitrim. He had an Eire address. He was held on charges of IRA membership but later was released on a technicality. However, when Earl Louis Mountbatten of Burma, second cousin of Queen Elizabeth, was killed by a 50-pound bomb that exploded on his fishing boat at Mullaghmore, County Sligo, McMahon was immediately rearrested and taken to Dublin’s special no-jury criminal court, where he was charged with that day’s murder. On November 23, 1979, a Dublin court found him guilty and sentenced him to life in prison. The presiding judge refused to allow an appeal. On August 7, 1998, he was freed from an Irish prison as part of the peace process. McMahon, now 50, had dissociated himself from the IRA.

Kieran McMorrow: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) leader who was captured after a gun battle near Ireland’s border on March 17, 1977.

Jackie McMullan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoner who began a hunger strike on August 8, 1981.

Peter Gabriel McMullen: former member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) denied political asylum by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on April 26, 1986. He had become a U.K. and U.S. informer after allegedly engaging in terrorist activities during the 1970s. On December 16, 1986, he was arrested by Salt Lake City police in a parking lot outside his suburban apartment. He was deported to Ireland on December 23, 1986, on charges stemming from explosions at British Army barracks in Belfast in 1972 and North Yorkshire in 1974. The former British Army paratrooper and explosives expert was also wanted for the 1979 assassination of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Gilbert “Danny” McNamee: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member sentenced to 25 years in 1987 for conspiracy to cause explosions, including the July 20, 1982, IRA bombing that killed four soldiers and seven others in Hyde Park. The court dismissed his appeal in 1991. On July 3, 1997, the Criminal Cases Review Commission sent his case back to court.

Patrick McVeigh: resident of Belfast who was freed on June 13, 1988, by Irish judge Jarlath Ruane although the Irish government had asked the court to approve his extradition to London to face charges of bombings between 1981 and 1983 that had killed two people outside Chelsea Army Barracks and a bomb disposal expert in Oxford Street. The judge said that neither government had properly established his identity.

Beorg Mechal: alias used by one of two suspected Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) members arrested on April 26, 1979, at the Passau-Achleiten crossing point on the Austrian–Bavarian border when West German police searching their rental car found 50 kilograms of explosives, time fuses, and 11 passports with photographs not of them. Bonn authorities believed that the duo intended to pass the documents to Palestinians either already in Germany or intending to arrive soon.

Colum Meehan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Eamon Meehan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Martin Meehan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) commander who died of a heart attack, at age 62, at his Belfast home on November 3, 2007. He had served 18 years in prison but ultimately became an advocate for peace and compromise. He was arrested in August 1969 when the United Kingdom deployed its army. In 1980, he was convicted of leading the torture of a 17-year-old in Belfast. He was paroled in 1985 but soon was arrested for kidnapping, torturing, and preparing to murder a U.K. soldier. He was freed in 1994 and became a Sinn Féin activist, running several times for election. He missed winning a seat in the Northern Ireland Assembly in 2003.

Gabriel Megahey: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

‘Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi: variants Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi, Abd al Basset al Megrahi; aliases Abdelbaset Ali Mohmed, Mr. Baset, Ahmed Khalifa Abdusamad. Libyan intelligence officer charged on November 14, 1991, by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., with 193 felony counts in the bombing of Pam Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on December 21, 1988, in which 270 people were killed.

On April 5, 1999, Libya turned al-Megrahi and accomplice Lamen Khalifa Fhimah over to UN officials. They were charged in English and Arabic with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, and violations of international aviation security laws. On January 31, 2001, the court found al-Megrahi guilty. He was sentenced to life in prison with the possibility of parole after 20 years. He lost an appeal on March 14, 2002. On June 28, 2007, the Scottish Criminal Cases Review Commission announced that he might have “suffered a miscarriage of justice” in being convicted for the bombing and granted his request for an appeal before a panel of five appellate judges in Edinburgh. (See also Lamen Khalifa Fhimah.)

Abd al Basset al Megrahi: variant of ‘Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi: variant of Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Ulrike Meinhof: intellectual founder of the Baader-Meinhof Group, also known as the Red Army Faction of West Germany. She was arrested in a Hanover suburb on June 15, 1972. Her release was demanded on September 5, 1972, by the Black September terrorists who took the Israeli athletes hostage at the Munich Olympics. Her release also was demanded by the Socialist Patients’ Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975. She died at age 41, hanging herself in her Stammheim jail cell on May 9, 1976.

In 1975, the Ulrike Meinhof Commando claimed credit for attacking the Mercedes branch in Paris, the German television offices in Paris, and a German coach in France.

On May 3, 1975, the Puig Antich–Ulrike Meinhof Commando, believed to be composed of German and Spanish anarchists, set off two bombs at the construction site of a French nuclear power station in Fessenheim. On May 22, 1975, the same group bombed the West German Consulate in Nice and a Paris building containing the Swedish tourism office and several other Swedish facilities.

On June 1, 1976, the Revolutionary Cell Brigade Ulrike Meinhof claimed credit for setting two time bombs that exploded in a shopping area and at the army officers’ club at the U.S. Army’s V Corps headquarters in Frankfurt. The injured included six U.S. soldiers, three military dependents, an American civilian, and a German civilian.

On April 7, 1977, the Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group claimed credit for the assassination of Siegfried Buback, West Germany’s chief public prosecutor.

Holger Meins: key member of the Baader-Meinhof Group, also known as the Red Army Faction of West Germany. He was captured on June 1, 1972, after a gunfight with Frankfurt police. He died in November 1974 during a jailhouse hunger strike.

On November 16, 1974, the Holger Meins Kommando bombed the West German Consulate in Florence, Italy. It claimed credit in 1975 for attacking the Mercedes branch in Paris, the German television offices in Paris, and a German coach in France. Its members took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975.

Abdel Karim El Mejjati: on September 5, 2003, the FBI put out a worldwide alert for Adan El Shukrijumah, Abderraouf Jdey, Zubayr Al-Rimi, and Karim El Mejjati, believed to be engaged in planning terrorist attacks, according to information provided by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, al Qaeda’s operations chief. El Mejjati, age 35, was born in Morocco and held a Moroccan ID card. He entered the United States in 1997 and 1999. He had been a medical student. Several passports were issued for him in France. He was suspected in the May 2003 bombings in Casablanca that killed 30 people plus 12 terrorists.

On March 31, 2004, the Spanish investigating judge put out an international arrest warrant for the wealthy Moroccan, who was thought to be the organizer of the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. He was also wanted for bombings in Riyadh.

He was sentenced in absentia in Morocco to 20 years. He later died in a three-day gun battle with security forces in his hideout in Ar Rass, a small town in Saudi Arabia, in April 2005, a battle during which 15 militants, including his teenage son, Adam, died.

Mejjati's name also appeared in threatening e-mails sent to Antwerp newspapers on April 1, 2004, warning of attacks against Jewish targets.

Annino Mele: leader of the Sardinian Armed Movement, linked to the Red Brigades, who was arrested on January 30, 1987, during an afternoon shootout outside Orgmsolo, Italy. He was carrying a gun and five hand grenades. He had been wanted since 1981 for subversion and kidnapping. In January 1985, he was given nine years in prison for subversive activity. In November 1986, he was sentenced to 30 years at an appeals trial against the Gallurese gang. He had last been seen in October 1981 when he appeared at the Como City Hall to report the birth of his son.

Monte Melkonian: founder of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia arrested in Paris on November 28, 1985, for possession of arms and false documents. He was also a member of the Armenian Revolutionary Movement. Police found evidence at his apartment of planned attacks against Turkish diplomats.

Farid Mellouk: French national of Algerian extraction identified as one of seven Algerians arrested on March 5, 1998, by Belgian police after a shootout and a 12-hour standoff. The detainees belonged to the European-based support network for Algeria's Armed Islamic Group.

Fabrizio Melorio: one of three Red Brigades (RB) members arrested by the Carabinieri on January 22, 1987, after an evening shootout in the Rome suburbs that wounded two RB members and a 79-year-old bystander.

Memo: name used by one of the 13 Kurdish gunmen, some of them Kurdistan Workers' Party members, who on June 24, 1993, took hostage 25 employees of the Turkish Consulate in Munich. After 14 hours, the hostage-takers surrendered. On June 30, 1993, Turkey requested extradition after trial in Germany.

Georges Alphonse Mendailles: French citizen arrested by Spanish police on February 13, 1989, and accused of taking part in two attacks by the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group. Spain refused extradition to France.

Eustaquio Mendizabal: leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military who was killed on April 19, 1973, in a shootout in a village near Bilbao, Spain. Police said he was trying to escape.

Jean Meniboure: arrested with two Spanish members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military by French police on December 19, 1987, who were smuggling 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in the French Basque country. Police believed the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Nathalie Menigon: aliases Nadine Renew Paquay, Florence Patricia Lanner, Silvie Francois Marie Berger, Pascal Laure, Marie Natil. Narrowly escaped capture in Brussels on March 13, 1984, when she and Direct Action leaders Jean-Marc Rouillan and Regis Schleicher eluded Belgian authorities by taking a Brussels policeman hostage. She was arrested by French police on March 21, 1987, and was charged with the January 25, 1985, assassination in Paris of Gen. Rene Audran, the Defense Ministry official in charge of France's arms exports. She had earlier been charged with the November 17, 1986, murder of Georges Besse, the Renault president. Her arrest by French Research, Assistance, Intervention and Dissuasion police took place at an isolated farmhouse near Vitry-aux-Loges, where police found arms, explosives, cash, and documents, which apparently were from the briefcase of Besse. She had been holed up in the house for three years. Police had announced a 1 million franc ($150,000) reward for information leading to her arrest. The group had planned to kidnap an individual to exchange for her husband, Regis Schleicher, an imprisoned Direct Action founder held for a 1983 police killing.

She went on a hunger strike for several weeks to demand political prisoner status. On July 11, 1987, prison officials announced that she was being placed into solitary confinement after the discovery of documents and prison authority rubber stamps in one of the cells of three prominent Direct Action prisoners. On January 11, 1988, her trial began for the murder of Renault chief Georges Besse, illegal association, the January 1985 shooting of Army Gen. Rene Audran, and the May 31, 1983, murder of two policemen. On January 14, 1989, after only 105 minutes of deliberation by the jury, she was sentenced to life with a recommendation that she serve a minimum of 18 years. On April 20, 1989, she was one of four imprisoned Direct Action terrorists who began another hunger strike. On June 8, 1989, they were moved to a Fresnes prison hospital. Their attorney, Isabelle Coutant-Pyere, said that the group was demanding political prisoner status and the abolition of solitary confinement cells.

Daniele Pasquale Mennella: arrested by police on June 3, 1987, at the Viaggiotto, San Saba, hide-out of the Red Brigades (RB) believed involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. Mennella was a mole at the Interior Ministry where he worked as an archivist in the public security department. He was charged with the killing.

Rene Michel Mercier: alias of Georges Cipriani.

Mohammed Nabil Merhi: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On February 8, 1985, an Italian examining magistrate released Merhi; he had claimed to be only a casual acquaintance of five of the defendants.

Fabrizio Meroglio: Red Brigades (RB) member captured in Rome on January 22, 1987, following a firefight with the Carabinieri. On March 31, 1987, he was indicted by investigating magistrate Domenico Sica as an accessory to the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. He was also charged with the attempted murder of Giorgieri on December 15, 1986.

Federica Meroni: freed on January 3, 1982, from Rovigo women's prison when the Red Brigades blasted open a five-foot hole in a wall.

Abdellatif Merroun: businessman, age 42, and one of two British citizens detained in Morocco on August 1, 2003, on suspicion of having ties to the Salafia Jihadia, a group of underground Islamic extremists involved in the May 16, 2003, suicide bombings in Casablanca. The group has ties to al Qaeda. The duo was not suspected of involvement in the attacks.

Omer Mersan: individual who allegedly provided a pilfered passport to Mehmet Ali Agca, would-be assassin of the pope on May 13, 1981. Mersan was also linked to Turkish smuggler Abuzer Ugurlu. Mersan surrendered to Italian authorities on March 12, 1984, after being extradited from West Germany. He was wanted in Italy for false testimony in Agca's first trial.

Abdel Aziz Merzuoghi: one of three Black June terrorists who fired machine guns and threw grenades at Vienna's Schwechat Airport on December 27, 1985. After a car chase and gun battle with police, he was severely injured. Two people were killed and 37 injured. He carried a faked Tunisian passport, having come to Vienna from Beirut. The terrorists had intended to take hostages to obtain an El Al plane, which they would crash into Tel Aviv. He was charged with murder and attempted murder. The Vienna public prosecutor indicted him on March 13, 1987. On May 21, 1987, he was found guilty of two counts of murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Mohammed El Mesdawi: one of two Libyans who fired pistols and submachine guns at passengers in the international arrival area of Rome's Fiumicino Airport on February 24, 1981, wounding five passengers. Police returned fire, wounding one terrorist and capturing both. On November 22, 1983, Italy's Assizes Court gave him a 15-year sentence. On October 7, 1986, Italy quietly freed the duo. A Red Cross plane flew the Libyans to Tripoli and returned with four Italians who had been held in Libya for the preceding six years.

Franco Messina: one of two suspected Italian Red Brigades members arrested on September 18, 1992, by French police in the Latin Quarter of Paris after Italian authorities issued international arrest warrants for the killing of a police superintendent in Rome in 1981, attempted murder, kidnapping, and illegal possession of firearms.

Barbara and Horst Ludwig Meyer: variant Mayer. On September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the Red Army Faction (RAF) and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. RAF wife and husband members Barbara and Horst Meyer were arrested on June 15, 1990, when recognized by fellow train passengers who remembered their West German wanted posters. The next day, East Germany announced that the fingerprints didn't match, and they were released.

The couple was wanted for killing arms executive Ernst Zimmermann in February 1985, Siemens executive Karl Heinz Beckurts in July 1986, and Bonn diplomat Gerold von Braunmühl in October 1986. They were believed to have assumed RAF leadership and masterminded recent attacks against NATO, including the Frankfurt bombing of Deutsche Bank chief Alfred Herrhausen.

Till Meyer: his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On September 28, 1977, West Germany indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and for kidnapping Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Baghdad Mezaine: Mezaine, age 38, was one of two Algerians arrested on September 26, 2001, in Leicester, United Kingdom, where police found propaganda material encouraging the recruitment of young Muslims for jihad training, faked credit cards, and other counterfeit documents. Police found 19 videotapes of one of bin Laden's speeches and films of operations in Chechnya and Afghanistan. On April 1, 2003, the Leicester Crown Court found them guilty of raising money for terrorism and sentenced them to 11 years in prison.

Juma Mohammed Ali Mezdawi: Libyan sentenced to 15 years for wounding two Lebanese at Fiumicino Airport in 1981, when they were mistaken for Muammar Qadhafi opponents. On October 6, 1986, the Italian government exchanged him for four Italians who had been held in Libya for six years.

Baghdad Meziane: Meziane, age 37, was one of two Algerians charged by British police on January 17, 2002, with planning and financing terrorist acts for al Qaeda in Leicester. Eleven other men were also detained. Prosecutors said Meziane raised money to finance terrorist acts and planned an attack overseas. French media said that the Leicester cell had planned an aborted al Qaeda effort in 2001 to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris.

Marco Mezzasalma: Red Brigades member convicted and sentenced to life in prison by a judge in Rome on July 8, 2005, for the murder of a government labor advisor in 1999.

El Smansouri Abdulla' Mhao': arrested near Trieste in December 1984 with eight kilograms of explosives. His arrest led to the detention of Josephine 'Abduh Sarkis, an alleged member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction on December 18, 1984.

Rocco Micaletto: on January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Marek Michalski: member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. Switzerland denied extradition. On October 10, 1983, he received two and one-half years in prison and five years' banishment from Switzerland.

Flavio Micolatti: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced on May 25, 1986, to 11 years in prison.

Frank Miethbauer: one of three German skin-heads, age 16, who on June 11, 2000, kicked to death Alberto Adriano, age 39, a 20-year resident of Germany and Mozambican father of three, because of the color of his skin. Adriano was walking through a deserted park after midnight when he was attacked by the drunken extremists. Upon arrest, the trio described the victim as a "foreign pig." Adriano died two days later of massive head injuries. On August 30, a state court in Halle sentenced the two 16-year-olds to nine years each for the murder. All had expressed regret. The duo was given sentences one year less than the maximum permitted for juveniles.

Oscar de Miguel: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military Izagorri Commando member arrested on June 25, 1987, by Pamplona police who raided an arms cache that included three pistols, a machine pistol, nine kilograms of explosive Ammonal, one kilogram of Goma-2 plastic explosive, timing, devices, an instruction manual on making incendiaries, and a letter from ETA-Military leader Francisco Mugica Garmendia.

Miguel Miguez Garcia: arrested on October 7, 1987, by police in Ciboure, France, on suspicion of being the head of the press and propaganda department of the legal commandos of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military in Navarra.

Sandor Miheller: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Mikel: one of six Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) gunmen who assassinated Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973, by placing a bomb in the street in which his car was driving.

Anatoliy Mikhaylenko: student who on June 30, 1990, hijacked Aeroflot 8678, which was scheduled to fly from Lvov to Leningrad, diverting it to Stockholm's Arlanda airport, where he surrendered to police. On July 2, the Soviets requested extradition, giving it in writing the next day. On July 5, he requested political asylum. His lawyer cited the hijacker's refusal to perform military service, his political outlook, and humanitarian considerations. On July 11, he was placed under arrest for extradition by the Sollentuna district court. On July 18, 14 Ukrainian Supreme Soviet deputies asked the Swedish authorities not to extradite him. On July 28, 16 of the deputies asked that the Swedes prosecute him instead of extraditing him. On July 26, the Swedish Supreme Court ruled that Sweden was guided by its international commitments to fight air piracy and that no laws prevented his extradition. Soviet authorities would prosecute him only for the hijacking and not for violating the border. He was turned over to Soviet representatives on August 3. He said he had conducted a hunger strike to protest being returned to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He was a former technical college graduate from Lvov who had worked as a graphic designer.

Stanislav Milicevic: accomplice of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslavian ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stempthihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. A Stockholm city court gave Milicevic a two-year term for complicity on July 14. His release was demanded in a hijacking the next year; he refused to be released.

Samuel Ignatius Millar: undocumented immigrant from Ireland with Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) ties arrested on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink's armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being IRA supporters. He had spent six years in prison in the 1970s and 1980s for explosives and firearms convictions in Ireland. In 1984, he was refused a U.S. visa because of his criminal background but was smuggled into the United States by fellow detainee Thomas F. O'Connor. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property. After the statute of limitations ran out, Millar wrote his memoir On the Brinks.

'Ali Minayan: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, regarding the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in Fontainebleau. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

'Abd-al-Basit 'Ali Muhammad al-Miqrahi: variant of 'Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Pierrette Santi-Miqueu: arrested with two Spanish members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military by French police on December 19, 1987, who were smuggling 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in French Basque country. Police believed the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Mirciyan: Armenian whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Abdi Abdulei Mireh: one of four gunmen posing as patients who on October 22, 1995, shot to death Dr. Graziella Fumagalli, an Italian doctor working at a tuberculosis hospital in Marka, in her surgery office, and wounding biologist Dr. Cristoforo Andreoli. The triggerman was arrested.

Anan Miren Alberdi: alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested by police in Brest, Brittany, France, on May 4, 1992.

Maroof Ahmaed Mirza: imam, age 38, who is a legal resident of Spain and a Pakistani national and who was one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Alexander Mitchell: Briton sentenced to death on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that slightly injured his wife. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Roberto di Mitrio: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987. He had been released earlier but was a defendant in the kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro.

Grazhina Mitskute: one of two would-be hijackers of an Aeroflot AN2 flying from Vilnius and Palanga, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on November 9, 1970.

Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan Moayad: variant of Mouyad.

Alan Mocile: French citizen reported on December 29, 1990, by the La Paz press to have been the leader of the attack on the Marine House in Miraflores District.

Hendrik Moebus: neo-Nazi fugitive from Germany, age 24, arrested on August 26, 2000, by U.S. marshals in Lewisburg, West Virginia. He was convicted in Germany in 1994, with two accomplices, of murder and kidnapping. He had been convicted as a minor in 1994 in Germany of luring a “non-Aryan” teenager into an apartment and strangling him. After he was paroled in 1998, he violated the terms of his release and escaped to the United States through Seattle using his real name in December 1999, while a German arrest warrant was pending.

Irmgard Moeller: while she was being held for suspicion of murder, her release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers’ association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany’s most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. Her release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. Moeller injured herself in a failed suicide attempt in Stammheim prison in Stuttgart on October 18, 1977, hours after the Lufthansa rescue in Somalia by the West German GSG9 team; she stabbed herself in the chest with a bread knife. On May 16, 1992, she and three other imprisoned RAF female terrorists said in a televised interview from Luebeck Prison that the RAF had not given up terrorism. On March 13, 1993, she applied for early release.

On November 17, 1994, a German court ruled that she should be released after 22 years in prison. She had never repented of her role, for which she had received a life term, in bombing a U.S. military post in Heidelberg on May 24, 1974, which killed three American soldiers, including Capt. Clyde R. Bonner. She was freed on December 1, 1994, having participated in a dozen hunger strikes.

Michaela Moellner: alias used by a woman, age 36, arrested with Werner Mauss, age 54, former German intelligence agent, on November 17, 1996, by Medellin airport police as the duo was boarding a private plane. She claimed to be his wife. They were accompanied by Brigitte Schoene, a German they had ransomed from the Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN). Mauss was carrying 14 passports, a satellite telephone with a GPS, a satellite fax, a computer with encryption, and letters from the German Embassy saying the duo was on an “official mission.”

The police claimed that Mauss, who had acted as an intermediary in peace talks between narcoterrorists and the government, had helped the rebels select kidnap targets and increase their ransoms. He would then offer his services as an intermediary and obtain multimillion-dollar commissions. He had arranged for the release in 1995 of three Italians kidnapped by the ELN. Schoene had been kidnapped in September 1996, after which family members had neared a deal to pay a $200,000 ransom. After Mauss entered the picture, the ransom had demand increased to $1.5 million, according to the family.

Mauss also tried to get the Cali cartel to close up shop in return for the government permitting its members to keep 20 percent of its drug profits.

On July 26, 1997, Mauss was freed. His lawyer, Abraham Casallas, said that Mauss and Moellner would stay in the country to clear their name. Germany pressured Colombia to deport Mauss. The regional head of Colombian intelligence in Medellín, Emilio Rojas, told reporters that as soon as legal issues were cleared up, Mauss and Moellner would be deported for entering the country on false passports.

Mahmoud Said al-Moghrabi: sentenced to six years for complicity to commit murder for helping to make the bombs used in the 1985 bombings of a Copenhagen synagogue and a Northwest Airlines office that killed an Algerian tourist and injured 44 people. On May 10, 1991, a New York U.S. District Court said it wanted to question him regarding the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270.

Mohammed Mohajir: alleged leader in the 1980s of a terrorist support ring in Paris.

Shafi Mohamadian: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, regarding the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

Najib Chaib Mohamed: Moroccan arrested in January 2002 in Spain for his alleged involvement in a suspected al Qaeda recruiting and logistics cell led by Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.

Binyam Mohammed: variant of Binyam Mohamed.

Jaad Mohammed: Syrian, age 20, who was one of three Black June members who took five hostages at the Syrian Embassy in Rome on October 11, 1976. They surrendered after two hours, after discovering they had not taken the ambassador hostage. The attackers were jailed and charged with attempted murder. On November 6, 1976, a Rome court sentenced them to 15 years in jail, to be followed by three 3 of supervised freedom. The Syrians requested extradition.

Lokman Amin Mohammed: Kurdish immigrant, age 33, convicted in a German court on January 12, 2006, of smuggling fighters to Iraq for the Ansar al-Islam network in 2003. He was sentenced to seven years in prison in Munich. Prosecutors said he confessed to helping eight would-be suicide bombers to travel from Europe to Iraq. His network also brought wounded militants back into Europe, among them an Ansar bomb maker who lost both hands in an explosives accident. German police had arrested him in December 2003. His attorney said he was only a freelance smuggler for Ansar, but the court convicted him of membership in a terrorist organization.

Ramzi Mohammed: arrested on July 29, 2005, in a televised raid in London in connection with the failed copycat bombing of the London subway system on July 21, 2005. He lived in North Kensington. His brother, Wahbi Mohammed, was believed to have abandoned a bomb backpack a few hundred yards away. On August 8, a London court charged Muktar Said Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, and Yasin Hassin Omar with attempted murder. They were ordered held until a November 14 hearing, when they would enter pleas on conspiracy and explosives offenses. On July 9, 2007, a jury convicted him of conspiracy to murder by plotting to bomb London's public transport system. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He would be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Rauf Mohammed: Iraqi taxi driver, age 26, acquitted by a London court on August 29, 2006, of making two videos of London landmarks that terrorists could use. He said the 2003 video was a harmless tourist souvenir. He was represented by attorney Lawrence McNulty, who said that the videoed remarks about killing President Bush, Prime Minister Blair, Italian prime minister Silvio Berlusconi, and defense secretary Donald Rumsfeld had been made in a joking manner. The video included Parliament, the London Eye Ferris wheel, and a police station.

Sheik Omar Bakri Mohammed: on August 8, 2005, the Syrian-born radical flew to Lebanon, saying the United Kingdom had declared war against Muslims. He was detained by Lebanese authorities but was later released. Bakri had publicly said that he would not tell police if he knew of an Islamist bomb plot. A Sunday Times reporter heard him refer to the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005) as the Fantastic Four. On August 12, 2005, the British government barred his return to the country for medical treatment.

Wahbi Mohammed: believed to have abandoned a bomb backpack on July 21, 2005, during the abortive copycat attacks on the London subway and bus system. He was the brother of Ramzi Mohammed, who lived in North Kensington, a few hundred yards from Little Wormwood Scrubs Park, where the backpack was found. On February 5, 2008, he was convicted in a London court of 22 charges of failing to disclose information about terrorism and assisting an offender in connection with the failed copycat bombing of the London transit system in July 2005. Mohammed was sentenced to 17 years. The five who were convicted provided safe houses, passports, clothing, and food for the would-be bombers after the failed attacks. He was also charged with and convicted of having prior knowledge of the attacks.

Abdelbaset Ali Mohamed: alias of 'Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Abou-Naama Mohmoud: Algerian arrested on August 2, 1978, and held for a week without bail at Marylebone Magistrates Court on charges of conspiracy to murder Iraqi ambassador Taha Ahmad ad-Dawud. On July 28, 1978, a grenade was thrown under ad-Dawud's car, killing him.

Brigitte Mohnhaupt: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was believed to have accompanied Knut Folkerts, arrested in the Netherlands in a shootout with police on September 22, 1977. She escaped. It was believed that the duo had been involved in a shooting incident in The Hague earlier in the week, but they had escaped with the aid of two Dutch accomplices. She was also wanted for questioning in the death of banker Juergen Ponto. Her fingerprint was found on the back of a license plate of an Audi impounded in Heidelberg in connection with the RAF's firing of two RPG-7s on September 15, 1981, at the armored Mercedes of the commanding general of the U.S. Army in Europe, Frederick J. Kroesen.

She was arrested on November 11, 1982, as she and Adelheid Schulz approached a weapons cache outside Frankfurt. In 1982, she was convicted of murder in the July 30, 1977, slaying of Juergen Ponto, chief executive of the Dresdner bank, and was sentenced to five life terms plus 15 years. She ended her prison hunger strike on February 1, 1985. On April 2, 1985, a Stuttgart court convicted her of murdering three prominent West Germans and their bodyguards and of the attempted murder of a U.S. Army general; she was sentenced to life. On March 15, 1989, she joined the RAF hunger strikers in Aichach Prison in Swabia. On May 3, 1989, she was transferred to the hospital wing of Munich's Stadelheim Prison.

On February 12, 2007, the Stuttgart State Court approved her parole for March 27, when she would have served 24 years of her life sentence for multiple murders. She was not willing to repudiate her violent past, but she said that the time for "armed struggle" was over and acknowledged inflicting suffering on the victims' families.

Adalbert Moka: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Hakim Mokhfi: one of two French citizens, age 31, sentenced on June 16, 2005, by Presiding Judge Jacqueline Rebeyrotte to four years in prison, with one year suspended, for conspiracy to assist Richard C. Reid in attempting to shoe-bomb an American airliner over the Atlantic on December 22, 2001.

Bouchoucha Mokhtar: Tunisian member of an al Qaeda cell in Italy, serving prison terms in Italy for trafficking in arms and explosives when on April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Mikhail Mokretsov: student at a vocational school in Solekamsk, age 19, who on July 5, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot TU-154 flying from Leningrad to Lvov, diverting it to Arlanda airport in Stockholm, Sweden. He surrendered to police, saying he could no longer stand living in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He also hoped to avoid military service. On July 6, the Soviets requested extradition. On August 1, the Supreme Court canceled proceedings after he had tried to commit suicide in Kronoberg prison the previous day. He had decided to take his life after learning that the government had decided to extradite Soviet hijacker Anatoliy Mikhailenko. Mokretsov cut both wrists with a broken cell lamp but was saved by Swedish authorities. He ended a two-week hunger strike on August 15. On August 16, the Swedish Supreme Court barred his extradition on humanitarian grounds. A court psychiatrist said that he would not be able to stand conditions in a Soviet prison. His requests to emigrate had been rejected four times by Soviet officials, and he faced induction into the Red Army. On August 24, he was formally charged with aggravated hijacking. On September 11, the Sollentuna District Court sentenced him to four years in prison. Senior Prosecutor Birgit Thunved had requested that he be expelled to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics or that he be deported and not be permitted to enter the country for a decade.

Bouchoucha Moktar: one of four Tunisians convicted by a Milan court on February 22, 2002, on terrorist charges, including criminal association with intent to transport arms, explosives, and chemicals and falsifying 235 work permits, 130 driver's licenses, several foreign passports, and various blank documents. They were acquitted of charges of possession of arms and chemicals. The guilty verdicts were the first in Europe against al Qaeda operatives since the 9/11 attacks. The four belonged to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, an Algerian wing of al Qaeda. He received five years.

Patrick Moley: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, in New York City and indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer, and shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. Total bail for the four was $6.5 million.

Seamus Moley: arrested on January 12, 1990, in Florida with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines. Moley was alleged to have paid for the Stinger. He was also charged in his brother Patrick Moley's November 11, 1992, IRA case involving the purchase of detonators shipped to Northern Ireland.

Christian Moller: suspected of taking part in West German bank raids after he joined the Baader-Meinhof Gang in July 1977. He was arrested with Gabriele Korecher-Tiedemann on December 20, 1977, by Swiss authorities after the duo drove their French-registered auto from France into Switzerland. He was wounded in a gun battle with police. Some of the money paid in the ransom of Walter Palmers, kidnapped on November 9, 1977, in Austria, was found in their car.

Reverend Patrick Moloney: Melchite priest, age 61, arrested on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink's armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters.

He was born in Ireland, and his father had fought for Irish independence at the beginning of the century. He was ordained in 1977 in the Eastern Church under papal authority. He founded a halfway house on Manhattan's Lower East Side. He believed in the "theology of action," and he and his brother John were arrested in 1980 when they attempted to smuggle weapons into Ireland from the United States. The brother was convicted; the priest was not prosecuted. He was jailed for five days during a visit to Ireland on suspicion of smuggling arms to the IRA. No charges were filed. He frequently attended U.S. meetings of Sinn Féin, the IRA's political arm. He baptized the children of Samuel Ignatius Millar, also arrested.

On November 17, 1993, a federal magistrate ruled that he could be freed on $1 million bail, which was paid on November 20. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property. On February 28, 1995, a federal judge in Rochester sentenced him to four years in jail—he could have received five years—for his role in the robbery. He was released on October 8, 1998, after serving 44 months.

Azita Monachipur: arrested in September 1986 by French counterintelligence agents following a wave of bombings that left 13 dead. On April 24, 1988, Paris police jailed the Iranian anti-Khomeini leftist for possession of explosives he said would be used for attacks in Iran. He was sentenced to 30 months.

Vihna Monaco: one of four gun-wielding members of the Fighting Communist Union, believed to be a Red Brigades splinter, who attempted to assassinate Antonio da Empoli, a senior official in the economic and social department of the prime minister's office, on February 21, 1986, on the Via de la Farnesina in Rome. The chauffeur-bodyguard fired back, killing Monaco.

James Monaghan: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas. Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, and Martin McCauley said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. Monaghan, age 55, was a former Sinn Fein executive board member. FARC claimed they were in the country to learn about the local peace process. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives on the IRA members' clothing. On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted on training charges but convicted of traveling on false passports and IDs. Monaghan was sentenced to three years and eight months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time. On December 16, 2004, Bogota courts overturned the acquittals and ordered the men's immediate arrests to serve 17-year terms. Their whereabouts were unknown. On August 5, 2005, the trio snuck back into Ireland. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. Monaghan left the station without charge.

Joan Carlos Montaeagudo: head of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Barcelona commando who died in an exchange of fire with police who raided a house in Llica D'Amunt, near Barcelona, Spain, on May 30, 1991. He was believed involved in the May 29, 1991, bombing of a Civil Guard barracks in Vic that killed 9 people and injured 50 others. He was wanted for his suspected involvement in seven car bombings.

Montazer: driver of the getaway motorcycle used by one of the three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemilou, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989.

Stefano de Monti: one of three suspected members of the Italian Red Brigades (RB) arrested by Barcelona police on February 23, 1988, in raids on two apartments. The trio was wanted in Spain for using fake IDs. An international arrest warrant had been issued for their arrest for the armed robbery of several Italian banks, including the armed attack by the RB's Luca Marini cell on a post office at Mezzana di Prat in November 1983, which ended in a clash with police. The trial of the cell on charges of organizing and being part of an armed group and forming a group with terrorist aims started in May 1989 but adjourned pending extradition. They were members of the RB wing responsible for obtaining funds. On August 4, 1989, the trio was extradited by Spain to Florence, Italy, on a Spanish Interior Ministry plane under Interpol escort. They were transferred to Florence Solliciano jail.

Roberto Morandi: Red Brigades member convicted and sentenced to life in prison by a judge in Rome on July 8, 2005, for the murder of a government labor advisor in 1999.

Paolo Morandini: leftist Italian terrorist who confessed to the murder of Walter Tobagi of the Corriere Della Sera newspaper. In late November 1983, he received a suspended sentence after cooperating with authorities in apprehending another 50 suspected terrorists.

William Moravcik: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Gracia Morcillo Torres: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Christopher Moreau: young Italian Swiss arrested on July 25, 1970, by Israel authorities as he stepped off the Greek liner Enotria in Tel Aviv. He was carrying five pounds of Soviet-made explosives, detonators, and six copper labels inscribed "PFLP." He claimed that he had contacted the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) in Beirut and had been trained for several weeks. He had always been interested in left-wing politics but could not go to Vietnam and thus had joined a geographically closer cause. He was paid $900 in advance and was to receive another $5,000 when his bombs exploded. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy: associate of Syrian arms trafficker Monzer al-Kassar. Arrested in Romania on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of sophisticated weaponry to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels. Al-Kassar met with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants near Marbella to discuss a $7.8–$13.5 million deal on February 6, 2007. Al-Kassar also offered men to help FARC fight U.S. military officers in Colombia. He and his associates were indicted on four counts of supporting foreign terrorist group and conspiracy.

Luis Moreno: freed on December 8, 1993, by the Brussels, Belgium, court of first instance. He and his wife, Raquel Garcia, were accused of having close links with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). In February 1994, Belgium rejected their request for political refugee status; they appealed the decision.

Mario Moretti: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On November 28, 1980, Italy's public prosecutor submitted a 286-page indictment against 19 Red Brigades members, including Moretti, in the Moro case. Moretti, a former electronics technician and terrorist mastermind, remained at large, having twice escaped capture. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro. On April 4, 1981, police arrested him. On September 26, 1984, Venice magistrate Carlo Mastelloni issued an arrest warrant for Yasir Arafat on arms trafficking charges, citing a 1979 arms shipment from Palestinians in West Beirut to Italian Red Brigades members, including Moretti. On June 16, 1986, the trial of Moretti and 173 other Red Brigades charged with the Moro kidnapping began in Rome. He was sentenced to life in prison for being the triggerman. Two decades after the kidnapping, he told Corriere della Sera that Moro would have lived if the government had given "just a signal, the recognition of the existence of political prisoners."

Roberto Moretto: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Moretto. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Michel Morganti: sentenced to 15 years on June 21, 1990, by a court in Pau, France, for two attacks in the French Basque country in 1985 by the right-wing Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Emilio Hellin Moro: Spanish citizen ordered extradited on October 25, 1989, by a lower court in Paraguay, which stated that no political crime had been committed. Interpol agents had detained him in August 1989 on charges of murdering Yolanda Gonzalez, a student who belonged to a leftist party in Spain. He was also charged with membership in an ultra-rightist gang. He had been sentenced to 34 years in prison for the murder.

Danny Morrison: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) director of public relations. He was arrested on January 21, 1982, at the Peace Bridge in Buffalo, New York, for presenting immigration officers with a Canadian citizenship certificate that did not belong to him. He was trying to get to a New York City IRA fund-raising dinner. The U.S. Consulate in Belfast had denied him a visa.

Valerio Morucci: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Massimo Morzello: on May 15, 1989, the British government announced that it had no reason to expel the member of the Italian neo-fascist Third Position (Terza Posizione), who had been sentenced in absentia by an Italian court on charges of participating in an armed gang. He was also suspected of involvement in the August 2, 1980, bombing of a train in Bologna in which 85 were killed and 200 injured.

Imran Motala: on May 9, 2007, British police arrested Motala, age 22, on suspicion of assisting the 7/7 London subway bombers on 2005.

Gabriel Mouesca: Basque separatist prisoner in France whose release was demanded on December 13, 1986, by 10 armed Iparretarrak members who broke into a prison in Pau, France. On July 11, 1987, he was arrested by police in Argeles-Gazost, France, along with Henri Perez, a fellow Iparretarrak member who may have aided his escape. Police found five handguns and several homemade bombs in a stolen Renault with a false license plate. Police later said the Basque militants were planning to attack the Tour de France bicycle race on July 14, France's national holiday.

Michel (variant Michael) Waheb Moukharbel: assistant of Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist. He ran the PFLP's European operations. He was involved in the planning of the RPG-7 attack on an El Al 707 in Orly Airport on January 13, 1975. Carlos killed him when French police raided his Paris apartment in July 1975.

Mansour Mourad (variant Mansur Seifeddin Mourad): terrorist held by the Greek government for a November 27, 1968 (or 1969), attack on the El Al office in Athens. The 21-year-old Jordanian member of the Palestine Popular Struggle Front joined Elie Karabetian in throwing two hand grenades into the Athens office of El Al, killing a 2-year-old Greek child and wounding 15 others, including 3 Americans, a Briton, 10 Greeks, and a 3-year-old Greek child. His release was demanded by the hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut to Athens on July 22, 1970. The hijackers agreed to let his trial go ahead as scheduled on July 24, 1970. After the trial, the hostages would go free. He was sentenced to 11 years. He was released into the custody of the International Committee of the Red Cross and flown to Cairo. The prosecutor who had tried him on charges of murder and had succeeded in convicting him of premeditated manslaughter told him that he hoped to see him again in his country as a tourist.

Javad Mousavi: one of four Iranians detained on December 15, 1989, in Manchester's Stretford Police Station under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of planning to kill Salman Rushdie. He was released on December 19, 1989. His U.K.-born wife, Dawn, said he was a father of four and disabled from multiple sclerosis.

Mahmoud Ibrahim Moussa: imam of Rome's main mosque suspended on June 13, 2003, from the national Muslim league after he praised Palestinian suicide bombers at Friday prayers, calling on Allah to "annihilate the enemies of Islam."

Zacarias Moussaoui: French Moroccan, age 34, arrested on August 11, 2001, on immigration charges in Eagan, Minnesota, and later suspected of being the missing 20th 9/11 hijacker. He offered $8,000 in cash to a flight training school to teach him how to steer a jetliner, but not how to land or take off. On September 1, according to the Washington Post, French intelligence reported that Moussaoui was linked to "radical Islamic extremists" and that he had spent two months in Pakistan and possibly in Afghan training camps. Police found information in his computers on jetliners, crop dusters, wind patterns, and the way chemicals can be dispersed from airplanes, similar to research conducted by Atta. The FBI temporarily grounded all crop dusters in the United States. The German magazine Stern reported that two large sums of money had been sent to Moussaoui from Dueseldorf and Hamburg on August 1 and 3. Police later suspected that Moussaoui was sent as a replacement 20th hijacker when Ramzi Binalshibh, 29, a Yemeni fugitive in Hamburg, could not get a visa to enter the United States. Moussaoui became the first person indicted in the attacks when on December 11 a federal grand jury in Alexandria charged him with six counts of criminal conspiracy, including involvement in the murder of federal employees and committing terrorist acts. Four charges carried the death penalty; the others, life. On December 19, Moussaoui was ordered by U.S. Magistrate Judge Thomas R. Jones Jr., in the U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, to be held without bond until his arraignment on conspiracy charges, set for January 2, 2002, before U.S. District Judge Leonie M. Brinkema. He was charged with conspiracy to commit international terrorism, conspiracy to use airplanes as weapons of mass destruction, and other charges. Ahmed Ressam linked Moussaoui to al Qaeda, claiming he recognized him from photographs because they both had attended the Khalden al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan in 1998. Moussaoui was represented by Donald DuBoulay; Gerald Zerkin, age 52, a senior litigator with the Federal Public Defender's office; Federal Public Defender Frank W. Dunham Jr.; and Edward MacMahon, age 41. Moussaoui's family was represented by Isabelle Coutant Peyre, fiancée and attorney of Illich Ramirez Sanchez, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist also known as Carlos the Jackal, who was serving a life term with parole in a French prison.

On January 10, 2005, attorneys for Zacarias Moussaoui asked the U.S. Supreme Court to prevent the government from seeking the death penalty and from presenting evidence related to the 9/11 attacks. On March 21, 2005, the U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear Moussaoui's request to review a lower court ruling that denied him access to al Qaeda detainees Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and Ramzi Binalshibh. On April 22, 2005, Moussaoui pleaded guilty to taking part in an al Qaeda conspiracy that led to 9/11; he said that he was to conduct a follow-up plane attack on the White House. U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema said he was competent to enter the plea and began deliberations on setting up a jury trial regarding a death penalty. The penalty phase of the trial began on February 6, 2006, with the selection of jurors. He was thrown out of court four times after yelling "I am al Qaeda," and he again fired his lawyers and said he would testify. Opening statements were scheduled for March 6. He was in and out of court throughout February for his antics.

Judge Brinkema halted the trial on March 13 and said she was considering removing the death penalty after Carla J. Martin, a Transportation Security Administration lawyer, improperly shared testimony and coached seven witnesses, all of them current and former federal aviation employees, via e-mails. The judge had earlier ruled that witnesses could not attend or follow the trial or read transcripts. The judge ordered the prosecution to not use those witnesses. On March 17, she relented slightly, letting the prosecution use other, untainted aviation witnesses and announcing that she would also let the government pursue the death sentence.

Moussaoui testified on March 27 that he was to lead a five-man team, which included convicted shoe bomber Richard Reid, that was to have hijacked a fifth 9/11 plane and crashed it into the White House. He did not indicate what happened to the other three would-be hijackers. He also claimed that he knew only about the World Trade Center (WTC) planes and claimed that he had lied earlier to investigators.

On March 28, the testimony of two al Qaeda operatives was read to the jury. Sayf al-Adl, a senior member of the group's military committee, said that the defendant was "a confirmed jihadist but was absolutely not going to take part in the September 11, 2001, mission." Waleed bin Attah, alias Khallad, mastermind of the USS Cole bombing and an early 9/11 planner, said he knew of no part that Moussaoui was to play in the 9/11 attack. Khallad had been captured in April 2003. Testimony by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed indicated that Moussaoui was to be used for a post-9/11 wave of attacks.

The prosecution team argued that Moussaoui was telling the truth and thus deserved the death penalty. Moussaoui had offered to testify for the prosecution so that he could be heard but was told that he had a constitutional right to testify. The defense team argued that he was lying. On April 3, 2006, the jury found Moussaoui eligible for the death penalty. Later that week, the final phase of the penalty hearing began, with the prosecution putting on the stand former New York City mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani and nearly 40 family members of victims and survivors, running videos of people jumping from the doomed buildings, and releasing some of the 9/11 tapes from the WTC and 32 minutes of cockpit recordings from Flight 93.

On April 13, 2006, Moussaoui took the stand, mocked the victims and their families, and said that he regretted that more Americans hadn't died and that Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh was "the greatest American." The next day, Judge Brinkema vacated her earlier order that the federal government produce Richard Reid to testify. The jury deliberated for 41 hours over 7 days and then rejected the death sentence on May 3. The next day, the judge sentenced him to life. As Prisoner 51427-054, he would be in solitary for 23 hours per day in a maximum-security prison. He tried, but failed, to withdraw his guilty plea and spark a new trial.

On February 15, 2008, the court papers were unsealed, revealing that his attorneys asked the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit to overturn the guilty plea and life prison sentence because he could not choose his own counsel or learn much of the evidence against him.

Ibrahim and Mohamed Moussaten: two Moroccan brothers detained by Spanish police on February 1, 2005. They had regular contacts with their maternal uncle, Youssef Belhadj, believed to have made the al Qaeda confessor video in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. The duo was jailed on February 5 on provisional charges of collaborating with a terrorist group. Their parents, who also had been detained, were ordered freed. On October 31, 2007, Mohamed Moussaten was acquitted in the 3/11 trial in Spain.

Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan al Mouyad: variant Moayad. Yemeni aide, age 54, of Abd al Rahim al-Nashiri, chief of al Qaeda operations in the Persian Gulf (al-Nashiri was arrested in the United Arab Emirates in October 2002), who was arrested on January 10, 2003, with his assistant, Mohammed Moshen Yaya Zayed, 29 and also Yemeni, at an airport hotel in Frankfurt. Mouyad had been an imam at a large mosque in Sana'a, Yemen, and was an al Qaeda financier. The Germans believed the duo could have been transiting through Frankfurt to an undisclosed location. The Germans considered an extradition request from the United States to send him to New York to face federal charges of providing material support to a terrorist organization. Mouyad was represented by attorney Achim Schlott-Kotschote.

The Washington Post later reported details of the sting operation. A man claiming to be a Muslim from New York named Mohammed Aansi (variant Alanssi) approached Mouyad in Yemen and attempted to get him to come to the United States to meet with a financier. When Mouyad balked, he suggested Germany as a safe place to meet. Mouyad flew from Yemen and was met at the airport and driven in a Mercedes to the airport's Sheraton to meet a wealthy American Muslim from New York who wanted to donate to Mouyad's Middle Eastern charities. The man claimed to be a U.S.-born Muslim convert, Said Sharif bin Turi. For three days, the duo met to discuss monthly $50,000 tranches, not all for charity, some for bin Laden. Mouyad claimed he was one of bin Laden's spiritual advisors and had been involved in fundraising and recruiting for al Qaeda. German police arrested him the morning of January 10. He was believed to be a major funder of al Qaeda and the Palestinian Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas). Yemeni diplomats said that Mouyad in 1998 co-founded Sana'a's Al Ehsan Mosque and Community Center, which feeds 9,000 poor families each day and provides free education and medical care. He is a senior member of Islah, an Islamic opposition political party. The FBI said he had collected money for several years from individuals and a Brooklyn mosque that he then sent to al Qaeda. On January 5, 2003, a federal judge in the Eastern District of New York had issued a sealed warrant for his arrest.

On March 4, 2003, the U.S. attorney general indicted al-Mouyad and Zayed for fund-raising for al Qaeda in Brooklyn's al Farouq mosque and hosting a service for suicide bombers. The FBI had taped meetings with five Brooklynites regarding money for al Qaeda. Mouyad had bragged of delivering $20 million to bin Laden before the 9/11 attacks. The United States requested extradition and was given 30 days to provide enough evidence. The duo faced possible life sentences. The al Farouq mosque had previously been used by Egyptian cleric Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, later convicted for the 1993 World Trade Center (WTC) bombing. An FBI informant said he had attended a wedding hosted by Mouyad in September 2002 in Yemen in which a senior Hamas official said that they would read about an operation the next day. That day a suicide bomber blew up a Tel Aviv bus, killing 5 and injuring 50.

On July 21, a Frankfurt court approved extradition of the duo to the United States, which had guaranteed that they would not be tried by a military or other special court. The German government administration had the final say on whether to extradite. On November 16, 2003, the duo was extradited to the United States, arriving at John F. Kennedy International Airport. Mouyad was arraigned in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on November 18 on charges of supplying arms, recruits, and more than $20 million to al Qaeda and Hamas. Mouyad faced 60 years in prison; Zayed faced 30 years. Court papers filed on December 6, 2004, indicated that when he arrived in New York, Mouyad told FBI agents that "Allah will bring storms" to the United States because of his arrest, undercutting defense claims that Mouyad did not speak English. "Allah is with me. I am Mohammed al Mouyad. Allah will bring storms to Germany and America."

On May 11, 2004, Judge Charles Sifton in New York ruled that Yemeni-born ice cream shop owner Abad Elfgeeh did not understand the consequences of pleading guilty in October 2003 to charges of transferring tens of thousands of dollars to bank accounts in Yemen, Switzerland, Thailand, and China. Elfgeeh had acknowledged sending money to Mouyad, who had pleaded not guilty to funding terrorist groups.

On November 15, 2004, at 2:05 P.M., Yemeni-born informant Mohamed Alanssi, alias Mohamed Alhadrami, age 52, of Falls Church, Virginia, asked the security detail outside the White House to deliver a message to President Bush and then set himself on fire, critically injuring himself. He had also sent a note to the Washington Post and to FBI agent Robert Fuller indicating that he intended to torch himself. Alanssi had acted as a translator between the FBI operative and Mouyad. Alanssi was apparently distraught over his role as a witness and claimed that the FBI had mishandled his case. He claimed that he was not permitted to travel to Yemen to visit his seriously ill wife and their six children because the FBI held his passport. He also claimed he had yet to receive U.S. residency papers and a million dollars (he said the FBI had paid him $100,000). Two days later, he remained in serious condition at Washington Hospital Center, with burns over 30 percent of his body. The defense claimed that Alanssi had ineptly translated comments by Mouyad, making embellishments. In May 2004, Alanssi had been charged in federal court in Brooklyn, New York, with felony bank fraud for writing bad checks.

Kamil Mraz: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Brno to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Gerhard Mueller: member of the Red Army Faction of West Germany who was arrested with Ulrike Meinhof in a Hanover suburb on June 15, 1972.

Hugo Mueller: Dutch political science student whose passport was carried by Bernard Hausmann, a Baader-Meinhof terrorist killed on May 25, 1976, when his booby-trapped suitcase exploded when he opened it in a security office off the luggage area of Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport. The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) claimed credit for the bombing. Wadi Haddad's supporters in Amsterdam had provided the altered passport to Hausmann. Mueller and a fellow Dutch student, identified only as Rudy M., 26, were charged with embezzling a state document.

Wassem Mughal: arrested on October 21, 2005, in the United Kingdom, at age 22. He may have been planning to bomb the White House and U.S. Capitol. Mughal was charged with having in his bedroom in Chatham, Kent, a DVD titled "Martyrdom Operations Vest," an Arabic document titled "Welcome to Jihad," a piece of paper with the words "Hospital = attack," and a recipe for rocket propellant and "guidance-containing explosion." Younis Tsouli and Mughal were charged with conspiracy to murder and to cause an explosion. Prosecutors said they ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and the United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course that included instructions on how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli had been asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book The Tip of the Camel's Hump. They also stole data for hundreds of credit cards, which they used to purchase supplies for operatives, and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. They had made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, and more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. On July 5, 2007, the biochemistry graduate student was sentenced to seven and one-half years after pleading guilty.

Ainhoa Mugica Goni: alias Olga the Viper. One of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

On September 16, 2002, at 6:00 p.m., 50 French and Spanish police arrested Juan Antonio Olarra Guridi, alias Otsagi, age 35, who heads the military wing of Basque Nation and Liberty, and Ainhoa Mugica Goni, age 32, as the duo returned from grocery shopping and approached a safe house in the Bourdeaux suburb of Talence. They were believed responsible for assassinating 20 people, including police officers and judges. Spanish interior minister Angel Acebes said the duo "were the ones who gave the orders [and] provided all the material for the attacks . . . and most importantly, they were the ones who selected the targets."

A neighbor had tipped off gendarmes two months earlier; police soon set up surveillance. Police seized a gun from Olarra. The duo surrendered without a fight. Police also grabbed Saroia Gallarada, 21, a Frenchwoman who had leased the two-bedroom apartment for two months, raising suspicions when she paid in cash. She is the daughter of a man who joined ETA in 1992. She had also lent the duo her car. Police said they were using the apartment as a base for attacks into Spain.

Mugica was born in San Sebastian and joined ETA in 1994. She was accused of involvement in the 1995 car bombing against Jose Maria Aznar, at the time the opposition leader and then, as of 2002, the prime minister. Guridi was accused in the 1996 murder of the former chief justice of the constitutional court Francisco Tomas y Valiente, who was shot in the head three times in his office at a Madrid law school.

Their trial in Paris ended on January 10, 2003, when prosecutors demanded an eight-year prison term. Sentencing was set for February 2003.

Francisco Mugica Garmendia: variant of Jose Mugica Arregui.

Jose Mugica Arregui: variants Arrugaeta, Francisco Mugica Garmendia; aliases Artapalo, Pakito. Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) military chief captured by Madrid police on September 20, 1975. He was a key suspect in the ETA assassination of Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973. He was expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba. On April 11, 1989, more than 400 French policemen were searching for him after the Civil Guard deactivated a parcel bomb sent to Jose Barriou, minister of transport, tourism, and communications. On January 12, 1990, Paris-based Judge Vellemain ordered his arrest. He was arrested on March 29, 1992, in Bidart, France, near the Spanish border. On May 12, 1993, a French court agreed to permit his extradition to Spain. Madrid had accused him of masterminding several attacks in Spain, including the killing of a judge in September 1989 and an army colonel in November 1989. On June 18, 1993, he was sentenced by a Paris court to 10 years in prison.

Jose Mugica Arrugaeta: variant of Jose Mugica Arregui.

Nagore Mugica Alvarez: young Spanish woman who was a member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Txalaparta Commando. She was initially misidentified as having been arrested for a score of attacks by Toulon, France, police on November 17, 1994.

Muhammad Muhajir: variants Muhammad Muhajer, Mohamed Mouhajef. One of eight individuals suspected of being Islamic terrorists arrested on March 21, 1987, in Paris by the Department of Territorial Security (DST). The other seven people were of Tunisian origin. Authorities seized 12 liters of a liquid explosive, two Sten guns, and ammunition from the Rue de la Voute safe house in Paris's 12th District. Some of the detainees were members of Islamic Jihad. On March 26, 1987, the group was charged with "belonging to a terrorist network preparing to commit particularly dangerous attacks in France." He was charged with infringement of the legislations of weapons, explosives, and ammunition and of criminal association aimed at disturbing public order by intimidation of terror. He claimed he was born in Ba'labakk, Lebanon, and was a Sorbonne postgraduate theology student. Paris Domestic Service said he was a founder of Hizballah. The Lebanese was released on March 25, 1988, after a year in custody because of insufficient evidence to bring him to trial for a series of bombing attacks in France in September 1986 by the Committee for Solidarity with the Arab and Middle Eastern Prisoners. He was married to a French woman.

Essa Ismail Muhamad: charged by a Spanish judge with financing the al Qaeda truck bombing on April 11, 2002, that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia. He remained at large.

Ahmad Isa Muhamed: Iraqi who was one of six men arrested on March 1, 2002, by Rome police on suspicion of al Qaeda ties. They were held on suspicion of association with a "criminal organization with terrorist intentions" and intent to obtain and transfer arms and weapons. Wiretaps of their conversations included discussions of killing President Bush, a cyanide compound, and weapons needed for terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Police seized videos, address books, and a plane ticket to Phoenix. They also found a letter with the address of Lotfi Raissi, an Algerian accused in the United Kingdom of giving pilot training to the 9/11 hijackers.

Faysal Salah Muhamed: Iraqi who was one of six men arrested on March 1, 2002, by Rome police on suspicion of al Qaeda ties. They were held on suspicion of association with a “criminal organization with terrorist intentions” and intent to obtain and transfer arms and weapons. Wiretaps of their conversations included discussions of killing President Bush, a cyanide compound, and weapons needed for terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. Police seized videos, address books, and a plane ticket to Phoenix. They also found a letter with the address of Lotfi Raissi, an Algerian accused in the United Kingdom of giving pilot training to the 9/11 hijackers.

Ayadi Chafiq Bin Muhammad: Bosnian connected to the bin Laden financial network via the Mouwafaq Foundation in Munich. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen on October 12, 2001.

Massir Muhammad: student arrested by British police on September 22, 1985, on charges of plotting to throw hand grenades in a public place. On September 29, 1986, he was acquitted.

Jamel Hahmud Talid Muhammed: one of three Lebanese Palestinians identified in a March 16, 1989, Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) warning of a possible plan to hijack a U.S. airliner in Europe. The FAA said the trio might be carrying false passports issued in Bahrain, Pakistan, or North Yemen.

Mahdi Muhammed (variant Mahde): one of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorists who threw grenades and fired submachine guns at a crowd waiting to board El Al 582, a B707 bound for Tel Aviv from Istanbul, on August 11, 1976. They killed 4 and wounded 26 before surrendering. They claimed Libya had financed the operation. On November 16, 1976, a Turkish court sentenced them to death but then commuted the sentences to life in prison. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977.

Zuhair Muhsen: chief of Saiqa (Thunderbolt), a Syrian-sponsored Palestinian organization, and head of the Palestine Liberation Organization's (PLO) military department. He was assassinated on July 25, 1979, as he was returning to his apartment in Cannes' Gray d'Albion Hotel after an evening at the Palm Beach Casino. He was born on the West Bank in 1936. He joined the Syrian Baath party in 1953 and Saiqa in 1968. He had been a math teacher and had graduated from Lebanese University with a political science degree. He was a member of the PLO's 15-member Executive Committee.

Abu Mujahed: Lebanese who fled to Denmark in 2000, where he contacted bin Laden cells. He was an associate of Danial Ahmed al-Samarji.

Kepa Mujika Garmendia: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on September 14, 1994, when French police found 200 million pesetas, explosives, and chemicals on a property used as an ETA arms factory. Police were trying to determine whether some of the money was from the ransom paid to release San Sebastian engineer Julio Iglesias Zamora, who was kidnapped and held by ETA from July 5 to October 29, 1993. Mujika was responsible for ETA's finances and was a brother of Pakito, ETA's leader.

Majid Yusuf al-Mulki: variant Majid Yusuf al-Mukly. One of four Palestine Liberation Front members who on October 7, 1985, hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro and took 116 passengers and 331 crew members as hostages. A fellow hijacker identified al-Mulki as the killer of American passenger Leon Klinghoffer, age 69, confined to a wheelchair. Al-Mulki's trial began on November 18, 1985, on charges of arms smuggling. He was found guilty and sentenced to eight years. On May 11, 1988, Italy's Supreme Court of Cassation confirmed an appeals court's 30-year sentence. (See also Mar'uf Ahmad al-As'adi.)

Martin Mullan: sentenced on September 27, 2000, in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, to three years for buying and shipping weapons in a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning operation. The weapons in the 1999 plot were to be disguised as toys, VCRs, and computers going from Florida to Northern Ireland via the U.S. mail.

Nicholas Mullen: London-born electronics dealer of Irish descent arrested in December 1989. In 1990, he was sentenced to 30 years for renting a South London flat that housed a major Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory raided by police on December 21, 1988. He was also found guilty of buying cars, opening bank accounts, and providing false birth certificates and other documents for IRA members.

Bonnie Lou Muller: Briton named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send her to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Klaus Muller: alias of Johannes Weinrich.

Patrick Mullin: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning ring. Undercover agents were offered $16,000 in cash for 42 automatic rifles and handguns. In late July 1981, Mullin and two others appeared in court to face grand jury indictments charging them with receiving and possessing firearms not registered to them, possessing firearms on which the serial numbers had been obliterated, and planning to export the arms to the IRA in Ireland.

Alona Munoa Ordozgoiti: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Sergio Munoz Cadaval: French-born Chilean citizen and one of three deserters from the Juan de Austria regiment of the Spanish Foreign Legion who on August 5, 1979, drove onto the Puerto Rosario, Fuerteventura, Canary Islands, airport runway in a stolen police jeep and took over an Iberian Airlines DC9 that was unloading passengers from Las Palmas, Gran Canaria Island. They demanded to be flown to Morocco and Algeria and then Lisbon, Portugal. They later asked to go to Bordeaux, France, and then Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. They flew to Geneva, where they surrendered. Spain said it would not request extradition. The Swiss government said it would charge them with deprivation of liberty and blackmail, which carried maximum sentences of 20 years.

Esteban Murillo Zubiri: alias Jose Azcona Uriz. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member whose extradition to Spain was denied on April 3, 1991, by Mexican 10th District Court Judge Luis Perez de la Fuente, saying that he would be politically persecuted. He was sentenced to nine months in a Mexican prison for violating the general law and using false documents. The judge said he could obtain temporary release by posting a bail of 10 million pesos.

Colm Murphy: building contractor and pub owner, age 46, who on February 24, 1999, was charged by Irish authorities in connection with the August 15, 1998, car bombing in the Omagh, Northern Ireland, town square that killed 29 people and wounded more than 350 others. He appeared in Dublin’s Special Criminal Court three days after police arrested him at his Dundalk farmhouse. On January 22, 2002, he was convicted of conspiracy in the bombing. On January 25, he was sentenced to 14 years for supplying two cell phones to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombers. The father of four won his appeal and was freed after posting bail on January 28, 2005. The judge said that detectives had lied about the evidence.

Thomas “Slab” Murphy: overall leader of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) in the late 1990s replaced by Brian Keenan in December 1998. Murphy, age 49, the South Armagh commander, remained on the Army Council. Murphy took over negotiations for arms with the Libyans when Keenan was jailed.

Patrick Murray: arrested in France in July 1989, she was one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members whose extradition to West Germany was approved by a Paris appeals court on March 7, 1990. The trio was suspected of waging a bombing campaign against British soldiers. The extradition request was based on an arrest warrant by the federal court in Karlsruhe on September 13, 1989. The trio was accused of murder, attempted murder, destruction using explosives, attempted destruction by explosives, breach of legislation on weapons of war, and associating with criminals. The trio was sentenced to two years each for forging documents and was extradited to Germany in July 1992. On November 16, 1992, the Cell Higher Regional Court heard charges of attempted murder of four U.K. soldiers by four suspected IRA members, including her. The Federal Prosecutor’s Office said that they were to face trial in connection with the June 1989 bombing of the Quebec Barracks of the British Army of the Rhine in Osnabrueck that injured a guard. On April 1, 1993, the High Court at Celle, near Hanover, began her trial. The German federal prosecutor said that she and two other IRA members had five bombs containing 330 pounds of Semtex explosive when they cut through a fence at the barracks.

Fadlallah Fadlallah Murtadi: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid’s Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Ascain Pedro Murua Etxave: alias Kung Fu. Leader of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by French police on February 3, 1988.

Manuel Murua Alberdi: aliases Casero, Txapela. Member of Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) Vizcaya commando arrested by police in France on January 30, 1990. He was believed responsible for the March 1983 attack in the Rancho Chileno restaurant in Sestao in which two policemen and a woman died.

Muhamad Musawi: variant Mohamed al Musawi. Lebanese detained by French counterintelligence on July 22, 1987, in connection with a wave of bombings in Paris between December 1985 and September 1986 that killed 13 and wounded 250. He was indicted three days later for “associating with criminals linked with an individual or collective undertaking aiming to disturb public order by intimidation or terrorism.” On October 31, 1990, the Paris Appeals Court overruled an earlier decision to free him and announced a five-year prison sentence against him. An arrest warrant was issued.

Rashim Musawi: individual tried with two Arabs arrested in April 1979 trying to smuggle 50 kilograms of explosives through Austria into West Germany. He denied membership in any Palestinian organization. The geography student said he had met Iranian Mohammad Zahedi in Rome by accident. On July 20, 1979, the Passau regional court sentenced him to four months for forging documents and for unlawful entry into West Germany.

Franca Musi: arrested on January 9, 1982, by police in a Rome tenement building and accused of being a Red Brigades courier.

Djamal Mustafa: one of several men convicted in Duesseldorf on October 26, 2005, of plotting to attack Jewish sites and supporting a terrorist group. He was sentenced to five years in prison.

Isham Mustafa: Algerian and one of two assassins of Izz Ad-Din al-Qalaq, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief in Paris, and his aide, Hammad Adnan, on August 3, 1978. The Rejection Front of Stateless Palestinian Arabs, along with Black September and Black June, claimed credit.

Khaled ben Mustafa: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but had not used their combat training. They were not sent back to prison although they were formally sentenced. Mustafa was sentenced to four years in prison, three suspended and one year as time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The group was among seven French citizens captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then were handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005. One was freed immediately upon arrival. The others spent up to 17 months in French prisons.

Hadi Mustafavi: one of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemilou, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of leaving injured persons whose lives were in danger.

Abdul Rahim Mustapha: major in Fatah’s Force 17 believed to have been the mastermind of the killing of Ali Naji Awad al-Adhami, a Palestinian political cartoonist, on July 22, 1987, in the United Kingdom. He was expelled from the United Kingdom in April 1987 but reentered the United Kingdom using false ID papers. Investigators linked him to the killer.

General Pietro Musumeci: ex-officer of the Italian SISMI military intelligence service. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to 10 years in jail on charges of trying to throw investigators off the track in the case of the August 2, 1980, bombing by right-wing terrorists of a Bologna train in which 85 died and 200 were injured. The court then reduced his sentence by 3 years. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court dropped his 10-year sentence for subversion. For the court, the act of association for subversion did not exist, and he was thus cleared of all charges.

Hassan Mutegombwa: resident of London, age 20, and brother of Yassin, charged on September 11, 2006, in the United Kingdom with one count of procuring funds for terrorism. He had invited someone on July 23 to provide money. Their family hails from Uganda.

Yassin Mutegombwa: resident of London, age 22, and brother of Hassan, charged in the United Kingdom on September 11, 2006, with undergoing terrorism-related weapons training in the Matley Wood Campsite in Hampshire and near a fishing area in Berkshire.

Annan Mutini: one of three individuals arrested in Paris on October 12, 1989, on suspicion of being members of the Italian Red Brigades.

Abdelghani Mzoudi: on July 3, 2002, Hamburg police arrested seven Islamic radicals, including Mzoudi, age 29, a United Arab Emirates citizen, who had roomed with 9/11 hijacking leader Mohamed Atta in a Marien Street apartment in August 1999 and witnessed his will. Hamburg police were watching a credit card fraud suspect, and surveillance of him led to the others. The seven were questioned, photographed, and fingerprinted. By the end of the evening, five were back on the streets for lack of evidence.

On October 10, 2002, Hamburg police arrested Mzoudi, an electrical engineering student from Karrakech, Morocco, on suspicion of providing logistical support to 9/11 hijack leader Mohammed Atta's al Qaeda cell in Hamburg. He had been questioned frequently in the July 3 investigation. Authorities seized a laptop, books, and other materials from his apartment. Police had a witness statement indicating that Mzoudi had visited Afghan terrorist training camps in 2000. Mzoudi had shared a Hamburg apartment with Ramzi Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, a Moroccan who remained at large. Mzoudi had provided money to Essabar to attend a flight school in the United States; Essabar failed to obtain a U.S. visa.

On May 9, 2003, German prosecutors charged him with membership in a terrorist organization and 3,066 counts of accessory to murder in the 9/11 attacks. On June 6, 2003, the U.S. Treasury Department blocked his assets. On December 11, 2003, Hamburg Presiding Judge Klaus Ruehle announced that the five-judge court had decided to release Mzoudi after determining that the German federal police had provided information, apparently taken from Ramzi Binalshibh, that Mzoudi had no advance knowledge of the 9/11 plot. The trial would continue. On February 5, 2004, the Hamburg State Court acquitted Mzoudi and freed him for lack of evidence. The prosecution appealed the acquittal two days later.

On May 12, 2005, German prosecutors petitioned a Berlin federal court to retry Mzoudi. On June 9, 2005, a German appeals court upheld his acquittal. Hamburg's top security official, Udo Nagel, said he was a threat and would expel him within two weeks. Mzoudi arrived in Agadir, Morocco, on June 21, 2005.

N

---

Albert Nacache: arrested by French police on May 13, 1981, in connection with the May 9, 1981, firing of shots by Pessah (Passover) at the Syrian Airlines office in central Paris.

Anis Naccache: variants Naqqash, Nakkash. One of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France, on July 17, 1980. On March 10, 1982, a Nanterre jury sentenced four of them, including Naccache, to life in prison. His release was demanded on July 31, 1984, by the three Guardsmen of Islam hijackers of an Air France B737 flying from Frankfurt to Paris. He was moved to La Sante maximum-security prison on September 22, 1986. On February 2, 1989, he claimed that the French had reneged on an agreement for his release after kidnappers had freed French hostages Marcel Carton, Marcel Fontaine, and Jean-Paul Kauffman on May 5, 1988. The next day, Iran also claimed that France had broken the "gentlemen's agreement" to give amnesty to Naccache. On February 12, 1989, French president Francois Mitterrand publicly stated that France had made no commitment to Iran or anyone else to release Naccache.

On April 5, 1989, Naccache, claiming to be the European spokesperson of Hizballah, said all Muslims in Europe should use "all legal means" to obtain the banning of Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses. He began a hunger strike on September 8, 1989. In January 1990, Naccache ended a 19-week hunger strike in which his weight had dropped from 164 to 105 pounds. He resumed eating after being assured that he would be released later that year. On July 27, 1990, France pardoned Naccache and four accomplices (Mehdi Nejad-Tabrizi, Mohammed Javad Janab, Fawzi Mohammed al-Sattari, and Selaheddin Mohammed Alkara). They were deported to Tehran that day. Sattari, the group's lone Palestinian, flew on to Baghdad.

Said Nacir: member of the Fatah-Revolutionary Council sentenced in Belgium for the 1980 attack against Jewish children in Antwerp. He was expected to be released circa July 27, 1990, after having served a third of his prison sentence.

Youssef Nada: Egypt-born Italian Tunisian citizen who lived in Campione d'Italia, Switzerland, for decades. He also had residences in Capione d'Italia, Italy, and Alexandria, Egypt. In 2001, the UN Security Council blacklisted the then-69-year-old on suspicion of funding the 9/11 attacks. He and Ahmed Idris Nasreddin had founded the Bank al Taqwa, which was also blacklisted. Acting on a Swiss request, Italian police raided his home, seizing papers and computer disks. He was questioned by Swiss police for six hours. Nada denied meeting bin Laden or dealing with his organization, although he admitted membership in the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood. As of November 2007, Nada remained on the blacklists of the United States and United Nations.

Ahmed Naji: Egyptian Islamic Jihad member who fled Albania but was arrested by Italian police in early October 1998. He reportedly had planned the failed attack on the U.S. Embassy in Tirana.

Abdel Hadi Nakaa: one of two Black September members seriously injured when their explosives-laden car blew up on a Rome street on June 17, 1973. Nakaa was a Syrian. It was believed they were driving their booby-trapped car toward their next mission, which may have been against the transit camp in Austria for Soviet Jewish émigrés. Some reports claim that Mossad had arranged for the bombs' premature detonation.

Thomas Derry Nakaba: one of seven Danish neo-Nazis arrested on January 17, 1997, while planning to send letter bombs overseas. Police linked them to three packages of explosive detonators seized from a mailbox in Malmo, Sweden, that were to be sent to the United Kingdom. Police also seized a dozen detonators, black powder, and several shotguns. Nakaba, 26, was charged with shooting a policeman during the arrests. Nakaba had placed the packages in the mailbox.

Anis Nakkash: leader of a pro-Khomeini assassination squad that killed two in a failed assassination attempt against former Iranian prime minister Shapour Bakhtiar in July 1980. On February 3, 1986, the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, which bombed the Claridge shopping arcade off the Champs-Élysées in Paris, demanded his release.

Omar Nakhcha: Moroccan, age 24, who was among 18 suspected radical Islamists charged on October 23, 2007, by Spanish National Court Judge Baltasar Garzon with belonging to a terrorist organization that included 22 radicals who sent Islamist fighters to Iraq "so they might join in terrorist activity sponsored and directed by al Qaeda." Nakhcha was also charged with helping some of the 3/11 Madrid train bombers (2004) to escape from justice.

Mohamed Suleiman Nalfi: Sudanese arrested on March 22, 2001, by the FBI when he was lured from his home with a false job offer in Amsterdam. He was detained by the FBI when he changed planes. He was indicted in New York for having links to bin Laden and charged in federal court with forming and leading a Sudanese jihad group, following bin Laden's al Qaeda organization, and helping bin Laden start an investment business in Sudan. He was added to the list of 22 defendants in the bin Laden conspiracy, which included the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

On January 31, 2003, Nalfi, age 40, admitted he had worked for bin Laden in Sudan in the early 1990s and pleaded guilty to conspiring to destroy national defense materials, which carries a maximum 10-year sentence. He said he had created a jihad group in Sudan in 1989 and had helped to build businesses there that aided al Qaeda, which used the firms as fronts to procure explosives, chemicals, and weapons. In 1990, Nalfi and others had traveled to Egypt in a camel caravan to establish an al Qaeda weapons smuggling route. Nalfi told U.S. District Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy in New York that in 1992, he had attended a meeting in which al Qaeda leaders discussed how to oust U.S. and UN forces from Somalia and Saudi Arabia. Nalfi had been arrested in 2000 in a conspiracy case involving the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Tanzania and Kenya. The government had agreed to a lesser charge.

Mara Nanni: arrested with Prospero Gallinari on September 24, 1979, after a gun battle with Rome police, in connection with the March 16, 1978, kidnapping and murder in Rome by the Red Brigades of former Premier Aldo Moro.

Walid Naouar: brother of Nizar bin Mohamed Nawar who was arrested by French police on November 5, 2002, in connection with Nizar's involvement as one of the truck bombers who on April 11, 2002, killed 19 people in an explosion at a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia.

Attilio di Napoli: Italian leftist terrorist killed on August 5, 1977, when a dynamite bomb he was planting with a Chilean terrorist exploded in Turin.

Anis Naqqash: alias Abu Mazem. Palestinian leader of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah's last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France on July 17, 1980. He was wounded in the attack.

Silvano Nardulli: variant of Silvano Narvelli.

Juan Jesus Narvaez Goni: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Silvano Narvelli (variant Nardulli): suspected Italian Red Brigades member arrested by Barcelona police on April 25, 1987, at one of two apartments in the Gran Via de las Corts Catalanas on Planeta Street. On May 5, 1987, he was released by Madrid police for lack of evidence.

Mustafa Setmariam Nasar: variant Mustafa Sitmaryan Nassar; aliases Abu Musab al-Suri, Umar Abd al-Hakim. Spanish citizen who might also have Syrian citizenship and a leading al Qaeda ideologue. While a member of the Syrian Muslim Brotherhood, he fled Syria in the 1980s, roaming through the Middle East and North Africa, where he became associated with the Algeria Islamic Group. He settled in Madrid in 1987 and married a Spaniard, obtaining Spanish citizenship. In Spain, he wrote inflammatory essays under the pen name Umar Abd al-Hakim. In 1995, he moved to the United Kingdom, serving as a European contact for al Qaeda. He roamed throughout Europe and Afghanistan through the late 1990s. He moved his family to Afghanistan in 1998. He was a trainer at the Derunta and al-Bhuraba terrorist camps in Afghanistan, working closely with Midhat Mursi al-Sayid 'Umar, alias Abu Khabab al-Masri, training extremists in poisons and chemicals. Following the 9/11 attacks, he swore loyalty to Osama bin Laden as an al Qaeda member. The United States announced a $5 million reward for his arrest. He was indicted in Spain in September 2003 for terrorist activities of al Qaeda and was linked to Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, a Syrian-born Spaniard who ran the group's Spanish cell. He was indicted in Spain for al Qaeda membership and was suspected of having a role in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. British authorities wanted to question him in connection with the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005. He was captured by Pakistani forces near the Afghan border in a Quetta shop that serves as an office of an Islamic charity tied to a radical group on November 4, 2005. He was transferred to Syrian custody. He claims to have been born on October 26, 1958, in Aleppo, Syria. Nasar had written a 1,600-page tome on how to attack Islam's enemies. He had traveled to Sudan, Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, Syria, and two European capitals. UPI reported on October 19, 2006, that he was in U.S. custody.

Ahmad Naseer: Pakistani man arrested at Rome's Fiumicino airport on March 1, 2002, after arriving from Saudi Arabia via Egypt. Police believed he was the head of an Islamic terrorist cell in Rome and had al Qaeda ties. He was released on March 2 when police said they did not have enough evidence to hold him. His traveling companion was detained but not arrested.

Sa'id Nasir: Palestinian arrested circa 1981 by Belgium for an attack on Jewish schoolchildren in Antwerp in which a French youth was killed. Nasir had been serving a life sentence when in January 1991 he was released as part of the Silko shipjacking negotiations. The 17-ton Silko was seized by the Palestinian Fatah Revolutionary Council off of Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip on November 8, 1987.

Yusuf Hisham al-Nasir: variant Nisir. On November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member in connection with the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. The hijacking ended in Egypt. On August 1, 1986, he was arrested in Viechtach, West Germany. He had been sentenced in absentia to six years and six months for providing weapons to the hijackers. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction.

Hassan Mustafa Osama Nasr: Italian media claimed that he was whisked off the streets of Milan and flown to Cairo on February 17, 2003. As of mid-December 2006, he was in prison in Egypt.

Mehidi Ben Nasr: leader of a Milan-based network that was wrapped up on November 6, 2007, in coordinated raids in Italy, France, Portugal, and the United Kingdom. The raids netted 17 Algerians and Tunisians suspected of terrorist ties in Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Milan prosecutors ordered the raids in Milan, Bergamo, Verese, and Reggio Emilia. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. The leaders were identified as Dridi Sabri, Mehidi Ben Nasr, and Imed Ben Zarkaoui, all operating in Italy. Three suspects remained at large. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Ahmed Idris Nasreddin: in August 2002, the Ethiopian was designated by the U.S. government as an Italian-based financier of terrorism. The United States listed him and a dozen of his financial companies and other holdings on an official blacklist on April 19, 2002; the United Nations soon followed. The U.S. Treasury cited his support for Youssef Nada, co-founder and co-director with Nasreddin of the Bank al Taqwa, which had “long acted as financial advisors to al Qaeda” via its offices in Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Italy, and the Caribbean. Nada and the bank had been designated by the United States and United Nations as terrorism financiers in November 2001.

Nasreddin later certified that he had terminated relations with Nada and the bank. In November 2007, the 78-year-old’s name did not appear on U.S. blacklists.

Mustafa Sitmaryan Nassar: variant of Mustafa Setmariam Nasar.

Yassin Nassari: husband of Bouchra el-Hor, a young Dutch Moroccan mother from Zutphen. They were detained in May 2006 at Luton Airport outside London. Police found suspicious files in his laptop computer, such as instructions for making explosives and a rocket launcher. When police searched their home, they found a document titled “A Training Schedule for Committing Jihad.” They found a letter by el-Hor in which she offered herself and their 6-month-old son as martyrs. She was charged with failing to disclose information to prevent a terrorist attack. Nassari was charged with possessing documents for terrorism. Their trial was set for May 23, 2007, in London. The duo had lived in the United Kingdom and traveled often to the Netherlands.

Athar Nassem: Pakistani, age 21, arrested with two associates on December 29, 1973, by Heathrow police for carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. On January 4, 1974, he and his accomplices were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. He was sentenced to one year.

Nassim: member of a cell of the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat based in Milan that was wrapped up by Italian police on October 10–11, 2002. Intercepted conversations showed the suspects talking about obtaining explosives in France. In September, they referred to an upcoming “soccer game,” believed to be code for an attack. They also said they would take revenge against Italy for supporting U.S. antiterrorism efforts. Nassim said, “You’ll see what happens now in Italy. Now they are causing problems. Maybe you'll find 300 or 400 dead in the subway."

Claudio Nastri: Italian student arrested by Rome police on June 25, 1987, in connection the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, a Red Brigades splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Tahir Nasur: works for the Sanabel Relief Agency in the United Kingdom, which the United States claimed in February finances Libyan Islamic Fight Group terrorists. Nasur, age 44, was one of eight people, including five foreigners, arrested on May 24, 2006, for "facilitating terrorism abroad" in 18 raids in London and Manchester. The United States said that the Libyan Islamic Fight Group is an al Qaeda affiliate that has attempted to overthrow Libyan leader Muammar al-Qadhafi. The threats were not against U.K. facilities. Michael Todd, chief constable of the Greater Manchester Police, said, "We are not talking today about a direct threat to the United Kingdom. We are talking about the facilitation of terrorism overseas. That could include funding, providing support and encouragement to terrorists." The five foreigners were held under the government's power to "deport individuals whose presence in the United Kingdom is not conducive to the public good for reasons of national security." The other trio was held antiterrorism legislation.

Marie Natil: alias of Nathalie Menigon.

Peter Naumann: German neo-Nazi who on August 14, 1995, revealed the location of eight arms and explosives caches in Lower Saxony and Hesse to the Federal Prosecutor's Office. Police received 150 kilograms of arms and explosives.

Nizar bin Mohammed Nawar: variant Naouar; aliases Sword of the Faith, The Tunisian. Resident, age 25, of Lyon. In a will dated July 5, 2000, and sent to Al-Quds Al-Arabi newspaper, Nawar called on his family to contribute to a holy war "with their souls and money." The fax included Nawar's name before the police released the name. He was one of the men who on April 11, 2002, drove a truck transporting natural gas that exploded outside the outer wall of North Africa's oldest synagogue on the island of Djerba, Tunisia, killing 17 people, including 11 German tourists, 5 Tunisians, and a French citizen. On April 16, the Islamic Army for the Liberation of the Holy Sites, which has links to bin Laden, claimed credit.

Tunisia on April 22, 2002, blamed the attack on Nawar and a relative living in the country. Police had discovered a phone call to Germany by Nawar shortly before the blast. Nawar phoned Christian Ganczarski, age 35, a Polish-born German convert to Islam. Nawar was asked if he needed anything, and replied, "I only need the command."

Soner Nayir: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Antonio Negri: professor of political science at Padua University implicated in evidence released by Italian judiciary officials on April 16, 1979, regarding the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome. He was believed to have phoned Moro's wife on April 30, 1978, to announce that Moro would be killed. An eyewitness claimed that Negri was at the scene of the ambush and that a woman congratulated him on the attack. The investigating judge cleared him on January 15, 1981. On June 28, 1983, while on trial for terrorist activities, he was elected to parliament on the Radical Party ticket. He was the leader and ideologue for the April 7th group, an autonomy movement. He could invoke parliamentary privilege to keep from serving any sentence that he might receive. He took his seat in the Italian parliament on July 15, 1983. His election halted his pending trial on terrorist charges of robbery, murder of a policeman, and involvement in the kidnapping and accidental death of Milanese heir Carlo Saronio. On June 12, 1984, a Rome court sentenced him in absentia to 30 years for his role in two murders by leftist terrorists.

Fowzi Badavi Nejad: Iranian dockworker who was the only surviving terrorist of the six Iranian Khuzestanians who took over the Iranian Embassy in London on April 30, 1980. He was charged with the murder of two hostages, assault, unlawful imprisonment, and several other offenses. During his January 1981 trial, he claimed the attack was planned and organized by the Iraqis. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Klavdhios Neokleous: arrested in November 1977 for sending an EOKA-B letter to the British High Commission in Cyprus in April 1977 threatening that diplomats and servicemen would be kidnapped and killed if Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot in the United Kingdom whose extradition was sought by Cyprus, was surrendered.

Luca Nicolini: on January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Flavia Nicolotti: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank. On July 4, 1985, a Turin court reduced the sentence to 13 years due to insufficient evidence.

Carsten Nielsen: one of seven Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) members on Blekingegade, Denmark, jailed for the 1988 post office robbery. All were acquitted for lack of evidence and were due to be released in December 1995.

Marius Niewborg: boyfriend of Ludvinna Jansen, a blonde 23-year-old Dutch woman arrested at Ben Gurion International Airport on September 26, 1976, while carrying a tin can to test the efficiency of metal-detecting devices. She was convicted of collaborating with Palestinian guerrillas and sentenced to six years. He flew on to India, where he was arrested for traveling on a forged passport and sent back to the Netherlands.

Mohammad Jafar Nikham: Iranian Embassy to Madrid press attaché withdrawn on July 27, 1984, by his government when Spanish police accused him of ties to four Iranian members of the Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution who were arrested on July 23, 1984, while carrying two antitank grenade launchers, six 40-mm grenade launchers, and two .45 caliber machine guns in Barcelona and Madrid. They were charged with plotting to hijack a Saudi airliner. Authorities believed their Barcelona safe house was used in the coordination and perpetration of terrorist acts in Spain and elsewhere in Europe, including attacks against a Saudi plane and the U.S. Embassy in 1983. The terrorists planned to shoot down another Saudi plane and to assassinate Masud Rajavi, leader of the Mojahedine-e Khalq in Paris. When police searched Nikham's apartment, they found diplomatic bags loaded with guns and explosives and found details of the terrorists' plans to hijack a Saudi plane on a flight from Madrid to Jeddah and Riyadh. Police said he was using his diplomatic status to pass weapons while in the transit lounge at Madrid airport to three of the terrorists.

Miguel A. Nina: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curacao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Maria Teresa Ninni: suspected member of the Italian Red Brigades arrested by Spanish police on April 29, 1987, on the Balearic island of Ibiza.

Stanko Nizic: night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich, shot to death on August 26, 1981. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police searching his home found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said he was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia.

Immaculada Noble: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Claude Noblia: founder of SOS France, a right-wing terrorist organization, killed with three other SOS members when their car blew up on August 18, 1986, while they were transporting four to five kilograms of explosives intended for a racist-oriented attack in Toulon.

Benham Nodjaumi: Iranian businessman charged in the United Kingdom in March 1983 with kidnapping six Iranians in London and Belgium.

Ebadollah Nooripur: on June 9, 1988, the Iranian terrorist serving 12 years for blowing up London's Queen's Gardens Hotel in May 1981 was released early by the United Kingdom and deported. The press speculated that she was freed to help release kidnapped Anglican envoy Terry Waite.

Miguel Northufster: aliases Gonzalo, Raul, Gringo, Largo Miguel. Terrorist of Italian German origin killed on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca Cola company, who had been abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage.

Northufster arrived in Bolivia as a member of the Cochabamba Greater Seminar to avoid military service. He was a leader of the leftist Nestor Paz Zamora Committee. Police identified him when they found the car used in the attack on the U.S. Marines on October 10, 1990, which was abandoned with documents inside it.

On December 29, 1990, the La Paz press reported that he had masterminded operations of the Nestor Paz Zamora Committee, but did not directly participate in most of them.

Drissi Nouredine: on January 24, 2005, Judge Maria Clementina Forleo dropped terrorism charges against three Tunisians and two Moroccans, including Nouredine, in a decision that differentiated between guerrillas and terrorists according to her reading of the 1999 UN Global Convention on Terrorism. She indicated that their actions in recruiting for and financing training camps in the Iraq war zone did not create civilian terror or break international humanitarian law and as such were guerilla in nature, not terrorist, and could not be prosecuted. Prosecutors said they would appeal. The judge's decision was reversed by higher courts in 2007 based on the terrorist nature of the crime rather than its milieu or intended effect. Nouredine was to be tried again in a Brescia court.

Novelli: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Adnan Ahmad Nuri: one of two hijackers of a British Airways flight from Bombay to London on March 3, 1974.

O

---

Robin Oban: U.S. citizen, age 25, deported to the United States on January 6, 1974, after three days of police questioning that did not result in formal charges. She was held after the arrest of three individuals on December 29, 1973, in Heathrow Airport carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. The trio was charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners.

Cuckovic Obrad: hijacker on July 8, 1959, of a Yugoslavian airliner flying from Cattaro to Belgrade that was diverted to Bari, Italy.

Edward O'Brien: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) operative on "active service" who died on February 18, 1996, when a bomb went off in a red No. 171 London Transport double-decker bus on Wellington Street near Trafalgar Square and Covent Garden. Police believed that the resident of Gorey, County Wexford, Ireland, was carrying the bomb to another location when it went off prematurely. Police found a weapon in the bus wreckage.

Niall O'Brien: Irish Roman Catholic priest who on February 26, 1983, was charged in the Philippines with the ambush/murder of Pablo Sola, mayor of Kabangkalan, on March 10, 1982.

Martin O'Connell: one of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunmen who shot to death Ross McWhirter, coeditor of the Guinness Book of World Records, in London on November 27, 1975.

On February 10, 1977, he was convicted killing McWhirter, Prof. Gordon Hamilton-Fairley, police bomb disposal expert Capt. Roger Goad, and three others. He was also sentenced for the murders of two policemen in a hostage siege on London's Balcombe Street and for several bomb and gun attacks in the United Kingdom. The judge recommended that he not be considered for parole for at least 30 years. On April 9, 1999, O'Connell was freed as part of the Northern Ireland peace agreement.

Thomas F. O'Connor: former Rochester police detective, age 54, arrested at his home on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink's armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters. He had retired in July 1982 after 20 years on the force. He then worked as a security guard for Genesee Brewing Company. In 1990, he began working as a security guard for Brink's. Federal agents believed that the 1993 holdup was an inside job. In the 1980s, he had become active in Irish Northern Aid, which helps families of prisoners in Northern Ireland. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property and two other counts related to the robbery.

Ciaran O'Dwyer: born circa 1955, a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) leader convicted in June 2005 and sentenced to five years and nine months.

Ella O'Dwyer: arrested in June 1985 in a police raid in Glasgow that uncovered a 16-bomb campaign planned by her and four others for British resorts during the summer of 1985. On June 12, 1986, a London court found four defendants guilty of participating in the planning of the 1985 bombing campaign directed at London and 12 coastal resorts.

Ismail Oezden: charged on May 7, 1990, by the West German Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe with membership in the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK). He was believed to be a member of the PKK's European central committee. He was also charged with having been involved in the capture and abduction of a former party functionary in July 1987.

Muhammad Oglah: Jordanian whose expulsion from France was ordered on December 24, 1986, in connection with the discovery of an arms cache in Aulnay-sous-Bois on December 18, 1986.

Patrick (Patsy) O'Hara: imprisoned Irish National Liberation Army terrorist who died on May 22, 1981, during the 61st day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison. He was serving an eight-year jail term for possession of explosives. The Commando Patrick O'Hara, a wing of the Red Army Faction, took credit for the February 1, 1985, murder of Ernest Zimmermann, chairman of the board of the Motoren-und Turbinen-Union, in Gauting near Munich.

Dessie O'Hare: alias the Border Fox. Ireland's most-wanted man and maverick Irish nationalist guerrilla arrested on November 27, 1987, following a gun battle at a roadblock in which he was wounded and the passenger in his car was killed. He had vowed to never be taken alive. He was shot several times when he tried to run a police roadblock and slightly injured a soldier in the knee. He was wanted for 30 murders and for leading the kidnapping of an Irish millionaire's son-in-law.

Michael Oikonomous: alias of Alexandros Giotopoulos.

Donagh O'Kane: arrested in France in July 1989, she was one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members whose extradition to West Germany was approved by a Paris appeals court on March 7, 1990. The trio was suspected of waging a bombing campaign against British soldiers. The extradition request was based on an arrest warrant by the federal court in Karlsruhe on September 13, 1989. The trio was accused of murder, attempted murder, destruction using explosives, attempted destruction by explosives, breach of legislation on weapons of war, and associating with criminals. The trio was sentenced to two years each for forging documents and was extradited to Germany in July 1992. On November 16, 1992, the Cell Higher Regional Court heard charges of attempted murder of four U.K. soldiers by four suspected IRA members, including her. The Federal Prosecutor's Office said that they were to face trial in connection with the June 1989 bombing of the Quebec Barracks of the British Army of the Rhine in Osnabrueck that injured a guard. On April 1, 1993, the High Court at Celle, near Hannover, began her trial. The German federal prosecutor said that she and two other IRA members had five bombs containing 330 pounds of Semtex explosive when they cut through a fence at the barracks.

Thomas Okusane-Martinez: Mexican and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West German. Swedish police claimed that the group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson.

Jesus Maria Olabarrieta Olabarrieta: alias Txema. Suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by French police on December 17, 1986, and handed over to Spanish authorities at the Hendaye border post. He was the subject of a November 14, 1986, expulsion order.

Adrian Olaciregui Aizkoreta: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military member from San Sebastian whom French authorities expelled to Spain on May 28, 1987. He was detained in the Morbihan Department in Brittany and then taken to the Neant Hospital for a heart checkup, before his expulsion.

Adolfo Hector Olachea: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began his extradition proceedings from the United Kingdom on terrorism charges. Spain extradited the suspected Shining Path member to Peru later in the year. He was released from custody but ordered to remain in Peru while the public prosecutor prepared the case for trial.

Juan Antonio Olarra Guridi: alias Otsagi. One of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

On September 16, 2002, at 6:00 P.M., 50 French and Spanish police arrested Olarra Guridi, age 35, who headed the military wing of ETA, and Ainhoa Mugica Goni, alias Olga the Viper, age 32, as the duo returned from grocery shopping and approached a safe house in the Bourdeaux suburb of Talence. A neighbor had tipped off gendarmes two months earlier; police soon set up surveillance. Police seized a gun from him. The duo surrendered without a fight.

They were believed responsible for assassinating 20 people, including police officers and judges. Spanish interior minister Angel Acebes said that they “were the ones who gave the orders [and] provided all the material for the attacks . . . and most importantly, they were the ones who selected the targets.” She was accused of involvement in the 1995 car bombing against Jose Maria Aznar, at that time the opposition leader and then, as of the 2002 arrest, the prime minister. Mugica was accused in the 1996 murder of former chief justice of the constitutional court Francisco Tomas y Valiente, who was shot in the head three times in his office at a Madrid law school.

Police also grabbed Saroia Gallarada, age 21, a Frenchwoman who had leased the two-bedroom apartment for two months, raising suspicions when she paid in cash. She was the daughter of a man who had joined ETA in 1992. She had also lent the duo her car.

Police believed Olarra succeeded Francisco Xabier Garcia Gaztelu, arrested in January 2001. Police said they were using the apartment as a base for attacks into Spain. Olarra, born in Donostia, Spain, was linked to several murders in Spain, going back to 1991.

Their trial in Paris ended on January 10, 2003, when prosecutors demanded an eight-year prison term. Olarra said, “We tried several times to make peace proposals, and the solution will not come from a process like this one.” Sentencing was set for February 2003.

Manuel Olarzabal Artizar: one of three Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members believed by police to be responsible for the September 7, 1987, assassination of Civil Guard 2nd Lt. Cristobal Martin Luengo in Bilbao, Spain.

Olga the Viper: alias of Ainhoa Mugica Goni.

Rudolf Olma: would-be hijacker, accompanied by his wife and child, of a LOT AN24 bound for Poland on August 24, 1970.

Andre Olivier: one of two men charged after his March 28, 1986, arrest with complicity in the murder of Gendarmerie Gen. Guy Delfosse, killed on March 27, 1984, while trying to stop a Lyons bank holdup. He was suspected of forming a left-wing terrorist group modeled after Direct Action or of being a leader of Direct Action. He was charged with hostage-taking, armed robbery, and complicity to murder. A search of his car turned up 10 automatic revolvers, an Israeli-made submachine gun, disguises, and documents.

Vincenzo Olivieri: member of the Naples Red Brigades branch arrested on May 19, 1987, in Paris for taking part in the April 27, 1981, kidnapping of Christian Democrat leader Ciriaco De Mita. He was sentenced to life in prison for killing the driver and a police bodyguard with submachine gun fire. He was also wanted for taking part in the February 14, 1987, holdup of a postal van in Rome during which two policemen were killed. Italy requested extradition.

Ramzi Omar: alias of Ramzi Binalshibh.

Yasin Hassan Omar: Somali, age 24, who immigrated to the United Kingdom in 1992. He had been collecting $500 monthly welfare payments. He was seen on a British surveillance photo on July 21, 2005, running from the Warren Street station in an abortive copycat attack on the British subway system. On July 27, 2005, Birmingham police arrested him. On August 6, 2005, he was charged with conspiracy to murder and possession of explosives. On August 8, a London court charged Muktar Said Ibrahim, Ramzi Mohammed, and Yasin Hassan Omar. They were ordered held until a November 14 hearing, when they would enter pleas on conspiracy and explosives offenses. His trial began on January 15, 2007. Omar, Yahya, and Ibrahim had attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred.

On July 9, 2007, the jury convicted him of conspiracy to murder by plotting to bomb London's public transport system. He was sentenced to life in prison on July 11. He would be eligible for parole after 40 years.

Mario Onaindia: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for shooting to death Meliton Manzananas, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968. The death sentence was commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian, kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Onaindia was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzananas's widow. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term.

P. O'Neill of the Irish Republican Publicity Bureau, Dublin: normal signature for claims of responsibility issued by Irish Republican Army (IRA) chiefs.

Patrick O'Neill: one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. O'Neill had already served his sentence.

Luca de Orazi: on August 16, 1980, Italy issued an arrest warrant against the neo-Nazi, charging him with subversion in connection with the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189.

Ramon Orbe: suspected Spanish member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who was seriously injured in Biarritz when a bomb exploded on his motorcycle on June 15, 1984.

Zigor Orbe Sevillano: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Yusuf Orer: deportee from West Germany who on June 28, 1985, attempted to hijack a Turkish Airlines B727 en route from Frankfurt to Istanbul. He was disarmed.

Frederic Oriach: senior member of the outlawed Direct Action leftist group. After a string of arrests and releases, Oriach was arrested in July 1981 after he attempted to bomb the Paris office of the West Germany railway. He was released in late September or early October as part of the general amnesty granted by president François Mitterrand when he came into office.

Oriach was arrested on October 12, 1982, after picking up documents from a rail station baggage locker that linked him to the alleged assassins of U.S. and Israeli diplomats in Paris. He was ordered held without bail and was indicted on charges of committing assassinations, involuntary injuries, and attacks by explosives. His release date is uncertain, but he was still being held as of April 23, 1983, when a dozen young people self-described as an “anti-imperial commando unit” caused millions of francs of damage at the Museum of the Legion of Honor, demanding Oriach’s release.

He was arrested on September 25, 1986, in connection with a series of attacks on Jewish targets, as he was about to give an interview to TV journalists at a Paris park. He claimed to have founded the Armed Cell for Popular Autonomy, but he denied Direct Action links. He was freed the next day for lack of evidence of involvement in the recent attacks in Paris. He was charged only with obtaining a passport illegally and defending crimes and murders.

Salvador Ormaza: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member extradited to Spain from Belgium on July 14, 1984. He had been arrested near Antwerp in October 1983 for transporting arms. In March 1984, he had been sentenced to one year in prison prior to extradition. On August 5, 1984, ETA bombed the Antwerp Palace of Justice in retaliation for the extradition.

Michael O’Rourke: on October 30, 1979, he was arrested by officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service while being questioned at FBI headquarters in Philadelphia. He was wanted for questioning in the 1976 murder of a policeman. He had blasted out of an Irish prison earlier in 1976. He was living under the name Patrick Mannion and apparently had violated U.S. immigration laws. He was listed as Ireland’s Public Enemy Number One after being linked to the July 21, 1976, detonation of an Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) land mine under the limousine of the new U.K. ambassador, Christopher Ewart-Biggs, and Judith Cook, his secretary. Two others riding in the car were injured. He had confessed to being an explosives expert with the IRA. On February 22, 1984, he was granted a five-week delay in his deportation by a New York appeals court. He was scheduled to serve on March 17, 1984, as the honorary grand marshal for the St. Patrick’s Day Parade in New York City. On June 20, 1984, he appeared before the antiterrorism Special Criminal Court in Dublin after his arrest at the Dublin Airport, following deportation from the United States. He was the first IRA member deported from the United States. He was ordered held until his next court appearance on July 4, 1984, on charges of prison escape and planting explosives.

Laureano Ortega Ortega: top leader of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who on December 5, 1992, was arrested in a shoot-out with Spanish police in a supermarket parking lot. He and other GRAPO members raided an armored van servicing the supermarket, taking 80 million pesetas. He was carrying false documents when captured.

Dominique Ortuno: one of four French Basque militants arrested on December 12, 1988, by Bayonne, France police. Police did not release the charges.

Samih Osailly: arrested on April 12, 2002, by Antwerp, Belgium, police on charges of diamond smuggling and illegal weapons sales. He is an associate of ASA Diam, which served as a key facilitator for al Qaeda diamond purchase operations in Liberia and Sierra Leone. His cousin, Aziz Nassour, is a Lebanese diamond merchant associated with ASA Diam. Nassour pressed Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front (RUF) rebels to step up diamond production. Osailly pleaded not guilty. Belgian investigators said bank records showed ASA turned over almost $1 billion in the year before 9/11. They also found phone records of calls to Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iraq, and Iran.

Angel Otaegui: mechanic and member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who was sentenced to death on August 28, 1975, by a Burgos military tribunal for killing Gregorio Posada, a member of the Civil Guard, in San Sebastian in 1974.

Angela Otaola: Spanish Basque from Bilbao in whose London apartments a bag of arms from Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist, was discovered in 1975.

Juan Marie Otegui: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member assassinated on August 2, 1985, in Saint Jean Pied-de Port, France, by the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Mikel Otegui Unanue: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Ali Kathry Othman: on October 30, 1984, he was deported by the United Kingdom to Tripoli, Libya, in connection with several bombs that went off in London during mid-March 1984. Evidence was insufficient to press charges.

Otsagi: alias of Juan Antonio Olarra Guridi.

Paul Otte: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Josu Otxantesana: member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) roving commando who on June 18, 1993, was sentenced by a Paris court to six years in prison.

Samar Ourfali: Palestinian who had lived in the Neuss, West Germany, apartment that was raided on October 26, 1988, resulting in the arrests of 14 Arabs suspected of Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command (PFLP-GC) terrorist ties. On July 29, 1990, Washington Post reporter Jack Anderson said that in July 1990, Sweden had released from jail and expelled 11 Palestinians, including Ourfali, who might have been connected to the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland that killed 270.

Igor Dmitriyevich Ovechkin: one of several members of the Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, known as the Seven Simeons, who on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad.

Oleg Ovechkin: one of several members of the Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, known as the Seven Simeons, who on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad.

Vasiliy Ovechkin: one of several members of the Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, known as the Seven Simeons, who on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad.

Ninel Ovechkina: one of several members of the Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, known as the Seven Simeons, who on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad.

Alejandro Oyarzabal: arrested on January 17, 1987, in San Sebastian during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and the injury of 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Asier Oyarzabal: suspected head of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) logistics apparatus who was arrested by French authorities in September 2001.

Ainhua Ozaeta Mendiando: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on May 20, 2008, in Bordeaux, France. She allegedly was the hooded woman who had read the group's March 2006 cease-fire declaration.

Yalcin Ozbey: Turkish drug trafficker jailed in West Germany. On July 17, 1985, public prosecutor Antonio Marini requested that the court attempt to secure his temporary extradition before his jail term ended in mid-September. Ozbey, a member of the Grey Wolves, claimed that Mehmet Ali Agca had sought assistance from the Bulgarians but was rebuffed in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Begona Ozcudun Echenagusia: police were searching for the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member after arresting 14 people in July 1988 in Spain for attempting to re-form the ETA Donosti (the Basque term for San Sebastian) Commando, which had earlier been broken up by police. The group was planning attacks on the San Sebastian Marine Command, on the Office of the Civil Governor of Guipuzcoa, and on a National Police patrol. Police found on the ground floor of a building in Hernani 100 kilograms of ammonal, 12 antitank grenades, 4 rifle grenades, 3 handguns, and 2 vehicles with false registration. One of the cars was already prepared with four tubes to be used in an attack.

Zervet Ozen: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London's Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio lived in London. Ozen received 12 years for an arson attack on November 4, 1993.

P

---

Alexandra Di Pace: one of several members of the Union of Communist Fighters of the Italian Red Brigades arrested in Paris on June 15, 1987. She had been living in France under an alias for several years. On November 7, 1987, she was expelled to Spain.

Lanfranco Pace: on September 14, 1979, after giving a press conference denying involvement in the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome, he was arrested by Paris police in a hotel. The investigating judge cleared him on January 15, 1981.

Sergio Padula: member of the Combatant Communist Party on trial in Rome, who attempted to read a handwritten statement in court on September 22, 1988, taking credit for the incident on September 20, 1988, in which the Khalid Akbar Commando of the Red Army Faction (RAF) and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer.

Pierluigi Pagaliai: Italian neo-Nazi injured in the nape of the neck by a Bolivian policeman's bullet while trying to escape from his surrounded home on October 10, 1982. He was wanted for questioning in the 1980 Bologna bombing in which 85 people were killed. He was connected to neofascist terrorist leader Stefano Delle Chiaie. He was extradited to Rome, but he died on November 5, 1982, after remaining in a coma for three weeks.

Enrique Pagoaga Gallastegui: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Jose Maria Pagoaga Gallastegui: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Pakito: alias of Jose Mugica Arregui.

Gorka Palacios Alday: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member, age 29, wanted for a series of bombings, who was arrested with three others in Lons, France, on December 9, 2003.

Alexander Panaryu: alias used by a man carrying a Cypriot passport who purchased a motorcycle used in a bombing outside a Paris synagogue on October 3, 1980, killing 4 and injuring 12.

Remo Pancelli: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26 years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Dr. Gianfranco Pancino: leftist doctor arrested by French police on December 17, 1987. He was facing 26 years in jail in Italy for kidnapping, possession of explosives, and involvement with armed groups. He had worked as a researcher for the previous five years at the St. Louis hospital in Paris and was arrested at his home after Italian authorities filed for his temporary detention. In May 1987 he had been sentenced in absentia to 26 years along with other members of the Workers' Autonomy movement, and on March 19, 1986, he had been sentenced to 12 years and in July 1985 to 10 years for involvement with the Territorial Communist Cells. In March 1987 he had sent a letter to Italian president Francesco Cossiga dissociating himself from terrorism and requesting clemency.

Carmela Pane: one of four self-proclaimed "professional revolutionaries" arrested by Parma police on February 20, 1979, carrying a time bomb and other weapons in their car. Pane was an anarchist residing in a Pisa student dorm.

Maurizio Panichi: one of two Italian hijackers of an Olympic Airlines B707 flying from Paris to Athens who forced the plane back to Paris on November 8, 1968.

Calogero Paolinello: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Daniel Pape: leader of the Jura separatist movement Belier arrested by Swiss police on February 25, 1993, for two bombings in January 1993. Fifty Swiss Army hand grenades were found in his cellar.

Max Papilaya: leader of nine South Moluccan gunmen who took over a commuter train in the Netherlands between Assen and Groningen on May 23, 1977. They demanded the release of fellow South Moluccans who had been arrested following attacks in December 1975 and of the group that had conspired to kidnap Queen Juliana in July 1975. On June 11, commandos raided the train and a schoolhouse that had been simultaneously taken over by four South Moluccan terrorists. Six of the trainjackers were shot dead. Papilaya's release was demanded on March 13, 1978, by three South Moluccan gunmen who seized an Assen, Netherlands government building and held 71 employees hostage.

Janos Papp: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Josze Papp: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Nadine Renew Paquay: alias of Nathalie Menigon.

Peter Paris: member of the Schuetzen group, whose German-speaking members seek autonomy for Italy's Alto Adige Province. He was blown up on May 24, 1984, by a bomb he was carrying in Lana, 20 kilometers from Bolzano, the capital of the province.

Frederick Parkinson: Belfast truck driver and member of the Ulster Defense Association held on April 9, 1977, on charges of conducting bombings in the center of Dublin. He was caught when a small device exploded in his pocket.

Jon Parot: member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) roving commando who on June 18, 1993, was sentenced by a Paris court to four years in prison.

Francesco Pasqualicchio: one of three Red Brigades members arrested by Bologna police on June 5, 1987. He worked at a local health center.

Umberto Passigatti: one of two Italian Red Brigades members arrested by Paris police on October 22, 1986. On June 17, 1987, they were sentenced by a French court to nine months in prison for robbery, weapons possession, using false documents, and operating stolen cars. He was ordered out of France the next day for "participating in an armed group on national territory." He was expelled on July 1, 1987, to Spain, where he was arrested. On July 6, 1987, he went on a hunger strike to resist extradition to Italy for attempting to “instigate civil war.”

Helene Passtoors: Belgian who was found guilty by a South African court on May 15, 1986, of treason for helping the African National Congress but who was found not guilty of terrorism charges. Her ex-husband Klaas de Jonge was in hiding in the Dutch Embassy. She faced a death sentence.

Oldrich Pastorek: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Ryszard Paszkowski: one of two Polish hijackers of LOT Flight 10116 from Budapest to Warsaw on August 25, 1982, that was diverted to Munich.

Arshad Patel: related to two of the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005). On May 9, 2007, British police arrested him on suspicion of assisting the bombers.

Chatal Paternostre: Belgian psychologist arrested on August 20, 1985, for planting a bomb at the Charleroi electrical construction factory, which manufactures equipment for NATO in Drogenbos, Belgium. The bomb was defused. On the front of the building were the initials of the Proletarian Revolutionary Action Front. The trial began on September 26, 1988. Six Belgians were accused of a wave of 28 terrorist attacks between October 1984 and December 1985. Paternostre's group had launched three bombings, one of which failed, between April and June 1985. No one was hurt in those attacks, and she and a colleague were released on bail 12 months after their arrest. Her lawyer asked the court to separate her from the other defendants. The duo faced terms of three years to life with hard labor.

Dominique Marie Paul: French woman deported by South Korean immigration police on August 31, 1988, shortly after her arrival in Seoul's Simpo International Airport from an undisclosed country. She had identified herself as a reporter from a French monthly magazine but was suspected of links with Black September.

Gunnar Pavlus: exiled Latvian and Swedish citizen who on December 17, 1986, was sentenced by Judge Dieter Bannert of the Vienna Provincial Court for the arson against the Russian monument on Vienna, Austria's Schwarzenbergplatz on November 5, 1986. He was protesting against Soviet policy in the Baltic states. He paid 50,000 schillings for the damage and received a four-month suspended sentence. He returned to Sweden that week.

Yahia Payumi: Palestinian arrested on June 7, 2004, in Milan, Italy with his houseguest, Rabei Osman el-Sayed Ahmed, linked to an al Qaeda network in Europe.

Francesco Pazienza: on July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to 10 years in jail on charges of trying to throw investigators off the track in the case of the August 2, 1980, bombing by right-wing terrorists of a Bologna train in which 85 died and 200 were injured. The court then reduced his sentence by three years. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court acquitted him of slander and planting false evidence to mislead investigators.

Patrizio Peci: “repentant terrorist” cleared by the investigating judge on January 15, 1981, on charges related to the 1978 Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of Italian prime minister Aldo Moro.

Dario Pedretti: member of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei who on May 2, 1985, was sentenced by a Rome court to 18 years and 2 months for a series of murders, attempted murders, bombings, and assaults between 1977 and 1981.

Mursel Peker: hijacker on October 29, 1998, of a Turkish Airlines B737 shortly after it left Adana on a domestic flight. He said he was protesting Turkish military actions against Kurdish rebels. He demanded to fly to Lausanne, Switzerland, but the pilot landed in Ankara to refuel. Special Forces stormed the plane after six hours of negotiations and killed the hijacker.

Roberto Peli: one of two Italian Red Brigades members arrested by Paris police on October 22, 1986. On June 17, 1987, they were sentenced by a French court to nine months in prison for robbery, weapons possession, using false documents, and operating stolen cars.

Pennington: would-be hijacker of an SAS DC9 scheduled to fly from Malmo to Stockholm, Sweden, on May 17, 1971.

Carlos Pentantos: name listed as the sender of a parcel bomb sent to the Israeli Embassy in Portugal on December 14, 1988.

Alessandro Pera: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987. He had been released from preventive custody in 1986 because official charges could not be brought before a deadline elapsed. He was a defendant in the third trial dealing with the 1978 kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro and was suspected of involvement in the March 1981 raid on the inspector’s office at Rome’s San Camilo Hospital, the June 1981 murder of police official Sebastiano Vinci, and the July 1981 holdup of the offices of the SIP Telephone Company.

Carlos Perez Ojuel: arrested in Aoiz, Spain, in connection with arrests of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members on November 18, 1990.

Henri Perez: Iparretarrak member arrested on July 11, 1987, by police in Argeles-Gazost, France, along with Gabriel Mouesca, whom he might have helped escape from Pau prison in December 1986. Police found five handguns and several homemade bombs in a stolen Renault with a false license plate. Police later said the Basque militants were planning to attack the Tour de France bicycle race on July 14, France’s national holiday.

Ignacio Perez Beotequi: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member captured by police on July 30, 1975, in Barcelona. He was suspected in the ETA assassination of Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973.

Jon Inaki Perez Aramburu: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Jose-Felix Perez Alonso: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member wounded on April 25, 1988, during a shootout in Bayonne’s Saint Leon quarter. He was in possession of 725 million pesetas ($6.5 million) believed to be the ransom paid for the release of Madrid industrialist Emiliano Revilla, kidnapped on February 24, 1988. He was also wanted by Spanish police for the 1979 bombing and gun attacks against a car showroom and a bar. He shot himself in the foot as he struggled with an arresting officer and shot a female police officer in the foot as well. He reportedly was a “legal” commando, one without a police record.

Maria Teresa Perez Sever: one of two members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military who died on August 15, 1987, when a bomb they were handling exploded at noon inside their car in Guipuzcoa.

Mladen Perisic: Yugoslav émigré who escaped in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstantz, killing one and wounding two.

Andrzej Perka: Pole who hijacked a Polish Airlines LOT Antonov-24 twin-engine prop plane flying from Zielona Gora to Warsaw on December 4, 1980, and diverted it to Tempelhof, West Berlin, where he requested political asylum.

Paolo Perpichetti: arrested by police on June 3, 1987, at the Viaggiotto, San Saba, hideout of the Red Brigades (RB) believed involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Clement Perret: French member of the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group assassinated on August 16, 1985, by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) gunmen while he was dining in his Castellon restaurant in Spain.

Vincente Perurena Terechea: member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who on February 8, 1984, was assassinated by the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group in Hendaye, a French-Spanish border town.

Frane Pesut: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six members of the Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their propaganda leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. They surrendered in Paris and were immediately extradited to the United States. Pesut was convicted on May 5, 1977, of air piracy and conspiracy and was sentenced to 30 years on July 21.

Michael Peters: arrested on November 25, 1992, in Gudow near Moelln, Germany, on suspicion of forming a "rightist terrorist organization" with 10 other purported neo-Nazis. He reportedly had attempted on September 5, 1992, to attack the asylum-seekers hostel in Pirtzier, during which time two Molotov cocktails were thrown at police. On December 8, 1993, the five judges of the Second Criminal Bench of the Schleswig Higher Regional Court sentenced him to life in prison on three counts of murder, several counts of attempted murder, and a particularly serious case of arson.

Osman Petmezci: Turkish al Qaeda sympathizer, age 25, arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, with his dual-citizen German American fiancée, Astrid Eyzaguirre, age 23. The couple was arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, as they were planning to bomb the U.S. Army's European headquarters and other targets in Heidelberg on September 11. Police found 290 pounds of chemicals, 5 pipe bombs, gunpowder, and marijuana plants in their apartment. Police also found a picture of bin Laden, Islamic literature, and a book about bomb making.

Petmezci worked at a chemical warehouse in Karlsruhe. Eyzaguirre was an assistant manager at the post exchange store (PX) at U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg. She had worked at the base for several years.

As the trial opened on April 11, 2003, Petmezci denied plotting an attack and said the chemicals were intended for making firecrackers. Prosecutors withdrew the terrorism counts, saying there was not "sufficient specificity" to prove the plot against the base. On May 6, he was convicted of illegal possession of explosives, drug violations, stealing gunpowder and chemicals to make liquid potassium nitrate, and other lesser charges.

Ana Maria Petralanda: wife of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member Miguel Angel Aldana Barrena, who was in Venezuela after being deported and was arrested in the French Basque country on May 4, 1992.

Stefano Petrella: arrested on January 4, 1982, after a gunfight and chase near the Spanish steps. Police believed he and a partner were preparing the Italian Red Brigades kidnapping of Cesare Romiti, managing director of Fiat. The duo provided information about Red Brigades hideouts.

Michael Petri: member of the German neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 10, 1993, by Mainz, Germany, police in connection with a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was a friend of Arnulf Winfried Priem, later identified as being involved with the letter bombs.

Carl Gustaf Christer Pettersson: Swede arrested on December 14, 1988, as the assassin of prime minister Olaf Palme on February 28, 1986. The former drama student had a history of violent crime, alcoholism, and drug abuse and a previous conviction for manslaughter. On December 31, 1988, the Stockholm district court approved the prosecutor's request that he be kept under detention awaiting formal charges. He had 17 prior arrests, convictions on 63 separate charges, and four previous prison terms. On May 29, 1989, he was charged with the murder. The trial opened on June 5, 1989; he pleaded not guilty. On June 19, 1989, the widow identified him. The court reached, but did not disclose, a verdict on July 20, 1989. On July 27, 1989, he was declared guilty and given a life sentence. The conviction was overturned that day. An appeals hearing was opened on September 12, 1989. He was released from Kronoberg Prison on October 12, 1989, following a decision from the Svea Court of Appeals that there was insufficient evidence to warrant the guilty verdict. An appeals court formally dismissed proceedings on November 2, 1989. A high court ordered the state to pay Pettersson $50,000 in compensation. On October 25, 2001, Gert Fylking told a tabloid newspaper that Pettersson had confessed to him. Pettersson's signature appeared on a letter to the newspaper. Pettersson could not be found. He died in 2004.

Walter Pezzoli: Red Brigades member killed by police waiting outside a Milan restaurant on December 11, 1980.

Angelo Pezzuti: his release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of Action for National Liberation (ALN) and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum. He was permitted to conduct an interview with the news media.

Michael Philippe: flight attendant, age 25, arrested by federal authorities on March 28, 2002. On January 20, 2002, a bomb threat scrawled in soap on a restroom mirror diverted to Keflavik, Iceland, a Virgin Atlantic Airways B747 flight from London to Orlando with 322 passengers and 18 crew members. The crew found anti-American messages and asked passengers for handwriting samples. Police found no explosives on board. Philippe was arrested for falsely reporting that he had found the note "Bin Laden is the best Americans must die there is a bomb on board Al Quaida" written on an air sickness bag in the plane's restroom. No bomb was found. Philippe faced 20 years for interference with and intimidating a flight crew. On May 16, a federal grand jury indicted him; he could face life in prison on the new charges of threatening to use a weapon of mass destruction against U.S. citizens, communicating false information and so endangering the safety of a flight, intimidating flight crew members, and lying to an FBI agent. The charges carried maximum respective sentences of life in prison, 20 years, 20 years, and 5 years.

Clara Piacenti: alias Chiara Ferrante. Arrested on April 3, 1987, by Barcelona police at a checkpoint on suspicion of membership in the Red Brigades and Direct Action. She had been arrested by Cuneo police in 1978. She was in possession of an R-14 weapon stolen in Italy, anarchist propaganda, wigs, forged papers, and a scanner tuned to the frequencies used by the Barcelona police.

Cristoforo Piancne: on January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Angel Picabea Ugalde: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member, age 44, who handled transportation of explosives who was sentenced on January 13, 2003, by a Paris court to nine years in prison.

Sergio Picciafuoco: on July 11, 1988, a Bologna court sentenced him to life for setting off a bomb in the Bologna train station on August 2, 1980, that killed 85 and wounded 200. He was a member of an extreme rightist group. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court overturned the life sentence and cleared him of any involvement in carrying out the bombing.

Paola Picconi: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987.

Bernard Pientka: hijacker of a Polish Airlines LOT twin-engine AN-24 flying from Katowice to Gdansk on July 21, 1981, and diverted to Tempelhof Airport in West Berlin.

Francesco Pieperno: on June 2, 1982, Judge Paul Martineau of the Superior Court of Quebec released the Italian physicist because of a total “lack of evidence” that he was in collusion with the Italian Red Brigades.

Rosario Pikabea Ugalde: alias Mobutu. One of three people with suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) links arrested on May 31, 1992, by Bayonne, France, police. They were taking over the posts left vacant by the arrests of senior ETA leaders.

Pelo Pintxo: alias of Sabino Euba Cenarruzabeitia.

Franco Piperno: ultra-leftist professor arrested in Paris on August 18, 1979, and charged with murder in the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome. The investigating judge cleared him on January 15, 1981.

Rudolph Piroh: one of four self-proclaimed “professional revolutionaries” arrested by Parma police on February 20, 1979, carrying a time bomb and other weapons in their car. Piroh had a false Argentine passport for Frederick von Haltazan, born in Newmarket and resident of Buenos Aires.

Claudio Libero Pisano: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987. He is the brother of at-large Red Brigades member Guiseppina Pisano.

Guiseppina Pisano: as of late 1987, an at-large member of the Red Brigades and sister of Claudio Libero Pisano, arrested on December 5, 1987.

Mario Pisano: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. He was arrested in Imperia and taken to Rome. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri’s murder.

Pitxas: alias of Jose Domingo Aizpurura Aizpuru.

Alfio Pizzarelli: variant Ario Pizzarelli.

Ario Pizzarelli: variant Alfio. Described as a hard-core member of the Red Brigades’ Walter Alasia Column, Pizzarelli was arrested on November 21, 1993, in Brescia, Italy, in connection with the Red Brigades bombing of the U.S. NATO Air Force base in Aviano on September 2, 1993. He was the propagandist for the operation.

Juliane Plambeck: escaped from West Berlin's prison on July 7, 1976. She had been arrested in September 1975 and held for the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. She was also suspected of participating in the kidnapping and murder of West Berlin's chief judge, Gunther von Drenkmann, in November 1974. She was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On December 20, 1977, the Swiss incorrectly announced that they had arrested her on the French border; they had really arrested Gabriele Kroecher-Tiedemann. Plambeck and Wolfgang Beer died in a car crash near Stuttgart on July 25, 1980.

Mirosław Plewinski: member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. Switzerland denied extradition. On October 10, 1983, he received two and one-half years in prison and five years' banishment from Switzerland.

Michael Plunkett: Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) member arrested on August 28, 1982, by Paris police. The Irish-born man was one of three INLA members making a bomb for use against the U.K. military attaché in The Hague. Documents at the scene tied the trio to terrorist activity in West Germany and Switzerland.

Eleonore Maris Poensgen: widow of one of the Red Morning terrorists who killed Juergen Ponto, head of the Dresden Bank, the second largest bank in Germany, during an attempted kidnapping during the night of July 30, 1977. She was arrested on August 1, 1977, in Frankfurt. Her lawyers presented 15 witnesses at a press conference who backed her alibi that she was on her way to a party at the time of the attack.

Helmut Pohl: one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. He was among the most-wanted terrorists in West Germany. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. On June 25, 1985, he was charged at the Fifth Criminal Division of the Duesseldorf Provincial High Court with belonging to a terrorist organization, falsifying documents, and violating the firearms law. He was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977. He was sentenced to life in prison on 17 counts of attempted joint murder. He organized a prison hunger strike by 38 RAF terrorists that began on February 1, 1989. The prisoners took two-week shifts in the strike; he was due to join the strike again on April 12, 1989. He was pardoned on May 18, 1998, a month after RAF members announced that they had given up their leftist campaign.

Rolf Pohl: lawyer sentenced to six years for belonging to the Baader-Meinhof Gang. He was convicted in 1974 in West Germany of conspiracy, forgery, and fraud. He was freed during the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. He and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, and Amman. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum. On May 27, 1976, he arrived in Athens on a false Peruvian passport. After his arrival from Corfu, he was identified from photographs brought to Athens by West German policemen after his arrest on July 2, 1976. A lower court ruled that he was not covered by the 1907 Greek–German extradition agreements because his acts were those of a genuine revolutionary, not a criminal. The Greek Supreme Court overturned the decision. He was flown to Munich on October 1, 1976, to complete his sentence of six and one-half years. On October 21, 1977, police discovered that a room to which Andreas Baader, Jan-Carl Raspe, Gudrun Ensslin, and Irmgard Moeller had access had nine ounces of explosives hidden under a floor molding; the cell had been occupied by Pohl.

Giuseppe Pollini: suspected Italian Red Brigades member arrested by Barcelona police on April 25, 1987, at one of two apartments in the Gran Via de las Corts Catalanas on Planeta Street.

Georg Polyak: one of seven anticommunist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany.

Viktor Popelka: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Ostrava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, believed to be involved in the plot.

Luciano Porcari: self-professed communist Italian auto mechanic who hijacked an Iberia Airlines B727 flying from Barcelona to Palma de Mallorca on March 14, 1977.

Jaroslav Porer: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, which was diverted to Nuremberg.

Patrick Poronneau: one of four French citizens who on October 17, 1991, were convicted by a Bayonne court of belonging to the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group (GAL), which had killed 27 alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members between 1983 and 1987. The four were charged with criminal conspiracy and possession of weapons and explosives after police uncovered a GAL weapons cache near the Spanish border in 1987. He was sentenced to three years in jail.

Pottoka: alias of Pedro Astorquiza-Icazuriaga.

Alain Peter Potter: alias of Georges Cipriani.

William Power: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Andreas Ppouris: arrested in November 1977 for sending an EOKA-B letter to the British High Commission in Cyprus in April 1977 threatening that diplomats and servicemen would be kidnapped and killed if Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot in the United Kingdom whose extradition was sought by Cyprus, was surrendered.

Erik Prauss: on December 18, 1987, arrested by Duesseldorf police on suspicion of membership in the Red Army Faction and on participating in the bombing of the Dornier works in Immenstaad/Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, causing 1.3 million marks in damage. On January 18, 1989, the fifth criminal division of the Stuttgart higher regional court sentenced him to nine years.

Andre Prebet: accomplice of Gerard Dupre in his escape from prison on February 27, 1981, when a hijacked helicopter landed in the middle of the soccer field of the high-security Fleury Mergois prison. On March 6, 1981, Dupre and Prebet were wounded in a gunfight with police on a crowded street and then captured.

Marina Premoli: freed on January 3, 1982, from Rovigo women's prison when the Red Brigades blasted open a five-foot hole in a wall.

Rudolf Preskalo: one of three Croatian males who hijacked SAS 130, a DC9 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm on September 15, 1972.

William Libero Prevato: Italian charged with Organized Communist Movement terrorist activities. On August 24, 1985, the Nicaraguan Supreme Court rejected Italy's extradition request.

Dolours Price: jailed in the United Kingdom for a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) car bomb attack in London in March 1973. Observers believed that the kidnapping in December 28, 1973, in Northern Ireland of Thomas Niedermayer, Honorary West German Consul and manager of the Grundig Electronic Company in Belfast, was to obtain Price's release. Niedermayer was killed, and his body was discovered on March 11, 1980. Price's release was demanded by the IRA group who stole 19 paintings valued at $19.2 million from the home of Sir Alfred Beit on April 26, 1974.

Marion Price: jailed in the United Kingdom for a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) car bomb attack in London in March 1973. Observers believed that the kidnapping in December 28, 1973, in Northern Ireland of Thomas Niedermayer, Honorary West German Consul and manager of the Grundig Electronic Company in Belfast, was to obtain Price's release. Niedermayer was killed, and his body was discovered on March 11, 1980. Price's release was demanded by the IRA group who stole 19 paintings valued at $19.2 million from the home of Sir Alfred Beit on April 26, 1974.

Arnulf Winfried Priem: Berlin-based leader of the underground National Socialist German Workers Party/Foreign Organization (NSDAP/AO), an affiliate of the Austrian Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People (VAPO), identified on December 12, 1993, by the German media as a mastermind of a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993.

Astrid Proll: Baader-Meinhof Gang member sentenced on February 22, 1980, to five and one-half years in prison for bank robbery. The charge of establishing a terrorist organization was dropped. She was acquitted of attempting to murder two policemen during a gun battle in Frankfurt in 1971. She was fined $2,600 for falsifying documents. She had escaped to the United Kingdom in 1974 during her original trial after being permitted to attend a medical clinic. She married a London plumber and worked as a garage mechanic until her arrest in September 1978. She claimed U.K. citizenship and fought extradition but agreed to return to West Germany in June 1979, when the interior minister said that repentant terrorists would be given light sentences.

Salvador Puig Antich: Catalan anarchist, age 26, convicted of murdering a policeman in Spain and sentenced to death. He was a member of the Iberian Liberation Movement. On January 11, 1974, a bomb damaged the door of a Turin building housing the Spanish Consulate and chamber of commerce; observers believed the bombing was in retaliation for the death sentence. He was garroted in the Barcelona city jail on March 2, 1974.

On May 3, 1975, the Puig Antich-Ulrike Meinhof Commando, believed to be composed of German and Spanish anarchists, set off two bombs at the construction site of a French nuclear power station in Fessenheim. On May 22, 1975, the same group bombed the West German Consulate in Nice and a Paris building containing the Swedish tourism office and several other Swedish facilities.

Maria and Zbigniew Purgall: hijacked Bulgarian Tupolev Flight 134 carrying 76 people bound for Poland on October 14, 1982, and diverted it to Vienna's Schwechat International Airport.

Q

---

Samir Qadar: on March 2, 1989, Hamburg's Bild claimed that the Libyan had been the mastermind of the December 21, 1988, Lockerbie bombing of Pan American Flight 103 that killed 270 people. The paper claimed that he had killed Egyptian journalist Yusuf Sebai in Cyprus on February 12, 1978, and had been released from prison in 1982 after Abu Nidal threats. It claimed he had organized the attacks on the U.S. Embassy and a synagogue in Rome in 1983 that killed 37; the attack on Leonardo da Vinci Airport in Rome on Christmas 1985; the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan Am plane in Karachi; and the June 11, 1988, City of Poros shipjacking. In 1986, he married a Finnish woman and moved to Stockholm.

Samir Muhammad Ahmad al-Qadir: variant Samir Muhammad Ahmad Khudayr; aliases 'Ajjab Jabalah, Michel Nabih Raphael, Zahir al-Rabi'. On February 21, 1994, a Swedish court issued a warrant for his arrest; he was suspected of being the mastermind in the shipjacking of the Achille Lauro in the Mediterranean on October 7, 1985, in which U.S. citizen Leon Klinghoffer was murdered. Al-Qadir settled in Sweden in 1986 under another name. He was an operations officer of the Abu Nidal group. On February 27, 1992, French judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant for him in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged him with murder and attempted murder. The Palestinian carried a Libyan passport. He was identified by Doha's al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a former member of the Abu Nidal Group and a prominent member of its intelligence group. He was purged after he was suspected of contacting an Arab country's intelligence agency. Some reports indicate that he was killed in Athens by a car bomb in 1988.

Abu Qatada: alias of Omar Uthman Abu Omar.

Ali Qhorbanifar: Iranian expelled by the British Home Office to France on May 17, 1984, for "preparing acts of terrorism."

Muhammad Yasin Qu'adduh: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

'Ali Ghassan Mahmud Qubaysi: Lebanese who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Nessan Quinlivan: escaped from Brixton jail in the summer of 1989. He was accused of plotting with two other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members to murder Sir Charles Tidbury, former chairman of Whitbread, and other persons and to cause explosions. He was arrested at Stonehenge on October 2, 1990, after going to Tidbury's home on September 15, 1990. Activity at the home deterred them from continuing.

Patrick Quinn: on August 1, 1981, his family ended his 47-day hunger strike. The Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member was serving 14 years for an attempted attack on U.K. soldiers in Ulster. His family was the first to obtain medical attention for a hunger striker.

Samuel Quinn: one of three British Northern Irish members of the Ulster Defense Association arrested on April 21, 1989, by French Directorate for Territorial Oversight (DST) counterintelligence police in the Paris Hilton hotel while they were planning to swap a stolen British Blowpipe surface-to-air missile for weapons from South African state arms manufacturer Armscor. On November 24, 1989, Paris investigating magistrate Jean Louis Bruguiere granted him an unannounced amount of bail.

William J. Quinn: U.S. national suspected of being a member of the Irish Republican Army Balcome Street Four, which was involved in 58 bombings, shootings, and kidnappings in 1974 and 1975. He was arrested on September 30, 1981, in front of a San Francisco stationery store where he had worked since his return from Ireland in 1977. On October 20, 1986, he was extradited to the United Kingdom on charges of killing Stephen Tibble, a London constable, in 1975. On February 16, 1988, he was sentenced by Judge Christopher Rose in London to life in prison. Quinn had refused to say anything during the trial.

Izaskun Quintas Etxeverria: one of five suspected members of the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) armed illegal commando Aizkora arrested on October 23, 1987, by Spanish police.

Martin Peter Quigley: Irish citizen living since April 1989 in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters arrested on July 12, 1989, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government. The group was alleged to be developing devices to set remote-controlled bombs to attack British helicopters in Northern Ireland. On August 10, 1989, the trio was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply surface-to-air missiles to the IRA. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. On August 22, 1989, he pleaded not guilty. He was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges. On August 20, 1990, a federal judge sentenced the native of Dundalk, Ireland, to eight years in prison. On December 24, 1991, the First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld his conviction on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal Arms Export Control Act, holding that the First Amendment does not protect someone who possesses documents or other materials if they are intended for use in a crime.

Sohail Anjum Qureshi: originally of Pakistan and arrested, at age 30, at Heathrow Airport in October 2006 as he was about to board a plane for Islamabad. He was carrying what he said were "gifts" for the mujaheddin he was going to meet in Pakistan. The gifts were a night-vision optical device, backpacks, police-style ASP batons, sleeping bags, and camping gear. He was also carrying a computer hard drive with several "combat manuals" in his files; 9,000 pounds (worth $16,800); and an eight-page al-wida (farewell message) in which he said, "If I am to become a Shaheed [martyr] then cry not and celebrate that day as if you celebrate a happy occasion." He had told an Internet contact that he had trained at an al Qaeda camp in Pakistan in 1996 and led another in 1998. He had contacted Samina Malik, the “lyrical terrorist,” who worked in a Heathrow Airport store, and told him about airport security measures. He was sentenced to nine months in prison in November 2007 for possession of articles useful for terrorist purposes. He claimed he was a terrorism financier and fund-raiser, observing that “bullets cost money.” He said that he wanted to “kill many” in an overseas operation. On January 8, 2008, a British court sentenced him to four and one-half years in prison.

R

---

Mohammed Ahmed Rabbah: name given by a caller to Ophir Zadok, an Israeli security officer at the Israeli Embassy in Brussels, on September 11, 1972, when Zadok was lured to Prince's Café in De Brouckere Square. The caller claimed to have information about a terrorist plot against the embassy. Two Fedayeen terrorists fired at him, critically wounding him. Some accounts credited Fatah or Black September; others said Zadok was an undercover Mossad officer, and the caller was one of his Palestinian contacts.

Mohammad Nasir Rabbini: one of four Iranian members of the Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution arrested on July 23, 1984, while carrying two antitank grenade launchers, six 40-mm grenade launchers, and two .45 caliber machine guns in Barcelona and Madrid. They were charged with plotting to hijack a Saudi airliner. Authorities believed their Barcelona safe house was used in the coordination and perpetration of terrorist acts in Spain and elsewhere in Europe, including attacks against a Saudi plane and the U.S. Embassy in 1983. The terrorists planned to shoot down another Saudi plane and to assassinate Masud Rajavi, leader of the Mojahedine-e Khalq, in Paris.

Osman Rabeih: sentenced to life in prison in France in 1968 for attempting to assassinate French Territory of Afars and Issas (FTAI, now Djibouti) political leader Ali Aref. His release was demanded by the Somali Coast Liberation Front kidnappers of French ambassador Jean Gueury in March 23, 1975, in Somalia. France agreed to the group's demands.

Abdelghani Rabia: Algerian acquitted on December 18, 2002, by a Rotterdam court on charges of planning attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Paris. He was turned over to immigration authorities for being in the country illegally.

Rados: associate of Stanko Nizic, leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia and who was to death on August 26, 1981. Rados vanished.

Captain Rafat: alias of Ali Shafik Ahmed Taha.

Mohamed Rafik: Moroccan imam who preached at a mosque in Cremona, outside Milan. On July 13, 2005, a judge in Brescia, Italy, sentenced him to four years and eight months for membership in a cell that had planned attacks, including one against Milan's subway system.

Yahya Ragheh: trained by al Qaeda member Rabei Osman el-Sayed Ahmed to become a suicide bomber. Ragheh, age 26, received five years on November 6, 2006, from a court in Milan.

Mohammed Jahir Abbas Rahal: alias Muhammad Ghali. Lebanese arrested with a pistol that was used in the shooting of Libyan Embassy official Mohammed Idris, who was driving to the embassy in Madrid on September 12, 1984. Rahal had grown up in West Beirut and was a member of the Imam Musa as-Sadr Brigade. Rahal confessed that he had shot Idris on orders of the group's leader. On October 10, 1984, the kidnappers of Spanish ambassador Pedro Manuel de Aristegui demanded his release. On June 18, 1985, the hijackers of TWA 847 also demanded his release. He and an accomplice were scheduled to stand trial on June 19, 1985, in Madrid, and the Spanish government refused to release them. On June 25, 1985, the duo was sentenced to 23 years in prison for attempted murder. There were rumors that they would be sent to Lebanon to serve out their sentences. On January 17, 1986, Rahal's relatives abducted a Spanish diplomat and two Lebanese Spanish Embassy consular staffers and demanded Rahal's release. The Black Flag also demanded his release. He was pardoned by the Spanish government on July 14, 1986, and returned to Beirut.

Abdel Rahim: alias of Richard Colvin Reid.

Saleh Abder Rahman: Jordanian and one of three Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who attempted to hijack an El Al B707 in Munich on February 10, 1970.

Soufiane Raïfa: on April 15, 2005, National Court Judge Juan del Olmo filed provisional terrorism charges against the Moroccan suspected of helping to obtain the explosives used in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004.

Lotfi Raissi: on September 21, 2001, London police arrested the Algerian pilot, age 27, believed to be the flight instructor for the four 9/11 pilot-hijackers. He was held without bond. On October 10, 2001, he was indicted in Arizona for providing false information on a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) form to obtain a commercial pilot's license. The United States was seeking extradition. Raissi was believed to have links to a suspected Algerian wing of al Qaeda.

On November 27, a federal grand jury in Phoenix added conspiracy charges against him. The indictment said he had conspired with his Phoenix apartment mate, Redouane Dahmani, an Algerian, to falsify an asylum claim that would permit Dahmani to stay in the United States. Dahmani was in custody in Phoenix on charges of forgery and perjury, held in lieu of a $1 million bond, and was suspected of having contacts with a senior Algerian terrorist in London. He had listed his address as a Phoenix apartment on N. 23rd Avenue, the address Raissi had given in June when he was stopped for speeding in Yarnell, Arizona. Dahmani's phone number was found on a paper in the London home of Abu Doha, age 36, alias The Doctor, alias Amar Makhulif, believed to be a senior Algerian terrorist in London with links to European al Qaeda terrorist cells. He was arrested at Heathrow Airport on charges of orchestrating a foiled plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999. London prosecutors said that they had seized a video of Raissi in an aircraft with 9/11 hijack pilot Hani Hanjour. Raissi trained on 30 aircraft at 4 flight schools. He was represented by Hugo Keith and Richard Egan. Magistrate Timothy Workman denied a bail hearing for the second time on December 14. The next court date was set for January 11, 2002. Investigators backed off from initial claims that he was in contact with three of the hijackers.

Raissi bought a fake ID in the name of Fabrice Vincent Algiers to get a job as a short-order cook. In 1993, he was arrested for stealing a briefcase at Heathrow Airport; he pleaded guilty, was not jailed, and then returned to Algeria. In 1996, Italian police arrested him in Rome when he was carrying faked French ID papers; he was expelled with his French girlfriend. In 1998, he trained on the same flight simulator with Hani Hanjour five times. In January 1999, he received a U.S. commercial pilot's license for flying B737s. On November 18, 2000, he married Sonia Dermolis, a French Catholic and aspiring dancer. He was ticketed for speeding from Las Vegas to Phoenix on June 18, 2001. On June 23, 2001, he and Hanjour enrolled at Sawyer Aviation on the same day. Raissi trained at the simulator for seven days; Hanjour continued his training through July 29. On September 21, Raissi, his wife, and his brother Mohammed were arrested.

On February 12, 2002, ignoring U.S. protests, Judge Timothy Workman at Belmarsh Magistrate's Court in London released him on $15,000 bail. Police kept his passport. On April 24, 2002, Judge Workman dismissed the extradition case and freed him. On September 16, 2003, Raissi sued the FBI and the U.S. Department of Justice for $10 million.

On March 1, 2002, Italian police who arrested six al Qaeda sympathizers found a letter with his address.

On February 14, 2008, a British appeals court said that he had been "completely exonerated" and could seek compensation from the U.K. government for wrongful arrest and detention.

'Arif Ahmad Raja: one of two Lebanese hijackers of a Romanian B707 chartered by the Libyan Arab Airways to fly from Athens to Tripoli on June 23, 1983.

Tariq Raja: possibly the true name of Richard Colvin Reid, the would-be shoe bomber.

Anton Rajah: London-based spokesperson for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in May 1991 who said that his group was not responsible for the murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India's former prime minister, on May 22, 1991.

Maryam Rajavi: wife of Iraq-based leader Massoud Rajavi. She was arrested on June 17, 2003, on suspicion of plotting Mujaheddin-e Khalq terrorist attacks in France and building a support base for operations abroad. Police seized $1.3 million in U.S. currency, mostly in $100 bills, plus computers and satellite telecommunications equipment from the walled compound in Auvers-Sur-Ooisse. The head of French intelligence said that the group was planning to attack Iranian diplomatic missions in Europe and elsewhere. An individual in London set himself on fire outside the French Embassy in protest of the arrest. German police arrested 50 demonstrators after they broke into the Iranian Consulate in Hamburg. On June 18, three Iranians set themselves on fire to protest the arrests. As of June 20, nine people had self-immolated; one had died. On July 2, a Paris court ordered the release of Maryam Rajavi.

Massoud Rajavi: Paris-exiled leader of the Iranian Mujaheddin-e Khalq Iran in the 1980s who left for Iraq on June 7, 1986.

Saleh Rajavi: brother of Massoud Rajavi and among 159 people arrested on June 17, 2003, on suspicion of plotting Mujaheddin-e Khalq terrorist attacks in France and building a support base for operations abroad. Police seized $1.3 million in U.S. currency, mostly in $100 bills, plus computers and satellite telecommunications equipment from the walled compound in Auvers-Sur-Ooisse. The head of French intelligence said that the group was planning to attack Iranian diplomatic missions in Europe and elsewhere.

Husham Mohammed Rajih: arrested on August 29, 1981, by Austrian police after he attacked a synagogue, killing 2 and injuring 20. The Iraqi confessed to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal's Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination. Rajih had lived in Austria since December 1978 and was a student at Vienna's technical university. He was sentenced by a Vienna, Austria, court to life in prison on January 21, 1982, for the Nittel murder.

Ghulam Rama: Pakistani, age 67, sentenced on June 16, 2005, by Presiding Judge Jacqueline Rebeyrotte to five years in prison and expulsion from France after serving his term for conspiracy to assist Richard C. Reid in attempting to shoe-bomb an American airliner over the Atlantic on December 22, 2001. Rama had spent three years in prison awaiting trial. French intelligence indicated that Rama had organized terrorist attacks during trips to the United Kingdom, New York, Pakistan, and Saudi Arabia between 2001 and 2002. Reid had used an Internet café in Paris to contact Pakistan; the trail led to Rama, president of Straight Path, a Muslim charity. Rama told police he had seen two other defendants with Reid.

Mustapha Darwich Ramadan: alias Abu Mohammed Lubnani. One of several thieves who in 1997 stole more than $300,000 from an armored car in Copenhagen. He had been under surveillance as an Islamic extremist. Ramadan, age 40, was arrested shortly before he planned to take a flight to Amman, Jordan. He was convicted of robbery and served three and one-half years in prison. After his June 2001 release, he robbed a money-transfer store of $15,000 and then escaped to either Jordan or Lebanon. He became a leader of the Ansar al-Islam in Iraq. He was believed to be operating a network that recruits young Muslims in Europe to join the Iraqi insurgency.

Moreno Ramajo: one of two suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on June 14, 1993, in Vilvoorde-Koningslo, Belgium, on suspicion of involvement in five murders and the kidnapping of a Spanish industrialist. A Spanish arrest warrant with a view to extradition was issued. He was born at Sopelana in February 1961. He and Raquel Garcia Arranz, also arrested, had lived under their true names for less than a year in a house on the Streekbaan. They were believed part of the logistical support cell of the Comandos Biscaya, part of ETA-Military. Two ETA members arrested in January 1992—Kepa Urrea and Juan Ramon Rojo—had benefited from their logistical support.

Rachid Ramda: alias Abou Fares. Algerian Islamic Group member arrested in London on November 4, 1995, and charged in connection with the series of bombings in Paris in the fall of 1995 that killed 10 and injured 180, including the bombing at the St. Michel Metro Station in Paris on July 25, 1995, in which 8 were killed and 30 were injured. He was held pending a French extradition request, which was issued on November 8.

He was to appear in court again on November 16. On June 27, 2002, the U.K. High Court ruled against extradition, overturning the government's 2001 extradition decision. On March 29, 2006, a French court sentenced him to 10 years in jail for assisting terrorists who had bombed Paris Metro rail stations in 1995.

Dolores Ramos Ruiz: female member of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who on December 5, 1992, was arrested in a shootout with Spanish police in a supermarket parking lot. She and other GRAPO members had raided an armored van servicing the supermarket, taking 80 million pesetas.

Jose Carlos Ramos Mateos: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra-right-wing group, formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Rashid Randa: Arab Afghan who led the nine bombings during July–October 1995 by the Algerian Armed Islamic Group (GIA) in France, which killed 9 and wounded 160. He had known Osama bin Laden since the 1980s.

Raphael: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Mohammed Rasheed: Conversion name of Nicky Reilly.

Hasan Rashid: Lebanese associate of a Palestinian with a Jordanian passport arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel on December 17, 1985, who was trying to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane scheduled to depart for Amman. Police believed the Palestinian was one of four Arabs who intended to hijack the plane.

Hussein Muhammed al Rashid: one of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorists who threw grenades and fired submachine guns at a crowd waiting to board El Al 582, a B707 bound for Tel Aviv from Istanbul, on August 11, 1976. They killed 4 and wounded 26 before surrendering. They claimed Libya had financed the operation. On November 16, 1976, a Turkish court sentenced them to death but commuted the sentences to life in prison. Rashid's release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977.

Mohammed Hussein Rashid: alias Youssef Awad. Arrested after confessing to the April 10, 1983, assassination of 'Isam as-Sartawi, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) representative at the Socialist International Conference held in Albufeira, Portugal. Abu Nidal claimed credit, as did the Antiterrorist Iberian Command. The Abu Nidal group threatened Portuguese interests and citizens worldwide if Rashid was not released. On January 11, 1984, he was acquitted of the murder charge and sentenced to three years for using a forged passport. During the trial, he had claimed that his confession was meant to draw attention away from the true killers. In June 1984, the Supreme Court overturned the lower court's acquittal. On May 10, 1985, a second trial acquitted him of murder and sentenced him to three years for using a false passport.

Jean Rasp: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Jan-Carl Raspe: one of the principal members of the Baader-Meinhof group, also known as the Red Army Faction (RAF) in West Germany. He was captured on June 1, 1972, after a gunfight with Frankfurt police. His release was demanded by the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975.

He was one of three RAF members sentenced to life in prison on April 28, 1977, by a five-man tribunal in Stuttgart for the murders of four U.S. soldiers in bombings of U.S. installations in Frankfurt and Heidelberg in May 1972. Raspe was in poor physical condition as a result of a hunger strike. The three were also convicted of 34 counts of attempted murder and of joining in a criminal conspiracy and were sentenced to life plus 15 years. The counts included bomb attacks on two police stations, a publishing house, and a judge's car and the attempted murder of policemen during a shootout when they were arrested. Their attorney, Otto Schilly, argued that their actions had been legitimate protests against the Vietnam War and that they should be treated as prisoners of war. Raspe's release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, and by the RAF kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. Raspe's release was also demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. Raspe committed suicide in Stammheim prison in Stuttgart on October 18, 1977, hours after the Lufthansa rescue in Somalia by the West German GSG9 team. Raspe died from a bullet wound shortly after being found in his cell.

Shafiq Rasul: one of five U.K. citizens who had been held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban who were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was one of four who were then immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was released after questioning the next day.

Rashid Rauf: dual U.K.-Pakistani citizen detained on August 9, 2006, by Pakistan in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. He is the brother of Tayib Rauf.

On August 28, 2006, the United Kingdom requested the extradition of Rashid Rauf in connection with the investigation of the murder of his uncle, Mohammed Saeed, stabbed near his Birmingham home in April 2002. The Rauf family is connected to the Crescent Relief, an Islamic charity under British investigation. Rashid's sister-in-law is married to the brother of Maulana Masood Azhar, head of Jaish-e-Muhammad, one of India's most important Islamic militant and Kashmiri separatist groups. The father of Rauf's wife and her sister run Darul Uloom Madina, one of Pakistan's biggest and most hard-line madrassas, with 2,000 students in Bahawalpur, Azhar's home town. Pakistan said that Rauf had traveled to Afghanistan several times to meet with an al Qaeda operative.

On December 13, 2006, a Pakistani judge threw out terrorism charges against Rauf, whose attorney, Hashmat Habib, said he had been freed because there was no evidence against his client. Rauf faced other charges, including forging documents and possessing explosives. A civil District and Sessions Court hearing was scheduled for December 20. Tayib Rauf, his younger brother, was freed by the United Kingdom without charge. On December 22, Rashid Rauf denied before a Pakistani court that he was involved in the plot. On November 19, 2007, British authorities said that Rauf would not face charges for the plot but could be extradited on the 2002 murder charge in West Midlands. A week earlier, a Pakistani court had ordered his release after the prosecution withdrew its case. His attorney claimed that the extradition was illegal because there was no bilateral treaty.

On December 14, 2007, Rashid Rauf escaped from Pakistani police custody after appearing before an Islamabad judge. He opened his handcuffs and escaped from two guards who were taking him back to a Rawalpindi jail. The two police officers had permitted him a stop to pray at a mosque; he slipped out the back door while they waited outside in a car. An antiterrorism court had dropped charges, citing lack of evidence, and remanded the lesser charges of explosives possession to a civil court. On appeal by the prosecution, a Lahore high court suspended the civil trial. Pakistan had been considering a British extradition request.

Tayib Rauf: from Birmingham, United Kingdom, age 22, brother of Rashid Rauf. He was arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. Tayib was later released.

Guenther Maria Rausch: suspected member of the Red Army Faction who gave himself up to a West German Embassy in a neighboring country on October 18, 1983.

Fabio Ravalli: on April 21, 1988, Italian magistrates issued a warrant for him on charges of complicity to commit murder and belonging to an illegal armed organization in connection with the April 16, 1988, Fighting Communist Union Party assassination of university professor and Christian Democratic Senator Roberto Ruffilli in Forlì. Ravalli had spent a decade in jail on common criminal charges and was released in 1981. Rome police arrested 21 members of the Fighting Communist Party, including Ravalli and his wife, Maria Cappello, on September 7, 1988.

Nawwaf al-Rawsan: aliases 'Uthman, 'Uthman al-Rawsh. Imprisoned in the United Kingdom for attempting to assassinate Israeli Ambassador Argov on June 3, 1982, after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. After he announced his resignation from the Fatah-Revolutionary Council (Abu Nidal Group), his sentence was suspended. His brother, Mahir al-Rawan, alias Walid, was identified by Doha's al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a member of the Abu Nidal Group's Central Committee.

Abd al'Latif Abd al'Razaq: France believed he was a 43-year-old Iraqi friend of Wadi Haddad and was one of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and diverted to Entebbe, Uganda, on June 27, 1976.

Tomislav Rebrina: leader of three Croatian males who hijacked Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130 flying from Goteborg to Stockholm on September 15, 1972.

Seyam Reda: German of Afghan ancestry who worked for a German television network and who some news sources said had been rejected as a cameraman for al-Jazeera. He was arrested on September 17, 2002, by Indonesian authorities and held on suspicion of involvement in terrorism and misusing his tourist visa by working as a journalist. Police thought he could be Abu Daud, wanted in Singapore and Malaysia for links to international terrorism. Police believed he was involved with Omar al-Farouq, an al Qaeda operative from Kuwait arrested in June. Al-Farouq claimed he was to be the triggerman for a failed 1999 assassination attempt against president Megawati Sukarnoputri; Al-Farouq's wife served as translator for the plot. Al-Farouq said he was part of a second assassination plot in 2002; the bomb had exploded prematurely at a mall, blowing off the assassin's leg.

The burly Reda speaks Arabic and German but little Indonesian. He was arrested in a $4,000/month South Jakarta home with a swimming pool and internal camera system. In a search of the home, police found videos of al-Farouq giving weapons and military instruction to Islamic militants in Indonesia. German police arrived the next week to assist in the investigation. Some observers believe he was the financier of the October 12, 2002, bombings of two Bali nightclubs that killed 202 people.

Inaki Rego: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member and son of Juan Jose Rego Vidal. He was arrested on August 9, 1995, in an apartment where explosives, pistols, machine guns, and forged papers were seized along with papers detailing movements of figures close to the royal household. He was believed to be planning the assassination of King Juan Carlos. A confiscated rifle with a telescopic sight could hit targets at 1,000 meters.

Juan Jose Rego Vidal: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member put under surveillance when discovered in France in December 1994. On July 14, 1995, he was located in Nice, from which he sailed to Alcudia, Mallorca. He was arrested on August 9, 1995, when leaving a restaurant. He was believed to be planning the assassination of King Juan Carlos. His son was arrested in the same case.

Hafid Regraji: Algerian expelled by the British Home Office to Algeria on May 17, 1984, for "preparing acts of terrorism."

Jaromir Rehak: he joined his father, Vladimir Rehak, and brother, Vladimir Jr., in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverted to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Vladimir Rehak: father who joined his two sons in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverted to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Vladimir Rehak Jr.: he joined his father, Vladimir Rehak, and brother, Jaromir, in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverted to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Matiur Rehman: Pakistani who is not an al Qaeda member, but believed to have a link to Osama bin Laden. Police were investigating his links to those arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day.

Omar Abdul Rehman: Rehman, age 20, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Christina Leigh Reid: resident of Sunnyvale, California, and one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters arrested on July 12, 1989, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government. The group was alleged to be developing devices to set remote-controlled bombs to attack British helicopters in Northern Ireland. On August 10, 1989, the trio was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply surface-to-air missiles to the IRA. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. On August 22, 1989, Reid pleaded not guilty. She was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges. On August 20, 1990, a federal judge sentenced the courier for the plotters to three years and five months. On December 24, 1991, the First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld his conviction on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal Arms Export Control Act, holding that the First Amendment does not protect someone who possesses documents or other materials if they are intended for use in a crime.

Mary Reid: Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) member arrested on August 28, 1982, by Paris police. The Irish-born man was one of three INLA members making a bomb for use against the U.K. military attaché in The Hague. Documents at the scene tied the trio to terrorist activity in West Germany and Switzerland.

Richard Colvin Reid: drifter, age 28, who boarded American Airlines Flight 63 in Paris on December 22, 2001, and attempted to set off explosives hidden in his shoes with a match. The 6'4" 220-pound Middle Eastern-looking man was carrying a British passport issued on December 7 in Belgium, but some authorities said it was "questionable." Reid had torn several pages out of his old passport. He boarded without any luggage or additional ID, traveled alone, and had a one-way ticket—all tip-offs that should trigger suspicions. He lit a match, and when confronted by a flight attendant, he put it in his mouth. After she alerted the pilot by intercom and returned, he tried to set alight the inner tongue of his sneaker, which had been drilled out and had protruding wires. She tried to stop him, but Reid threw her against the bulkhead. Reid bit a second flight attendant on the thumb. The crew and several passengers, including Kwame James, a 6'8" pro basketball player, overpowered him; several passengers suffered minor injuries. Two French doctors on board used the plane's medical kit to sedate him three times; other passengers tied him to his window seat in row 29.

The pilot diverted the flight to Boston's Logan International Airport, escorted by two U.S. Air Force F15 fighter jets. The crew questioned Reid, who claimed that his father was Jamaican and his mother British and that he was traveling to the Caribbean to visit family members. Some media outlets reported that he was a Muslim convert. The passengers gave the pilot two audiotapes Reid was carrying. The FBI took the man into custody for “interference with a flight crew,” a felony. Reid was jailed and placed on suicide watch at the Plymouth County Correctional Facility in Plymouth, Massachusetts. He faced charges that could lead to a sentence of 20 years and a $250,000 fine. On December 24, he was formally charged in court in Boston with interference with flight crews by assault or intimidation. He requested a court-appointed attorney for his December 28 court appearance.

Tests on the shoes indicated a substance consistent with C-4. The ignition devices were later “disrupted,” and the shoes were detonated in an open field. The FBI said there were two “functional improvised explosive devices” inside the sneakers.

French police said that the suspect was born in Sri Lanka and named Tariq Raja, alias Abdel Rahim. Other reports said he may have had dual citizenship. U.S. officials said he might be mentally unstable. French media reported that he had tried to board the same flight on December 21 but had been stopped by police unsure of his passport.

On December 11, the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration had warned airlines to be on the alert for individuals smuggling weapons or bombs in their shoes. Following the incident, some airports began random inspections of passenger footwear.

Reid and al Qaeda suspect Zacarias Moussaoui attended the primarily black Brixton Mosque in London, although worshipers could not establish that the two attended together. Some al Qaeda detainees in Afghanistan said they recognized Reid from photos that appeared in the media.

The French La Provence newspaper quoted police and intelligence sources as indicating that Reid had been part of the Tabliq Islamic movement but had left because it was not “radical enough.” The Boston Globe cited FBI speculation that Reid had had an accomplice in putting together the explosive device. Reid had had previous run-ins with London police for mugging and robbery. Interpol said he had 13 theft charges, 1 case of offenses against people, and 2 cases of offenses against property. While in jail, he had converted to Islam and moved on to radicalism.

Reid spent the night before the incident in a $175 airport hotel room paid for by American Airlines because he had missed the previous day’s flight due to extensive questioning by French border police.

Investigators determined that Reid had traveled to Israel, Egypt, the Netherlands, and Belgium and that the shoes contained PETN (pentaerythritol tetranitrate), a C-4 type of explosive and key ingredient in Semtex; TATP (triacetone triperoxide); and nonmetal fuses, which may have made them more difficult to set off.

For a drifter, Reid somehow had enough money for international travel. His estranged father said Reid had traveled to Iran three or four years earlier. Reid was in Israel in June 2001 for a week, possibly testing El Al security. He was quizzed when he arrived at Tel Aviv’s Ben Gurion Airport, and El Al put him in a seat next to a sky marshal. He may have purchased the sneakers in Amsterdam. In Brussels, he picked up the British passport that he later was carrying, along with his old one, when he showed up at the Paris airport.

At an initial hearing on December 28, 2001, FBI witness Margaret Cronin said that the bomb could have blown a hole in the plane’s fuselage, leading to explosive decompression of the cabin. Because Reid was in a window seat, the blast also could have ignited the fuel tanks. U.S. Magistrate Judge Judith G. Dein ruled that there was probable cause for the arrest and ordered Reid held without bail. She ruled that he posed a serious flight risk and would pose a danger to the public if released. He faced charges punishable by up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Prosecutors, including Colin Owyang, could file additional charges and had three weeks to present evidence to a grand jury. Reid was represented by public defender Tamar Birkhead.

On January 16, 2002, he was indicted in Boston for attempting to blow up the plane. Five of the nine charges carried life sentences, including attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction and using a destructive device. He pleaded not guilty on January 18, 2002, in U.S. District Court to eight of the charges. Defense attorneys challenged the ninth charge of attempting to wreck a mass transportation vehicle. On June 11, 2002, U.S. District Judge William Young threw out one of the nine charges, saying that a plane is not a vehicle under the U.S. Patriot Act. On October 4, 2002, after initially asking that references to al Qaeda training be dropped in the indictment in return for a guilty plea, he pleaded guilty to all eight charges, including attempting to blow up the airliner. On January 30, 2003, he was sentenced to life in prison.

Nicky Reilly: changed his name to Mohammed Rasheed in 2007. He was arrested on May 22, 2008, for trying to set off a bomb at the Giraffe restaurant in Exeter, United Kingdom. He sustained cuts to his eye and face. He was believed to be a mentally unbalanced loner who had been manipulated by Islamist radicals. He had spent time in a mental hospital and had the mental age of a 10-year-old. He was believed to suffer from schizophrenia and Asperger's syndrome. He had made three bombs from caustic soda, paraffin, and nails in a tin box. Before the attempted bombing, he had received a text message of encouragement. At 250 pounds and over 6 feet tall, he was nicknamed the Big Friendly Giant. He was from Plymouth, England.

Ralf Reinders: suspected leader of the Movement 2 June of West Germany arrested in September 1975. His release was demanded by the Entebbe hijackers in June 1976 and by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On September 28, 1977, the West German federal prosecutor's office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and for kidnapping Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Abdelhalim Hafed Remadna: Algerian, age 35, arrested on November 15, 2001, by Milan police as he was boarding a train. He had false Italian residency papers and was trying to leave the country. He was held in the investigation into the 9/11 attacks.

Jose Rementeria Barruetabena: suspected Spanish Basque terrorist arrested in Biarritz, France, on March 11, 1986, on a driving offense. Spanish requested extradition but failed to supply the appropriate documents. France expelled him to Cape Verde on May 20, 1986.

Raphael Rendat: Baader-Meinhof Group member whose release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Inaki de Renteria: alias of Ignacio de Garcia Arregui.

Torsten Retta: arrested on March 11, 1985, for the bombing of the photo department of the Hertie department store in Dortmund, West Germany, on March 7, 1985. He confessed that he had planted the bomb "for the fun of a big bang." The Action Christian Klar claimed credit.

Perez Revila: Spanish member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) seriously injured in Biarritz when a bomb exploded on his motorcycle on June 15, 1984.

Didier Lucien Revillon: alias of Jean-Marc Rouillan.

Alberto Rey-Domecq: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) militant sentenced by a Paris court in October 2003 to six and one-half years for participating in a criminal association with terrorist aims.

Omar Mohammed Ali Rezaq: on November 1, 1988, the Palestinian pleaded guilty at the opening of his trial in Valletta, Malta, to the murder of an American woman and an Israeli man in the EgyptAir hijacking of November 24, 1985. He was sentenced to 25 years in 1986 but served only 7 years before being granted amnesty by the Malta government. Upon being freed, he flew to Ghana on February 25, 1993. From there, he boarded a flight to Lagos, Nigeria, on July 15, 1993. Nigeria barred him from entering the country and on July 16, 1993, turned him over to the United States. The Abu Nidal member was charged in the United States with air piracy. He appeared on July 16, 1993, in federal court in Washington, D.C. U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth entered a plea of not guilty on his behalf after his court-appointed lawyer, Santha Sonenberg, refused to enter a plea. He was held without bond pending an August 2, 1993, court hearing. He was scheduled to be tried for air piracy in the United States on April 9, 1996. Attorneys Robert Tucker and Teresa Alva offered an insanity defense. On July 19, 1996, a federal jury convicted Rezaq of air piracy. He was sentenced to life on October 7, 1996. Judge Lamberth recommended that he never win parole. Rezaq was ordered to pay $264,000 to the victims' relatives, who did not accept Rezaq's apology. On February 6, 1998, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upheld his air piracy conviction.

Samir Rhadir: Jordanian sentenced to death in Nicosia for the February 18, 1978, Black June assassination of Yusef el-Sebai. In April 1978, Cyprus's High Commission in London received a phone call warning that the building would be blown up if the killers were executed.

Abbas Rhayel: Lebanese asylum seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who on September 17, 1992, shot to death four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced him to life in prison.

Yvon Ricard: one of four members of SOS France, a right-wing terrorist organization, who were killed when their car blew up on August 18, 1986, while they were transporting four to five kilograms of explosives intended for a racist-oriented attack in Toulon.

Salvatore Ricciardi: Red Brigades member serving a life term. On February 14, 1987, he interrupted his trial for the Aldo Moro kidnapping to read a statement claiming credit for that day's $1.2 million holdup.

Carole Richardson: one of the Guildford Four imprisoned for two alleged Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) pub bombings on October 5, 1974, in which 5 people died and 71 were injured. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and fabricated evidence. They spent 14 years in prison. The four were to receive compensation.

Laurent Richomme: arrested with two Spanish members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military by French police on December 19, 1987, who were smuggling 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives down a secondary road near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in the French Basque country. Police believed the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Christian Richter: one of three German skinheads, age 16, who on June 11, 2000, kicked to death Alberto Adriano, age 39, a 20-year resident of Germany and Mozambican father of three. Adriano was walking through a deserted park after midnight when he was attacked by the drunken extremists. On August 30, Richter was sentenced to nine years.

Thomas Richter: on January 20, 1989, the 5th Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found him guilty of spying on a scientist in Aachen. He had been detained awaiting trial since 1987. He was sentenced to four years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that he was involved with the Red Army Faction.

Youssef Abdulkusser Rida: name on a forged passport carried by Mohammad Ali Hamadei at the time of his arrested in West Germany on January 13, 1987.

Christian Riha: variants Riher, Reher. One of four right-wing skinheads charged on December 30, 1993, with murder and arson for the May 29, 1993, arson of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, which killed 5 people and injured 10, including a 6-month-old infant. Riha, age 16, was a member of the German Combat Sports Initiative (DKI), a subgroup of the German Athletic Combat Art Association, backed by the since-banned Nationalistic Front. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf Presiding Judge Wolfgang Steffen to 10 years.

Christian Riher: variant of Christian Riha.

Roberto Rinani: on July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court cleared him from a life sentence for terrorism.

Ines del Rio: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested on July 6, 1987, by Saragossa, Spain, police who seized more than 30 kilograms of explosives from their hotel room. She was a member of the Madrid ETA commando unit. The duo was allegedly headed toward southern Spain, where they planned to bomb crowded beaches. They were traveling in a car carrying 34.7 kilograms of explosives, 1.98 kilograms of TNT, two bottles of oxygen, and firing pins. Police also found plans of Andalusia supermarkets.

Samir 'Abd al-Latif Muhammad Riqz: Lebanese who was one of 18 Arab terrorists reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain in August to attack Middle Eastern diplomatic missions and assassinate Saudi ambassador Muhammad Nuri Ibrahim. They had received weapons and casing reports on the ambassador from a Lebanese student resident in Spain whose initials were HMI.

Aline Ibrahim Riskalah: Lebanese Maronite Catholic woman arrested on October 20, 1988, after deplaning from a Middle East Airlines flight from Beirut at Milan's Linate Airport when police found that a false bottom of her suitcase hid large black-and-white photographs of U.S. hostages Terry Anderson, Thomas Sutherland, and Alann Steen. She also was carrying a handwritten letter to an Italian businessman signed by Steen, $1,000 in counterfeit U.S. bills, and 50 grams of heroin. A spokesperson for the Christian Lebanese Forces said she lived in Beirut's Christian suburb of 'Ayn al-Rummanah, had been divorced several times, and had unspecified "suspicious relations." Islamic Jihad denied any links with her. On November 3, 1988, someone claiming membership in the Islamic Jihad threatened to kidnap Italians in West Beirut if Italy did not release her.

Bruno Rivera: Italian charged in the People's Revolutionary Solidarity car bombing near the Saudi Embassy in Athens on April 13, 1983. He had rented the car.

'Umar Muhammad 'Ali al-Rizaq: sole surviving Egyptian Revolution hijacker of EgyptAir Flight 648 that had left Athens bound for Cairo on November 23, 1985.

James Anthony Roach: Ulster Catholic arrested by British police and accused of violating the Firearms Act for throwing two canisters of tear gas onto the floor of the House of Commons from the visitors' gallery on July 23, 1970.

Gael Roblin: spokesman for Emgann ("combat" in Breton), a 200-member group that is believed to be the political wing of the Breton Revolutionary Army. He was one of five Bretons detained on May 2, 2000, in connection with the April 19, 2000, bombing of a McDonald's in Quevert, Dinan, in the Brittany region, killing a female employee and causing extensive damage to the building.

Ennio di Rocco: arrested on January 4, 1982, after a gunfight and chase near the Spanish steps. Police believed he and a partner were preparing the Italian Red Brigades kidnapping of Cesare Romiti, managing director of Fiat. The duo provided information about Red Brigades hideouts.

Martino Rocco: one of four self-proclaimed "professional revolutionaries" arrested by Parma police on February 20, 1979, carrying a time bomb and other weapons in their car. Rocco was an anarchist residing in a Pisa student dorm.

J. Rodrigues Reis: one of two deserters from the Portuguese Army who hijacked an Angolan Air Taxi general aviation craft scheduled to fly from Luanda, Angola, to Cabinda on June 12, 1971.

Maria Odete Rodrigues: Portuguese clerical worker at the foreign-owned shipping firm Manica Freight Services who was arrested shortly after the South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance Movement on December 6, 1982, sabotaged a fuel depot that supplied the oil pipeline to Zimbabwe from Beira, Mozambique. Police said radio transmitters, pistols, rifles, boxes of ammunition, grenades, and military uniforms were found in two Beira houses.

R. Rodrigues de Sousa: one of two deserters from the Portuguese Army who hijacked an Angolan Air Taxi general aviation craft scheduled to fly from Luanda, Angola, to Cabinda on June 12, 1971.

Alfonso Rodriguez Garcia: arrested by Spanish police on July 25, 1979, in a raid on a First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) safe house in Madrid, where police found plans to kidnap or kill a senior U.S. Air Force officer in the Royal Oaks military housing community. Rodriguez confessed to 20 killings. He was accused of being responsible for bombing a Madrid cafeteria on May 29, 1979.

Alfredo Rodriguez Landa: alias Chino. Suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by French authorities on May 28, 1987, and expelled to Spain. He allegedly participated in the January 29, 1981, kidnapping and murder of Lemoniz engineer Jose Maria Ryan Estrada. In July 1983, he supplied a car for terrorists who killed policeman EEE Manuel Garcia San Miguel in Sopelana, Vizcaya. In November 1983, he drove the getaway car of the murderers of salesman Angel Martinez Trelles at the Bilbao Veterans Association Club.

Inaki Rodriguez: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs. He was a member of the Basque provincial police.

Juan Alberto Rodriguez Martin: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra-right-wing group, formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Bernd Roesner: variant of Bernard Maria Roessner.

Bernard Maria Roessner: variants Bernd Roesner, Bernd Rossner. One of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed the military attaché, Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, and the economic counselor, Heinz Hillegaart. They demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing 1 of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Roessner was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison. In May 1994, outgoing German president Richard von Weizsaecker pardoned him after serving 19 years.

Mechthild Rogali: possibly one of six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) cover name, who took over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, and took 70 hostages, including 11 oil ministers. She was the girlfriend of Hans-Joachim Klein, a Movement 2 June member who participated in the OPEC raid. A warrant was handed down in the OPEC case by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975.

Peter Rogers: one of three Irish Republican Army (IRA) members freed by Ireland on December 22, 1998, from their 40-year prison terms for killing three policemen in the 1980s. Policemen and relatives of the victims, including those of Seamus Quaid, shot dead in 1980 by Rogers, protested the decision.

Giancarlo Rognoni: alias King of Black Plots. Convicted in Italy. He was arrested with nine other Guerrillas of Christ the King on February 22, 1978, in a Spanish police raid on their arms factory.

Eric de Roiei: alias of Georges Cipriani.

Juan Ramon Rojo: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in the Basque country in January 1992 who had received logistical support from Moreno Ramajo and Raquel Garcia Arranz, arrested on June 14, 1993, in Vilvoorde-Koningslo, Belgium.

Maria Teresa Rojo: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and injuries to 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits.

Nick Roland: alias of Nikolai Wischnewsky.

Gabriele Rollnik: escaped from West Berlin's prison on July 7, 1976. She had been held for the February 27, 1975, kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union, by the group Movement 2 June. On May 16, 1992, she and three other imprisoned Red Army Faction (RAF) female terrorists said in a televised interview from Luebeck Prison that the RAF had not given up terrorism.

Victor Manuel Romano: Portuguese who was one of two men arrested on May 2, 1986, by Spanish police for carrying a four-kilogram bomb in the vicinity of the Bank of America building in Madrid. The duo claimed membership in the Call of Jesus Christ, a Middle East anti-Zionist terrorist group formed in 1978. Evidence pointed to Libyan funding.

Luca Romeo: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Romeo. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Mariano Felipe Romeu: Spaniard arrested on April 8, 1987, for collaborating with two suspected

Red Brigades and Direct Action terrorists arrested in Spain on April 3, 1987, by giving them forged papers enabling them to rent two flats on Galicia Street and Cervello Street and a Lope de Vega Street garage.

Sussana Ronconi: arrested in November 1980 but freed on January 3, 1982, from Rovigo women's prison when the Red Brigades blasted open a five-foot hole in a wall.

Helga Roos: Frankfurt student arrested on October 19, 1981, in connection with the Red Army Faction's firing of two RPG-7s on September 15, 1981, at the armored Mercedes of the commanding general of the U.S. Army in Europe, Frederick J. Kroesen.

Novoff Nagib Mefleh Rosan: on January 26, 1983, the Iraqi pleaded not guilty to charges of shooting Israeli ambassador Shlomo Argov in London on June 4, 1982. On March 5, 1983, he was convicted in London's Central Criminal Court. He received a 35-year sentence. He was an Iraqi intelligence service colonel and deputy commander of Abu Nidal's special operations section.

Bernd Rossner: variant of Bernard Maria Roessner.

Najib Rouass: Tunisian who on July 13, 2005, was sentenced by a judge in Brescia, Italy, to 14 months for inciting violence.

Jean-Marc Rouillan: alias Robert Rudy Huys, Robert Achille de Greef, Simon Barstein, Jean Rasp, Didier Lucien Revillon, Raphael, Raoul Levet. Leader of the French Direct Action leftist group in the early 1980s. He had been freed by French president Francois Mitterrand in a 1981 post-election amnesty. He narrowly escaped capture in Brussels on March 13, 1984, when he, Regis Schleicher, and Nathalie Menigon eluded Belgian authorities by taking a Brussels policeman hostage. He was arrested by French Research, Assistance, Intervention and Dissuasion police on February 21, 1987, at an isolated farmhouse near Vitry-aux-Loges, where police found arms, explosives, cash, and documents, which apparently had come from the briefcase of Georges Besse, the Renault chief assassinated on November 17, 1986. Rouillan had been holed up in the house for three years. He was charged with the January 25, 1985, assassination in Paris of Gen. Rene Audran, the defense ministry official in charge of France's arms exports.

He went on a hunger strike for several weeks to demand political prisoner status. On July 11, 1987, prison officials announced that he was placed into solitary confinement after the discovery of documents and prison authority rubber stamps in one of the cells of three prominent Direct Action prisoners. On January 11, 1988, his trial began for the murder of Renault chief Georges Besse, illegal association, the January 1985 shooting of Army Gen. Rene Audran, and the May 31, 1983, murder of two policemen. On January 14, 1989, after only 105 minutes of deliberation by the jury, he was sentenced to life with a recommendation that he serve a minimum of 18 years. On April 20, 1989, he was one of four imprisoned Direct Action terrorists who began another hunger strike. On June 8, 1989, they were moved to a Fresnes prison hospital. Their attorney, Isabelle Coutant-Pyere, said that the group was demanding political prisoner status and the abolition of solitary confinement cells.

Michael Roupael: arrest warrant was issued after detectives of the Italian UCIGOC antiterrorism squad on July 31, 1990, identified the Abu Nidal member as an organizer of the October 25, 1984, terrorist attack in which the secretary of the United Arab Emirates Embassy in Italy was wounded and a woman companion slain. He remained at large.

Roger Roussey: sentenced to 16 years on June 21, 1990, by a court in Pau, France, for two attacks in the French Basque country in 1985 by the right-wing Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group.

Andrew Rowe: British citizen of Jamaican descent and a convert to Islam sentenced to 15 years in September 2005 by a British court. He had used a cover of a traveling cell phone salesman and used references to Nokia phone models as code words for terrorist communications. Police believe that he was planning, with fellow Bosnian war veteran Lionel Dumont, a major attack in Europe. The duo met in a Frankfurt hotel in August 2003; Dumont was spending time there with his new German wife. The duo met again in Frankfurt, but then Rowe was under U.K. and German surveillance. Police raided his London home during Rowe's travels and found instructions on how to fire mortar shells and a codebook. Rowe was arrested while boarding a Chunnel train on the French coast. His socks in his luggage bore traces of explosives, including TNT.

Ciro Rozzato: member of the Red Brigades killed in the fall of 1983 during an armed attack on a French bank executed by Direct Action.

Sheamus Ruddy: one of two Irishmen arrested on February 1, 1979, in Greece after crossing the Turkish border. Ruddy was from Belfast, although he held an Irish passport. They were charged with "smuggling, possession and transportation of arms and explosives with the intention of supplying terrorist groups," believed to be the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), for which they faced 10 years. The U.K. consul said he could not request extradition because they were not wanted for any offense in the United Kingdom.

Marc Roland Rudin: Swiss charged in 1990 by Danish police with involvement in a 13-million-kroner robbery of a Kobmagergade post office, proceeds of which went to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP). In 1986, he was at the PFLP's Damascus, Syria, headquarters. He was one of seven PFLP members in Blekingegade, Denmark, sentenced to prison. They may have been responsible for the 1988 post office robbery, but all were acquitted for lack of evidence and were due to be released in December 1995.

Alberto Lopez Ruiz de la Calle: one of four people with suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) links arrested on May 31, 1992, by Bayonne, France, police. Two were taking over the posts left vacant by the arrests of senior ETA leaders. He was in France illegally. He and his French wife, Bernadette Agareche, were picked up by the French Air and Border Police. A search of her home uncovered ETA documents. Police later denied he had been arrested.

Jose Ramon Ruiz de Gauna: Spanish refugee and member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested on July 29, 1986, in Bayonne, France, with three suspected members of Iparretarrak, a Basque separatist group. He was expelled to Spain on July 30, 1986.

Oscar Ruiz: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested at a French checkpoint 50 kilometers from the Spanish border on November 17, 1990. The group was apparently heading toward Spain, intending to conduct an attack.

Ahmed Rukhar: convenience store owner from La Rioja region who on January 13, 2004, was charged by a Spanish judge with financing the al Qaeda truck bombing on April 11, 2002, that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia. He was arrested in March 2003 and was held on $127,000 bond on suspicion of helping to finance the bombing by sending money to al Qaeda contacts.

Ibrahim al-Russan: Jordanian whose expulsion from France was ordered on December 24, 1986, in connection with the discovery of an arms cache in Aulnay-sous-Bois on December 18, 1986.

Robert Russell: extradited on August 27, 1988, from Ireland to the United Kingdom, where he was arraigned in Lisburn on seven charges relating to a mass breakout of Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoners from Maze prison near Belfast in 1983. He had been serving a 20-year sentence for the attempted murder of a policeman. He had been in custody for the last four years in Ireland, pending extradition.

Mohamed Rustin: Syrian member of a hijacking trio who took over KLM 366, a DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam on September 4, 1976.

Patrick Ryan: suspected Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) leader arrested in Belgium in July 1988 after he arrived by coach from Benidorm. The ex-priest had lived in the Alicante town since 1978. When arrested, he was carrying a large amount of money, forged papers, and bomb-making materials. Benidorm police were also searching for two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members and two Islamic Jihad terrorists. The United Kingdom requested his extradition for conspiracy to murder “persons unknown” between 1975 and 1988, possession of bomb-making equipment, and conspiracy to cause explosions. He had visited Libya to procure arms for the IRA.

He went on a 22-day hunger strike in a Belgian jail, dropping 28 pounds. On November 24, 1988, a Belgian court granted extradition. But on November 25, 1988, the Belgian Cabinet denied extradition, saying that the charges were too vague because the conspiracy charges gave no details, names, or dates. A few hours later, he was flown to Ireland. U.K. officials filed an extradition request with Ireland, charging him with conspiracy to murder. Ryan checked out of a Dublin clinic and was reported to have gone either into hiding or into a religious institution on November 28, 1988. The next day, U.K. prime minister Margaret Thatcher accused Dublin of shirking its responsibilities for failing to arrest Ryan. Dublin was studying the extradition request but said it had no immediate cause to detain him. On December 13, 1988, Irish attorney general John Murray rejected the extradition request, saying that although there was sufficient legal evidence to justify extradition, he could not get a fair trial in the United Kingdom. He invited the United Kingdom to use a 1976 Irish law that would permit trial in Ireland for offenses committed elsewhere. In June 1989, Ryan ran unsuccessfully for an Irish seat in the elections to the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France. On January 12, 1990, he was dismissed from the Palatine religious order of the Roman Catholic faith. The Rev. William Hanly, head of the order, expelled Ryan for prolonged unlawful absence from the society and persistent refusal to comply with the legitimate instructions of his superiors. The ban meant that Ryan was suspended from his priestly duties and could not say Mass, preach, or administer the Sacraments.

S

---

L.S.: one of two 17-year-old Czechs detained on September 13, 1989, by the Czechoslovakia National Security Corps before they were able to initiate their plan to hijack an aircraft from Prague to the West.

Eva-Maria S.: alias of Silke Maier-Witt.

Zafer S.: Turk believed at large in Turkey or Iraq who was wanted in connection with the September 4, 2007, arrest in Germany of two Germans and one Turkish citizen at their Oberschledorn house; they were planning “massive” attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union. (See also Fritz Martin Gelowicz.)

Yusuf Ahmed Saad: convicted of having supplied money, passports, and other logistical support to the four shipjackers of the Achille Lauro cruise ship on October 7, 1985. On December 24, 1990, a Genoa magistrate freed the Palestinian under an amnesty program that had no public notice and expelled him to Algeria.

Slah Saadaoui: arrested on March 11, 2003, in Lyon, France, age 25. He allegedly supplied Nizar Nawar with fake ID papers used in the truck bombing on April 11, 2002, that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia.

Mongi Ben Adollah Saadequi: one of three Black June terrorists who fired machine guns and threw grenades at Vienna’s Schwechat Airport on December 27, 1985. After a car chase and gun battle with police, Saadequi died of his wounds. Two people were killed and 37 injured. He was carrying a faked Tunisian passport, having come to Vienna from Beirut. The terrorists had intended to take hostages to obtain an El Al plane, which they would crash into Tel Aviv.

Abdul Kader Saadi (variant ‘Abd al-Qadir al-Sa’di, Abdelkader Saadi): alias of Georges Ibrahim ‘Abdallah, the alleged leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction. His release was demanded by the gunmen who kidnapped Giles Sidney Peyrolles, the director of the French Cultural Center and a consular official, near his Tripoli office on March 24, 1985.

Fouhad Sabour: one of five Algerian al Qaeda members whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt on charges of plotting to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000, age 38. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, and dealing drugs and with various weapons charges. The French citizen moved to London in July 2000 after having been in Bosnia and Pakistan. He flew to Frankfurt in October 2000. He was convicted in absentia in a French court for bombings in Paris in 1995. On March 10, 2003, the Frankfurt court found him guilty of preparing a bomb in the attack on the Strasbourg Christmas market and of conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to 10 to 12 years. He said that the prosecution had failed to prove al Qaeda links.

Dridi Sabri: variant Sabri Dridi. Leader, age 37, of a Milan-based network that was wrapped up on November 6, 2007, in coordinated raids in Italy, France, Portugal, and the United Kingdom. The raids netted 17 Algerians and Tunisians suspected of terrorist ties to Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Milan prosecutors ordered the raids in Milan, Bergamo, Verese, and Reggio Emilia. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. The leaders were identified as Dridi Sabri, Mehidi Ben Nasr, and Imed Ben Zarkaoui, all operating in Italy. Three suspects remained at large. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Stanislav Sacha: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, and redirected to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, believed to be involved in the plot.

Wolfgang Sachse: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Sandro Sacucci: Italian neofascist arrested in Cordoba, Argentina, on February 20, 1985, on suspicion of participation in several terrorist attacks in Italy and elsewhere in Europe and the 1975 murder of a communist militant. On April 24, 1985, the Italian government asked for further clarifications regarding Argentina's denial of extradition.

Muhammed Usman Saddique: lived on Albert Road in East London, age 24, and was arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day.

'Abd-al-Salam Sadmah: alleged on November 11, 1989, by Rome's Avanti to be close to Mu'ammarr al Qadhafi and top leaders of Libyan Revolutionary Committees who had planned a series of terrorist attacks in Italy. The paper said he had trained the gunmen who killed dissident Ibn-Yusuf Salam Khalifah in Rome in June 1987. He was also suspected of planning attacks on Italian airlines and killing a U.K. police officer in London in 1984.

Mohammed ben Sadok: sentenced to life in prison at hard labor on December 11, 1957, for the May 26, 1957, assassination in Paris of Ali Chekkal, ex-vice president of the Algerian Assembly.

Carlos Saez de Eguilaz Murguiondo: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Carlos Saez Mendez: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Eduardo Saez Lobo: individual with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) links arrested in Ceuta, Spain, on October 7, 1987.

Fadi Safah: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest, south of Paris, the previous week. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. On June 11, 1987, the Lebanese was put on a plane to Beirut.

Hussein Abdul Hassan Safaoui: one of seven people arrested on November 27, 1984, by Italian police at an apartment in the seaside resort of Ladispoli. Police found a map of the U.S. Embassy in Rome that had strong and weak security points marked. The men were charged with forming an armed gang. Italian authorities speculated that the men belonged to the Islamic Jihad Organization and were planning a suicide bombing at the embassy. Some were carrying false passports. All had entered Italy at different times during the year and had registered with several universities in central Italy. On October 17, 1985, an Italian court acquitted five defendants, including Safaoui, of charges that they were planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy. On October 1, 1986, an appeals court in Rome overturned the lower court decision and handed the case to the public ministry for further action. But only one defendant was still in custody.

Massimo Saffaroli: one of three suspected Red Brigades members arrested on June 6, 1987, by Florence police for subversive association and participation in an armed band.

Jose Martin Sagardia: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader killed in a car bomb explosion in Biarritz on December 30, 1980.

Ramon Sagarzazu: one of 10 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Cape Verde on May 9, 1989.

Fayez Sahawneh: arrested as an accomplice for the March 29, 1986, bombing of the Arab-German Friendship Society in West Berlin.

Osman Sahin: chairman of the Union Islamique in France, he was arrested on October 28, 1994, by French authorities and handed over to the border police for expulsion. He had been living with his family in the Montbeliard region for 15 years and had run the mosque at Sochaux for 2 years.

He was a member of the Anatolian Federal Islamic State, a radical fundamentalist movement.

Soumaya Sahla: convicted with his wife, Nouredine al-Fatmi, when on December 1, 2006, a Dutch court convicted four Dutch Muslims of plotting terrorist attacks against political leaders and government buildings.

Mohammed Jaafari Sahraroodi: variant Mohammad Jafari Sahrarudi; alias Rahimi. One of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemloo, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. He carried an Iranian diplomatic passport. He was taken to a hospital with bullet wounds apparently accidentally sustained. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Ahmad Ghassan Said: on January 26, 1983, the Jordanian pleaded not guilty to charges of shooting Israeli ambassador Shlomo Argov in London on June 4, 1982. On March 5, 1983, he was convicted in London's Central Criminal Court. He received a 30-year sentence for firing the two shots.

Jabr Rajeh Hassan al-Said: alias Aboud Bakr, alleged by the Swiss on August 21, 2004, to have had "close contact with several members of the hard-core bin Laden movement."

Mohamed Salem Said: one of four Libyans who arrived in France on August 20, 1987, and were arrested by Paris police on September 2–3, 1987, and deported on September 4, 1987. The U.S. Embassy and French Interior Ministry said that the Libyans were plotting a series of attacks on French soil to mark the 18th anniversary of the September 1 takeover of Libya by Col. Muammar al-Qadhafi and to "punish France" for its support of the Chadian government.

Muhmad Sa'id: would-be hijacker of a Swiss airliner.

'Abd al-Salam Saidi: variant Abdulssalam Seaidi. Lebanese Iranian dishwasher who was one of eight men arrested by the French Department of Territorial Security (DST) on March 30, 1987, suspected of planning attacks against Israeli targets. He was charged with illegal arms possession and conspiracy following the discovery of arms caches near Paris that included 9.9 kilograms of explosives, guns, grenades, and documents that mentioned plans for attacks on Arab, Israeli, and U.S. figures, as well as a plan involving El Al and TWA. Three grenades, a gun, a submachine gun, and a Colt .45 caliber revolver were found in Romainville in the Paris Seine-St. Denis suburbs. He was suspected of belonging to a Syrian guerrilla network linked with an extremist Middle Eastern group. He was in contact with an at-large Syrian linked to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP).

Omar Saker: Algerian cleric arrested on August 5, 1994, by French police who stopped him for speeding but found literature advocating armed struggle against France.

Jon Salaberria: former regional legislator for Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) Batasuna political wing who was one of four ETA members arrested in Bordeaux, France, on May 20, 2008.

Abu Salah: Jordanian associate of a Palestinian with a Jordanian passport arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel on December 17, 1985, who trying to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane scheduled to depart for Amman. Police believed he was one of four Arabs who intended to hijack the plane.

'Ali Fu'ad Salah: leader of a group of eight individuals suspected of being Islamic terrorists arrested on March 21, 1987, in Paris by the Department of Territorial Security (DST). Authorities seized 12 liters of a liquid explosive, two Sten guns, and ammunition from the Rue de la Voute safe house in Paris's 12th District. Some of the detainees were members of Islamic Jihad. On March 26, 1987, the group was charged with "belonging to a terrorist network preparing to commit particularly dangerous attacks in France." Salah was a theology student at the Sorbonne and was married to a Frenchwoman of Algerian extraction, Faraid Karima.

Yusif Salam: alias Yasir Chraydi, alias Nuri. A Palestinian who worked in the Libyan People's Bureau in East Germany in 1986 and was viewed by the Stasi as a killer. He was believed to have orchestrated the bombing of La Belle Disco on April 5, 1986, in West Berlin. He instructed Imad Salim Mahmud, a Lebanese resident in West Berlin, to select a building suitable for a bomb attack.

Hara Salame: she had served at the Palestine Liberation Organization office in Sweden for eight years but was ordered expelled by Stockholm on November 21, 1986, on suspicion of aiding terrorism. In 1982, she was suspected of having connections with Fatah and was judged a security risk. In 1986, she was suspected of being an agent of Abu Nidal. She agreed to leave Sweden by November 30, 1986.

Farouk Salameh: Palestinian with Jordanian papers arrested for the West Berlin bombings of La Belle Discotheque on April 5, 1986, and the German-Arab Friendship Society on March 29, 1986. His accomplice Hasi said on April 30, 1986, that they were responsible for the Friendship Society bombing at the behest of Haithem Said (Abu Ahmed), a lieutenant colonel in the Syrian Air Force and second in command of the Syrian intelligence service. On July 31, 1986, attempted murder charges were brought against Hasi and Salameh for the Friendship Society bombing. The trial began on November 17, 1986, and the duo was convicted on November 26. Salameh was sentenced to 13 years.

Hihad Ibrahim Salami: one of two Palestinians arrested by Spanish police on July 12, 1985, for plotting to blow up the Syrian Embassy in Madrid. They were believed to be members of Force 17, part of Fatah. Police found 12 kilograms of explosives on the men. On November 5, 1986, Salami was sentenced by the Spanish National High Court to four years and four months for being an accessory to the illegal possession of arms and explosives. The offense of preparing to attack the Syrian ambassador was "not proven."

Sadeer Saleem: one of three men arrested on March 22, 2007, by British police for involvement in the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005. On July 5, 2007, British authorities charged the trio with conspiring with the bombers between November 1, 2004, and June 29, 2005, saying they handled reconnaissance and planning. On August 10, 2007, Mohammed Shakil, Sadeer Saleem, age 26, and Waheed Ali pleaded not guilty of conspiracy to cause explosions that would endanger life.

Fouad Ali Saleh: Tunisian indicted on May 19, 1987, for the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store in Paris that killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners. He was believed to be the ringleader of the pro-Iranian Arabs. He was accused of being part of a terrorist cell that French police unraveled in March–April 1987. Charges against him were based on evidence provided by Abdel Hamid Badoui and Omar Agnaoui, two Moroccans indicted with him. On October 31, 1990, the Paris Appeals Court upheld his 20-year sentence issued by a Paris court in March 1990, which had found him guilty of setting up a terrorist network and drug trafficking. On April 13, 1992, he was found guilty of organizing a series of bombings that killed 13 and wounded 303 and was sentenced to life. The court ruled that he should stay in prison for 18 years before parole could be considered.

John Saleh: name on a Somali passport carried by Johannes Weinrich.

Zaharia Abu Saleh: Black September gunman arrested on April 27, 1973, after shooting Vittorio Olivares, an Italian employee of El Al in Rome, in the stomach. The Lebanese claimed the victim was an Israeli agent responsible for the death of Black September Organization (BSO) operative Abdel Zuiater in Rome in October 1972. Abu Saleh was committed to an Italian psychiatric institution and was not brought to trial on the grounds that he was mentally unfit. On July 17, 1975, he was released on a 30 million lire bond. It was believed that he left Italy.

Salem: one of six people mentioned in a warrant of arrest handed down on December 23, 1975, by the Vienna, Austria, criminal court for the takeover on December 21, 1975, of the OPEC ministerial meeting. Salem was about 30 years old and 180-cm tall and had a slender but sturdy figure, round face, and bold-shaped Roman nose.

Elie Louis Salibi: Lebanese Army private arrested on July 31, 1987, by a member of the Board of Immigration's refugee camp outside Motala, Sweden, in connection with the June 1, 1987, assassination of Lebanese prime minister Rashid Karami when a bomb exploded on his helicopter. Salibi was believed to have planted the bomb and then left Lebanon. On August 9, 1987, Judge Walid Ghamrah, head of a judicial mission to Sweden, returned home after failing for five days to obtain Salibi's extradition for murder and attempted murder on the basis of Articles 549 and 550/201 of the Penal Code. Sweden does not extradite persons threatened with the death penalty. Sweden extended the precautionary detention of Salibi through September 10, 1987. On August 18, 1987, Ghamrah rescinded the arrest warrant, and two days later, Sweden released Salibi.

Fu'ad 'Ali Salih: Tunisian member of Hizballah charged on December 3, 1987, by Paris judge Gilles Boulouque with four attacks carried out in 1986, including attacks against the post office at the Paris town hall, an attack in the Rue de Rennes in Paris, and the bombing by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners on September 12, 1986, of the crowded Casino cafeteria in the La Defense shopping center in Paris that injured 41 people. By February 1990, he was on trial in Paris with nine others, charged with illegal possession of explosives and setting up a terrorist network linked to the pro-Iranian Hizballah. On March 9, 1990, he was sentenced to 20 years.

Mukhammed Salik: alias of Salai Madaminov.

Salim: Lebanese tried in 1979 as part of a group of Palestinians in West Germany. Salim, also a French citizen, claimed to not know anything about explosives that were found in a car at a border crossing in April 1979 and said that he was on a business trip. On July 20, 1979, the Passau regional court found him guilty of having prepared a bombing attack and sentenced him to two and one-half years.

Salim Abu Salim: according to Paris International Service in March 1987, he was the leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP)–Special Operations, a PFLP dissident wing, which might have been responsible for a wave of bombings in Paris in September 1986.

Jussef Sallata: Libyan arrested after three gunmen killed Abdel Belil Aref, a wealthy Libyan businessman, as he was dining at the Café du Paris on the Via Veneto in Rome on April 18, 1980. On October 6, 1986, the Italian government announced that for “humanitarian motives” it had freed the three convicted Libyan gunmen in exchange for four Italians who had been held in Libya for the last six years. A Red Cross plane for the Libyans flew to Tripoli and returned with the Italians.

‘Ali Salman: one of three Lebanese terrorists for whom Spanish police issued arrest warrants after the press reported on October 27, 1991, that a group of seven terrorists was planning assassination attempts at the October 30 opening of the Middle East peace conference in Madrid. Five of the terrorists belonged to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), two belonged to Abu Nidal, and all were aided by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Anna Maria Salvucci: one of two suspected Italian Red Brigades members arrested on March 23, 1988, in Barcelona, Spain, on charges of robbing at least six banks in Spain’s Catalonia region. Italy requested extradition on May 19, 1988. An arrest warrant was issued in 1987, charging her with possessing firearms for terrorist purposes. On June 27, 1989, she was jailed for 27 years by a Spanish court for conducting three armed robberies and making off with 8 million pesetas ($72,000).

Luis Queba Sambu: security officer for the Guinean Embassy in Portugal arrested on November 6, 1987, by Portugal’s police antiterrorism department after explosives were found at the embassy and in the Guinean Armed Forces captain’s residence. He was suspected of having links with the Popular Forces of April 25 and the French Direct Action. He had studied military strategy in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Libya. He initially said the explosives were to be used against Guinean exiles. He later requested political asylum.

Khelfa Same: alias of Frazeh Khelfa, an Algerian member of Black September who attempted to assassinate Jordanian ambassador Zaid Rifai in London on December 15, 1971. Khelfa fired 30 rounds into the ambassador’s car in London. He was arrested in Lyons in January 1972. The Lyons court recommended that France grant the United Kingdom’s extradition request, but the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs sent him to Algeria.

Aslan Samet: name on a false passport used by a young Turk arrested by Dutch police on May 14, 1985, in Venlo, the Netherlands, during the pope’s visit. He arrived on a West German train while smuggling in a 9-mm Browning automatic pistol that was one of four pistols bought by Mehmet Ali Agca and an accomplice prior to the May 13, 1981, assassination attempt against Pope John Paul II. Samet had three cartridges identical to those used by Agca to try to kill the pope. He was also carrying forged documents, including Turkish and French passports. He was a member of the Grey Wolves.

Abdenmour Sameur: Algerian, age 34, arrested at Luton Airport, north of London, on December 19, 2007, one of two British residents among the three who had been released from Guantánamo's prison after four years in captivity. He was held on the Terrorism Act on suspicion of the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was later released without charge.

Abdullah Samir (variant Samer Mohammed Abdullah): one of eight members of Black September who broke into the Israeli quarters of the Olympic Games in Munich on September 5, 1972, killing two Israeli athletes and taking nine others hostage. After a shootout with police, the hostages were killed, as were five of the terrorists and a West German policeman. The three surviving terrorists, including Samir, were released after the hijacking of a Lufthansa jet on October 29, 1972. They were picked up at Zagreb airport and flew on to Libya, where they disappeared.

Salahem Samir: Palestinian laborer from Amman arrested by Athens police on August 30, 1985, 90 meters from the Jordanian Embassy, while carrying an Austrian-made Steyer automatic weapon, a grenade, a knife, and three magazines of bullets. He admitted that he was on a Black September mission to assassinate the Jordanian ambassador. His release was demanded by the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems (an alias of the Abu Nidal group) on September 3, 1985, after one of the members threw two hand grenades at the Hotel Glifadha in an Athens suburb, injuring 18 British tourists.

Roberto San Sebastian: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) collaborator arrested on December 2, 1993, by French Judiciary Police in Bayonne. Police found inside his French-registered car detonators, two kilograms of ammonal explosive, and several press articles on ETA.

Joaquin Sanchez Nunez: Catalan separatist member of the Terra Lliure (Free Land) organization who died on December 15, 1985, when a bomb he was carrying exploded in a phone booth in Barcelona, Spain.

Jose Luis Sanchez Bravo: student and member of the Spanish Revolutionary Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP) sentenced on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court to death for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Pose Rodriguez. He and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Jose Maria Sanchez Casas: leader of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) in 1979.

Maria Socorro Sanchez Garcia: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) Vizcaya Command member arrested on March 30, 1992, by the Spanish Civil Guard.

Mariano Sanchez Covisa: leader of the Guerrillas of Christ the King, arrested with nine others on February 22, 1978, in a Spanish police raid on their arms factory.

Nancy Sanchez: girlfriend of Carlos, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist, on June 27, 1975, when French police raided his Paris apartment. She had gotten drunk at a party in his apartment.

Raymond Sanchis: one of four French citizens who on October 17, 1991, were convicted by a Bayonne court of belonging to the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group (GAL), which had killed 27 alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members between 1983 and 1987. The four were charged with criminal conspiracy and possession of weapons and explosives after police uncovered a GAL weapons cache near the Spanish border in 1987. He was sentenced to five years in jail.

Roberto Sandalo: former member of the Red Brigades who on February 11, 1985, said that at least five leaders of the group were in Nicaragua serving as instructors in the Sandinista Armed Forces. Sandalo lived in Kenya for fear of reprisals by his former colleagues.

Bernadette Sands-McKevitt: spokeswoman for the Real Irish Republican Army's (Real IRA) political front in 1998. She was the sister of Bobby Sands. She was arrested in 2001 on a new anti-terrorism law but was released without charge. She was married to Michael "Mickey" McKevitt of Dundalk, Ireland. He was detained in connection with the August 15, 1998, car bombing in the Omagh, Northern Ireland, town square that killed 29 people and wounded more than 350 others.

Bobby Sands: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoner arrested in 1972 for a series of IRA robberies. He served four years in prison. A year later, he was convicted of gun possession. He conducted a hunger strike in 1981 to obtain political status for IRA prisoners who were being treated as common criminals. On April 9, 1981, he won a special election for a vacant Parliament seat, beating a prominent moderate Protestant, Harry West, age 67, former leader of the Ulster Unionist Party. Sands died on the 66th day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison on May 5, 1981.

Giuseppe Santangelo: arrested on January 21, 1995, in Sao Paulo, Brazil, by a group of Carabinieri from Trapani, Italy, in collaboration with Brazilian police. He had been sentenced to 18 years in prison for the 1976 killing of two Carabinieri in Alcamo. He had been part of a group that forced open a barracks door and killed the duo as they slept "to strike a blow against a body of the state."

He was married with two children and lived 40 kilometers outside Sao Paulo, working as a cleaner.

Ignacio Santesteban Goicoechea: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) explosives expert sentenced on January 13, 2003, by a Paris court to nine years in prison.

Jose de Almeida Santo Paulo: Portuguese citizen who on November 4, 1991, attacked with a sharpened paper-knife the ex-king of Afghanistan, Mohammad Zaher Shah, age 77, in his Rome villa. Santo entered the house posing as a journalist and stabbed the exiled king in the face and stomach. Rome police believed that Santo was not a Portuguese citizen. He claimed that he was a Muslim who wanted to kill Shah to prevent him from regaining the throne.

Loa'i Mohammad Haj Bakr al-Saqa: Syrian who Turkish authorities say masterminded the 2003 bombing of two synagogues, a U.K.-based bank, and the British Consulate in Istanbul that killed 58 people. The authorities said he moved $170,000 between al Qaeda and the Turkish militants.

Lt. Col. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho: suspected leader of the Popular Forces of 25 April (FP-25) of Portugal who was arrested on June 22, 1984, on the basis of Article 288 of the Portuguese Penal Code, which forbids terrorist activities. He was held at Caxias jail. An FP-25 spokesperson demanded his release, warning that otherwise, the group would assassinate Prime Minister Soares, Deputy Prime Minister Mota Pinto, President Eanes, and armed forces chief Gen. Lamos Ferreira and would attack the Portuguese embassies in Paris and Madrid. On November 27, 1985, during Saraiva's trial, the prosecution claimed that the group had exchanged weapons with the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) and Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) and that he had planned to overthrow the Zairean government. On May 20, 1987, he was sentenced to 15 years in prison for leading a leftist urban terrorist group that had conducted several assassinations and bombings during the previous seven years in which 15 people died. He had turned down the offices of prime minister and president.

Zeyal Sarhadi: variants Zia Sarhadi, Zeynalabedine Sarhadi. Iranian arrested by Swiss authorities on December 23, 1991, in connection with the August 6, 1991, assassination of former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. Swiss authorities said that although he had been staying at the Iranian Embassy in Bern, he did not work there. The arrest was on the basis of an international warrant by France via Interpol. France had 18 days to make a formal extradition request. French authorities were seeking him on a charge of accessory to murder. He had entered Switzerland on a tourist visa in September 1991. He filed a request for freedom on December 30, 1991, claiming to be an embassy employee with immunity from prosecution. On December 31, 1991, the French requested extradition. On May 26, 1992, French judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere charged him with “complicity in the murder” of Bakhtiar after he was extradited to France from Switzerland. He was acquitted on December 6, 1994.

Zeynalabedine Sarhadi: variant of Zeyal Sahardi.

Zia Sarhadi: variant of Zeyal Sarhadi.

Mohammad Sarham: alias of Mahmoud Ibrahim Khaled, born in the Shatila refugee camp. One of four Martyrs of Palestine terrorists who on December 27, 1985, fired Kalashnikovs and lobbed grenades in Rome’s Fiumicino Airport terminal. He was the only terrorist who survived a gun battle with police. The Abu Nidal group claimed credit for killing 16 people and wounding 73 others. On December 28, 1985, he was indicted for murder in Rome. On February 5, 1987, Italian prosecutor Domenico Sica asked Judge Rosario Priore to indict him.

Josephine ‘Abdu al-Sarkis: variant Josephine Abdo Sarkis. Member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) arrested on December 19, 1984, in Ostia, Italy, and charged on May 8, 1985, by an Italian judge with the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Leamon R. Hunt, the American director general of the multinational force in Egypt’s Sinai Peninsula. On June 18, 1985, a Trieste court found her guilty and sentenced her to 15 years and a $510 fine. On October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the charges against the LARF member for insufficient evidence. On November 27, 1985, the group threatened Italy unless she was released. On March 20, 1986, a bomb exploded in the crowded Point-Show shopping mall just off the Champs Elysees in Paris, killing 2 Lebanese and wounding 30; the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners demanded the release of Sarkis.

Assad Ali Sarwar: Pakistani, age 26, who lived in a two-story brick duplex on Walton Drive, High Wycombe, with his brother and the rest of his family, and who was arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. He was charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism. He was ordered held without bail until a September 18 court appearance, when 10 other suspects were to appear in court. Prosecutors had said that the trials might not begin until March 2008. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. They were also charged with conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. The prosecution said he was one of the group’s leaders. He had traveled to Pakistan in June 2006, returning in July. Police found in his house a videotape with five martyrdom messages and two computer memory sticks with information on potential targets. He had planned to carry out several attacks, rather than commit suicide.

Franciszek Sarzynski: one of two Polish hijackers of LOT Flight 10116 from Budapest to Warsaw on August 25, 1982.

Nizar Sassi: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but had not used their combat training. They were not sent back to prison although they were formally sentenced. Sassi was sentenced to four years in prison, three suspended and one year as time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The group was among seven French citizens captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and were then handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005. One was freed immediately upon arrival. The others spent up to 17 months in French prisons.

Bertrand Sasso: one of four ringleaders of the Communist Combatant Cells arrested on December 16, 1985, in a fast-food restaurant in Belgium. On January 14, 1986, they were charged with the attempted murder of the night watchman at the Brussels-Lambert Bank, which had been bombed on November 4, 1985.

Sastre: alias of Antxon Azcue Aizpurua.

Faouzi Satari: one of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah’s last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-seine, France, on July 17, 1980. On March 10, 1982, a Nanterre jury sentenced four of them, including Satari, to life in prison. His release was demanded on July 31, 1984, by the three Guardsmen of Islam hijackers of an Air France B737 flying from Frankfurt to Paris.

Fawzi Mohammed al-Sattari: one of five terrorists jailed for trying to assassinate former Iranian prime minister Shapour Bakhtiar in France on July 17, 1980, who were pardoned on July 27, 1990, and deported to Tehran. The lone Palestinian in the group, al-Sattari flew on to Baghdad.

Bassam Dalati Satut: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement—which has ties to al Qaeda—arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on terrorism charges. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda’s leader in Spain.

On April 16, 2008, Judge Ismael Moreno of the National Court indicted Satut, age 48, on suspicion of financing terrorist cells and collaboration with a terrorist group. He denied the charges. (See also Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.)

Sean Savage: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas killed by British commandos on March 6, 1988, while the terrorists were planting a 1,100-pound plastic explosive bomb in an abandoned white Ford Fiesta in Marbella, near the governor’s residence in Gibraltar.

Mustafa Savak: variant Mustafa Savas. Turk arrested by police in Rho, near Milan, Italy, on February 2, 1983, on charges of plotting to murder Pope John Paul II during a visit to Milan in May. He was carrying two passports, one of which gave his date of birth as 1945. He had arrived in Italy two months earlier, driving a car with West German plates. More recently he had driven a Renault with Rome plates. An Italian held on drug charges said Savak had tried to hire him to shoot the pope.

Ibrahim Savant: British Iranian soccer fan, age 25, who converted to Islam and was originally named Oliver, and who was arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Forty-one people were detained in the United Kingdom. He was charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, and to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft, between January 1 and August 11, 2006.

Oliver Savant: birth name of Ibrahim Savant.

Antonio Savasta: arrested on January 28, 1982, in a raid on a Red Brigades safe house in Padua, where the group was holding U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier, whom the Red Brigades had kidnapped on December 17, 1981. Savasta was sentenced the next day to 30 years for his role in a 1980 shootout in Sardinia. He had been Dozier's inquisitor. He had smuggled guns from Lebanon in 1979. Savasta turned state's evidence. He was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 16-plus years in the Dozier case.

Zivotije Savic: Freedom for the Serbia Fatherland (SEPO) terrorist found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He had pleaded guilty and was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Antonio Savino: following an October 3, 1978, gun battle with police in which he was injured, he was arrested in connection with the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome.

Stefano Savorani: mentally ill ex-policeman, age 29, who on November 27, 2002, attempted to hijack an Alitalia flying from Bologna to Paris. He ran to the front of the plane, claiming to have a remote-controlled bomb, and ranted about belonging to bin Laden's al Qaeda. "I belong to al Qaeda and I want to make a declaration to the press." The plane landed safely in Lyons, France. He had tried another hijacking in 1999 against a domestic Air France flight; in 1998, he had hijacked an Italian train. His mother said he was being treated for schizophrenia.

Evangelos Savvakis: would-be hijacker of an Olympic Airlines 707 flying from Iraklion to Athens on May 28, 1972.

Abdelkader Mahmoud Es Sayed: alias Abu Saleh. An Egyptian organizer of al Qaeda's Milan cell. He was convicted in Egypt for killing 58 foreign tourists at Luxor in 1997. He fled Italy in July 2001 after Italy had given him asylum. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets. He might have been killed in Afghanistan in 2001 during Coalition bombing. He had contacts with several individuals arrested on July 11, 2002, in Milan and other Italian cities for making false documents for al Qaeda. A January 2001 wiretap revealed him talking to a Tunisian about false documents easing entry to the United States, saying at one point, "If you have to speak to me about these things, you should come to me and speak in my ear. This subject is secret, secret, secret." He was also linked to Essi Sami Ben Khemais, a major Algerian al Qaeda organizer in Europe sentenced to five years in prison in February for arms trafficking, manufacturing false papers, and arranging illegal immigration.

Suhaila Sayeh: Palestinian woman, age 43, convicted by Hamburg's State Supreme Court on November 19, 1996, of murder and other crimes and sentenced to 12 years for her role in the October 13, 1977, Landshut hijacking. She was one of the four hijackers but claimed she had no role in killing the plane's pilot during the stop in Aden. The court ruled that she had been complicit. She was the only hijacker to survive the GSG-9 rescue in Somalia. She was arrested in 1994 in Oslo, Norway, and extradited to Germany.

Yezid Gasper Sayiagh: Palestinian holding a U.S. passport arrested on December 18, 1985. He was an associate of a Palestinian with a Jordanian passport arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel on December 17, 1985, while trying to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane scheduled to depart for Amman. He was released for lack of evidence that he was part of a plot to hijack the plane.

Oreste Scalzone: Italian terrorist leader in 1981 believed to have received funds from the Libyans to establish a radio station and "cultural centers" in the Rome/Naples vicinity.

Freddy Scappaticci: alias Stakeknife. Reported on May 11, 2003, by the British media as a British Army informer inside the Irish Republican Army (IRA) who had supplied information that had foiled several IRA operations. He denied the reports that he was a senior IRA official who had walked into a British Army base outside Belfast in 1978 and joined the payroll of the Force Research Unit, a military intelligence bureau. The press said that he was paid $130,000 annually and that his information had led to British Special Forces shooting down three unarmed IRA members in Gibraltar in 1988. Stakeknife allegedly was involved in the 1991 shooting of Irish farmer Thomas Oliver, allegedly an informer, and the 1992 torture/murder of Aidan Starrs, Gregory Burns, and John Dignam, who were accused by the IRA of killing a young Catholic woman and of working for U.K. intelligence.

Gregorio Scarfo: chief of the Rome Red Brigades identified by police as one of the Red Brigades/Fighting Communist Party members who on February 14, 1987, conducted a $1.2 million holdup in Rome that left two police officers dead and a third seriously wounded. By April 1988, police had obtained a warrant for the new head of the Roman Column of the Red Brigades. He was believed involved in the April 16, 1988, assassination by the Fighting Communist Union Party of university professor and Christian Democratic Senator Roberto Ruffilli in Forlì.

Regis Schleicher: leader of Direct Action in France in the early 1980s. He was arrested for the May 31, 1983, murders of two policemen on a Paris street during a routine identity check. He narrowly escaped capture in Brussels on March 13, 1984, when he and Jean-Marc Rouillan and Nathalie Menigon, his wife, eluded Belgian authorities by taking a Brussels policeman hostage. He was rearrested in Avignon on March 15, 1984, by French antiterrorism squads and police in connection with attacks on Israeli and Jewish targets in Paris since 1982. On July 13, 1984, the French government filed murder charges against him in the 1983 case. In response, Direct Action bombed several facilities, including the Atlantic Institute, the French Navy Ministry, and the Industry Ministry. On December 8, 1986, the trial for three members of the group, including Schleicher, was stopped because jurors, intimidated by death threats, failed to show up for the trial. The group had planned to kidnap an individual to exchange him but were themselves arrested on February 21, 1987. On June 13, 1987, the seven-judge Special Court of Assizes in Paris sentenced him to life in prison for the murders of two policemen in the 1983 shootout. His brother, Claude Alphen, was acquitted.

Mareile Schmiegner: arrested on July 3, 1985, in a police raid on a Red Army Faction (RAF) hide-out in Offenbach, West Germany, where police found guns and false passports. She was charged on February 26, 1986, by the Frankfurt Higher Regional Court. On March 5, 1987, she was sentenced by the court to 3 years and 10 months for supporting the RAF and for resisting arrest, during which two police officers were injured. She had provided a hideout for Eva Haule-Frimpong, who had since been arrested. She was also given five days' detention for disrupting the trial.

Giomar Schmidt: wife of Mario Raul Klacho, wanted in the kidnapping and murder on March 21, 1972, of Oberdan Sallustro, the president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina, by the People's Revolutionary Army's (ERP) Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. The group had demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, the provision of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of SITRAC/SITRAM workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. Schmidt was acquitted of all charges.

Klaus Schmidt: West German Protestant minister and member of the National Council of Churches, detained by the Southern Luzon Command in the Philippines on June 9, 1988, on suspicion of links with New People's Army (NPA) rebels. He was detained while on his way to an NPA mountain camp. On June 11, 1988, murder and kidnapping charges were filed against him; he had allegedly trained the NPA rebels. Witnesses reported that he had participated in several guerrilla attacks against security forces in the rebel-infested Bondoc Peninsula on Quezon Province and was part of the group that raided a San Francisco town on February 12, 1988, killing a police officer and wounding two others. The government turned down a West German Embassy request for his release.

Peter Schmidt: believed to be an alias of Johannes Weinrich.

Daniel Martin Schneider: German-born recent convert to Islam, age 21, who lived in Saarbruecken, next to a mosque. He was on welfare. He studied at Islamic schools in Syria and Egypt and was radicalized while in school. He was one of three individuals arrested on September 4, 2007, for planning "massive" attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer's gun and shot him in the hand. Schneider was cut on the head during the struggle. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals would have the equivalent of 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group that has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were not foreigners, but white Germans, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization.

Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July 2007, months before the arrests, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented a three-bedroom vacation cottage in a skiing/tourist locale, where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Gert Richard Schneider: wanted for the October 31, 1977, bombing of a West German court in Zweibrücken. He threw a grenade at policemen attempting to arrest him and Baader-Meinhof Gang member Christoph Wackernagel in Amsterdam on November 10, 1977. Three policemen and Wackernagel were injured. The extradition trial was set for January 12, 1978. On September 5, 1980, he was sentenced in West Germany to five years in prison for attempted murder in a December 1977 shootout in the Netherlands.

Boris Schnidi: variant of Boris Schmidt.

Vitali Schnidi: variant of Vitali Schmidt.

Oliver Schreiber: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Karl Schubert: alias of Ekkehard Weil.

Friedhelm Schuetz: alias of Friedrich Schutz, hijacker of a Lufthansa B727 on October 11, 1972.

Brigitta Schultz: variant Brigitte Schulz. Member, age 23, of the Baader-Meinhof Gang who was one of two members sent to Kenya to find out what had happened to their Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) colleagues who were arrested before her arrival by authorities at Nairobi's Embakasi International Airport on January 25, 1976. The colleagues had SAM-7 heat-seeking missiles and had planned to bring down a flight from Johannesburg, South Africa, to Tel Aviv, Israel. Schultz and Thomas Reuter, age 24, were arrested. Orders to the terrorists were inscribed on Schultz's stomach in invisible ink. The Israelis announced that they would try the group in secret. The release of the terrorists was demanded by the PFLP hijackers of an Air France plane to Entebbe, Uganda, on June 27, 1976. On December 23, 1980, Israel granted Schultz amnesty. Her five-year prison term would have ended the following February.

Adelheid Schulz: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was also on the wanted list for the murders of Juergen Ponto and Siegfried Buback. She was arrested on November 11, 1982, with Brigitte Mohnhaupt as they approached a weapons cache outside Frankfurt. On March 13, 1985, the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court sentenced her to three life sentences for Schleyer's murder.

Brigitte Schulz: variant of Brigitta Schultz.

Friedrich Schutz: alias Friedhelm Schuetz, hijacker of a Lufthansa B727 flying from Lisbon to Frankfurt on October 11, 1972.

Teresa Scinica: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank. On July 4, 1985, a Turin court rejected her appeal.

Adalgiso Scioni: Sardinian Dutch citizen of Italian descent, age 15, with a history of mental illness who on December 23, 1987, claimed he had a bomb and forced the pilot to divert KLM 343, a B737 flying from Amsterdam to Milan, and land in Rome's Fiumicino Airport. He was overpowered by police. On December 29, 1987, he was released and turned over to his Italian father after being granted provisional liberty.

Luigi Scricciolo: left-wing Unione Italian del Lavoro unionist jailed in the early 1980s on charges of spying and terrorism. He was held in connection with the Dozier kidnapping of December 17, 1981, in which two Red Brigades members were said to have been aided by Bulgarians. He claimed to have active contact with four Bulgarian officials believed connected to the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome.

Radomir Sebesth: one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhein-Mein Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978.

Paolo Ceriani-Sebregondi: Red Brigades member who was arrested, along with his wife and fellow Red Brigades member, Paola di Luca, on May 19, 1987, in Asnieres, France, for the kidnapping and murder of Aldo Moro in 1978. He was sentenced to life in prison for the murder of Fiat administrator Carmine de Rosa, security chief for the San Germano Fiat auto plant near Cassino, Italy. He was believed to have been a founder of the Red Brigades splinter group Communist Combatant Formations. Italy requested extradition. On January 29, 1988, the French Court of Cassation annulled the July 30, 1987, ruling of the Versailles Chambre D'accusation appeals court that would have permitted his extradition for the Formation of Communist Combatants/Red Brigades attacks against Fiat.

Raymond Segarra: one of four members of SOS France, a right-wing terrorist organization, who were killed when their car blew up on August 18, 1986, while they were transporting four or five kilograms of explosives intended for a racist-oriented attack in Toulon.

Sergio Segio: terrorist arrested in Milan on January 15, 1983.

Gabriel Segura Burgos: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Christoph Seidler: on September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the Red Army Faction (RAF) and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. The government issued a warrant for his arrest in the case. He rented the getaway car in the November 30, 1989, fatal RAF bombing of the car of Alfred Herrhausen, managing director of the Deutsche Bank, en route to Frankfurt. The Heidelberg native was 1.8 meters tall and slim, with gray-green eyes. In April 1979 he was a political science student at Frankfurt University. In March 1985, his name was removed from the books of the university. Since August 1978, he had participated in several acts of occupation of houses and actions in connection with the hunger strike of imprisoned terrorists, whom he had visited since 1979. He was suspected of having gone underground in 1984 and having joined the RAF hard core; on December 3, 1989, he was listed as one of the "hard core" of RAF members. On November 5, 1996, he told a magazine that he was ready to surrender. He had hidden in Lebanon from 1987 to 1992.

Noel Seijen: French citizen and one of three deserters from the Juan de Austria regiment of the Spanish Foreign Legion who on August 5, 1979, drove onto the Puerto Rosario, Fuerteventura, Canary Islands, airport runway in a stolen police jeep and took over an Iberian Airlines DC9 that was unloading passengers from Las Palmas, Gran Canaria Island. They demanded to be flown to Morocco and Algeria and then to Lisbon, Portugal.

They later asked to go to Bordeaux, France, and then Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. They flew to Geneva, where they surrendered. Spain said it would not request extradition. The Swiss government said it would charge them with deprivation of liberty and blackmail, which carried maximum sentences of 20 years.

Salim Sejann: alias used by one of two suspected Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) members arrested on April 26, 1979, at the Passau-Achleiten crossing point on the Austrian–Bavarian border when West German police searching their rental car found 50 kilograms of explosives, time fuses, and 11 passports with photographs not of them. Bonn authorities believed that the duo intended to pass the documents to Palestinians either already in Germany or intending to arrive soon.

Atilla Selele: alias Muaz. On November 5, 2007, Turkish police in Konya arrested the suspected al Qaeda member, whom they charged with belonging to a terrorist organization and preparing to bomb U.S.-related targets in Germany.

Nikolay Ivanovich Selivanov: hijacker of a Yakovlev-40 bound for Petrozavodsk on October 5, 1990, and diverted to Helsinki's Vantaa Airport, where he requested asylum. After a psychiatric examination, Finland denied asylum on October 25. On March 5, 1991, Tass announced that the Novgorod regional court had sentenced him to forced treatment in a psychiatric hospital. He had earlier been treated at a psychiatric facility and been declared insane.

Gennady L. Seluzko: one of two Russian hijackers of an Aeroflot TU134 twin-engine jet flying from Petrozavodsk, Karelia, to Leningrad on July 10, 1977, and diverted to Helsinki, Finland.

Dimitriy Semenov: Belarusian polytechnical student, age 17, from Zhodino, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who on June 8, 1990, forced the crew of an Aeroflot TU-154 to change course and fly to Stockholm, Sweden. He earlier had had a fight with his parents, who told him to leave home. He surrendered at Stockholm's Arlanda Airport. He was handed over to the Soviets on July 17. Sweden demanded that he not be charged with any offense other than the hijacking, such as illegally leaving the country. The Soviets agreed.

Ioannes Semerci: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Mehemet Sener: police believed he was a second gunman in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. In March 1983, Switzerland released him from jail.

Giovanni Senzani: Red Brigades political mastermind arrested on January 9, 1982, by police in a Rome tenement building. He was a former Florence University criminology professor who headed the Rome and Naples cells of the group. He had been an advisor to the Justice Ministry, where Judge Giovanni d'Urso was a top official. He vanished shortly after the kidnapping of d'Urso, later released unharmed. On June 3, 1986, a Naples court sentenced him to life for murder and kidnapping.

Roberto Serafini: Red Brigades member killed by police waiting outside a Milan restaurant on December 11, 1980.

Khaled Serai: one of three Algerians arrested in Naples, Italy, on November 17, 2005, who were suspected of being Islamist extremists with ties to international terrorists and who could become "potentially operative" and ready to carry out an attack.

Ahmed Hossein Abu Sereya: Palestinian arrested and charged after he ran from the scene of two grenade explosions at the Café de Paris on Via Veneto in Rome on September 16, 1985. The explosions killed 39 people. A search of his apartment disclosed a roundtrip ticket from Damascus to Vienna to Rome. He was carrying $1,000 and a fake passport. The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems claimed credit. On August 6, 1986, assistant attorney general Domenico Sica recommended that Sereya stand trial for the grenade attack. The prosecutor's office said that Sereya was a member of the Palestinian Martyrs, a group led by Abu Nidal. The trial was scheduled for July 3, 1987.

Nicola Serrao: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. She was arrested in Turin. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder.

Vojislav Seselj: deemed the "duke of terror" by Vienna's Neue Kronen-Zeitung, which reported on July 30, 1991, that the Serb had announced that a new wave of attacks would begin in Austria. The paper claimed he was behind the attack on the Krsko nuclear power plant.

Jose Manuel Sevillano: member of the First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who died in Madrid's Gregorio Maranon hospital on May 25, 1990, of cardiac arrest resulting from a 177-day hunger strike. He had joined GRAPO in 1985 shortly after a police operation broke up its leadership. He was sentenced to 24 years in prison for a series of bank robberies. Some 40 GRAPO prisoners began the hunger strike on November 30, 1989, to protest the Justice Ministry's policy of dispersing them to several prisons. Violent demonstrations broke out following the announcement of his death.

Alim Seyann: one of two suspected Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) members arrested on April 26, 1979, at the Passau–Achleiten crossing point on the Austrian–Bavarian border when West German police searching their rental car found 50 kilograms of explosives, time fuses, and 11 passports with photographs not of them. Bonn authorities believed that the duo intended to pass the documents to Palestinians either already in Germany or intending to arrive soon. They had planned to bomb an Israeli ship in Hamburg harbor. They were also suspected of involvement in the April 24, 1979, bombing of a Jewish synagogue in Vienna. They were held in Munich for trial.

Jehad Shaaban: Palestinian who had lived in the Neuss, West Germany, apartment that was raided on October 26, 1988, resulting in the arrests of 14 Arabs suspected of Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP-GC) terrorist ties. On July 29, 1990, Washington Post reporter Jack Anderson said that in July 1990, Sweden had released from jail and expelled 11 Palestinians, including Shaaban, who might have been connected to the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan American Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270.

Lizzie Shack: wife of Patrick Haemers, alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium on January 14, 1989. On May 29, 1989, Brazilian federal police arrested the couple in Rio de Janeiro along with Diane Inu, a Belgian. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C-130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Qaisar Shaffi: Shaffi, age 25, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. Shaffi was also charged with having part of a terrorist guidebook containing information on preparing chemicals and explosives. On April 25, 2007, in a London court, Shaffi denied charges of conspiring with Barot. On June 15, 2007, a British judge convicted him of conspiracy to murder and sentenced him to 15 years. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Ismael Shahbakhsh: leader of a group that on August 12, 2007, kidnapped a Belgian woman and her Belgian partner. He demanded that his jailed brother be freed.

Husayn Shahin: one of three Lebanese terrorists for whom Spanish police issued arrest warrants after the press reported on October 27, 1991, that a group of seven terrorists were planning assassination attempts at the October 30 opening of the Middle East peace conference in Madrid. Five of the terrorists belonged to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), two belonged to Abu Nidal, and all were aided by Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Mohammed Shakil: Gee Gee cab driver, age 30, and one of three men arrested on March 22, 2007, by British police for involvement in the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005. On July 5, 2007, British authorities charged the trio with conspiring with the bombers between November 1, 2004, and June 29, 2005, saying they handled reconnaissance and planning. On August 10, 2007, Mohammed Shakil, Sadeer Saleem, age 26, and Waheed Ali pleaded not guilty of conspiracy to cause explosions that would endanger life.

Martina Shanahan: Dublin resident and one of three people convicted on October 27, 1988, in London of conspiring to murder Tom King, Britain's Northern Ireland secretary.

Michael Shanley: Manhattan resident who on January 21, 1988, while waving a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) flag, screamed "Murderers!" and rushed at the Duchess of York, the former Sarah Ferguson, in front of her midtown Manhattan hotel. He was held without bail at the federal Metropolitan Correctional Center and charged with assault and attempt to assault with a deadly weapon

"a foreign official, official guest, and internationally protected person" and with assault of State Department security officers. Conviction would carry a 20-year prison sentence and $500,000 fine. His lawyer said Shanley was an unemployed waiter who attended the College for Human Services but was not registered for the current semester.

Seamus Shannon: on July 31, 1984, he was extradited by Ireland to the United Kingdom in connection with the Provisional Irish Republican Army's (IRA) bombing on January 21, 1981, of the Northern Ireland border castle of Sir Norman Stronge, Protestant speaker of the regional parliament for 24 years.

Yusuf al-Sharidi: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Omar Khan Sharif: would-be British suicide bomber, age 27, whose bomb failed to explode on April 29, 2003, at the Mike's Place restaurant in Tel Aviv, Israel. Sharif fled the scene after his bomb failed to detonate. He got rid of his coat and the explosives. He remained at large as of May 9, 2003. However, the State Department reported later that his body was found washed up on a Tel Aviv beach. He was born in Derby to an immigrant from Mirpur in the Pakistani-controlled section of Kashmir. His late father had opened Derby's first kebab stand and later owned laundrettes and amusement arcades. The youngest of six children, Sharif boarded for two years at the $18,000/year prep school Foremarke Hall. He attended Kingston University in London, where he became a Muslim fundamentalist. He dropped out after a few months and married a woman who spoke little English and wore a burqa. They moved into a cheap row house in Derby near a radical mosque. They had two daughters, ages three and seven as of 2003. He attended religious classes by Sheikh Omar Bakri Muhammed, Syrian-born leader of al-Muhajiroun (the Emigrants), a radical Islamic group.

He and fellow bomber Assif Muhammad Hanif were in Damascus in 2003, where Hanif attended an Arabic course at Damascus University. Sharif told friends he was going to study religion there.

The duo may have used plastic explosives that they smuggled into Israel hidden in a Koran. They entered Israel at the Allenby Bridge border crossing with Jordan. Most of the injuries were blast injuries, rather than cuts from shrapnel.

As of May 9, three of Sharif's relatives were in custody—his brother, Zahid Hussain Sharif, age 46; his sister, Paveen Akthor Sharif, age 35; and his wife, Tahari Shad Tabassum, age 27, all of Derby. They were held for failing to disclose information about acts of terrorism. Hussain was also charged with aiding and abetting acts of terrorism overseas.

Paveen Akthor Sharif: from Derby, United Kingdom, age 35, sister of Omar Khan Sharif. As of May 9, 2003, she was held in custody for failing to disclose information about acts of terrorism.

Zahid Hussain Sharif: from Derby, United Kingdom, age 46, brother of Omar Khan Sharif. As of May 9, 2003, he was held in custody for failing to disclose information about acts of terrorism and with aiding and abetting acts of terrorism overseas.

Nabil Sharitah: on February 7, 1994, he told the 29th Criminal Bench of the Berlin Regional Court that he did not transport the explosives used in the August 25, 1983, attack on the Maison de France French cultural center in Berlin, in which 1 person died and 22 were injured. However, he said that he had given explosives stored at the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin to Red Army Faction (RAF) member Johannes Weinrich only a few hours before the bombing. Sharitah was third secretary of the Syrian Embassy at the time and in charge of security. He had given himself up to German authorities.

Shashu: alias Abu-Bilah. Born in 1986 and traveled from France to join al Qaeda in Iraq in 2007. His travel coordinator was Abu-Muhammad. He brought his passport and ID. His phone number was 490531918.

Fredrich Shaudinn: German technician against whom a Florence, Italy, court issued a new arrest warrant in the December 23, 1984, bombing of an express train in Tuscany that killed 16 and injured 266. Italy requested extradition. The crime was blamed on right-wing terrorists acting in concert with the Mafia. He was accused of building the timer for the bomb. He had been under house arrest but left the country before the start of the trial.

Ibrahim 'Ali al-Shawesh: name on Libyan diplomatic passport carried by Fathi Shafaqi when he was shot to death in Malta on October 26, 1995.

Yasser Abu Shaweesh: on January 23, 2005, in a morning raid in Mainz, German police arrested Ibrahim Mohamed Khalil, age 29, a German citizen from Iraq suspected of planning suicide attacks in Germany, and Shaweesh, age 31, a Palestinian medical student living in Bonn. They were believed to have had contacts with Osama bin Laden and were charged with belonging to a foreign terrorist organization. The Federal Prosecutor's Office said there was no indication that they had organized an al Qaeda cell in Germany.

While in Afghanistan, where he had trained before the 9/11 attacks, Mohammed had contacts with bin Laden and Ramzi Binalshibh. Mohammed fought U.S. forces for more than a year in Afghanistan and had high-ranking al Qaeda contacts who persuaded him to recruit suicide attackers in Europe. He moved to Germany in September 2002 to raise money and provide logistical support for al Qaeda. He had attempted unsuccessfully to obtain 48 grams of uranium from Luxembourg. Mohammed recruited the Libyan-born Shaweesh for a suicide attack in Iraq. They had sought to raise money by taking out a $1 million life insurance policy on Yasser Abu S., who was to fake a fatal traffic accident. The duo had been under investigation since October 2004. Police searched four apartments in Mainz and Bonn.

The week before his arrest, German police had detained nearly two dozen Islamic extremists.

German authorities had wire-tapped the duo and thus heard them make plans to move to the Netherlands, to obtain uranium for a dirty bomb that would kill Americans, and to recruit suicide bombers to go to Iraq. They talked about how to blend in to their surroundings. Mohammed married a Syrian woman who had recently obtained German citizenship, which in turn permitted him to stay legally in Germany.

In late January 2005, the judge ruled that there was enough evidence to hold them for trial.

Omar Sheikh: Briton whose release was demanded by the five Kashmiri hijackers of an Air India flight on December 24, 1999, that was diverted to Kandahar airport. He was freed by India on December 31, 1999.

Hossein Sheikhhattar: an arrest warrant for the aide to the Iranian telecommunications minister was issued in connection with the August 6, 1991, assassination of former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home.

Abdul Sherif: convicted on February 5, 2008, in a London court of 22 charges of failing to disclose information about terrorism and assisting an offender in connection with the failed copy-cat bombing of the London transit system in July 2005. Age 30, he was sentenced to 10 years. The five defendants provided safe houses, passports, clothing, and food for the would-be bombers after the failed attacks. Sherif is the brother of Hussain Osman, a convicted bomber.

Peter Sherry: arrested in June 1985 in a police raid in Glasgow that uncovered a 16-bomb campaign planned by him and four others for British resorts during the summer of 1985. On June 12, 1986, a London court found four defendants guilty of participating in the planning of the 1985 bombing campaign directed at London and 12 coastal resorts.

Abdel Hamid Shibli: one of two Black September members seriously injured when their explosives-laden car blew up on a Rome street on June 17, 1973. He was a Jordanian. It was believed they were driving their booby-trapped car toward their next mission, which may have been against the transit camp in Austria for Soviet Jewish émigrés. Some reports claim that Mossad arranged for the bombs' premature detonation.

Mohammad Ridha Ghulam Shirazi: Iranian who was one of 13 members of the Iranian Lebanese Hizballah reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain on October 13, 1987, to attack diplomats from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and Iraq.

Igor Shkouro: Leningrad-born holder of an Australian passport who on September 25, 1982, hijacked an Alitalia B727 flying from Algiers to Rome. He was overpowered in Catania, Sicily. He appeared to be under the influence of drugs.

Abdel Majid Shouraibi: Moroccan expelled by the British Home Office to France on May 17, 1984, for "preparing acts of terrorism."

Ingrid Shubert: Baader-Meinhof Group member who had been sentenced by a Berlin regional court to a 13-year term for attempted murder, for participating in freeing Andreas Baader from prison, for several robberies, and for membership in a criminal association. Her release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aero-spatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe. She was moved from Stammheim prison to Stadelheim prison on August 18, 1977. Her release then was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. Her release also was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. She was found dead in her cell at the Munich Stadelheim prison on November 12, 1977, hanging from her window by a rope made of bedsheets.

Abdel Labi Shudi: on June 11, 1980, he shot Libyan dissident Mohammed Saad Biget in a dispute as they lunched together in Rome. Shudi was arrested.

Ali Ahmad Shur: on June 2, 1985, Rome police discovered one pound of plastic explosives in a suitcase left by the Lebanese in his Hilton hotel room. The detonator had been accidentally destroyed, and the suitcase had been abandoned.

Yasir Shuraydah: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Zeeshan Hyder Siddiqui: Briton, age 25, trained in bomb making in an al Qaeda camp who was arrested in Pakistan in May 2005. He claimed to have lived in London and studied economics at London University. British authorities wanted to question him in connection with the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005.

Waltraud Sieber: her release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Ingrid Siepmann: technical pharmaceutical assistant, age 30, serving 12 years in West Berlin for bank robbery and bombings, who was freed during the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. She and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, and Amman. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum.

Andrea Sievering: arrested by Duesseldorf police on December 18, 1987, on suspicion of membership in the Red Army Faction and participating in the bombing of the Dornier works in Immenstaad/Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, causing 1.3 million marks in damage. On January 18, 1989, the fifth criminal division of the Stuttgart higher regional court sentenced the student to nine years.

Paolo Signorelli: leader of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei (NAR), Italy's principal right-wing terrorist group in the early 1980s. In late 1985, he was charged with "complicity in a massacre and forming an armed gang" in connection with the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. On July 11, 1988, a Bologna court acquitted him on subversion charges for lack of evidence. On July 19, 1990, the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court cleared him from a life sentence.

A. Da Silva: one of two would-be hijackers of a Portuguese general aviation Etapa Air Taxi flying from Porto Amerlia, Mozambique, to the island of Ibo on July 25, 1970.

Edgar Da Silva: Portuguese laborer who tried to hijack a KLM flight from Amsterdam to Lisbon and divert it to East Berlin on April 16, 1962.

Dr. Edmond Simeoni: leader of the Action for the Rebirth of Corsica (ARC). On August 21, 1975, 40 farmers armed with hunting guns seized a vineyard farmhouse near Aleria, Corsica, to protest the owner's complicity in adulteration of wine. During the Bastia attack, two policemen died and four others were injured in a gun battle with the ARC. Authorities conducted a rescue mission after the separatists refused to free their six hostages: four North African farm workers and two French tourists. Simeoni waved a white flag, ending the 33-hour siege. He and seven others were tried on May 17, 1976, accused of leading a revolt against the French government.

Vitautas Simokaitis: one of two would-be hijackers of an Aeroflot AN2 flying from Vilnius and Palanga, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on November 9, 1970.

Thomas Simon: one of the Germany's most-wanted Red Army Faction (RAF) terrorists as of April 1, 1991. It was unclear whether he was involved in the RAF's killing on that day of Detlev Karsten Rohwedder, chief of the Berlin Trust Agency, in a bombing in front of Rohwedder's Duesseldorf apartment.

Nicola Simone: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the "second position" Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987.

Roberto Simoni: employee of an industrial equipment firm and member of the Union of Communist Fighters arrested on August 18, 1987, by Genoa police on charges of organizing armed groups and entering in subversive association. Police said he had taken part in several terrorist acts over the preceding decade.

Talwinder Singh: self-proclaimed terrorist released from a West German prison on July 26, 1984. More than 75 members of the Indian Parliament protested the release.

Parlindungan Siregar: Indonesian living in Spain who helped arrange for several hundred al Qaeda operatives from Europe to travel to Indonesia for training, according to Spanish authorities. He was linked in March 2002 to Agus Dwikarna. He was mentioned in a Spanish court indictment. Siregar left Indonesia in early 1989 to study aeronautical engineering at Madrid Polytechnic. He was affiliated with the Laskar Jihad, the Muslim militia conducting operations in the Moluccas to evict Christians. Siregar's phone number was in the address books of two of the eight al Qaeda suspects arrested in Spain in November 2001. In early August 2005, Indonesian authorities detained him. He was connected with Imad Edin Barakat Yarkas, indicted with Siregar in September 2003 by a Spanish judge for providing logistics support to al Qaeda in Europe, providing false documents, stolen credit cards, and bank transfers. The United States listed him as a "specially designated global terrorist" along with nine other Laskar Jihad members.

Yasser al-Siri: variant Yasir 'Ali al-Sirri. Egyptian who ran the Islamic Observation Center in London and who was arrested in October 2001 on charges of providing the two bombers who killed Afghan Northern Alliance leader Ahmed Shah Massoud with a letter of recommendation that helped them get to Massoud. Information from al-Siri led to arrests in France and Belgium on November 26, 2001, of 14 Osama bin Laden contacts. Al-Siri had been living in the United Kingdom after requesting political asylum. He had been tried in absentia and sentenced to death in Egypt for the 1994 assassination attempt against then-prime minister Atef Sedki. On May 17, 2002, a London court began extradition proceedings. The naturalized U.S. citizen was wanted in the United States for sending money to Afghanistan to fund terrorism and for helping blind Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman. On July 29, 2002, a London court freed him after the Home Secretary declared that the U.S. Department of Justice had not provided sufficient evidence to warrant extradition. U.S. attorneys planned to file a new extradition request, based on conspiracy charges.

Yasser Sirri: held in the United Kingdom for links to the assassins of Afghan leader Ahmed Shah Massoud on September 9, 2001. He was indicted with three others, including Lynne Stewart, on April 9, 2002, by attorney general John Ashcroft for helping to pass unlawful messages between an Egyptian terrorist organization and Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, who was serving a life sentence for plotting to blow up the World Trade Center (WTC) and United Nations buildings in 1993. The foursome were also charged with providing “material support and resources” to the Egyptian Islamic Group. Sirri was in frequent contact with fellow defendant paralegal Ahmed Abd-al Sattar and provided financial support for the terrorists, according to the indictment.

Vasken Sislian: variant of Vasken Sicilian.

Raf Skivens: Belgian sentenced on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that slightly injured his wife. A second car bomb on November 22, 2000, injured two men and a woman, all British citizens. He initially admitted the charges but later recanted. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Linda Slevin: alias used in March 15, 1990, by a woman in obtaining a flat used by three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) terrorists planning to murder Sir Charles Tidbury, former chairman of Whitbread, and other persons.

Amor Sliti: on September 30, 2003, the 44-year-old was sentenced to five years for being an accomplice of Nizar Trabelsi, who planned to attack Kleine Brogel Air Base in Belgium by driving a car bomb into the canteen.

Miroslav Slovak: one of four hijackers of the Prague–Brno C47 flight of Czechoslovakian National Airlines that was hijacked on March 23, 1953, and diverted to Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany.

Borijov Smid: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, believed to be involved in the plot.

Stefan Josef Smirk: German Christian, age 26, who converted to Islam and who was arrested by Israeli authorities on November 28, 1997, at an Israeli airport. He was charged with planning to carry out a suicide attack on behalf of Hizballah. He was in Lebanon between August and November 1997.

Steen Smyrek: German neo-Nazi and convert to Islam arrested in late 1997 in Israel for planning a suicide attack. He had trained at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan.

Anthony Smyth: sentenced on September 27, 2000, in Fort Lauderdale to three years for buying and shipping weapons in a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning operation, age 43. The weapons in the 1999 plot were to be disguised as toys, VCRs, and computers going from Florida to Northern Ireland via the U.S. mail.

Jimmy Smyth: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomber who was one of 38 inmates who escaped from the Maze Prison outside Belfast. He was serving a 20-year sentence for the attempted murder of an off-duty Northern Ireland prison guard in 1983. In 1992, he was arrested in San Francisco and fought U.K. demands for his extradition. On August 18, 1996, he was extradited from San Francisco to Belfast to serve the rest of his 15-year term in Maghaberry Jail near Lisburn.

Sean Smyth: one of the Maguire Seven imprisoned for running a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomb factory. On July 26, 1991, the appeals court quashed their convictions because police had lied and withheld evidence. Smyth had already served his sentence.

Manuel Soares Gamboa: on March 4, 1987, the Spanish ambassador to Algeria was recalled to protest that the Algerian government had not notified Madrid of the existence of 30 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members on Algerian soil. He was an ETA–Military Madrid Command member living there. He was responsible for the attack in Madrid's Republica Dominicana Square that caused 18 deaths. On April 18, 1989, he was among the 6 of the 50 ETA members living in Algeria who were expelled.

Santiago Soler Amigo: member of the Iberian Liberation Movement (MIL) whose release was demanded by the kidnappers of Balthazar Angel Suarez, manager of the Paris branch of the Bank of Bilbao, on May 3, 1974. The International Revolutionary Action Group (GARI), apparently affiliated with the MIL, claimed credit, demanding Soler be released along with several other political prisoners in Spain. Soler was in poor health.

Adel Ben Soltane: one of three Tunisians whose trial began on February 18, 2002, in Milan. The trio was convicted on May 17. (The State Department said four members of the Tunisian Combatant Group were sentenced to up to five years for providing false documentation and planning to acquire and transport arms and other illegal goods.) Judge Ambrogio Moccia said they would be expelled from Italy after serving their sentences. They had been cleared of several charges of supplying false documents and smuggling arms. Soltane received four years and six months.

Mohammed Soltani: name on a Bahraini passport used by Hasan Ilyas Badr, who took part in several fedayeen attacks against Israeli interests in European capitals. He died when a bomb exploded prematurely in his room in London's Mount Royal Hotel on January 17, 1980. The May 15 Arab Organization claimed credit.

Guenther Sonnenberg: police shot and seriously wounded him on May 3, 1977, in a shootout in the town of Singen on the Swiss border. Ballistic tests showed his machine gun had been used in the April 7, 1977, Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group assassination of Siegfried Buback, West Germany's chief public prosecutor. His release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. His release next was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977. His release also was demanded on September 12, 1981, by the RAF firebombers of the Frankfurt home of the U.S. consul general. He had engaged in a prison hunger strike in early 1985. On September 15, 1986, the Anna Maria Ludmann Fighting Unit of the West German Red Army Faction bombed the Munich offices of Panavia Aircraft, Ltd., a joint West German-British-Italian venture that manufactures the Tornado NATO aircraft. The bombers demanded Sonnenberg's release. Sonnenberg was sentenced in April 1987 on two counts of conspiracy to murder and sentenced to life in prison for shooting two police officers while attempting to avoid arrest.

He was part of a Red Army Faction hunger strike by 38 prisoners that began on February 1, 1989. On February 25, 1989, prison officials intercepted a message he sent to Knut Folkerts. On March 28, 1989, Die Welt speculated that four sick or feeble prisoners, including him, might be released before the end of their prison terms. On May 8, 1992, the federal prosecutor applied for his early release.

Vasily Sosnovsky: Latvian mechanic who hijacked a Soviet Antonov 24 twin-engine turboprop flying from Riga, Latvia, to Daugavpils on May 26, 1977, and diverted it to Stockholm.

Mustafa Soudeidan: one of two Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution, or possibly Saiqa, terrorists who took five hostages on board diesel passenger train number 2590, which left Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, and entered Marchegg, Austria, on September 28, 1973. Two of the hostages escaped. The gunmen later took off for Vienna's Schwechat Airport, where they demanded that Austria close down the Schonau Castle facility for Soviet Jewish émigrés and not allow further émigré transit through Austria. The hostages were newly arrived Soviet Jews on their way to Israel. The Austrians agreed to safe passage. After refueling stops in Yugoslavia and Italy, the plane was denied landing by Tunisia and Algeria and eventually landed in Libya. In December 1973, Libya announced that the duo had been released to fight against Israel. Some reports claimed that the duo had trained in a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) camp in Lebanon. One of them participated in the December 1975 OPEC raid.

Claude Soulat: suspected member of Direct Action arrested by Paris train station police on August 9, 1987, on returning to France after living in Denmark for several months. He was placed under a criminal warrant.

Nayir Souner: arrested in 1983 in connection with the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia bombing of Orly Airport.

Ishmail Hassan Sowan: variant Ismael. Jordanian serving as a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) research assistant arrested on August 17, 1987, by Scotland Yard in a raid on a Westbourne Avenue flat in Hull, Humberside, under the Prevention of Terrorism Act. They seized 30 kilograms of Czech-made Semtex high explosives, four assault rifles, seven hand grenades, detonators and clocks for making bombs, eight magazines loaded with ammunition, and a large quantity of .38 and 9-mm ammunition in the dawn raid in connection with the killing of Ali Naji Awad al-Adhami, a Palestinian political cartoonist, on July 22, 1987. Sowan had been in the United Kingdom since 1984, studying for a degree at Bath University. He lived in the flat with his wife. He was charged with several arms offenses. Police suggested that the cache was to be used for an Arab terrorist blitz in Europe. On June 17, 1988, Sowan was sentenced to 11 years on weapons charges. The United Kingdom said he was a double agent recruited by Mosad to penetrate Fatah's Force 17, an elite PLO unit believed responsible for an assassination in the United Kingdom.

Ismael Sowan: variant of Ishmail Hassan Sowan.

Teodoro Spadaccini: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Angelika Speitel: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. She was sentenced for murder in 1979 for the fatal shooting of policeman Hans-Wilhelm Hansen in Dortmund on September 24, 1978. She was pardoned by the West German president.

Gusty Spence: he had helped form the Red Hand Commando of the Protestant paramilitary Ulster Volunteer Force in 1966, the same year he was convicted of murder; he was age 73 as of May 2007.

Dimicias Speranzo: Italian immigrant who on April 4, 1979, carried bombs on his body and in his hands; grabbed a woman in the Sydney, Australia airport terminal; and took over a Pan American B727 scheduled to fly to Los Angeles. He wanted to go to Italy to meet with the pope and Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer and then to go to Moscow. An anti-hijack squad shot him to death.

Dieter Sporleder: on March 15, 1985, the state protection branch of the Frankfurt higher regional court sentenced the right-wing terrorist to seven years for attempted murder, membership in a terrorist organization, explosives offenses, grievous bodily harm, and bank robbery in connection with the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt.

Paolo Staccioli: one of eight suspected members of the Rome faction of the “second position” Red Brigades splinter group arrested in Italy on December 5, 1987.

Frank Stagg: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) prisoner who died in a British jail on February 12, 1976, on the 61st day of his hunger strike. In the following four days, 11 people died and £1 million of damage was done in Belfast, with over 100 acts of violence reported.

Ernst Volker-Wilhelm Staub: one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt apartment. A resident had reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling a floor beneath the terrorists. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. He was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977. He later became one of Germany’s most-wanted Red Army Faction terrorists, as of April 1, 1991. It was unclear whether he was involved in the RAF’s killing of Detlev Karsten Rohwedder, chief of the Berlin Trust Agency, on that day in a bombing in front of his Duesseldorf apartment. He was also wanted for questioning in the attack on Trust Agency chief Rohwedder and State Secretary Hans Neusel.

Gerard Steenson: Former Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) military leader killed by INLA snipers in Northern Ireland on March 15, 1987. He had been released from jail in December 1986.

Vincenzo de Stefano: Red Brigades member sentenced on December 14, 1982, by a Potenze court to life in prison for killing state prosecutor Nicola Giacumbi on March 16, 1980, in Salerno.

Yves Stella: Corsican nationalist leader sentenced on September 29, 1980, in Paris to 15 years in prison for taking part in bombings in Corsica and for masterminding the bombing campaign from his prison cell for two years.

Gianluca Stellini: alias Gianlocca Stellipi, Gianluca Stellino. An Italian student who hijacked an Alitalia DC9 flying from Genoa to Rome on May 30, 1970, diverting it to Cairo in protest of the Middle East conflict.

Alessandro Stepanoff: tried by Italy for the May 28, 1974, bombing of a trade union meeting, which killed 8 and injured 208. On May 23, 1987, a Brescia court ended a five-month trial by dismissing charges.

Sigrid Sternebeck: variant Sternebeck. Named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers’ association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany’s most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. On August 13, 1985, police were looking for her as the woman who left a disco on August 7, 1985, with Edward F. Pimental, a U.S. serviceman attached to the 563rd Ordinance Company in Wiesbaden. He was shot in the back of the neck the morning of August 8, 1985. She matched the description of the person who used his ID card to drive an Audi with stolen license plates onto the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt on August 8, 1985. The car exploded, killing 2 Americans and injuring 19 other German and U.S. citizens. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the “hard core” of RAF members. She was arrested on June 15, 1990, in Schwedt, East Germany, near Frankfurt-on-Oder on the Polish border. She offered no resistance when detectives arrested her at the Angermuende station after leaving the Berlin-Angermuende express train. From 1977 to 1980, she had lived mainly in France and the Netherlands. She admitted having regular contacts with the East German intelligence service since 1980, when she arrived in the country using a West German passport for Ulrike Fildberg, born on July 18, 1950. She had received the passport from other RAF members. The Stasi had helped her get an apartment and a job in Schwedt as a photographer and photocopier.

On June 22, 1992, the Stuttgart Higher Regional Court sentenced her to eight and one-half years for preparing the explosives attack on NATO commander in chief Alexander Haig in June 1979. She was found guilty of aiding in a hostage-taking, attempted murder, and setting off a bomb. She had earlier renounced RAF ties.

Sigrid Sternebeck: variant of Sigrid Sternbeck.

Ante Stojanom: leader of a group of Croatian terrorists that included a duo who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslavian ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. A Stockholm city court sentenced Stojanom to a four-year term on July 14.

Willy Peter Stoll: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. He was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. On December 20, 1977, the Swiss incorrectly announced that they had arrested him on the French border; they had really arrested Christian Moller.

Michael Stone: Protestant extremist in Northern Ireland who conducted a grenade and gun attack on an Irish Republican Army (IRA) funeral on March 16, 1988, for three IRA guerrillas who were killed by British commandos on March 6, 1988, while the terrorists were planting a 1,100-pound plastic explosive bomb in an abandoned white Ford Fiesta in Marbella, near the governor's residence in Gibraltar. On March 22, 1988, the self-described “dedicated free-lance loyalist paramilitary” was charged with three murders stemming from the funeral attack—the grenades had also injured 50—as well as with three other murders of Roman Catholics between November 1984 and May 1987 for the Ulster Freedom Force.

He was later in the news following his release when he ran into the Northern Ireland Assembly headquarters on November 24, 2006, with a bag of six pipe bombs. The Assembly building was evacuated, and two security guards trapped him in the revolving door of the Stormont parliamentary building. He screamed “no surrender.” He was arraigned in Belfast Magistrates Court, where he was charged with trying to kill Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness, two senior members of the IRA-linked political party, Sinn Fein; the two guards who confronted him; and a generic “persons unknown” pertaining to everyone else in the building, among them the 108 members of the Assembly. Additional charges included possession of weapons for terrorist purposes, including explosives, several nail bombs, an ax, a strangulation device, and a fake handgun. Stone offered no plea.

Moreno Stortini: Italian arrested with two Argentines on September 22, 1987, in Rome in connection with the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. The men were arrested at their Treasury offices.

Stephan Strambach: armed German male, age 32, who on January 5, 2003, hijacked a single-engine plane from the small Babenhausen airfield south-east of Frankfurt. After paying for a sightseeing tour, he pulled a pistol on the assigned pilot and forced him out of the plane. The hijacker threatened to crash the Austrian-made Super Dimona motorized glider into the European Central Bank in Frankfurt's financial center. He said he did not want to harm anyone but threatened to commit suicide when he ran out of fuel. He landed safely two hours later, under the watchful eyes of pilots in two air force jets and a police helicopter. He said he wanted to draw attention to Judith Resnik, one of seven astronauts killed on the space shuttle Challenger in January 1986. "I want to make my great idol Judith Resnik famous with this. She deserves more attention. She was the first Jewish astronaut, and maybe that's why she isn't really considered." The hijacker ran a Web site dedicated to Resnik's career. He also wanted to telephone someone in Baltimore, possibly a relative of the astronaut. Authorities had shut down the airport and Frankfurt's railway station and evacuated high rises.

Franz-Josef Stremmer: would-be hijacker of a KLM DC9 flying from Duesseldorf to Amsterdam on October 2, 1973.

Dusan Styk: one of two Czech teen hijackers who on March 29, 1989, shot their way onto a Hungarian Malev Tupolev-154B on its regular Budapest–Prague–Amsterdam–Barcelona route in Prague and demanded to be flown to the United States.

Jose Emilio Suarez Trashorras: former Spanish miner believed to have provided the 3/11 Madrid train bombers (2004) with plastic explosives stolen from a mine in Spain. He was charged with 192 murders, including that of a policeman killed while attempting to arrest a suspect at the Madrid apartment safe house. On October 31, 2007, a Spanish court convicted him of providing the explosives with the knowledge that they could be used in a terrorist attack.

Manuel Suarez Gamboa: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members whose extradition Spain requested of the Dominican Republic on October 27, 1989. The duo had been sent from Algiers earlier in the year. They were wanted for the murder of a Spanish Navy admiral.

Igor Suberbiola: member of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) youth wing arrested in Bordeaux, France, on May 20, 2008.

Abu Sufian: Iraqi, age 25, with close ties to Abu Musab al Zarqawi, who was one of 15 people arrested by Spanish authorities on December 19, 2005, on charges of setting up a recruiting network for al Qaeda that sent Islamic militants to Iraq. Police said at least two men were preparing to travel to Iraq as fighters. There was no evidence that they were preparing attacks in Spain, but they had materials to make explosives.

'Adnan Sujud: on February 27, 1992, French judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged him with murder and attempted murder. He was the only one of the four defendants thought to have been on the ship at the time of the attack. Greek authorities believed that Sujud threw grenades and sprayed passengers with gunfire.

Faysal Summaq: Syria's ambassador to East Berlin in 1981–1989, who was arrested in Vienna, Austria, on October 25, 1994, on charges of helping to provide 15 pounds of explosives to Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, which were used in the 1983 attack on the French Cultural Center in Berlin. Germany requested extradition.

Vladimir Svetlik: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Ostrava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. Zone of Germany, believed to be involved in the plot.

Roman Svistunov: former Aeroflot employee from Nikolayev, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who on May 27, 1987, stole an Antonov-2 single-engine crop duster in Saldus, a small town near Riga, Latvia; ditched the plane in the Baltic Sea; and waded ashore to Gotland, a Swedish island. He left behind an estranged wife and two children. The Soviets demanded extradition of the asylum-seeker. On September 3, 1987, Tass reported that Stockholm authorities had given him a residence permit and a job. On November 27, 1987, Moscow's Sovetskaya Rossiya reported that a court at Visby on Gotland Island had found him guilty of hijacking but had given him a two-year suspended sentence. On October 21, 1988, the Latvian SSR Supreme Court Civil Cases Collegium substantiated the action for more than 350,000 rubles in material damages brought by the Latvian Civil Aviation Administration against the hijack. The decision was conveyed to Sweden for examination by a regional court.

Abu Usama el-Swede: originally Ralf Wadman, a Swedish Web master arrested in 2006 in Sweden for recruiting Islamist fighters on the Internet.

Wiesław Szymankiewicz: radio mechanic, age 20, who joined Cesław Romuald Zolotucho, age 18, in hijacking a Lot Antonov 24 flying the Wrocław–Warsaw–Bratislava run on November 20, 1969, diverting it to Vienna, Austria.

T

---

Ayhan T.: Ayhan T., from Langen, was detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau, Germany. He was wanted in connection with the September 4, 2007, arrest in Germany of two Germans and one Turkish citizen at their Oberschledorn house; they were planning “massive” attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union. Federal Bureau of Criminal Investigation (BKA) agents searching the apartment of Ayhan T. found a video of several men singing jihad songs in Turkish. After the sing-along, he talked about jihad. (See also Fritz Martin Gelowicz.)

Talip T.: one of three Muslim men arrested on September 27, 2001, by police in Wiesbaden for planning terrorist attacks in the country. Talip T. was a 27-year-old Turk charged with possession of weapons and forging documents. His Internet site solicited money for the Taliban and provided information on “military training for The Fight.” Searches of their apartments yielded a loaded weapon, large amounts of cash, and forged documents. Police seized computers, cell phones, and open-return airline tickets between London and Islamabad. The e-mail list of one of the individuals included the address of Said Bahaji, age 26, who lived with three 9/11 hijackers.

Mohammed Tabab: Jordanian who was one of two terrorists arrested on March 15, 1973, in France,

